Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] 826

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [732]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 hanging rock where no rain can penetrate. Long ago, some [732] hunter failed to do this and became blind in consequence, hence the rite has since been carried out.

When a hunter is in the field, his wife must not swing. To do this causes him to go up into lofty and dangerous places as she rises on the swing, and also destroys the power laboriously accumulated by ceremonial chastity.

Ritual Acts

796 Ceremonialism is an extremely important aspect of Bella
226 Coola life, but most of their rites are social or religious rather than magical, so that descriptions of them belong to other 789 chapters. In connection with the taking of the first olachen and salmon, however, a number of ritual acts are performed to bring about desired ends; the element of propitiation is not entirely absent, but on the whole they may be considered as magical.

Rites connected with the first olachen

226 At the height of the olachen run, the fish are so abundant 796 that they can be taken profitably in large purse-nets. They 574 do not, however, come simultaneously, and eager fishermen keep watching for their arrival and catching the straggling forerunners in hand dip-nets. These fish must not be eaten immediately. Each fisherman arranges a box in the front part of his house in which he deposits them as taken; if several men are doing this in a single dwelling, one box for each will be arranged near the front-door. Whenever a dance is held, eagle down is blown over the receptacle to placate the olachen and prevent them from being disturbed by the noise. As soon as a man has caught enough for a feast, he invites all his fellows to his house and the fish are distributed. It is taboo for any woman to share this meal, and it is most improper for a man to summon his neighbours until he has enough olachen to allow each guest to carry home a plentiful supply for his family. In former times, there used to be a number of meals of this kind,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

since each fisherman provided one when his box was filled. 226

No one is allowed to drink water immediately after eating 796 the first olachen of the spring, since to do so would cause a 574 flood. It is considered most improper for a child to cry soon after partaking of this food; if he does so, he is quieted by [865] having nettles stuffed into his mouth. As already described, if a person dies before the first fish have passed through his bowels, a shaman must wipe his lips with cedar-bark.

After the first meal of olachen, stakes for the nets can be 226 driven, and the restrictions become less exacting. Women are not allowed to assist in fishing, but the men devote their full [562] time to the task, working with zest and energy.[7] An abundant supply of olachen is a source of joy, and all listen eagerly for the singing of the thrush, smuxmuxaxts, which signifies that the [825] nets are full to bursting. Half jocularly, people invite the bird to come and eat, but his melody is interpreted as:

"I shall eat when the river is full."

RITES CONNECTED WITH THE FIRST SPRING SALMON[8]

Salmon is the most important article of Bella Coola diet 226 and the rites which accompany the earliest taking of the fish 796 are relatively complicated. [262]

When the first spring salmon have been caught, they are laid in the canoe with their heads all pointing eastward, upstream. The fisherman poles to shore, but instead of landing his catch, he fastens the salmon to a stake driven at the edge of the bank so that they remain in the water. A number of posts are usually placed in readiness, each decorated with alternate spirals of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with an eagle's tail. Each day one or two more fish may be caught, but all are left in the water until the first have become soft, thus giving sufficient time for the necessary preparations on shore. It is the duty of every owner of a salmon-weir to build near its end a so-called Spring Salmon House, a shed-like [343]

[7]For a description of olachen fishing, see Appendix A.
[8]Cf. Boas, p. 78.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226
796
[343]

structure with a roof but without side walls. To this the successful fisherman brings long strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, eagle down, and spoons made of maple-bark; in this task he is assisted by his relatives as well as by anyone else willing to help.

When all has been prepared, the fisherman asks the men of the village to gather on the bank to assist him. No one is compelled to do so, but in actual fact everyone is glad to be present unless prevented by some valid reason. A friend takes a canoe pole and points at the head of the first salmon, while all call in unison, xak'loi·, a word for which no meaning is known, and which is said to have been used unintelligibly for many generations. If he is standing on the south bank of the stream, the fisherman passes his left hand outside his right, seizes the fish behind the neck with the former, and by the tail with the latter; then he turns around sunwise, uncrossing his arms, so that his catch is still pointing upstream. If the village is on the north side of the river, the position of the hands is reversed. He carries the salmon to the Spring Salmon House and places it on a layer of fresh cottonwood and willow leaves spread over the ground. A young assistant, who is decorated with bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, lifts from his left arm one of a number of two-foot strips of the same material carried there and lays it over the salmon's head so that part of the string is within its mouth. As he does this he says:

Ipäxollai, qämxämilao,[1] "Accept, O Salmon."

Qämxämila is not the usual word for salmon, but signifies rather, "Food"; it is the designation used by supernatural beings for these fish and is hence applied by smmq to their prey, human beings.

After this has been done, eagle down is blown over the fish. A second salmon is likewise taken from the river, with the same cry of xak'loi·, laid with its head on its predecessor's tail, and the same rite carried out. This is repeated till all are arranged in line, with their heads pointing upstream. The women listening from the village are able to tell how many 226 have been caught from the number of times the cry xak'loi is 796 raised.

[1] The vocative form of the word.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Then the salmon are cut up (only shell knives may be [412] used for the purpose) and cooked. Everything must be used, heads, bones, and entrails, the only refuse being the blood which is scraped from the leaves and carried into the woods.
The leaves themselves, and the strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark are thrown into the river in accordance with a desire expressed by Nałkymm long ago. When everything is 226 ready for a meal, the men take their places in two rows, 796 facing each other across a coarse bark mat. Bark spoons have been provided, and when the heralds call for food, the 574 fisherman brings the heads of the salmon and the guests make the motions of eating, though in reality these parts [251] are dried and kept for winter. Boxes containing a liberal portion of the choice meat are next served and all eat freely.
Each guest puts on one side what he has not consumed as if to carry it away, as is the custom at an ordinary feast, though his share is really left in the shelter until the following day. Finally, a third course is provided, the back of the fish cooked with the bone in position. Like the last, the guests eat as much as they desire and pack up the residue as if to take away. Then they leave the Spring Salmon House.

All the fish are not cooked on the one occasion. The following day the fisherman again calls back the men of his village. The same type of meal is served, but this time the guests carry away what they do not eat for the benefit of their families. This portion may be eaten by the women without [562] affronting the salmon.

This rite has not been performed in full detail in Bella Coola 226 for many years, and it was impossible to collect information on 796 some points. It is uncertain, for example, whether this ceremony was carried out by every fisherman or whether there used 424 to be certain individuals with the prerogative of dealing with the first catch. The latter appears to be the most logical manner, and was definitely stated to be the case by one well-informed old man. It is clear, however, that every spring salmon was landed with the cry of xaẽ'lsi·, taken to the Spring Salmon House, and cut up by the men until the time when women were allowed near the river. Another old man stated that the feast took place at night and that only the heads and refuse of the first catch were eaten, the remainder being dried for the winter. Women of child-bearing age were not allowed on the river bank, and were rigorously excluded from the Spring Salmon House until the time when the sun's shadow reached a diagonal scar on the slope of one of the mountains on the north side of North Bentinck Arm. This occurs about August. From that time onwards, there was no calling of xaẽ'lsi·, and women, except those who were taboo, could cut salmon freely on the bank. It was even stated that refuse of salmon could be thrown into the river after that time. No one knows the origin of this seasonal prohibition, or why it should end when the sun reaches a certain point, but it was faithfully observed in former times.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In Kimsquit similar rites were carried out, the chief variation being that the bodies of four swans were placed in the Spring Salmon House and the fish laid with these at intervals in the line. Moreover, the youth used to bite the back of each salmon as he presented it with the cedar-bark streamer. The same regulations with regard to drinking water, and crying after eating, were enforced for spring salmon as for olachen.

Miscellaneous Beliefs

The following miscellaneous beliefs and customs cannot be assigned to any special aspect of Bella Coola life:

If a spark from a fire jumps out and lights on a person's hand, it is said:

"The fire wants to give you [the person on whom the brand has fallen] food."

If a man sneezes repeatedly, it is said:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481

"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322 carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825 boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [756] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be pre- 856 sent should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 827 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[10]

[10]This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 500.

1:McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

116

/For the names of the informants relating the various origin myths of the Bellacoola, see footnotes in Chapter VI, category 116, pp. 292-360./

1:McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

431, 796

/For information on the potlatch as a means of gaining prestige and a description of the ceremonies, see category 556./

1:McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539

/For the text of origin myths and stories illustrating the supernatural, see category 116, pp. 295-360 and pp. 619-692./

1:McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

551

/For names appearing in myths see category 116, pp. 295-360 and pp. 619-692./

1:McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556

/For information on achieving prestige through the giving of gifts, especially at a potlatch, see category 116, pp. 163-262, and pp. 458-494./

1: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

622

/For information on achieving the status of "chief" through the display and distribution of wealth (especially at potlatches) see category 556. /

624

/For information on Bellacoola heralds and their function in the potlatch ceremonies, see category 203. /

1: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

756

/For information on shamanism and stories illustrating shamanism, see category 116, pp. 539-594, and pp. 661-692./

2

1: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776

/For information on supernatural beings see category 116, pp. 30-85./

l: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

787

/For information on visions, quests for visions, dreams and omens, see category 116, pp. 513-539, pp. 547-558, pp. 588-595 and pp. 599-692./

1:McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

796
765

/For information on the details of the memorial potlatch ceremonies for the dead, see category 769./

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

BY

T. F. McILWRAITH

VOLUME TWO

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESS
TORONTO, 1948

[Title Page]

[p.iii]
[pp.i-ii are blank]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Copyright, Canada, 1948, and printed in Canada by the University of Toronto Press. London: Geoffrey Cumberlege, Oxford University Press.

[RIV]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CONTENTS

Volume Two

000

List of Plates vii

Phonetic Key ix

I Winter Ceremonial Dances 1

II Songs 267

III Warfare 338

IV Games 378

V Stories 385

VI The Man Himself 518

Appendices

A. Mechanical Processes 535

B. String Figures 543

C. Glossary of Flora and Fauna 570

D. Bella Coola-English Vocabulary 573

Index 631

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

LIST OF PLATES

Volume Two

000

Between pages 84 and 85

1. Mask representing Änoºlikwolsaix
2. Kusiut whistles
3. Siki producing a crystal from his stomach
4. Crystals used in initiation ceremonies
5. Cannibal with incubus in form of a bear
6. Repository of a dog-eating cannibal

Between pages 164 and 165

7. Blanket with wooden skulls worn by a cannibal
8. Masked figure representing a Haohao
9. Thunder dancer. Notice the cedar-bark collar with pendant tassels and the framework of twigs decorated with eagle down
10. Dancer carrying the fungus
11. Thunder carrying the fire-rattle
12. The slave woman with the child on her back

Between pages 516 and 517

13. Mrs. Joshua Moody (left) and Mrs. Willie Mack, two Bella Coola women
14. Mrs. Jim Pollard, a Kimsquit woman
15. Mrs. Jim Pollard: Profile
16. Reuben Schooner, a Bella Coola man, and his children

[P. vi is blank]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

LIST OF PLATES

000 17. Lame Charlie, a Bella Coola man
18. Captain Myers, an aged Bella Coola man
19. Skookum Mary, a Kimsquit woman
20. Alec Davis, a full-blooded Bella Coola

Between pages 532 and 533

21. River canoe
22. Ocean canoe

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PHONETIC KEY[1]

104

VOWELS

a, as in father
ä, as in hat e, as in fate
i, as in pique
o, as in note
u, as in rule ə, as in but e, as in met ɪ, as in hit ʊ, as in put ə, obscure vowel like a in idea
ᵉ, exponent vowels, voiced but slighted in enunciation. The same device is used for consonants slighted in enunciation.

CONSONANTS

p, t, k, l, m, n, s, w, y, h, r,[2] as in English q, velar k
p', t', k', q', aspirated surds ṗ, ṭ, ḳ, q̇, glottalized stops ḳ, anterior palatal k
ḱ, anterior palatal k
b, d, intermediate between surd and sonant ḍ, glottalized intermediate dj, as in jam
c, as sh in shell
ł, spirantal l
tł, t + ł
tł̇, glottalized tł
x, as in Scottish, loch x̄, velar x, as in German, ach x̄, anterior palatal x, as in German, ich ɣ, peculiar s sound, apparently velar.

·, for example, a·, or t·, indicates lengthening of preceding vowel or consonant ˈ, indicates a glottal stop ', indicates aspiration ˋ, indicates accentuation of the syllable so marked.

[1]Based on the simpler system described in Phonetic Transcription of Indian Languages, (Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections, vol. 66, No. 6, Washington (1916), pp. 2-7).

[2]The r sound was used only by one old man and several of his children and grandchildren.

[197]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

101
102
131
133

Map of the Bella Coola area

[P. X]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

000

[P. xi]
[P. xii is blank]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER I

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

000

General Observations on the Kusiut Society — Powers and Functions of the Society — Initiation — The Ritual of Specific Dances — Various Origin Myths — Kusiut Prerogatives Other than Dances — The Death of a Kusiut — The Final Rite — Concluding Observations and History.

General Observations on the Kusiut Society

IN view of the importance of the kusiut society in the lives of the Bella Coola, it would seem logical to have described it in an earlier part of this monograph. Though an integral part of the complicated structure of social organization, it is a secret, semi-religious grouping which can best be treated separately. The word kusiut is connected etymologically, according to native belief, with siut, the term for a supernatural being. Thus the meaning of the society's designation is "The Supernatural," or "The Learned," for siut has both these significations. A member of the society is likewise called a kusiut, plural, kukusiut. 575* 575* 192 [176]

The investigator soon learns of the existence of the society. If he asks a man his name, and then inquires further what type of designation it is, the answer is always that it is his kusiut name, that is, the one by which he is known as a member of the society. Ancestral names are used only at potlatches or other ceremonial occasions, whereas an individual's kusiut appellation is the one which he uses commonly. Moreover, for about three months of every year the Bella Coola live in an atmosphere of kusiut dances with a performance, or its preliminaries, taking place almost every night. Preparations for this ceremonial season, for so it may be termed, begin four days after the September moon is full, while the actual dances commence early in November and are continued until March. During this period the kukusiut are believed to be in intimate 551 575* [124] 535 575* 796 [787]

535 contact with supernatural beings, so that it is a time for grave
*575 thoughts and decorous behaviour. Even by day the members
796 pass from house to house with dignified mien, not loitering
[787] around the sidewalks nor indulging in frivolity. Every effort is made to prevent quarrels between members who are expected to show by their appearance and actions the gravity of the rites in which they are engaged. Night after night they assemble at the house wherein the dance is taking place; those who have performed, and are therefore most closely in touch with the supernatural, even sleep there, not returning to their own houses until March. A dance usually lasts four nights, and during that time the performer's house, in which it takes place, is termed a nuqpik, "An Empty House." The significance of this designation is unknown.

178 Membership in the society depends on a duly validated
*575 ancestral prerogative to perform one of the many kusiut dances.
[424] At the present time every Bella Coola is a kusiut, even babes in arms being initiated, but formerly no one was admitted until he or she had reached an age of discretion. Some informants went so far as to say that the hair of an initiate must have begun to turn grey, and all agreed that no one was ever admitted until at least twenty, or more often, twenty-five years of age. Initiates were frequently still older; one woman, for example, stated that her mother was past the age of child-bearing before admission. Since only a member of the society [551] could be called by a kusiut name, the uninitiated continued to be known by the ancestral names conferred on them at infancy until they received kusiut designations. The importance of the 178 society depends on the belief of the uninitiated in the super-
*575 natural powers of its members, and as there are now none to 796 impress, the rites carried out today are little more than pic-
128 tures of what took place years ago. It is the aim of the Bella Coola to carry out the dances as if uninitiated persons were in attendance, and since most of the following information was obtained from men who well remembered their sensations when not members of the society, it is justifiable to use the present

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
tense throughout this chapter, and to assume the presence of a [178] number of young men and women ignorant of the significance [796] of the rites. Formerly, the kukusiut often had difficulty in im- [128] pressing the uninitiated with their prowess, and feuds with the [578] a'alk were common.

Although membership in the kusiut society depends on an 554 ancestral prerogative, it is essentially a democratic institution. A certain amount of wealth is necessary to validate a kusiut 556 prerogative, but nothing comparable to that required for a 575* potlatch; in fact, poor men are often persons of great importance within the ranks of the society. Nor are the prerogatives considered to be as valuable as ancestral rights, so that [567] slaves are often admitted as kukusiut by their masters. An important kusiut is not esteemed by the community in the same way as the donor of many potlatches; in short, membership in the society brings limited ceremonial and semi-religious advantage, not social prestige of a public nature.

Powers and Functions of the Society

Any secret society can be viewed from the standpoints of a 575* member, and of a non-member. The scope of the kusiut organization can be most clearly outlined by describing first what an 869 uninitiated person knows about it. From his infancy, parents impress upon a child the supernatural powers of the kukusiut and the dangers attached to their rites. Such instruction is perhaps strongest where one, or both, is not a member. They then voice their own fears, and do not merely deceive for the good of the society. Steeped as every child is in a firm belief of the near presence of the supernatural, he readily believes what he is told. He learns, for example, that if, without spe- [784] cial invitation, he dares enter the house where a kusiut dance [774] is taking place—at any time during the four days or more that it lasts—his spirit will be drawn from him. This is sufficient [626] to deter him from prying too closely into the rites. Strangely enough, there seem always to have been differences in teaching with respect to this deception. It is believed that if a non- 000

It is believed that if a non-
*575 initiate pass between the central fire and the raised platform 774 behind it, where the dancer is usually concealed, his spirit will 755 be attracted to this material object. Even though the performer is in another house at the time, he at once senses what [784 has happened and asks who has lost his spirit. The guilty 626] person, believing that he will die unless it is returned to him, always admits what he has done. The dancer, accompanied by several attendant kukusiut, proceeds to the raised platform, presses his cupped hands four times against it, and by sucking with his mouth pretends to draw forth the spirit. But since the dancer has a direct call (II, p. 6) from his supernatural patron (II, p. 6), he cannot come in contact with the uninitiated without danger to the latter, so he transfers the supernatural element to the leg of another kusiut, who is not dancing at the time, by pressing four times. This assistant then returns it to the owner by kneading it four times into the back of his neck.
[626 The reckless uninitiated person suffers no harm, but is more careful in future.

[784 Another belief is that if a non-member even walks close to 626] the doorway of the house during the four days, or more, that a dance is taking place, his spirit is attracted to the dancer, wherever he may be at the moment. Consequently the uninitiated use the beach path instead of the sidewalk. Accounts
[778 differ as to what results from the transgression. According to one, the dancer falls down as if dead, due to the contact between something non-sacred and the power with which he is imbued. It is at once recognized what has happened and any kusiut can draw forth the spirit by placing his two hands, shaped like a cup, against the dancer and sucking violently. While so doing he calls hoip loudly and any kukusiut present beat time furiously. As soon as the alien spirit has been removed, the dancer recovers. Still holding his hands cupped together, the extractor now proceeds to the house of the non-member and returns the latter's spirit by kneading it into the back of his neck. If this were not done, the loser would soon [784 become mad, try to eat dirt, and die. According to another

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not 575* inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and 774 asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps 755 forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is [784] thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukusiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kusiut which he inserts into the loser's neck.

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to 575* an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief 774 should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect 626 for the kukusiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims.

Another source of strength claimed by the kukusiut is 575* ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural 787 beings held in Nusmät·a prior to the entry of Ält̄quntäm. As 776 already described, it is believed that a supernatural element 796 from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time 777 but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging 761 to kukusiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nusmät·a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Ält̄quntäm enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kusiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 787 776 796 Ałquntäm enters and confers on kusiut matters with Sexsexkälaix, his assistant in affairs connected with his functions as leader of the supernatural kukusiut.[1] This being acts as announcer and intermediary with Ałquntäm, but himself lacks the power of initiating matters. The two discuss whether or not it is advisable to allow mortal kukusiut to perform certain dances of the type known as kusiotem (II, p.128), and if so, they transmit the necessary power to the earthly dancer who has the proper prerogative, thus enabling him to give a graphic representation of what is done in the upper land.

*575 796 787 776 535 This is the essence of the kusiut dances. Each portrays a performance given by one of the supernatural beings in the house above, or some other aspect of his activities. Each earthly dancer has as patron a supernatural being, usually the one who carries out the dance of which his own is a model, and between patron and protégé there exists a relationship by means of which the latter receives the power necessary to perform. To do so, the uninitiated believe that he must receive a yeux, which can be translated as "call," from his associate above. Moreover, not only is each patron a supernatural being, but each is guided by Ałquntäm in the performance of the kusiut rites in the land above, which indirectly increases the prestige of the protégé.

---

*575 787 776 796 184 [1]The differences of belief of individual Bella Coola, dependent upon family traditions, is nowhere shown with greater clearness than in this meeting of the leaders of the supernatural dancers. It is clear that the Bella Coola have no uniformity of belief, even in what might be regarded as fundamental concepts. One informant, well versed in kusiut matters, asserted that there are five supernatural leaders, Ałquntäm and his assistants, Smaiaikila, Sexsexkälaix, Snuslkäls, and Sunxälotla. Others were equally emphatic that Ałquntäm is the kusiut name of the supreme deity, and that Sunxälotla, Smaiaikila, and Snuslkäls, are merely other designations for the same deity with regard to different functions. This belief has been followed during the monograph, by designating the supreme deity as Ałquntäm, the name by which he is termed with respect to his kusiut powers. These two opinions are not as basically different as appears at first sight. A man [828] is considered as having two, or more, personalities with respect to different rites at which he is called by different names. Since the supreme deity is regarded as a superman, who functions in diverse manners, it is not difficult to understand how these are sometimes ascribed to different individuals, and sometimes to the one under different names.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Furthermore, throughout the ceremonial season, the uninitiated have ocular demonstrations of the powers with which the kukusiut are associated. At frequent intervals they are invited to the house of the dancer where, with wonder, fear, and awe, they see strange creatures. Although they may recognize that some of these are only their fellow-tribesmen in strange form, they have no idea how such transformations are produced, and ascribe them to supernatural assistance. They accept the strange designs of the figures as proof that the kukusiut have been in contact with unfamiliar beings. It seems clear that the uninitiated do not realize that the representations are produced by means of masks, the work of human hands; instead, they believe that the figures displayed are really those of supernatural patrons who have come to earth to assist their protégés. It must be remembered that these dances take place within large houses, only partially illuminated by a flickering central fire, which facilitates deception and conjuring tricks, quite apart from the credulity of the observers. 575* 796 781 [354]

The uninitiated may sometimes suspect that the performers are not real supernatural beings, but there is no question of their firm conviction concerning the changes which come over the kukusiut at this time. One member of the society, for example, may begin to act in a peculiar manner and at once the uninitiated are ejected from the house. From without they listen with mixed fear and excitement to the strange noises which they do not know are made by whistles, and presently the kusiut rushes forth in a frenzied state, biting those he meets. The uninitiated know that he is a Cannibal, doing as his patron above is doing, and that a call from the latter has caused him to become mad. When the kukusiut have subdued him and taken him back to his house, the non-membersh ear more strange and inexplicable sounds, which appear to go upwards, and presently the news is circulated that the Cannibal has been carried away to the land above. He is seen no more for several weeks, and when next he appears he is thin, wan, and bald, because the high winds of the land above have blown 575* 781 787 796

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the 781 dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sym-[787] pathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member [761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the per-778 formance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is 787 equally well known that his specific power has been brought to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor 424 must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuskäsiutsta (also called nusxi'ipsta), by the supernatural woman Änoºlikwolsaix.
Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Änoºlikwolsaix; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her functions are to guard the names, and to keep in touch with the patrons. Every uninitiated person believes that if he could only have the good fortune to find a repository, he would obtain the kusiut prerogative there localized. Ăno°likwolsaix travels only during the ceremonial season when she is present at every kusiut dance in the form of a woman with a long, thin face and pointed chin (see Plate 13),[1] who "explains" the significance of the figures to the uninitiated in a peculiar high-pitched voice. She is well able to do so since as guardian of repositories she knows the prerogative of each member of the society. Frequently she mocks the uninitiated: 575* 787 424 [778] [776]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" she jeers. "You [naming some ambitious youth], you who think yourself so smart, you nearly fell over me that time you walked up in the woods behind the village looking for grouse. If I had been a bear I could have felled you with a blow of my paw. How can you ever hope to become a kusiut like your father and grandfather if you are so blind."

His fellows are inclined to join in the laughter at the one singled out for Ăno°likwolsaix's scorn, but she flays them all in turn. "She" is, of course, a kusiut chosen for fluency and ability to make biting remarks. Parents tell their children that in the autumn, pleased at the sight of falling leaves, Ăno°likwolsaix bares the roof of her house and sits shaking her fingers like a dancer. [776]

"Go to the woods and look for her," they say. "If she sees you she will say 'tcut' and beckon to you. Then you will become a kusiut."

To further this deception, kukusiut are accustomed to disguise themselves as Ăno°likwolsaix and move around in the autumn forest, taking care that no uninitiated comes too near for safety. An individual may have several kusiut prerogatives, and if he wishes to transfer one of these to an associate, the report is circulated that the recipient has stumbled upon the repository of the donor. The latter then acts as if he were crazy, and the uninitiated are told that he is a nukaxem, an 575* 778 425

[1] [See category 116, p. 84(A) - ANALYST] (Apparently Plate 1 is meant)

*575 untranslatable word with the significance of "One who has 778 suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository]."
425 Some of these vaults[1] are said to be dangerous to the uninitiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some [784] chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

*575 According to Kimsquit belief, Ăno°likwolsaix has a husband, Ălmoqltaikila, who dwells with her in every repository.
778 If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls 776 dead before the power emanating from Ăno°likwolsaix. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the kusiut society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

*575 Turning now to the manner in which the kukusiut regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many kukusiut have, for example, [424] Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a [773] fact, that long ago the ascendancy of the kukusiut was often [178] challenged by the a'alk and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

[688] Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

[1] [i.e. - a repository of supernatural power - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ceal their subterfuges, it sometimes happens that an uninitiated 575* person sees or hears something which he should not know. The 688 simplest way to deal with this situation is to kill the observer. It is said that as late as 1900 a young man, impelled by curiosity, wandered up a valley into which he had been warned not to penetrate, and met a Cannibal whom he believed had vanished into the upper realms. Almost dumbfounded, he accepted the latter's invitation to sit down, and was slain by him. More often, and especially if the observer is the child of a kusiut, he is initiated into the ranks of the society. If this happens at any time of year except the actual cere- 575* monial season, he cannot perform immediately, but he is taken to the secret meeting place of the village chiefs, and there the mysteries of the organization are explained to him. The uninitiated are told that the observer has had a shaman's experience. With the aid of the older kukusiut he then performs a dance and conjuring feat of the type already described (I, p. 564), and is secluded until the next autumn, meanwhile [292] wearing the distinctive collar of a shaman. In the songs used [756] on this occasion no mention is made of a wash-basin, so of course the lad only performs ceremonially. When winter comes he is formally initiated into the society.

It is somewhat difficult to understand and explain the 575* sentiments which lead a young man to obey rigidly the dictates 781 of the senior kukusiut in deceiving his former friends. If 626 it becomes known that a youth has seen something which should have been concealed, the senior kukusiut of his village [688] meet in their ceremonial spot and decide that he must be put through the shaman's rite. Some relative of the youth is always ready to provide the necessary kusiut prerogative; otherwise he would have to be killed. Two or three members are then sent to catch the young man. On some pretext they lure him into the woods and then carry him away, struggling in fear, to the holy of holies, the place which he had been told to avoid since he would die if he penetrated to it. Here he finds all the seniors of his village, seated with grave expressions on

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

#575 781 626 their faces. In spite of what he may have seen, the lad cannot rid himself of the supernatural fears with which he has been inculcated from childhood, and the experience is terrifying to a degree. It may be that he has seen some of the whistles, and thereby learnt that the strange sounds are made by men, not by supernatural beings. In this case he is shown their mechanism in detail, and warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells others of his knowledge. Fear impels him to silence, and at the same time he realizes that what he has discovered has placed him in a superior position to that of his former associates. He feels, too, that he has been admitted into the ranks of the society in which his father, grandfather, and ancestors have distinguished themselves, and that it would be desecration to make light of what they have held sacred. Finally, an initiate does not at first grasp the fact that all the rites are deceptions, and by the time that this is apparent to him he has become so thoroughly a part of the organization that he has no thought of betraying his associates, upsetting a vital part in the complicated fabric of Bella Coola life, and exposing himself to ruin and death. A logical white man might think these considerations insufficient, but the existence of the society proves that the varied motives operate so strongly that a young man does keep silence. Some informants state that hypnotism was formerly used to ensure obedience. [828]

#575 176 781 424 The kukwiut are always ready to deal with an emergency such as sometimes occurs in spite of every precaution. It is remembered that about one hundred and fifty years ago during a dance at the village of Naqáymáx, a figure, representing one of the supernatural beings, had the misfortune to drop his mask, the strings by which it was tied having worn through. The house was crowded with uninitiated to whom the deception at once became apparent. For a moment there was wild confusion, but the senior kukwiut rose to the occasion and closed the door, allowing no uninitiated person to leave. Then a kwiut was sent out with a whistle which he sounded as if the supernatural being of which it was the voice was growing

J:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

nearer and nearer, till finally a thump was heard on the roof. 575*
O ....., cried out the dukaxiat, "it is my patron." 176

The uninitiated were told that in consequence of the disaster, the supernatural beings had sent calls to this earth for all within the house. Even small children were admitted on this occasion. Those dukaxiat in whose families were dormant prerogatives at once explained to their relatives that the call was from the patron of one of these, and that henceforth the person addressed was a protégé of that being. But even with the assistance of all the dukaxiat, there were not sufficient privileges for all who had seen the accident. The explanation hastily agreed upon for those who could not otherwise be provided with prerogatives, was that a supernatural being mentioned in the myth from which the uninitiated had derived his ancestral name had come as patron. Repositories were stated to exist in various places near the village for the designations thus created, and order had been restored before morning. This event was described by so many informants that its historical accuracy can hardly be challenged. Those so initiated were said to have become "dukaxiat under easy circumstances"; as prerogatives they had merely the right of singing about their respective patrons, not of performing any particular dramatic dance, but they were, none the less, fully qualified members of the society. The prestige and influence of this organization can be estimated by the fact that it was thus able to carry through a wholesale initiation without its secrets becoming known in adjacent villages. Those admitted, though realizing that deception was being practised, were so overawed by the other members of the society that they accepted what was told them without question, entirely failing to use their common sense. Thus, this incident, which had at first threatened disaster, ultimately reacted to the advantage of the dukaxiat. It is true that their prestige was somewhat diminished by the admission of young people, but in compensation they claimed many new patrons, including several regarded with veneration owing to their occurrence in ancestral myths. Since the latter 575*
196

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575
[176]

part of the last century it has become customary to explain the dropping of a mask as due to a sudden call to the bearer.

Another means by which the kukusiut protect themselves from doubting non-members is by the use of spies. The marshals (II, p. 16) of the society select some intelligent youth and ask the consent of his father, or other guardian, to make him a spy. If this is granted, the youth is lured into the woods and carried forcibly to the sacred meeting-place, where he finds the senior kukusiut of his village seated, an awe-inspiring band. They explain to him the deceits used, show him the whistles and other equipment, and instruct him that it is his duty to inform them if he hears any uninitiated person casting doubts on the rites of the society. Proud of his trust, and fearful of what would happen should he fail to carry out his duties, the spy begins his work. Ignorant of his knowledge, the uninitiated have no hesitation in talking with him and if he hears one of them expressing doubts as to the powers of the society, or telling that he has seen the sacred meeting-place or some of the regalia, he at once notifies one of the marshals. The over-confident person is then initiated. Thus the kukusiut are constantly recruiting their strength from the most intelligent uninitiated, thereby adding to the influence of their society and lessening the dangers from non-members.

[626]

Sometimes a man is forced to undertake the task on account of too great knowledge of kusiut matters. The following incident, related by a spy, is worth recording as a concrete example of this point:

Between 1870 and 1880, a Rivers Inlet Cannibal performed the Cannibal dance in Bella Coola, presumably being entitled to do so by a Bella Coola name and prerogative. During his period of seclusion he died from a sudden hemorrhage, and the uninitiated were told that he had been carried away to the mysterious regions of the sky, the customary explanation in such circumstances. Soon afterwards some Bella Coola returned from Victoria, and an old woman told them the news, ignorant of the fact that an uninitiated lad of fifteen had entered the house and was listening eagerly. A careless movement betrayed his presence to the horrified kukusiut and the boy fled, terrified at the turn of events.

[961]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Not knowing where to go nor what to do, he hid himself on a small island within sight of the village whence he could see and hear the people seeking him. At times some of his kukuxiut friends came close, calling his name; but not till he was driven to do so by hunger did he reveal his hiding-place. Then he answered the shouts of two men who at first pretended they were merely seeking him because of the worry his prolonged disappearance was causing his parents. Once the lad was within their grasp they carried him swiftly to the house of one of the chiefs, where he found himself seated among the most influential men of his village with the door barred behind him. The fear which any youth would feel in like circumstances was increased greatly by the awe with which he, as an uninitiated person, regarded the kukuxiut, especially on this occasion when he knew that he had roused their anger. 575* [781]

"What did you hear?" asked one of the marshals. The lad was too terrified to lie, so he blurted out all the gossip he had overheard, including the news of the death of the Rivers Inlet Cannibal.

"You have heard too much, you must join us," continued his questioner.

The same man then asked one of his relatives whether he would "buy" the lad from them, that is, whether they would provide the necessary goods to have him initiated. It was understood that through his improper knowledge he had come under the jurisdiction of the kukuxiut and that, unless made one of them, they would kill him. The lad was the protégé of his uncle who at the time was initiating him into the tsaxk ceremonial, and who accordingly was most unwilling to have his nephew made a kuxiut. [688]

"Let him be a spy," said the uncle.

After much discussion this proposition was agreed to; the decision was facilitated by the fact that one of the lad's ancestors had been a spy. All night he was kept sitting in the centre of a group of elders who revealed to him the mysteries of the organization and showed him the whistles and other regalia. For twenty years this man remained a spy, dutifully informing upon any over-inquisitive, uninitiated person.

The informant was more than sixty years of age when he related this incident, but the passage of time had not caused him to forget the utter terror and feeling of inferiority experienced when he was taken into the presence of the senior kukuxiut. [781]

Although every kuxiut assists in preserving the dignity and awe of the society, this duty is especially the function of those members who are regarded as the earthly representatives of 575* 424 776

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 Ana'likwolsaix. They may be termed marshals of the society.
[424] Each must have an ancestral prerogative for this, duly vali-[776] dated by presents to the kukusiut, in addition to a kusiut prerogative of some kind. In each village there are four or five of these men. Whenever food is being served at a kusiut dance, the marshals receive theirs first and then one or other of them addresses the audience in slow and impressive style, beating on the floor with a stick to add emphasis to his words. He admonishes his fellows to safeguard the ancient rites of the society, to be bold, to be secretive, and he pays honour to the member who has given the dance. It is they who take the leading part if a youth is dragged away to the meeting-place for initiation, and it is they who arrange matters when a spy reports that a
*575 non-member is over-inquisitive. If any member of the society 688 should break one of its laws at a time when no uninitiated are present, the marshal is expected to seize a burning stick from the fire and strike the offender with it. If death should result, revenge is unthinkable, since the criminal had broken the law. The same fate is unhesitatingly meted out to any kusiut who should dare to betray any of the mysteries to the uninitiated. Moreover, it is the marshals who decide whether any improper act lowers the dignity of a dance, and punish accordingly. Not many years ago a kusiut woman gave birth to a child while a dance was taking place and the infant was slain by one of the [761] marshals. The usual explanation made to the uninitiated for a death within the dance-house is that a supernatural being caused the roof to fall and kill the victim.

*575 Each marshal has, in connection with his prerogative of 551 this vocation, a professional name, used only within the house where a kusiut dance is taking place and carefully concealed [424] from the uninitiated. Some designations were obtained from Ana'likwolsaix by an ancestor of the possessor, others were created on this earth with reference to some specific event, and [553] duly made valid by presents to the kukusiut alone. Some of these names are:

Xwolsakmis, "The Destroyer," so given on account of an

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

elaborate kusiut ritual which failed; 575* 551

Namulsta, meaning unknown;

"The One who Guards the Ritual by Gripping with his Teeth";

"The Terrifier";

"The Dog-Toothed One."

When a kusiut acts contrary to the interests of the society 575* the marshals gather in the sacred meeting-place of the village, with other senior kukusiut. There is no definite order respecting 688 who shall, or shall not, be summoned. The matter is discussed until unanimity of opinion is reached, although a marshal, particularly if he is also a rich and influential chief, is the guiding spirit. In Nusqulxwaista the supernatural being Sikiliktnum kills any supernatural kusiut who errs, so in this world it is always said that a verdict of death has been given by this being. Several of those at the meeting are sent out to lure the victim who, brought before the group, is told that he is to die. He is seized, thrown on his back, and a pole laid across his neck; two men sit on each end until the man is dead.[3] Sometimes less drastic punishments are meted out. About 177 1880, when the influence of the white man had become evident on the coast, a dancer who had been, theoretically, 575* disembowelled and was supposed to remain for months within 688 his house to recover from the operation, insisted on fleeing to Kimsquit to a woman with whom he was in love. When he returned to Bella Coola a meeting was held to decide whether or not he should be killed. Fear of the white men prevented summary punishment, but the marshals insisted that the offender submit himself to periodic scratching on the stomach with a nail so that it would appear to the uninitiated that he was suffering from a deep wound. The offender was thankful to escape thus lightly.

[3]Occasionally the relative of a condemned person saves him by saying that he must not be killed. This means that the speaker is willing to die as a substitute; he is executed in due course, but the mechanism by which the diffusion of information is stopped is not clear.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 688 Frequently the marshals and associated kukusiut depute others to act as their executioners. Sometimes a shaman who is also a kusiut is asked to slay the offender, or a kusiut in whose ancestral family a knowledge of means for secret murder has been handed down for generations may be called upon. The executioner is told that if he fails he will himself be killed. Although no Bella Coola would admit that a person so charged had committed murder by other than magical means, it appears highly probable that such was the case. It is believed that long ago the kukusiut were able to kill an offending [761] uninitiated person by drawing forth his spirit, wrapping it in [754] undyed cedar-bark and casting it into the fire. The victim would die within a short time.

*575 203 628 The desire to carry out kusiut ceremonials with proper dignity and ritual not only acts as a strong bond of union among members of the society in a single village, but between those in different towns and even in different tribes. When a marshal has struck a kusiut, the ceremony, whatever it may be, is at once stopped. Two kukusiut are sent off to bear the tidings to the nearest village up the valley, and two more to the one below. The messengers go beneath the house in which a dance is taking place and knock on the floor of the back-room. Someone presently hears them and a kusiut goes out to investigate. When the envoys have told their tale he returns, whispers to the singers, and the ceremony concludes for that night. As soon as the uninitiated, if any are present, have been ejected, the messengers enter with blankets almost covering their faces and seat themselves between the fire and the back-room where the senior members crowd around to listen. From this village two more kukusiut are despatched with the news which is thus transmitted with remarkable speed from end to end of the valley. When next the marshals are admonishing the kukusiut of their respective villages, they do not fail to draw attention to the way in which the law has been upheld. Conversely, if a marshal hears indirectly that there has been a flaw in the ritual of a neighbouring village,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

he beats in the fire with his stick, and expresses the hope that the name of the marshal in the town where the error took place may be blackened unless he does better. 575* 628 203

As an individual kusiut who errs is punished by a marshal, so is punishment meted out to the members of a village in which any serious accident occurs during a dance. Such disasters are fire, causing concealed kukusiut to appear among the uninitiated, the breaking of a sidewalk on which a number of the members are dancing, or the capsizing of lashed canoes which are used in some of the performances. The obvious effect of such mishaps is to lower the prestige of the kusiut society in the eyes of the uninitiated. The news travels from town to town, and to adjacent tribes. This is a casus belli for any village which wishes to attack the one where the disaster took place; in fact, a raid is considered meritorious. Owing to frequent marriages between the members of neighbouring villages, it usually happens that the inhabitants of adjacent settlements are unwilling to attack, but the news spreads until it reaches a town willing to take the lead. The marshals, aided by any other influential kukusiut, discuss the matter and decide on war; uninitiated are called upon to take part, though they are told only that the foray is connected with the rites of the kusiut society which increases rather than decreases their awe. The threatened villagers, knowing that an attack is inevitable, send out sentinels and guards, and, if possible, flee at the last moment to neighbouring towns for safety, allowing the raiders to burn their village and carry off loot. If a fight takes place many people may be killed, but slaves are never taken. In the last century Stuux attacked Ałqäläxl; the assailants were aided by a number of Chilkotin to whom they were related but who had not the slightest idea of the cause of the raid. Although an attacked town is usually helped by its neighbours, this is not the case when the assault is caused by error in kusiut or sisaok ceremonial. 575* 628 688 721 [727] [567]

Nor is punishment for error or disaster in ritual meted out [648]

*575 only by members of the same tribe. The Bella Coola firmly 648 believe that if, for example, there is a serious disaster at 688 Ło̱mqo·ts, that village will be raided by the people of Bella 721 Bella, Fort Rupert, Kitkatla, or by tribes even farther away.
[628] News of the accident reaches Täl·io or Kimsquit and the inhabitants, themselves related by blood to the offenders and therefore unwilling to punish them, call upon the members of a foreign tribe to do so. On different occasions this statement, in practically identical terms, was made by six independent informants, so there appears to be not the slightest doubt as to the belief of the people in this law. But when specific cases were asked for, they could not be obtained. It therefore appears clear that the Bella Coola, probably owing to long teaching on the part of the kukusiut, consider that an error in ritual is sufficient to bring punishment from an alien tribe. There must be some basis of truth in this conviction, and it is highly probable that the kukusiut must have taken advantage of raids to explain to the uninitiated that these were caused by disasters in ritual. One informant was of the opinion that, following the collapse of a house at Kimsquit during a Cannibal dance, a Bella Coola chief called upon Tcubisa, chief of the Kitkatla, who raided Kimsquit in punishment. Quite apart from the belief inculcated in the uninitiated, it is obvious that tribes eager for war sometimes used an accident as pretext. The Bella Coola know of no case in which they raided a foreign tribe for this reason, although they state that if they had been called upon to act as punisher, they could not have refused.

*575 Leaving now the functions of the society as a whole, the 424 rights of an individual member can next be described. Each 425 kusiut has:
553

(1) A Kusiut Name. Like every other prerogative, a name of this type can be acquired from father, uncle, grandfather, or other relative, or even by a son from his mother. As a rule a kusiut wills his designation or designations, for a man may [556] have several, before death and his wishes are observed. Although the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kusiut name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kusiut prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor. 575* 424 425 553 [556] [578] [426]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(2) A Patron, omätuts. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kukusiut have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform. 575* 424 776 [533] [535] [578]

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Änoºlikwolsaix. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each. 575* 424 778

Although the kukusiut are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time [773] [781]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 this undoubtedly leads them to believe in the powers which 424 they claim. Each kusiut prerogative has had one of three 773 origins:

(a) It was brought down by the first people. Before 778 coming to this earth each of them saw in the land above his [781] patron, who instructed him in a type of dance, and told him where his repository on this world would be. It is assumed that the earliest men were in contact with all the supernatural beings before coming to this earth, but it is believed that each was "blind" to the patrons of his fellows, and thus had only one.

[787] (b) It was derived from an experience with one of the supernatural beings of this world. In this case the repository was either at a spot indicated by the apparition, or at the actual scene of the vision.

(c) A powerful chief sometimes altered an ancestral to a kusiut name. It is believed that this occurred comparatively frequently in ancient times when chiefs had semi-supernatural power. In such cases each followed his own inclination in the choice of a patron,[4] and usually made his own repository within his house, giving strength to it by killing and burying a slave there. Although several Bella Coola informants described [184] this, Kimsquit Indians denied that it could ever have taken place. They say that all repositories were long ago dug by Nunudjiẋnm, a male supernatural being sent down by Ält-quntäm at the beginning of time to prepare the habitations of Änoᵊlikwołsaix and her husband. After doing this, he returned to the land above where he has since resided.

It will thus be seen that the prerogative of a kusiut is always derived from some experience of an ancestor. In carrying out
*575 the rite, the dancer feels that he is continuing the works of his 778 forbears, a factor which increases his desire that neither error nor carelessness on his part shall dim the prestige of the society before the uninitiated. And, further, a man who has spent

[4]The Bella Coola cite such actions as proof of the amazing abilities of their ancestors.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
years in deceiving, undoubtedly begins to convince himself 778 that he is different from lesser mortals.

Before describing in detail initiation into the kusiut society, 575* and then the ritual of various dances, it will be convenient to 796 outline the type of ceremonial, although emphasizing the fact that each differs so much from every other that lengthy descriptions will be necessary later on. When a person has been initiated, either in the proper manner during the ceremonial season or as a "shaman" during the summer, he is known as a lsux, a novice, until the kusiut dances of the next winter. During this period he wears certain distinctive cedar-bark [301] ornaments and is expected to keep himself somewhat apart from the uninitiated. He is always required to give his ceremonial during the first dance season after initiation; by so doing he ceases to be a novice. In later years a kusiut can 575* suit himself whether or not to perform. Having once done so, 796 he is a fully qualified member of the society, nor does he increase his rank in direct proportion to the number of his cere- 556 monies. It is true that one who often dances hears himself praised by the marshals, and gains a certain amount of fame among his fellow kukusiut. But no matter how often he may perform, he cannot become a chief, with prestige spread far and wide among neighbouring tribes, nor can he increase the fame of his ancestors by adding lustre to his ancestral names. Thus the benefits are not sufficient to urge a man to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials in preference to potlatches. The 575* society is essentially one in which a relatively poor man can 796 display his semi-religious prerogative equally with a chief.
Usually, a man performs a complicated ritual, such as that of 424 a Cannibal dance, three or four times during his lifetime; less onerous ones in which no dramatic theme is presented may be more often given.

A man who proposes to give a dance must always notify one of the marshals of his village, who summons his fellows, some of the senior members of the society, and chiefs who are also kukusiut to discuss the intention. If it entails one of the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 more difficult dramatic rites in which failure would lead to the 796 uninitiated learning the mysteries of the society, the matter is debated at length. The writer was present at one meeting held 424 for this purpose, with regard to a performance which had not been carried out for over thirty years. An air of solemnity was evident throughout, as if each present realized the gravity of the topic. The prospective dancer explained what he wished to do, then anyone was at liberty to comment, and most of those present took advantage of it, the marshals speaking last of all. The influence of each speaker depended in part on the [554] type of kusiut dance which he himself had given, and in part on his general status in the community as chief or otherwise, an intangible position dependent on public estimation rather than upon functional rights. In this case, after considerable discussion, it was decided that the dancer could proceed with his arrangements. But if there should be any doubt as to the would-be performer's ability, the marshals have no hesitation in prohibiting his intended rite, and they often do so later if rehearsals show that it is unlikely to be successful.

Refusal of permission to perform occurs only in case of the more difficult dances, which include the Cannibal, Scratch, Breaker, Fungus and Kusiotem. Members of the society whose prerogatives are for one of these types are considered as having greater importance than those who can merely sing of some minor deity-patron; yet all are equally members of the kusiut society, which is not graded according to the performances of its members.

*575 Many of the more difficult dances require weeks of pre-796 paration, when it is sometimes said that the dancer has disappeared to the land above. When he returns they usually conclude in four nights, the time taken by those of a simpler [104] type. Each of these nights[1] is known by an untranslatable term, and, as it will be necessary to use these throughout, it may assist the reader to summarize the ritual which takes place on each. It can be assumed that it is a simple dance, that is, one without elaborate preliminaries.

1 [i.e. of a Kusiut dance - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-192[illegible]) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The first night is lsuxtälaix or lsuxtämem.[6] This is when the call comes to a prospective dancer. This may be heralded by whistling from above, made by a kusiut sent with a whistle to a neighbouring mountain for the purpose, by a thud on the roof, likewise produced by an accomplice, or by no intimation whatever. The dancer utters a low call, sometimes begins to walk in circles with bent head, or to act in some other peculiar manner, while a whistle sounds repeatedly. The uninitiated are at once expelled from his house and a herald informs the village that something strange has come upon the dancer. The kukusiut gather in his house, and four times help him by the frenzied but regular, beating of sticks. Then the singers sing a song previously prepared, the words describing either his patron or the land above. After listening closely, the kukusiut join in and rehearse it until it is familiar. The dancer may or may not perform; if he is inadept in the steps, he does so for practice. If the hour is not too late, the singers may choose, purely for practice, to beat out a number of the songs of those kukusiut who have already performed during the ceremonial season. A meal, provided by the dancer and his family, is then served. The singers next beat out the dancer's song once more and he dances, concluding the evening's performance. Novices and those who have already performed during the season take up their abode in the dancer's house, where they remain for the ensuing four days and nights.

The second day is nusiutälsap.[6] Quite early in the morning a herald calls the kukusiut to the dancer's house, an invitation accepted by as many as wish to do so. A second song is usually composed and practised in the same manner as on the previous evening. Several kukusiut are sent to the forest to cut wood for masks, the number of sections required depending upon the number to be used. In the evening all members of the society assemble to practise the songs.[7] The making of the masks

[6]In Kimsquit called Älxwolämm.

[7]The term qai·nugs is occasionally used for the rites occurring on the day itself.

[7]The rehearsal of the second is sometimes postponed until this time.

The making of the masks

*575 796 532 [431] [465] [104] is allotted to different kukusiut, usually in accordance with the dancer's wishes, although a marshal normally gives out the actual tasks. The dancer, or one of his relatives, bestows presents on each person to whom work is allotted. The evening of nusiutälsap is called ämltämkum.

The third day is qotlum. Those to whom mask making has been entrusted assemble early in the dancer's house to start their work. About noon they are provided with a meal, to which other kukusiut may be invited. By late afternoon, when most of the work has been accomplished, the chips are carefully swept up and burnt, and the house tidied, ready for the uninitiated who will be invited during the evening. On either this *575 796 day or the one preceding, a platform, with raised sides, is built behind the fire on which the dancer can conceal himself and where he is supposed to remain during the remainder of the four days. About dusk the kukusiut are called in; the singers take their places behind the fire, Cannibals, Breakers, and Scratchers are in one of the back corners, where a matting enclosure may have been constructed for them, and the remainder group themselves without distinction around the walls. In Kimsquit, though not in Bella Coola, one or more [184] of the masks may be displayed, suspended from a sloping pole behind the fire. If the singers think it necessary, they may [533] practise the dancer's two songs once more. Then the uninitiated are called in, taking their places near the doorway. The singers beat out one of the dancer's songs and he dances in time to it, and the same is repeated for his second song. After some delay, which appears to be one of the requisites of every kusiut performance, the singers strike up the songs of either a novice or a kusiut, especially one who has already had a call during the ceremonial season, and the one thus summoned dances to his two songs. Late in the season, when many kukusiut have performed, only one song may be used, to prevent the ceremony dragging out to an interminable length, and songs of previous years are omitted. In any case, the ritual lasts for most of the night. When all have danced, the uninitiated are expelled, with the exception of the sisaok to whom, as guests, a meal is served. Then they too leave and the kukusiut eat together. Finally, the singers strike up one of the dancer's songs, and he dances to it to end the evening's rites. 575* 796

2:McIlwraith E-ɔ (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The fourth day is nebusam, "That Which Is Opened." During the day the carpenters work to complete the masks, and towards dusk the house is again put in order. The kukusiut are summoned again to practise the songs, if necessary, and always to arrange who shall wear the masks, a matter left to the marshals and the carpenters. Then the uninitiated are called in to see the masked figures and watch any dramatic representation. After their exclusion, the masks are burnt. Then the kukusiut gather outside the dancer's house where his song is sung once more to send his call back above. Frequently another kusiut now receives a call, so that the nebusam of one dancer is likewise the lsuxtämem for another. The kukusiut assemble in the latter's house, but the uninitiated are not allowed to return to that from which they have been ejected until the platform-enclosure has been destroyed at the end of the season. [104] [532] [533] [532]

A word might be said about kusiut paraphernalia, although much of this will have to be described in detail for special dances. Boas gives illustrations of a large number of kusiut masks and gives such an admirable description of them that little need be added. They are carved from the solid wood, the larger of beech, the smaller of alder, and each carpenter endeavours to make a striking effigy of the being portrayed. Ano°likwolsaix is present at every dance and has become so well standardized that she can always be recognized. This is true, also, for Thunder, Echo, the haohao, the Laugher, the Hermaphrodite, and a few other supernatural beings, but so much variation occurs in others that even a kusiut of much experience cannot always tell what being is represented. The masks are painted, and sometimes the designs indicate the being, even though the carving fails to do so; verisimilitude is 575* 796 532 [114] [824] [776]

*575 not considered necessary. With few exceptions, hereafter to 796 be noted, kusiut masks are burnt at the conclusion of each 532 ceremony, a practice which probably originated in order to avoid the possibility of their being seen by the uninitiated.
[171] The Bella Coola state that this is one of the most striking differences between their rites and those of the Bella Bella.

*575 Next in importance to masks are whistles (see Plate 2).[1] 796 The large, cone-shaped form used in susaok ceremonial is re-
534 placed in kusiut dances by a smaller type consisting of portions of wood glued together, which can be blown with ease from
[237] beneath a concealing blanket. Another type has bellows consisting of a mountain goat bladder, which is held beneath the arm-pit so that it can be worked invisibly. During the summer the whistles are kept by one individual, usually a [422] marshal. Specific information concerning the ownership of these whistles could not be obtained; it appears that any kusiut can make one, or have one made for him by a skilled carpenter, and that their retention by one person during the [426] summer is merely for convenience. They are freely lent to anyone for use in a ceremony.

*575 In some dances special objects are used in connection with 796 dramatic performances, such as bull-roarers, wooden repre-
532 sentations of animals, birds, or miniature human beings. One old man described a pipe formerly used at Täl·io, which had [534] a carved bowl as large as a tea-cup with three radiating stems.
[824] It was carved from a knotty excrescence on a beech bole. Little could be learnt of its history, except that it was supposed to have been carved by a chief with the design of his patron and displayed through pride.

*575 The usual guests at a performance of the type just sum-
609 marized are the dancer's fellow-villagers and any strangers
796 who happen to be present in the town. Great as is the desire of the kukusiut to impress their uninitiated tribesmen, they [648] are still more eager to impress strangers, hence the presence of Carriers adds piquancy to the rites. The writer believes [123] that his presence and interest encouraged the Bella Coola to

1 [see category 116, p 84(B) - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

perform several ancient rites through a desire to "show off" before someone who was ignorant. In recent years there has been a tendency to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials, and to judge a man's worth by his lavishness in them, but this is only a modern development due to the prohibition of the potlatch. Nevertheless, even in former times some individuals preferred to invite foreign guests to kusiut dances and to give them valuable gifts rather than to save these for potlatches; such a ceremony is called a kukusiutek. Whenever strangers are present at a kusiut dance they receive small pieces of dyed cedar-bark as proof of the friendly intentions of the host. The general consensus of Bella Coola opinion is that it is foolish for a man to concentrate on kusiut performances, particularly if he impoverish himself to the detriment of potlatches.

Although foreign guests are seldom invited to kusiut rites, a dancer frequently calls in his fellows from adjacent villages. But as the ceremonial season is simultaneous in the different settlements, with almost nightly performances, it is often impossible to avoid conflict in dates. Which invitation shall have preference is decided in the following manner:

During the days of qothm and nebusam the dancer sends a herald of powerful physique to invite guests from as many villages as he wishes. Simultaneously, a messenger may be approaching from the opposite direction with a similar invitation. Each envoy watches carefully around each bend in the path for his rival, and whichever can first call out his message is entitled to continue to give his invitation in the village of the outwitted herald. It is considered exceedingly bad taste to decline a summons, so the ceremony to which the defeated herald was bearing an invitation must be postponed. Sometimes the two messengers sight one another simultaneously, and the relative priority of their messages is then decided by a contest of strength. The rivals stand in the path, shoulder to shoulder, arms close to their sides, and shove with all their strength, the winner being the one who can force his opponent to move his feet. This last means of deciding is used exclu-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 sively when the villages in which the dances are taking place 203 are adjacent or separated by such a short distance that envoys cannot meet en route.

*575 A word may be said about the attitude of the Bella Coola 177 to the dances of other coastal tribes. They know that the 829 Bella Bella, Rivers Inlet, Kwakiutl, and Kitkatla people have kusiut societies, but until recently their members were con-[648] sidered to be uninitiated, as Bella Coola were when they visited foreign tribes.[8] A few years ago the Bella Coola, Bella Bella, and Rivers Inlet people decided that their rites were sufficiently akin to permit membership in one tribe to carry with it membership in the others:

"We have now one repository," they say.

This development is due to ease of communication and diminution of population in the three tribes. None the less, the Bella Coola recognize differences between their own rites and those of their neighbours. They say that no other tribe [171] has repositories; also that in the other tribes the kusiut society is more intimately connected with the chiefs, in fact, that in Bella Bella and Fort Rupert the Cannibals are the chiefs, whereas in Bella Coola even a poor man, uninfluential in every other respect, can be one.

*575 Theorization is out of place in a descriptive monograph such as this, but the writer gives it as his personal opinion that 177 the Bella Coola have adopted much, if not all, of the kusiut [796] ceremonial from other coastal tribes, though they have profoundly altered it in respect to certain ancient beliefs connected with localized guardian spirits and the patrons of ancestral families. He further believes that it will be found that this Bella Coola technique has in its turn affected the Bella Bella and Rivers Inlet Indians. There seems little doubt that the [171] Bella Coola are correct in saying that the society is more im-[796] portant among them than among their neighbours, and the writer feels that dances and rituals of different types have certainly been adapted to the kusiut pattern of the Bella Coola.

[8]Except a few individuals who had inherited foreign prerogatives.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is hoped that this somewhat lengthy description will assist the reader in following the complicated details of the actual rites. 575*

Initiation

Although kusiut ceremonials take place only during the winter, preliminary arrangements are discussed and carried out throughout the year. One of the subjects over which the old men and the marshals debate at length is the admission of new members. Sometimes the relatives of a young man or woman wish to have him, or her, initiated and propose to use a kusiut prerogative dormant in their family. More often an elderly person is willing to transfer one of his prerogatives to a younger relative; comparatively few are unused owing to the small sums needed to validate them. In either case, one of the marshals is consulted. He passes word to his fellows, and to a number of the elderly kukusiut, who meet in the council-place of the village. The prospective novice's relatives are there and express the belief that he is sufficiently mature in mind to be a credit to the society. If some of those present demur, the matter is discussed at length until all agree, or until it appears that there is strong objection on account of the youth or inconsistency in character of the proposed novice. In this case his relatives can only hope that their proposal will be more favourably received the following year. Sometimes the young man or woman is informed that his relatives have exerted their influence with Ano'likwolsaix to make him a kusiut, more often he remains in ignorance until the ceremonial season. [425]

The initiation of one admitted under these normal circumstances is the same as for one made a "shaman" on account of too great knowledge. Sometimes the marshals themselves take the first steps. If few kukusiut wish to give ceremonials so that there are gaps in the nightly performances, the marshals select a suitable slave and ask his owner to give him some kusiut prerogative of little value. If the latter agrees, a pretext is found to lure the victim to the woods whence he is carried, 575* 567 [425]

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 567 struggling in fear, to the secret meeting-place. Here the marshals discuss what shall be done with him; some suggest that he be killed, others a lesser fate, and finally someone advises his initiation. After apparently due deliberation, this is decided upon; the slave is told the mysteries of the society and is warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells the uninitiated of his knowledge. The actual ceremonial rites of *575 796 admission do not vary according to the preliminaries used.

Initiation can take place at any time during the kusiut season. After consulting with the marshals in order to choose an evening when no other dance is to take place, the relatives of the neophyte, whom it will be convenient to term X, invite the kukusiut to their house. Sometimes songs are sung by way of rehearsal, at other times food is distributed at once. As the people are eating, one of the marshals stands up to address them, saying that X's relatives propose to take him to the repository of the name ———, so that he may become a kusiut. X, to whom this may be the first intimation, is called from his house and taken from the village by several of his kinsmen, with one or more of the marshals. The kukusiut disperse and tell the uninitiated in the other houses that X has gone to meet Ano'likwolsaix. His companions hear the news with mingled envy and thankfulness that they are not to have this dangerous privilege.

[178] In ancient times X and his guides may actually have proceeded to his repository, but for several generations at least it has been customary for the party merely to go to some lonely spot in the woods for the night. Those accompanying X tell him as much of the ritual of the society as they think fit, not forgetting to emphasize the trust put upon him, and the fate which will befall him if he should communicate his knowledge. [787 184] He is expected to report that he went to the repository where, lying face downwards on the ground, he saw Ano'likwolsaix; in Kimsquit he is supposed also to see her husband.[9]

[776] [9]According to one old Bella Coola a statue of Ano'likwolsaix also remains in every repository.

2:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

The following morning the kukuiat alone are invited to X's house. The marshals meanwhile superintend the laying and lashing of planks across two river dug-outs to form a dancing platform. On this the singers take their places, in addition to as many kukuiat as can scramble aboard. The craft is slowly poled either up- or downstream, according to the direction of X's repository, and more kukuiat accompany it along the bank; the uninitiated watch with keen interest from the background. X and his companions proceed towards the river and on meeting the lashed-together canoes are taken aboard. The singers strike up any well known kuciat tune, and in time to it as many kukuiat as possible dance on the platform surmounting the craft. Each uses his own style of dancing according to his prerogative, so that the scene is strikingly varied and animated. X himself crouches in the centre, practically concealed from the uninitiated by the dancers. On reaching the village the whole party hurriedly runs to X's house, from which the uninitiated are rigorously barred for the rest of the day. Those kukuiat who accompanied the party along the bank of the river have preceded them and, as X enters, the drawing cry is raised which always heralds the appearance of one who has been in close contact with supernatural beings.

If X is considered trustworthy, he may be allowed to go alone to his repository, although this is only customary when he takes a second or third prerogative. If this procedure has been followed, X tells those present what he has seen; otherwise his companions do so. The uninitiated listen eagerly from the adjacent houses, wondering anxiously what is taking place. Several kukuiat blow, or use bellow-whistles to increase the awe of the hearers. Presently a herald is sent out. He goes first to the lowest house* of the village, then in succession to those above, announcing in each that:

"Something strange has happened to the son of the chief."

X's name is not mentioned; if his father is not a chief the

*That is, to the one furthest downstream. By always going to such houses in order from lowest to top of the village the herald avoids any danger of confusion.

2: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

call is that something strange has happened to the "mortal." At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, and towards nightfall goes around calling:

Shoop, shoop, kukusiut, "Cure, cure, ye members of the kusiut society, power has come to the son of the chief (or to the mortal)."

The kukusiut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

In every village there are at least two kukusiut who have, embodied with their kusiut names, the professional prerogative of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own supernatural power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be transmitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kusiut and cumi. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an apron of deer hoofs or puffin beaks. Meanwhile bearing sticks are distributed among most of the kukusiut who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki concerns himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 5). He warms this to and fro in his hands, then gives

[see category 116, p 84(2) - ANALYSIS]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

through the motion of throwing it to his partner; the crystal disappears! It has been palmed out of sight at the instant of throwing, but the presumption is that it has entered the other siki who falls to the floor as if stricken down by the powerful object given to him. Now one of the kulaciut, who has been primed for the duty, strikes the recumbent man on the back, restoring him to consciousness. Slowly he pulls himself together, rising at intervals as if crushed beneath a heavy weight, and writhes until he finally produces a rock crystal from his stomach, as if it had been thrown to him. In reality it is his own which he has carried concealed from the beginning of the ceremony. He pretends to throw this to X, often so realistically that the novice blinks, expecting some object to strike him. All this time a kaciut, it does not matter who, has been drinking water at intervals and spirting it out over the face of X, "to strengthen him." When X has received the stone, the beating on the floor-boards, stilled during the transference of the crystal, breaks out again with full din. After a short interval the first siki stops the noise, goes through the same contortions and produces, apparently from his stomach, another rock crystal, which as before he throws across to his partner who falls down, and later passes it to X. Again the beating on the floor is starved. The same ritual is carried out until four, or sometimes only two, rock crystals have been given to X. Then the procedure is reversed. The second siki goes to the novice and after much contortion draws from his stomach one of the crystals, which he pretends to throw back to his partner. As the latter makes the motion of catching it, he produces his own crystal which he, as it seems, forces into his own body. This is done for all the crystals (see Plate 4). As this juncture the uninitiated are told to leave.

One of the siki now kneads the back of X's neck and goes through the motions of pulling something from it. The frightened youth realizes that his spirit is being drawn from him and his terror, great in any case, is not lessened by the siki taking it in his cupped hands to the fire where he scorps up

[See text opposite 116, p84(b) - Analyst]

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

575 991 796 [994] [781] some ashes which he puts into his mouth and chews. Of course he masticates only the ashes but X, unaware of this, is concerned for the fate of his spirit. At last it is restored to him and he is told that the siki has altered it from that of an uninitiated person to that of a kusiut.* The psychological effect of this act on the mind of a young man who has not had time to adjust himself to his new knowledge and who is firmly convinced of the powers of the siki is tremendous.

The first siki now instructs two kukusiut sitting on either side of X to lie down to serve as a seat for him. They do so, irrespective of who they may be. If the novice is still ignorant of the full mysteries of the society, the siki announces that he is going to get a call for X. He walks around the house, peering here and there as if seeking something, and then pounces as if he had caught an object between his hands. A whistle [534] is heard, such as the novice knows accompanies the coming of every call; but he does not know that the noise is made by compressing a goat or bear bladder-whistle between two sticks held beneath the armpit. This is the "mystery" of the strange noises.

575 991 [681] "Do you know what makes that noise?" ask the two kukusiut on whom X is sitting.

If X denies all knowledge, the mystery is explained to him, and he is warned that he will be killed if he communicates the information to uninitiated persons. If he answers that he knows the cause, he is asked who has told him. Perhaps some lad has been peeking and has told X of what he has seen; in that case the over-inquisitive youth is at once initiated to prevent further leakage of information. As soon as X has learnt the great secret he moves to one side and the singers take their positions behind the fire. His father, or whoever it [425] may be from whom he is to obtain his name, then stands up [553] and unfolds its origin, telling which supernatural being is his patron, and the locality of his repository. X sometimes re-

[178] *This part of the rite has been omitted for so many years that many of the middle-aged Bellacoolas have forgotten it.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

X sometimes receives two prerogatives at his initiation, one from each parent, or from some other interested relative. In this case both are expounded. The singers listen intently, knowing that they will later be called upon to compose songs on the theme, or themes. According to some informants they immediately sing one, as if they had just created it, though it was really prepared in advance. The kuéaziut listen until they have mastered it. 575* 796 [425] [553] [533]

Helpers now distribute the food provided by X's father, or whoever is responsible for his initiation. At every kusiut ceremonial the marshals are the first recipients, then the singers, and finally the others without distinction. As the guests are eating, X's father gives presents to all, without deference to rank. An announcer calls out: 575* 796 556 [264]

"Here are [for example] ten bear-skins from X's mother. They are to obtain for him his cedar-bark bracelets."

These goods are then distributed. Similarly other gifts from various relatives are handed out for his anklets, his blanket, his collar, his head-dress, and all other parts of his clothing. As each item of his ceremonial costume is validated, X dons the prepared article. A novice's head-dress consists of a round roll of dyed cedar-bark, covering a grass frame; in Ilaue and the other villages of the upper valley this is decorated with a tuft of swan's down. The kuéaziut of these villages also wear a distinctive decoration consisting of a swan's skin with the feathers attached. In recent years it has been customary to pile all the goods together and distribute them as dáy'ál, which has the significance of "something that has vanished for the novice's dyed cedar-bark." Theoretically, the aim of the dancer is to bestow his presents on all equally, but if he finds that he has some remaining, he gives these to the chiefs, or to the relatives of someone whom he expects will soon be a novice. None of the goods used in general distributions are returnable, but a chief who receives an extra gift at the end usually remembers from whom it was received and cancels his indebtedness at the earliest opportunity. There is no close connection between the disbursements and the worth of the [425] [292] [184] [237]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 individual, other than an indefinite recollection of the amount 796 of goods used for his dyed cedar-bark. People always have 556 sufficient goods to validate kusiut prerogatives; in fact, if a proud person gives too lavishly to confirm the initiation of a relative, the marshals sometimes burn the goods, giving no explanation other than that the uninitiated must not be led to believe that a kusiut ceremony is an affair of wealth like a potlatch. Formerly, goods were given only at initiation ceremonies, but between 1880 and 1890 a chief gave presents, instead of food, at a dance. His example was followed, since none was willing to be outdone, although such gifts are still called "food." The name of the donor is always announced, whether he is the dancer himself or one of his relatives.

*575 X, though now a member of the kusiut society, is still a 784 novice and cannot give a dance[11] until the next ceremonial
[796] season, that is, until one year has elapsed. The marshals instruct him about his costume, and about the manner in which he must deport himself during this period, matters which depend to a considerable extent upon his prerogative. If he [262] is a Cannibal, Scratch, or Breaker dancer he must not eat unsmoked salmon, nor must he enter a house in which either a potlatch or a memorial potlatch is taking place.[12] Failure to obey this injunction would warrant punishment from a foreign [302] tribe. Unless his prerogative is to give one of these, or the Ghost dance, he must keep his face constantly blackened.
[292] Every novice must wear a collar of dyed cedar-bark. The marshals warn him to be circumspect in dealing with uninitiated persons; he can talk to them, but it is most improper for him to engage in any familiarity or frivolous play. Above [524] all, he must neither gamble nor take part in non-athletic games,
[525]

[11] A Cannibal novice, however, begins to exercise his prerogative immediately, although he must also perform a complete dance the following year.

[12] This prohibition was once broken at Kemqo'ts. A skilled leader was required to arrange the tests at a memorial potlatch and the only man fit for the purpose, a resident of Sumé, was a Cannibal novice. After much deliberation he was called upon, but great care was taken to hide his identity and it was years before the infraction became known.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

prohibitions that last not for one year, but for four. X is not subject to any other restraints. If he wishes to go hunting he can remove his cedar-bark collar and hang it for convenience in the forest near his village, redonning it on his return. The kukusiut show considerable interest in their new member, not only by warning him what he must not do, but by teaching him how to dance and to growl or make other of the necessary, but unusual, noises. During the remainder of the ceremonial season X is required to attend every kusiut dance, thereby learning much of the ceremonial, and during the following summer his relatives, especially if food is plentiful, frequently invite the kukusiut to their house. The singers beat out well-known tunes, or practise those which will be required for the following winter; if a song has been composed for X he dances in time to it, in the style proper to his prerogative. Formerly, when there were many novices, dances of this type took place frequently and were useful in giving constant practice to singers and neophytes alike. As no calls from supernatural patrons can come at this time of year, it follows that all such dances are of a non-sacred nature, although the uninitiated are excluded. During his period as a novitiate, X has one privilege; he can take food from anyone at any type of ceremony. It is remembered that one novice was even bold enough to take food which had been placed as an offering for the dead.

575* 784 [524] [525] 575* 533 535 575* 264

When the next kusiut season opens, X attends every performance. This is probably the most thrilling and nerve-racking period in his life. He does not know exactly when he will be allowed to give his dance, since that is a matter of arrangement between his relatives and the marshals, but he knows that the time will soon be at hand. When the great day, or rather night, actually comes, X is usually in a state of abject terror. The rite itself does not differ from those about to be described except that the first song relates the manner in which X found the repository. But the mental attitude of X differs greatly from that of an old performer. One informant,

575* 781 796

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 781 796 a woman about sixty years of age, vividly recalled her fears when she, a young woman, gave her first performance. It was the Dance of Winwina (II, p. 187), in which she had to call out loudly when a large number of uninitiated persons, including Carrier Indians, were present. One of the marshals was her great-uncle and he had carefully taught her what she was to say. A few minutes before the time for her announcement he came to where she lay hidden in an enclosure behind the fire:

"Do you see your relatives here?" he said. "Look at your father, your mother, and your uncles. If you fail to say what you are expected to say, they will all die in a few weeks, and so will you. Be bold!"

The woman asserted that it was the most terrifying experience in her whole life because, though she knew there was [688] deception in the rites, she also knew the power of the society and that the threat of death in case of error was no idle one. She was so frightened that she forgot the carefully learnt words and it required the prompting of the hidden marshal to get her through the ordeal.

But once the first rite has been successfully negotiated, it is a proud day for the novice. He feels himself a real kusiut and glories in his superiority over his former associates. For the rest of the season he, like everyone else who has performed a dance, must attend every rite. Energetic novices sometimes give their dances on two, or even three, successive years, though usually a man allows five or six to elapse between displays.

*575 766 If X should die during the year's interval between his initiation and his first dance, he is secretly buried by his fellow kakusiut without the customary mourning rites, and with no [533] uninitiated persons present at the grave. His song, if one has been composed for him, is sung softly, and he is interred adorned with his collar of dyed cedar-bark. During the next ceremonial season, that at which he should have danced, it is necessary for a brother, or other near relative, to receive a call since it is felt that a dance once begun must be completed, and the patron shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society. 575* 766

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that, in former times, the kukusiut sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead kukusiut, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch. 575* 769 533 177

The Ritual of Specific Dances

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ABOUT THE DANCES

A detailed description of various kusiut dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nusqulxwaista. Several kukusiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kusiut season. 575* 796* [424] [776]

THE DANCE OF Nedkyum[14]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Nedkyum, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly 773 824 825

[14] Cf. Boas, p. 60.

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaien-a, whence its captain leaps to Nusqulxwaista to wait the coming of Alquntäm. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nebusam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noäkynum lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [785] times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[831] eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsitent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [626] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776] patron was Noäkynum, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noäkynum
*575 is patron for several kukusiut, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river
*796 the kusiut dances begin.

[184] It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, [424] as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contain only [551] slight variations, if any. In Tsmoil the kusiut who has the prerogative of seeing Noäkynum is a certain Qaxalin,[15] in Kimsquit, Alnuskiwnasam,[16] and in Sikkiul, Xemtsum. Although, [15] Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qaxalin, who intimated that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman referred to the lending of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[115] [426] [578]

[16] Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his person, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kusiut names have significances of this type.

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

Although 575*
424
773

theoretically, every kusiut should know the origin myth of his prerogative, these are rarely remembered, a state of affairs differing entirely from that with respect to ancestral origin myths. An ancestor of Ăłuskinwasam is supposed to have seen Noăkxnim, decorated with the tails of two eagles stuck in his hair. The following myth was obtained of the origin of [539] Xemtnim's prerogative:

In the beginning there came down to Mount Nus·läxim, a small mountain on the south side of the Bella Coola River about three-quarters of a mile from the sea, Ăllilmnălosaix, his younger brother Omqomkilka, and their sister. Ălquntăm had given them a model house, so small that it was portable, but which could enlarge to any size at their wish. It was called Skqwălutl, a name they bestowed also on their sister. They brought the sisaok designation, Xemxemlaix, with the right to perform a dance. The party, including Raven, who was like a son to Ăllilmnălosaix, came down from their mountain top looking for a place to settle. As people were already living at Qomqo·ts and Ălqăläxl, they chose Slskistl as their home.

From this place the three could hear the beating of drums, as the people of the adjacent villages performed their kusiut dances and Raven determined that his companions should not lack the privileges which others enjoyed. Accordingly he flew down the fiord where he saw Noăkxnim, whom he obtained as patron for Ăllilmnălosaix. This prerogative was embodied in the name Xemtnim, which is still in use.[17]

The prerogative of seeing Noăkxnim is known as dakdak·ălaix, "The Comer," or "The Ever-Comer." It will be convenient to refer to the person who has this power as X. As [424] already described, if he had been initiated during the preceding ceremonial season, he is now obliged to dance. In later years, if he wishes to do so, he first consults the marshals, and if they consent he begins his preparations during the summer. Among other matters, X informs the singers of his intentions and they [533] begin to compose songs. Occasionally they re-use one from a previous year, but to do this is to admit lack of creative ability. The usual practice is to compose new tunes and to adapt to them words bearing on the proper theme, sometimes including [17] It will be noted that this myth is of the typical origin type, and furnishes an instance of the manner in which kusiut prerogatives occur in such. [539]

575*
796*

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

*575 snatches from old songs. The Bella Bella are said to use the *796 same compositions from year to year, and recently some of [533] these, both tunes and foreign words, have been adopted by [177] the Bella Coola. Long ago the marshals would have prohibited this custom even if the user had legitimately obtained the foreign prerogative by marriage.

As the time draws near for Noäkxnim to start his voyage, [805] X anxiously consults any of the elder kukusiut who may be calendrical experts as to the exact date. The system of reckoning time is not sufficiently exact to avoid errors, but the day ultimately arrives on which, after much discussion, it is agreed that Noäkxnim is leaving. Word is passed around to the singers, who sleep that night in X's house, ready for their duties on the morrow.

Early in the morning X stands up, gazes fixedly towards the west, and calls out:

[787] "Once more I see what I saw last year," or some other more or less specific claim to a vision.

It is believed that Noäkxnim must round four points before [773] reaching Bella Coola; in fact, his journey beneath the sea is similar to that of a canoe pushing up one of the long fiords.

Some of the marshals are always in readiness and one of *[203] them tells a herald to go to every house, repeating what X has said. This serves both to impress the uninitiated, and to notify the kukusiut of what is about to take place. The mes-
*575 senger does so, and when all have gathered, the singers, seated
*796 behind the fire, begin to beat out one of the songs composed 533 during the summer months. The theme is of X's phenomenal eye-sight, due to his patron having sent to him the super-[776] natural being, Nulälsumtnam, at the moment of his departure. This being does not seem to possess corporeal form, but is rather a sight-producing medium. In the song he is often likened to a swift-flying bird; when the uninitiated hear of this they are suitably impressed with the remarkable ability of X at having such a creature sent to him. X, who has donned a [292] head-dress consisting of the white tails of two eagles, dances

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

if he so desires. The kukusiut listen to the song, and when it is resung they join in. They practise it repeatedly, until familiar with both words and tune. This part of the ceremony lasts for about two hours. 575* 796* [533]

The singers, and any others who are prepared to beat time, are always provided with long, flat, thin sounding-boards to increase the din of the pounding. When the marshals decide that the song is sufficiently familiar, they tell some of the kukusiut to carry these boards to the lowest house of the village. They do this, and also scatter clean sand on the floor, as is customary whenever a supernatural being is to enter. The uninitiated persons within the house watch with great interest. The singers enter and take their places behind the fire, then other kukusiut and finally X himself; his face is unblackened, but he wears his two eagle tails in his hair and a collar of dyed cedar-bark. On his head is a thin cylindrical circlet, about four inches high, of the same material, ornamented with swan's down by the inhabitants of the villages of the upper Bella Coola valley. The collar consists of a roll of grass, entirely covered with dyed cedar-bark from which pendant tassels of the same hang down over his chest; similar ones are worn by ssaok dancers, except that the tassels hang down their backs. Every kusiut dancer wears these two ornaments, and those who have the necessary prerogative adorn themselves with an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Blankets are always worn. Kukusiut women wear in addition woollen pubic garments. [292] [534] 575* 796* 292 [424] [237]

As the singers beat out X's tune, accompanied by the voices of themselves and other kukusiut, he dances. Since his style is typical of all kukusiut except Cannibals and a few others, it will be well to digress at this point in order to describe it. X raises his arms until their upper parts are approximately the height of his shoulders, and project outwards and slightly to the front; they are bent at the elbows with the forearms vertical, thus bringing the hands opposite the top of the head. Both wrists are shaken constantly, the muscles of the lower 575* 796* 535

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

*575 arms being brought into play, so that the whole hands are con-
*796 stantly quivering without spasmodic movements. Ability to do this is one of the marks of a skilful performer, and the inces-535 sant shaking is continued without stop throughout the dance.
[533] Most kusiut songs are in five parts, which may be described as three verses, separated by two choruses. Near the beginning of the first verse X stands up, raises his arms, shakes his fingers, then slightly bends his legs and begins to step in time to the beating of the sticks. Some dancers remain almost stationary, marking time, to use the military term, others advance in steps of an inch or so, at intervals slowly revolving sunwise.[14] Sometimes X introduces a variation by bending from side to side, in which case one hand rises above the other. If the time of the song is very slow, he sinks, bending his knees to a great extent, and advances in more lengthy strides, never ceasing to shake his hands. At each chorus the time becomes so rapid that it is impossible to move the feet in accordance with it, and then X crouches, his shaking hands the only movement. If it [424] is a woman who is dancing—like most kusiut prerogatives, this [562] one is not limited to men—the style of dancing is quite different. Keeping the upper part of each arm close to her body, the dancer extends her fore-arms, outwards, parallel to the ground, with the palms upwards. Like a man, she shakes her wrists, but few female dancers move from the spot on which they start, except perhaps to turn around, sunwise. Heralds always keep up a running fire of comments, especially when a woman is dancing, urging her not to be bashful, but to allow her breasts to shake. Some dancers have merged into one [424] prerogative rights acquired from different coastal tribes. In such cases they perform in two or more styles, each part according to one prerogative.

Kukusiut are always ready to assist one of their fellows, so that three or four friends are always willing to accompany the dancer. They stand close behind him, at frequent intervals blowing over his head the eagle down which either X, or some [171] [14] The Bella Coola state that the Bella Bella revolve counter-sunwise.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

of his relatives, has given them for this purpose. When he 575* crouches during the chorus they crowd close around, almost 796* concealing him. Particularly in those dances fraught with danger to the performer, it is customary for any number of his 535 friends, either men or women, to dance to "help" him. Anyone wishing to do so merely stands up and begins, in time to the music, irrespective of what part of the house he may be in. [543]
It is considered contrary to good manners for a father so to help his son, or a brother a brother, but a dancer is pleased to have aid from anyone else. It is said that in Bella Bella [171] certain kukusiut have definite prerogatives of helping in this way, but this is not the case in Bella Coola. Throughout every dance the kukusiut women utter their droning cry. [533]

This, then, is the type of dance which the uninitiated in 575* the lowest house see. They hear the song, too, and gaze with 796* awe at X, imbued as he is with the supernatural power of sight. Then the sounding-boards are picked up and taken to the next house, where the whole ceremonial is repeated. This is done at each house of the village.[11] All the kukusiut now return to X's house, where he once more dances to his song. A box-drum is always used to help the singers in keeping time, and [534] when the song has been finished two men continue in turn to beat it all day. X always arranges to have a relative or friend superintend the distribution of food, which follows his final [574] dancing. As the kukusiut are eating, the marshals deliver their usual admonishments, a task that accompanies every meal. Then they call on the people to erect a raised platform between the fire and the back-wall of the house. Materials have been placed in readiness so that it is an easy matter to build a framework a few feet in height, of which the flat top is screened by a matting wall about three feet high. This is often decorated with designs of dyed cedar-bark without ritual significance as [531] far as the Bella Coola of today are aware. X climbs to this platform, the kukusiut disperse, and only the incessant pounding of the drum proves that some unusual event is taking place.

[11] In Bella Coola, but perhaps not in Kimsquit. [184]

[The Dance of NoAKxnim]

*575 *796 X is supposed to be gazing constantly to the west, watching for another sight of Noäkxnim. With the aid of a friend, X arranges his eagle tail head-dress on a box so that it projects above the wall of the platform as if he were sitting within. The uninitiated understand that X is watching, and the motionless feathers confirm their belief. Meanwhile X remains hidden in the back-room, never leaving the house except when necessary, and then only under cover of night.

*575 *796 On the fourth day after his first vision, X stands up and cries out:

Yupälx, "The Point."

787 533 *[203] The significance is that X sees Noäkxnim as he appear around the first point. A herald is at once sent out. First he repeats loudly the exact words used, then departs to call the kukusiut to X's house. When they have taken their places the singers beat out a new song previously composed, the second for X. The theme describes how Noäkxnim is rounding the first promontory, in his craft which is often likened to a cloud or a flock of birds. This they practise, before carrying sounding-boards and drums to the lowest house in the village, where the singers and a number of kukusiut take up their stations. When all is ready X enters, the women utter their droning cry, and, to the accompaniment of the beating of time and the singing of his new song, he dances around the fire. This same procedure is carried out in every house of the village, working from the bottom upwards. Finally all return to X's house where they receive food and the usual admonitions from a marshal. Then they disperse. This is about 11 A.M.

X again climbs to the platform where his head-dress is arranged as if he were sitting constantly gazing towards the approaching Noäkxnim. For four days he remains hidden, and on the morning of the fifth he again cries out:

Yupälx.

This time it signifies that the supernatural one has rounded a second promontory. The same ritual is repeated, the calling *[203] by the herald, the meeting in X's house, a d the procession to every abode. The song on this occasion, the third for X, describes what Noäkẓnum is doing on his journey, as if X were relating what he saw. The kukusiut return to X's house for another meal and the admonishments of a marshal. 575* 796* 787 533

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

For four days more X retires from sight. On the morning of the fifth day he once more calls:

Yupälx.

Exactly the same procedure is carried out, the theme of this fourth song being of how Noäkẓnum can be seen rounding a third promontory.

X remains in concealment for four days more, then cries out again. This time the song describes how Noäkẓnum has rounded the fourth and last promontory and how the supernatural beings above have sighted him. This is the fifth song used for X. As on the previous occasions, he conceals himself on the platform after making a tour of the village.

On the morning of the fifth day later, X cries out that Noäkẓnum is at the mouth of the river where he has tied his craft to the stakes of a salmon-trap. The belief of the Bella Coola is that he approaches up an underwater fiord, into which flows an underwater river provided with a salmon-trap; X alone can see these phenomena. The herald goes from house to house repeating the announcement. The kukusiut, too, visit each, singing the song while X dances. He and the singers always decide beforehand on his actual statement, so that the words of the song will be in agreement, as if the singers had composed it on the spot. Once again X retires from sight. [203]*

Five days later he arouses the household with his loud shouting:

"Noäkẓnum is in the river itself. He has reached the home of the Resident; Imimätlnaix is mooring his craft. Dakdakänmem and Älälkmktnum are greeting him." [776]

The herald repeats this news throughout the village. The uninitiated know in general terms who these supernatural beings are. The Resident lives under the water at the mouth of the river; his function is to see that the stream and the 575* 796* 776 [203]*

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 salmon are properly looked after, in fact, he is practically the *796 supernatural archetype of the River Guardian. Imimätlnaix, 776 "The Moorer," is a supernatural child who stays with the Resident, and whose sole function appears to be the mooring of Noäkynim's craft. Dakdakänmem is sent by Smaien-a, who in this connection appears to have human intelligence, to greet Noäkynim, and with him come Smaien-a's son, Älälhmätnim,[*] to assist Noäkynim in poling his craft up the river. All these beings are patrons for different kukusiut. The Resident is also known as Ämtäklis.

*575 The kukusiut assemble in X's house as on the previous *796 occasions; according to some informants two songs are used 787 on this day, others say only one. The people proceed in the usual manner to the lowest house, and make their way up-
[533] stream. When about half through the village, however, X shrieks out that Numätlam has brought a call to him. The woman and the heralds cry out loudly, X hastily returns to his own house, from which the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the kusiut whistles sound from within. Numätlam is one of the supernatural beings who has travelled with Noäkynim for the sole purpose of bringing a call to X. If the calendrical
[805] experts have been successful in their reckonings, the November [821] moon will first be visible on the night of this day. Several of the older men admitted that errors were common, and that sometimes four days more had to elapse, in which it was said that Noäkynim was poling up the river. As he passes, his dancers in the different villages receive their calls on successive nights. It is assumed that he can go by several adjacent [184] settlements on the same night, but the kusiut season is two or three days shorter in Staax and the upper villages than in Kempo-ti. Exact information on this point was unavailable.
*575 As already described, Noäkynim travels to Smaien-a, whence *796 he leaps to Nuqulnuaista and places his pole within the house.
773 All the supernatural beings crowd in after him to wait for Alqunäm, but as soon as the latter enters, Noäkynim seizes his

[*] Some informants state that there are four of these beings.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

pole and starts his journey downstream. 575*

Now that X has received his call, the ceremonial continues 796* for four days more, in a manner typical of kusiut dances. Only variations from the pattern about to be described will be given [773] in later dance rituals.

X spends the rest of this day on which the call has come 575* to him, the twenty-fourth of the whole rite, within his house. 796*
In the evening a herald summons the kukusiut, this being the 184 night of lustämem. In Stuix the call used is: 203*

Skinap Stuixas, "Cure, ye Stuix people," because it is believed that a call almost kills a Stuix person. This is probably true for the people of the other villages of the upper valley, but elsewhere this cry is used only when a novice receives his first call. In the lower valley and at Kimsquit the cry is:

Snapuxldimut kukusiut, "Bring light, ye kukusiut."

Care is always taken to use the right expression with reference to the locality of the dancer's repository, irrespective of 575* where he may happen to be living. 796*

All the kukusiut are expected to attend, in fact, they are 533 glad to do so, but attendance is compulsory for novices only.
When all have assembled, one of the leading singers takes command. The coming of his call is supposed to have made [787]
X light-headed, and he must be cured by a frenzied beating of sticks four times repeated. During this X himself remains quiescent. The singers now group themselves into a close circle to compose a song describing the supernatural beings seen by X during the day. As a rule, each man has one or more tunes in his mind which he hums to his associates as he softly beats time. Then another does the same, and this is repeated until unanimity of opinion is reached concerning the most suitable. The leader of the choir fits the proper words to this, assisted by his comrades and perhaps by X himself, or someone well acquainted with his prerogative.* As soon as the singers have finished their work they widen their circle and sing the song loudly so that it can be heard and learnt by all,

*This song, like the one used earlier, is sometimes prepared in advance.

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

*575 while X dances to and fro behind the fire. In succession the *796 six songs previously composed are resung and X dances to 533 each. The singers would be disgraced should they forget either a tune or a text, so they take advantage of lnxtämem to practise them all. Later in the season, when numerous kukusiut have received calls, the singers beat out the time and words for each and the owner dances. The general effect is remarkably impressive in the dim light of one of the large wooden houses, nor is the music displeasing to the ear. After the singing of X's seventh song, there is a pause while food is distributed amid the admonitions of the marshals. Once more the singers take up their sticks and beat out the song most recently composed for X; the audience joins in softly and he dances. The kukusiut now disperse with the exception of the novices who sleep in X's house. He himself does not withdraw to his platform. The ritual of X's lnxtämem differs from that of most kukusiut since his comrades have already learnt six songs for him. On most occasions they hear and practise one only, to which he dances in the manner described.

*575 The next day is nuxiustälnap. About eleven o'clock in the *796 morning the heralds go to every house calling out:
532 Tlpänap, lipänap, kukusiut,—"Cut, cut, ye kukusiut."
[203] The uninitiated do not realize that this is an invitation to gather to cut wood for masks. X, or his relatives, always provides a meal which is eaten before the main work is attended to. Then the singers group themselves and compose still [533] another song for X, with the same theme, but different words, as the one composed the previous evening. When ready, they chant it loudly so that all can hear and learn, and then sing it with the audience joining in, while X dances. After a short pause, X asks as many of his comrades as he desires to go with [784] him to the forest to cut wood. Some member of the party carries a whistle which he sounds at intervals, thus warning

[176] *This would normally be a dancer's second song, the large number practised for X before the coming of his call being unusual. Not many years ago a powerful chief created the innovation of having one song only instead of two. Some kukusiut follow his example whereas others still use two.

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

any uninitiated from their path. The kukusiut also call hoip repeatedly, a further deterrent to the inquisitive. Alder and birch trees are selected and the hewers start to work. Whenever a tree falls, one of the party calls out:

Xwu....

This meaningless ejaculation, spoken as if by X, has the virtue of causing the tree to fall gently. The logs are cut into sections and as many provided as will be needed, since it is contrary to kusiut custom for more than one trip to be made for wood. Towards dusk the cutters return, each carrying a burden by means of a tump-line across the forehead. The wood is laid softly on the floor, for it would be a gross insult to throw it down roughly. Meanwhile heralds are summoning the kukusiut with a call of:

Nusiutälsap kukusiaot.

X has long since consulted his relatives on the one hand and the marshals on the other, concerning the number of masks to be used, and the beings to be portrayed. A mask of Ano'likwolsaix is prepared for every kusiut dance, but with this exception there is no uniformity in the representations. A man always shows his patron, as well as any beings intimately connected with him. Thus X must have a mask of Noäkynim, many of his passengers, and the supernatural beings who meet him at the mouth of the river. A present must be given to the carver of every mask, hence their actual number depends upon the expenditure X and his relatives are willing to make.

At dusk the kukusiut are summoned by the heralds. X is with the marshals behind the fire and he heeds their advice as to the best carpenter for any special mask. When all have assembled X holds up one of the blocks of wood, calls on one of the kukusiut by name and says:

"For Noäkynim," or whatever may be the figure required.

As the carpenter comes forward to take the billet the heralds call out:

"Pay attention to him," and as the carpenter takes the wood, X calls out at the top of his voice, xwu....

*575 This ejaculation is supposed to make the work of manu-*746 facture less difficult. The same procedure is repeated with 532 every mask ordered, except that if the being to be represented [789] is a woman, X's ejaculation is i ——. Any Raccoon can make a mask, but the preference is always given to a man who has shown ability in previous tasks. The carpenters endeavour to follow well-recognized designs for many representations, but a great deal of latitude is allowed, and a workman receives greater praise and fame for turning out a fine and distinctive piece of new design, than for rigid adherence to a former type. This, combined with the burning of masks and consequent loss of permanent patterns, is responsible for the variability in Bella Coola forms, and the difficulty which they themselves experience in recognizing portrayed beings.

*575 As soon as all the carpentry has been allowed, the singers
*746 strike up one of X's eight songs. Whether or not he dances [532] to them is a matter about which there is a difference of opinion among informants. In any case the re-singing on Raccoon's is purely for rehearsal, made necessary by the large number of songs. Later on in the Raccoon season, the songs of other dancers may be practised on this night, and if the owners wish to practice their steps, it is quite proper for them to do so.
[574] Finally, a meal is distributed, while the marshals dismiss in [43] the usual way. Feasts are features of all Raccoon dances, and the [42] food distributed is regarded as a free-will gift, without thought of repayment. After eating, the Raccoon dispersed; X must sleep within his own house, but no longer remains within his platform-enclosure.

*575 The next day, the twenty-sixth of the ceremony, is quiet.
*746 Early in the morning a herald summons to X's house, where 532 the blocks have been left, all those to whom work has been assigned. All morning they carve diligently. The speed with +[203] which masks are completed is surprising, although this has undoubtedly increased since the introduction of metal tools.
[177] In the middle of the day a few Raccoon men, no women, are [562] invited to share "the carpenters' meal," as the food provided by X is called. Having dined, the guests depart while the 575* craftsmen continue their labours. Towards dusk the house 796* is cleared up, the chips thrown on the fire and everything made 532 ready. On this night the uninitiated are invited, but there is [illegible] a wide and important difference in ritual between Bella Coola 575* and Kitamaat. In the former the masks are carefully con- 796* cealed, whereas in Kitamaat one or two, or sometimes all, are 184 suspended behind the fire by the carpenters. It is exceedingly 532 difficult for an observer to understand why this practice does not at once remove all money from the rite. The explanation appears to lie in the fact that the uninitiated, ignorant of how they have been made, see in these strange objects evidence of the power of the hahaiat. In Kitamaat, moreover, members of the society emphasize the fact that the dancers are super-naturally endowed representations of what the beings above are doing and performing, and it is only at certain rites that they are actually supposed to be present. One old Bella Coola remembered having heard from his grandfather that long before his time the carpenters used to make the masks in their own houses where the uninitiated could see them; the dancers would come in, wave his arm over the craftsman's head and say hai! if the workmanship was excellent. The man who described this expressed his own scepticism, and added that it would have destroyed the tax-rate of money. A possible explanation of this important difference in ritual will be given at the end of this chapter; for the present it will be enough to point out that the masks are left suspended in Kitamaat, and concealed in Bella Coola.

Towards dusk the herald goes to every house to summon 575* the hahaiat, who have allotted themselves for the ceremony 796*
by washing and painting, as the uninitiated have also done.
The members assemble slowly, in fact an observer finds the [illegible]* interminable delays of every hahaiat dance most provoking. At [illegible] last all have appeared and taken their places around the fire, while the uninitiated eagerly wait near the door for the invitation which they know will soon be given. One of the mas- [illegible]* chiefs with a herald to call them in; they come joyfully, though somewhat hastily, and stand or crouch on either side of the doorway. In Kimsquit they gave on the masks, wondering what they are. The singers strike up the first of X's songs and he dances, while singers and helpers men sing the words and the women drum. To the uninitiated it appears most impressive and desirable, while even the present white man can hardly remain indifferent. At intervals a whistle, which the uninitiated believe to be the voice of the owl, sounds softly from beneath the weight of a whistle Dancer. After a short interval, X's second song is sung, and so in succession the night. Then the singers strike up any well-remembered tune, perhaps one used last year, and the owner dances. This is repeated for eight or ten songs. In bear potlatch, every Dancer who has had a call during the season must dance; the ceremony tends, therefore, to become longer and longer as time goes on, although the singing of the songs of a previous year is omitted. When enough performers have danced, a chiefess's song is often sung and the owner dances "to close the house." At this point the uninitiated spectators are told to withdraw. Then a herald is served to the chief who, as members of a similar organization, are honoured guests and have been seated together in a corner, explanation to their wonderful ceremonies. After their departure, the helpers are more leisurely, while one needed after another advises them as to their conduct. Then presents of comparatively small value are distributed. The needed would consider it unbecoming for X to provide too lavishly. The first gifts are to the singers, the next to the makers of the masks. Though these presents are, in essence, pay, they are never thought of in that light; X is under obligations, X has cleared himself of these obligations, is the Bella Coola attitude. When all is over, X once more dances to one of his solitary song songs. Then one of the needed rolls out to open the door and the guests disperse, except the curious who sleep in X's house.

[illegible] Vol. 5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bulletin 1924

The nuw day is nakwam,* the twenty-seventh and final day of the rite, and the most spectacular in every ceremonial. Early in the morning a herald summons the wood-workers to X's house to complete the masks. At intervals throughout the day Initiates come to discuss with X, the marshals, the singers, and the carpenters the details of the evening ceremonial. In fact, X has less to do with the arrangements than any of those mentioned, unless he happens to be a Dorier of long standing. The marshals usually decide who shall wear the masks, although the maker of each is always consulted. X himself never wears one at his own ceremony. The Dorier who is to represent Bad'Hemlaiam must have the ability to speak fluently and in a high-pitched voice supposedly like that of a woman. Strong men are required for some of the heavy masks such as Thunder, but most may be used by anyone. A person asked to wear one seldom refuses, although he is liable to punishment in case of dropping it or any other accident. No one needed can decline who shall wear a particular mask, all these matters are arranged with spirited discussion during the day; stage management is not a highly developed Bella Coola profession. The masks are completed by the afternoon or hence, painted, and concealed behind a moving enclosure, one of which is built in each rear corner of the house. Sometimes the back-room itself is used to hide the sacred objects and only one shelter is constructed. The makers of the masks remain there with them, to assist in tying them over the heads of the wearers. Meanwhile all signs are swept up and burned and the house made tidy for the evening.

As twilight falls a herald goes to every house inviting the Initiates to assemble in X's. The uninitiated gather outside the door, waiting eagerly for the summons to enter and see the wonders, their curiosity, and fear, piqued by the sound of a whistle from within. But there are still delays; many of the Initiates wish to express themselves concerning the conduct of the office, and so many differences of opinion are voiced that it is often difficult to understand how the ritual can be carried out so smoothly as it is. The masks are tried on, adjustments in the rope fastenings made, as final selection of the wearers approved. In fact, the summoning of the kukwiat is regarded by them as an invitation to open the masks and it is said that the herald sometimes calls this with a cryptic:

* If the masks and other paraphernalia are not ready, several days may elapse before admission. Even evening the Initiates gather to practice the songs.

[The Dance of Nootkanim]

"Measure your hands, kukwiat," the significance of which the uninitiated fail to grasp.

At last those who are to wear the masks are chosen. They conceal themselves in one of a two matting shelters, while the other is full of those kukwiat who have prerogatives as Cannibals, Screechers, or Bears. It is these who are most feared by the uninitiated, and a slight accident should take place they rush forth suddenly, tightening the non-members to such an extent that they fail notice a mistake which would otherwise expose the mystery of the rites.

Meanwhile the Shamans at intervals sticks her head around the corner of the door to mock the uninitiated.

"You stupid ones!" she gibs. "You and you [naming two uninitiated] almost found my pantry. You came so close to me that I put out my ankand tripped you up. (A safe statement since everyone stumbles over half-buried roots some time or another.) You were afraid that you did not see me. Look where you are going, but your eyes open, and then you will become a fearless, learned, remaining a nonentity."

The uninitiated, sick at lost over the missed opportunity, resolve to be more alert in future. Difficult though it is for the white man to understand such credulity, yet different elderly informants apparently recalled the chagrin with which they had listened to such remarks when young. Childhood impressions of respect and fear are too deeply ingrained for doubt to occur.

At last all is ready and one of the marshals tells a kwiat to open the door and call the non-members. In they rush, to crowd near the door and gaze upon the masks with which X has been in contact. Their attitude of uncertainty as to whether they are gazing upon real supernatural beings or on representations of them has already been described, but the uninitiated do not theorize on the point—they are seeing strange sights about which X and the tsalaxiat know; that is enough for them. 575* 796*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Behind the fire they see a canoe-shaped erection, a model of Nuákynow's craft, with six or eight masked heads, his passengers, appearing over the sides. Near this are four more disguised figures, three standing and one sitting. Ana'kiwulnaix ranges in the vicinity, while X himself stands behind, at intervals sweeping one arm over the heads of the strange beings and uttering a droning cry. Ana'kiwulnaix explains to the uninitiated that the figures have come from alar, that they are powerful, but not to be afraid, since X's drone gives protection to them from the supernatural ones. She points to one of the figures whose mask is painted with the design of a salmon.[] 575 796* 582 776

"See!" she says, "There is Nuákynow; unless he brings the salmon they cannot come to our river."

Another of the standing figures is described as Dakdakinow, and the other as Atlilmkinow. In each case she states briefly the functions of the being. The seated figure, who wears a large hat and rests on a mat, is the Resident. Great is the mystification of the uninitiated at seeing these supernatural beings[*] normally visible only to X. How they envy him! Another frequent display is of a group of masked figures playing ahi (II, p. 361). If this has been done, Ana'kiwulnaix explains that this game is of interest to the salmon and that it is therefore played in Nuákynow's canoe. [781]

[*]There is no doubt that in former times the Bella Coola attached greater importance to the designs painted on masks than they do at present. Except for a few vague notes it was impossible to obtain information on this subject; in fact, in 1922 there was only one Bella Coola alive who understood the symbols used. This man was drunk so often that he proved an impossible informant. It is fortunate that Professor Boas recorded a considerable number of designs (op. cit.), to which the reader is referred. [177]

[*]As already described, the uninitiated unhesitatingly believe that they are actually gazing upon supernatural beings.

*575 Among the passengers in Nuákynuw's canoe are a number *796 of singers, who replace the usual ones on this nakuam. Each wears the same type of mask, painted with red diagonals, and 592 with white feathers[] projecting from the top.[] After the un-593 initiated have gazed for some time upon the wonders, their leader, Swakwuimutlé, takes his place and his followers begin to beat out an ancient song, believed to be sung in Nuákynuw's craft as it nears Bella Coola. The theme is:

"See me, mortals, I am Nuwanuiwkdimut Nuákynuw, the dancer of Nuákynuw."

As the music starts, a figure rises from among the singers, wearing a mask with heavy eye-brows[*] and carrying a light staff about six feet in length, wound spirally with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with a tassel of dyed bark. Holding this in his hand he begins to *575 dance lightly, running back and forth a few steps at a time
*796 in time to the beating of sticks, lifting his feet freely from the [335] ground, and bending back and forth in airy grace, all the while waving his wand to and fro. There are no fixed steps, the only essential is that he convey the impression of being light of foot and a good dancer; accordingly, the person selected for this purpose is one with these qualifications. As he moves, Ax̓ítlémulaxe explains to the uninitiated that this is Nuwanuiwkdimut, a dancer of great repute who accompanies Nuákynuw and guards his singers. At this point Ax̓ítlémulaxe's own song may or [534] may not be sung. It never varies, and is believed to have been handed down from dim antiquity. X himself must be the singer, accordingly it can be sung only when the dancer has a good voice. If this is the case, the marshals request him to perform, and, if necessary, teach him the exact words. X, standing behind the fire, sings alone and unaccompanied, then the singers repeat the song in unison with the beating of their [535] sticks, and Ax̓ítlémulaxe herself dances, using, of course, the feminine style. At this juncture the uninitiated must be re-

*Broken feathers are now used.
*One of these masks was purchased for the National Museum of Canada.
*One of these masks was obtained for the National Museum of Canada.

[126]

2:McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

pelled; a Cannibal (II, p. 71) begins to growl and those who are not members of the society leave hastily.

The next event is the burning of the masks. The wearers remove them and lay them on the floor in front of the back-room at the point marked O in the accompanying sketch. Then X asks a friend to help him. The person chosen picks up any two of the masks and carries them around the fire, outside, through B, where X is standing, to the point marked A (see Fig. 1). The helper throws one mask on the fire, and as he does so X lifts his arms, as if throwing up some heavy weight, at the same time uttering hoip, which has a beneficial effect in returning the mask whence it came.

Fig. 1.
Diagram showing positions of participants during mask-burning.

As one informant put it: "May you have a safe journey."

The assistant throws the second mask on the fire, and again X throws up his arms and cries hoip. He crosses to A where he twice repeats the same cry, then returns to B. The assistant picks up two more masks and throws them on the fire at the same place and in the same manner as the two preceding, X also doing as he did before. The masks are taken two at a time until all have been burnt. The explanation given is to avoid the danger of the uninitiated seeing them, but whether or not this is a mere rationalization is doubtful. The Bella Coola say that the Bella Bella do not burn their masks. Now the singers strike up the first of X's songs and he dances, while musicians and audience join in; this is repeated for each of his songs. If it is desired to hasten the ritual, the lengthy singing and dancing is replaced by X giving only a short dance, unaccompanied by music. The Bella Coola do not appear to understand why they dance at this time, although it is said that it makes easy the departure of the masks.

In Kitamaat the ritual of mask-burning is slightly different.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Nuxkenim]

since a certain hamat has the definite prerogative of throwing them on the fire. As each is tossed into the flames he calls out:

"Please return directly to the supernatural room."

The only exception is for the mask of Ana'kimalanis for which his cry is:

"Please return directly to your repository."

Before X can again take his normal place in the community it is necessary to remove from him the call, which is conceived as being something physical that has entered his body. This is the belief taught to the uninitiated so emphatically that the hahamat themselves appear to believe it; at any rate, whatever their inward thoughts, they act as if the call had substance. As soon as the masks have been burnt one of the hahamat suggests that it is time to expel the call. All the hahamat in the house crowd around X, as many as can reach his body pressing against his stomach with their hands, always in an upward direction. Higher and higher they go, from stomach to chest, from chest to neck, as if massaging some object. At last it is thought to have been expelled, and X brings his hands together, as if holding something with great care. Suddenly he throws them up in the air, opening them as he does so, and calling out:

Anakilimat ala ilmilmayas, "Go back to your ancient home."

These ritual words have been handed down from ancient times and are used by every hamat to dismiss his call. Whither it is sent is problematical. Some say to X's repository, others to Nuxpalmanim; the Bella Coola do not know. Often one of his songs has been sung on the sidewalk outside X's house; the call may be returned from there.

This rite ends the ceremony and the hahamat disperse. It is obvious that every nuhamat must vary according to the power of the dancer, but the sketch is typical of the ritual. A call can now come to any hamat, and one often descends at this time, so that X's nuhamat is forbidden for another dance.

For the rest of the ceremonial season X has to observe certain rules. He must wear his collar of cedar-bark and around every Sacred dance. Usually all Sacred do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every gathering he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

2:McDowell R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Alqanaxw enters Nuqalwanxw at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those Sacred of whom he is person. It is uncertain whether or not this avoids the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Nuxlayxw seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaxw-a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a sixth song for him. The words describe how the departing Nuxlayxw empties a large number of sisulus into the river.* X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other Sacred.

It sometimes happens that no Sacred of whom Nuxlayxw is person has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Nuxlayxw when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any Sacred. This abbreviated ceremony, named Xwulkwulqanxw, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

*Nuxlayxw is accordingly also called Nuxlayxwm.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE DANCE OF Wla

*575 Although potlatches and kuxiut dances cannot take place
*996 simultaneously in the same house, and although the former are 556 supposedly completed before the beginning of the ceremonial season, they often overlap the lengthy preliminaries of the Noákynm dance. In such cases, when visiting the houses of the village, the kukuxiut are careful to pass by the one in which the potlatch is going on. It often happens that foreign guests are still present when Noákynm ascends the river and their host wishes to provide entertainment for them in the shape of a spectacular kuxiut display. This is possible if a kuxiut with [424] a wla prerogative is willing to have a call come to him. It is probable that in every village there is at least one kuxiut with this prerogative; in Tsmaif the owner is a certain Lakwala,[*] in Kimsquit a woman named Nawaxmlaia. An ancestor of the former received his designation at the direct wish of Alqaméin as leader of the supernatural kukuxiut. It is unnecessary to describe the ritual in detail in both places, although certain differences must be mentioned. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X. He has ten patrons, the nine brothers [774] Xemxemálaila, Xemxua, Omqomkilka, Almálaila, Alamkilka, Qmcua, Qalacuua, Kulilas Nuxkómqia, Almál[*], and their sister Tlúxpilála a.[*] These supernatural beings remain in Nanmá a except when summoned below by X, or when Tlúxpilála a appears for her own purposes as already described.

If X accedes to the request of the donor of the potlatch and is willing to summon his patrons from above, one or other of them interviews the marshals, and if these acquiesce, the rite can proceed. In Bella Coola X asks the help of four kukuxiut
*575 who are termed his "Path Clearers"; no special prerogative is *996 required to perform this service. For four days X lies on the floor of his house, near the door to the back room, while his

[*] The rite has not been carried out in Bella Coola since the death of the former owner about 1911; the name has passed to his brother's son's son.

[*] Boas (p. 32) gives the same list of beings although in slightly different order.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wila]

"Path Clearers" see to it that no one passes between him and the fire. The uninitiated are not expelled from the house and their curiosity is aroused. Meanwhile the singers prepare songs for X, describing his supernatural patrons, and some kukuciut carpenters are instructed to make in secret ten small pieces of wood, about one foot in length and six inches wide, sometimes half-moon shaped. They cover these with dyed cedar-bark on which they paint the designs appropriate to each being.* On the morning of the fourth day,* X blackens his face with soot or charcoal, obtained by pouring water on a fire, and dons the usual kuciut costume. A herald then invites the kukuciut to assemble in X's house. Presently they proceed to the lowest house of the village, where the singers beat out the tunes of the "Path Clearers," remembered from a previous year. They dance, while X stands, shifting his feet and moving his apron as if he also wished to perform but was too weary to do so. This is repeated at every house of the village, except that in which the potlatch was held; most of the kukuciut follow the procession, so do some of the uninitiated. Finally, with X last of all, they enter the potlatch house, where foreign guests and many uninitiated have assembled.

In Kimsquit the preliminary four days of watching are omitted, but from this point on, the rites of the two areas are practically identical.* As X enters, all the kukuciut who have pounding sticks begin to beat on the floor and the women drum. Without delay, and without attention to the tumultuous thumping, X begins to dance, surveys, around the fire, at intervals casting on it particles of eagle down which have the effect of making the supernatural ones there take their places. He calls out intermittently that he can see the beings there sitting down, and a herald repeats his remarks loudly. In Bella Coola the four "Path Clearers" walk close behind X.

*The distinctive designs are given by Boas, to whom the reader is referred.

*It is probable that X does not lie down where Pudlynat's dancer reports that the same is at the mouth of the river.

*It is uncertain whether the differences in ritual are typical of Bella Coola and Kimsquit, or merely represent variations in individual prerogatives.

[The Dance of Wi'l.a]

575 The last to seat himself is Kuḷiłac Nuxkāmpts, an obstreperous 946 individual, who always wants more presents than anyone else.
782 When X announces that the beings above have taken their places, a carpenter brings forward the object covered with cedar-bark and painted with a design of Xemsowālala,* holds it above X's head, and then gives it to a herald who casts it into the fire. At the same time X throws on the flames some dyed cedar-bark, some undyed cedar-bark, a little eagle down, and some olachen grease, saying:

"Please Xemsowālala,* accept this offering and be present," and throws his hands up in the air as if casting some object upwards.

Still dancing, X calls out hoip several times.

The painted representation and the cedar-bark are objects which Xemsowālala likes to receive; the olachen grease supplies the flame on which they ascend to him. The same procedure is repeated for the eight other lowlers, with slight variations in the words addressed to each. To Gwgwnkilda, for example, X says:

[334] Ḥalqmā'ānkilaxa | dzemsdzemsdzemsdzemsa | xuqkamsxuqk
Wunkqmkas-xalmamā'[illegible] | in the place where he sits, | the recipient,*
Ḥwgwnkilāłmuk Gwgwnkilda,*

When the time comes to invite the hungry Tlō'qulilas, an offering of food instead of bark is cast upon the flames. X
575 continues to dance after the final gift, and presently a shaman 946 is heard on the roof while some łaqtlat, chosen beforehand for the purpose, compressed a hidden bladder-whistle which the spectators know is the voice of the owl. Whether they be-
787

[184] *The Kwagiutl, the offerings are made by a shaman who has this prerogative in connection with the same Ḥamatsa ceremony.

[174] *The other name is Ḥulqumi, "The Receiver of Many Gifts."

*Painted then is one of the largest manufactures, the species could not be identified, of the designations, properly applied only to Xemsowālala, is often used for the lowlers as well.

*These words are virtually being such received from reciting the end of each subdivision. A sound recording of the music for the National Museum of Canada, record 702 D by singer, Jim Pellech.

[124]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Wil·a]

leave the dead on the roof, which is made by an accomplice, is the call itself, or a being bringing it to X, is problematical. All non-members are expelled immediately, including guests other than Kimsquit or Tal·ts ḥaḥaciut. One is tempted to conjecture whether or not the dancer of the potlatch does not use this rite as a means of getting rid of his guests if they show a disposition to linger too long.

The call having come to X, this is the day of ḥaxiimum. In the early evening a herald goes up and down the platform outside the houses, calling out in effect:

"He has been pressed to earth beneath the weight."

No mention is made of who "he" may be, although the uninitiated are well aware. The herald then enters each house in order, starting at the bottom, to invite the ḥaḥaciut to assemble in X's. After he has been aided by the beating of sticks, four times repeated, the singers seat themselves behind the fire, where X joins them. The fiction is always carried out that the call has brought him a song, which he pretends to sing or recite to the singers who appear to be listening intently. Usually he says nothing, or talks about something else, though sometimes the deception is furthered by X first learning the words from the musicians and repeating them as if teaching.

The chants is always of the supernatural persons and how the offering secures them. Since only ḥaḥaciut are present and since they all understand the methods, this part of the ceremony may be slighted.* The singers have set and sing the song a number of times, softly, as if practicing, then more loudly for the benefit of the audience, and finally at full strength while X dances. Later in the season when many ḥaḥaciut have performed, and there is danger of the songs being forgotten, it is customary to sing them over on the night of ḥaxiimum while the owner of each song dances. Throughout, the whistle sounds, to the awe of the uninitiated in the other

*Since when no uninitiated are present, the ḥaḥaciut always surround their ceremonials with an air of mystery which eminently effects themselves.

J: McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Wila]

*575 *996 houses. The night's ceremony concludes with a meal and the admonitions of the marshals.

No further description is needed of the rites taking place the next day, that of wanaxilaqa, where a second song is composed, again dealing with X's patrons, and wood for masks is cut. The evening's ceremonial does not last as long as that of hanqimum.

[594] [597] [598] The next day, qatlem, the carpenters work at the masks, some of which must be finished by nightfall. Late in the evening both hahaciut and uninitiated prepare themselves by painting and washing; at this time the young men provide pans of warm water for their female friends. As already described, the hahaciut are the first to arrive, followed by the uninitiated when all is ready. In Kimsquit they use the masks [114] of at least some of X's supernatural patrons suspended by cords of dyed cedar-bark from a sleeping pole that stretches from the floor at the base of the back-room to the cross-beam behind the fire. It is said, although the informant could not guarantee the truth of the statement, that long ago masks had to be displayed at this dance, though it was optional at others. It is a serious and sacred time, one at which frivolity is quite out of place, and the marshals are in readiness to punish any offender. One very old informant told of having seen a marshal strike down and kill a hahaciut from another house for dabbling intercourse with a woman on this night. The hawids [597] stay near the door, repeating and enlarging on the remarks of the marshals, the fancy of these functionaries always adds opportunity to the success of any Bella Coola rite. On this occasion X and the dancer of Nuxlipuxu must perform, followed by those who have danced in former years, according to the desire of the singers; later in the season, when many hahaciut have performed, the rite may continue almost all down, for all must dance. After the departure of the uninitiated the hahaciut act intensely, while a marshal addresses them, commenting on the ritual and, perhaps, taking a note

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wi·a]

to allow his son to be initiated on the next day. Then X dances once more and the kukusiut disperse. 575* 796*

There is no need to repeat an account of the preliminaries of nuxwam, including the construction of the two shelters in the back corners of the house and the summoning first of the kukusiut and then of the uninitiated. When all is ready, a masked figure representing Xemsemálstis appears from one of the shelters, and dances around the fire, sunwise, revolving sunwise at the same time, while the kukusiut men pound violently, the kukusiut women drone, and the uninitiated stare with open mouths. As he dances he sings: [535]

"I am Xemsemálstis. The supernatural beings call continually on me as they give me presents. See me."

Then he stands in the centre of the space behind the fire, holding in his hand a stick that has just been given to him and which is decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark and a tuft of swan down at the top and middle. The beating of sticks died down while Xemsemálstis was making his announcement, but it now breaks out afresh as Xemsus appears. He too dances around the fire, announces his name and stands on Xemsemálstis's right. There is more pounding, and out comes Awlíkwulxais, who circles the fire and stands on Xemsemálstis's left. But instead of remaining motionless she constantly moves about the house, now here, now there, talking to the uninitiated and assuring them that it is Xemsemálstis whom they see. She takes care not to come into close contact with the uninitiated as her identity might be detected. One after the other the other patrons emerge, dance around the fire, and take their stations alternately to right and left of Xemsemálstis. Kwíkas Nuxkémpts keeps leaving his place as if to seek things from different parts of the house, while *Almáł, who is a kingfisher, moves to and fro in quick, hopping steps, imitating the actions of that bird. A few minutes after Tlúxpilitw·a has joined the others, Xemsemálstis begins to hum loudly: [535] 575 I..., and ao...," revolving sunwise at the same time.

[The Dance of Wi·a]

796 Ano'lkwulsaix does not fail to point out to the uninitiated: "That is the way he sings up above. Look at him! That is what he does in his own home."

575 If foreigners, guests for the potlatch, are in attendance, 796 Ano'lkwulsaix adds that the supernatural beings are disappointed at having been called too late for it. Then the uninitiated are expelled, the masks burnt, and the kukuxiut disperse.
552

A few further notes are necessary on this dance. If a potlatch is to be given after the kuxiut season, the calling of these supernatural beings is sometimes reserved as the last kuxiut dance, and any foreigners present, as uninitiated guests, are told that the beings have come for the ceremony. There is [776] thus a superficial appearance of confusion between these kuxiut patrons and nusuk deities. It is nothing more than a resemblance, since the nine brothers do not appear at the potlatch, and nothing is said to explain their absence; it is merely a subterfuge to increase the interest of the rite. Nor is any [778] connection necessary; in fact, X usually obtains his nuk like any other kuxiut, without the spectacular throwing of presents on the fire. In this case X and the marshals consult and select the proper day for the beginning of the ceremony. On the 575 night preceding that chosen, the kukuxiut are called to X's 796 house and one of the marshals announces that he can hear X's call wanting to come to him. He answers simply:
787

"I am afraid."

The uninitiated are not expelled from X's house, so that they learn what is to take place. No ritual occurs on that evening, but one of X's friends remains constantly with him, as if to assist in any emergency. Kukuxiut are often sent up the slopes of the neighbouring mountains with whistles which the uninitiated hear, and which lead them to believe that supernatural beings are in the vicinity.

[126] A phonographic record was made of this, National Museum of Canada, record VII D 4b, singer, Jim Pollard.

[The Dance of Wil·a]

About dusk on the following day X, who is in his own house, suddenly stands up and cries out: 575* 796*

"Yes. It has come. I am afraid. Yes! I will do as you bid me." 987

The kukuxiut women begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Heralds announce that a kuxiut has been pressed to earth, and presently they go to every house inviting the kukuxiut to gather in X's. From this point on, the rite of kuxémem continues in the manner already described.

The ability of X to summon these nine brothers from above is a special prerogative; other kukuxiut have one or other of them as patron, but lack the power to call the whole number to earth. One kuxiut has exclusive knowledge of the m:t which is spread for Omqwéklika when the other supernatural beings summon him to a ceremony; another of the place where the brethren obtain their eagle down. Detailed information was not obtained about these ceremonies. [424]

THE CANNIBAL DANCE

Of all kuxiut dances, the one of which the uninitiated are most afraid, and which is, therefore, the strongest, is the Cannibal dance. It is believed that the performer is exposed to greater dangers than in any other rite, and observers have the most spectacular ocular demonstrations of his powers. The patrons of most Cannibals are Alqunéim, Sxwexéleq, or Kimai·ts, who implant in their protégés a wolf, bear, or eagle, causing them to devour strange foods. The Bella Coola consider that a man is equally a Cannibal whether he has the prerogative of eating corpses, biting the living, eating dogs or raw salmon, or biting himself. The most common of these is the right to bite the living, and few of the older people are not marred thereby. Fear of Cannibals is one of the strongest reasons for the respect with which the uninitiated regard the kuxiut society, but though the holders of prerogatives of this type are regarded with awe on account of their powers, they are not considered as chiefs, as the Bella Coola say in the case

575* 796* 424 [981] [996] [987] [981] [171] [622]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[Ke Cannibal Dance]

among the Bella Bella, Fort Rupert, and Rivers Inlet people. Indeed, in Bella Coola a poor man may be the most dreaded Cannibal of all, if he has been able duly to validate and perform his right in this respect. Nor is the dance carried out with the same rigour in Bella Coola as among the tribes of the outer coast.

The ritual of different prerogatives varies to such an extent that several accounts must be given, in spite of the repetitions that this form of presentation entails. On account of the length of time necessary, a Cannibal dance usually begins early in the season. The following describes the manner in which Kwatsiskt of Kimsquit, who can bite the living, carried out his rite; it was obtained from his brother, who is thoroughly conversant with the details. It will be convenient to refer to Kwatsiskt as X, and to use the present tense throughout.

A meeting is held at which the marshals and others choose, in agreement with X and his relatives, a day suitable for him to commence his performance. Under normal circumstances it is on some qulow that a marshal announces that he can hear X's call, and on the following evening, when the ritual has been completed, the uninitiated are startled to hear continuous whistling from the slopes of the mountains near the village. The instruments used are of the usual bladder type, but the long-drawn-out sound, termed Ailikka, is said to be the voice of the kindly supernatural woman, Snimalu a.*

*The sole function of this being seems to be the summoning to life of those who appear to have been killed in the performance of Sacred rites. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether or not she is identical with Tlingalilla a. The noise which heralds her coming is produced by the whistles of four Sakaiat who throughout the night range the forests and mountains within ear-shot of the village. By bending their heads up and down, they are able to increase the weirdness and apparent clearness of the sound. The four travel in single file, the leader blows, and when his breath is nearly exhausted he passes the head of the second man, who starts whistling forthwith, while the original leader drops to the rear. As the second becomes weary, he signals in the same way to the third, and so on; in this way the whistling is continuous, and the uninitiated are convinced that it cannot be caused by mortals, even if such an idea should occur to them. If a non-member should meet the foks, they would at once kill him or make him a prisoner, keeping him out of sight until he could be initiated into the society.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

575*
796*
787

Towards dawn, a herald goes through the village crying loudly:

"Get up, you young men! Get up all ye people! Something strange has come upon the young man."

The uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut assemble in X's house where he is acting as if demented, biting any of his associates except other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts. Meanwhile those who are not members of the society cower in their own houses, and are told that if they dare to look out, X, scenting them, will bite them to death. At intervals during the morning, X goes around to the other houses, naked and savage, snapping at everyone he sees. The uninitiated hide in the bedrooms, but peek out occasionally and hear his growlings and the shrieks of mock terror with which his associates greet his bites and threats. The kukusiut tell non-members when it is safe for them to leave their hiding-places for necessary purposes, but at all other times they remain in concealment, listening with fear to the dangerous maniac.

About midday X returns to his house where a large number of kukusiut have assembled. The uninitiated certainly, and perhaps some of the kukusiut as well, believe that Cannibals are carried away to the land above where they are exposed to great dangers, and to prevent this an effort is always made to bind the dancer. The marshals and X's relatives have made the necessary preparations, consisting of the manufacture of a long rope, in addition to the usual dyed cedar-bark collar and a bear-skin. The kukusiut enter whole-heartedly into the dramatic spirit of the rite, and the robe is thrust over X in spite of his furious struggles. Then the collar is forced over his head, while the women drone and the whistles sound eerily, to the wonder of the uninitiated listening from adjacent houses. The thick, cable-like rope is doubled and a circle of kukusiut form around the seemingly demented dancer, each man holding a section. X rushes against one part of the circle after another, as if to force his way out; sometimes he bends down, and those

[172]

[292]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*575 *796 7887 restraining him bend too, throwing him back into the centre of the circle with the aid of the rope and their bodies. Meanwhile the women are droning, and some of them pound on the floor with sticks; intermittent calls of heip and the sound of the whistle add to the weird confusion. The circle of kukusiut often revolves around X, each man jumping in time to his neighbours, so that the din is increased. After about ten minutes, the circle gradually contracts to a double line, and the rope is slipped over X's head, as if tying up a dangerous beast. One end is given to a kusiut willing to have a call, and he goes around leading X as if he were a captive animal. The heralds go to every house to report what has taken place.[40]

Towards dusk two young kukusiut are sent up the mountains. Soon after the sun has set, members of the society gather on the sidewalk outside X's house, to which X is led. He is still struggling, and the kukusiut press close around him, as if to restrain him; thereby effectually concealing everything from the uninitiated watching from the doorways of their houses. At a signal from one of the senior kukusiut, all the members of the society shriek out ye -- at the top of their voices. At the same time X, aided by his fellows, slips from his rope and hides himself within a bow-drum, which is then carried back to his house. Warned by the cry, the two lads up the mountains forthwith begin to growl. This furnishes clear proof to the uninitiated that X has been able, owing to the power within him, to slip away from the closest bonds of his fellows and travel aloft. In answer to the growls from above, a kusiut with a powerful voice calls out:

"Go aloft on the right road. Your power will enable you to escape the dangers. But do not stray from the narrow trail."

[184] In Kimsquit, though not in Bella Coola, the kukusiut then go to every house, crying and wailing, thinking of the Cannibals

[40] It is not clear whether or not the uninitiated are sometimes present at the roping.

2:McGlashan E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

who have gone adrift and never returned,* and of course increasing the fear of the uninitiated. They then go back to X's home where a marshal speaks, asking all to keep silence so that they will be able to hear X when he returns from the land above. No noise is permitted during his absence, even the discharge of muskets being forbidden. The man who carries the rope from which X escaped always receives a call on this night, because the supernatural beings have seen the important part he has played in the rite, and his patron recognizes it in this way. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated and, accordingly, the rope-holder is some Sacsiac who wishes to have a call. After the usual curing,* one song is composed for the rope-holder, and sung very softly, since the night's ceremony is termed Ahdipsoomy, "The Acrimonious Night," or Nacsimwat, "The Silent Night." The uninitiated believe that the Sakaciac are filled with woe and foreboding at the fate before X. It is early morning before they disperse.

The next day, waciatilcap for the rope-holder, the usual ritual is omitted since the presence of grief and fear must still be preserved. Thus the necessary wood for the rope-holder's masks is cut silently. The collar and rope from which X escaped are hung on the wall of his house, and when a herald summons the Sakaciac during the evening, he bids them assemble to watch over these objects. Although a second song, composed during the day, is practised for the rope-holder, it is done so softly that the uninitiated from neighbouring houses imagine that the Sakaciac are really brooding over their loss. The only sound that reaches them is an occasional hoip, accentuating their fear. After the customary distribution of work and food the Sakaciac disperse.

On the morrow, the rope-holder's qaiam, the uninitiated are summoned, because it is assumed that members of the

*If a Cowichan dies during his period of consciousness he is buried secretly. The uninitiated are told that his power enabled him to cross a crossing chasm in the land above, but then it failed him, so that he was unable to return to his friends.

*This ceremony of the Sacsiac lasting of whole, requested four days.

[The Cannibal Dance]

[illegible] society have recovered from the shock of X's disappearance. Thereafter the hamatsa dances continue night after night, but the Cannibal remains hidden. Sometimes he is carried to a dance, concealed within a drum; more often he remains within the back-room of his own house or hides in some lonely part of the mountains. Throughout this period he eats little or nothing, and formerly used to devour a horse of roots that produced unction. The length of concealment depends entirely on X. If he desires to impress the uninitiated with the dangers which he has survived, he remains hidden for a long time; consequently, the period varies from a week to two months or even more. On every occasion that a nawalak addresses the hahamatsa he warns them to watch for X's return, and garbled accounts of this reach the uninitiated.

When X's relatives and the nawalak have decided that the Cannibal has been long enough absent, they make arrangements for him to reappear. The time selected is always the eight of a sakacum, and after the departure of the uninitiated on the preceding evening the nawalak discuss arrangements with the hahamatsa and also talk to various individuals. Several hahamatsa shave X's head, except a small patch above the forehead, to support the story which he will tell of the high winds prevailing in the land above, which blew the hair from his head.*

After the dismissal of the uninitiated on the following night of sakacum, the hahamatsa make their final arrangements. When they judge from the passage of the stars or the state of the tide that dawn is at hand, several members of the society climb to the roof of the previously selected house. First they sound a whistle, then dance on the roof with their feet, and call out:

Ewe, ewe, ewe: this is a cry used by Cannibals returned from above which is supposed to indicate a longing for meat.

The hahamatsa sleeping within, knowing that their house has been selected, are ready as soon as they are awakened. The

* When all were mentioned there is the much that was done with a disappointed place of [illegible], he was unable to [illegible] when [illegible] used to [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] down, while the men rush out to capture the returning [illegible]. The uninitiated hear the sounds of feet rushing over the roof, as if a furious chase were taking place, and presently a load [illegible] comes to their ears. Having been told on previous occasions that the notes a Cumiled who is compelled to travel through space, they realize that he has escaped his would-be captors and returned alone.

Then the herald goes around the village calling:

"Young boys! Get up, see, the Cumiled is at hand!"

In the early dawn, whistling is heard from the upper slopes of a near-by mountain and the uninitiated, watching eagerly and fearfully, behold a man clad in a bear-skin, who moves around, running for seven skins, and finally dashes down one and disappears into the forest, when the whistling ceases. They assume that this is the returning Cumiled; in reality, it is a dancer who has been sent out to perform the deception. Two go together, one to be hidden and use the whistle, the companion to appear; the latter must be a strong man, able to run easily over rough slopes because it would lessen the Cumiled's prestige were the uninitiated to see him fall. After about five minutes' absence, the whistling is heard on the river bank at a point over a mile from where the supposed Cumiled vanished into the forest, and as before a bear-skin clad figure appears. The non-members assume that it is the figure previously seen, and that he has been able to penetrate the dense forest in some mysterious manner; in reality it is another pair of helpers, one of whom shows himself while the other uses the whistle. Meanwhile other helpers go to X's house where they paint themselves black and don color-back ornaments. When ready, they set out to catch the Cumiled, travelling on two crossed arrows which planks have been laid, but not tied, and steered by a skilful waterman in bow and stern. They land at the place where the Cumiled was last seen, and proceed to hunt him. For the benefit of the uninitiated, watching from the village, they spend a considerable time at this, failing at first, but at length succeeding. Sometimes they drive their [illegible] into a converging "v" of barriers, so someone may be down so fast to arrange the Cassilid so that the other lurking pursuers can secure him. No effort is spared to make the man-hunt realistic. Then they carry the captive, struggling and biting, to the canoes and set out for the village. The pursuers are lengthened or curtailed until the tide is favourable for the navigation of the craft, about two hours to the canal time consumed. When to mid-stream, the city, [illegible] to again extend, the supposed Cassilid has once more escaped! All this time Ø himself has been hiding in or near the village, and he now appears. Instantly the fishermen left in the weir, transformed as off to pursuit, then returning on the canoes have their passage and join the chase. After a struggle they succeed in capturing Ø and bringing him to the village.

The Cassilid acts like a demoniac crowd, struggling, striking, and biting as if his adversaries had actually destroyed his canoes. He drags his captors, a number of strong fishermen, to the various houses, and they are barely able to restrain him within the doorways and to force him out, biting and raving as them. A skilful actor is able to impress the uninitiated as a considerably actual, and of course he is supposed by his associates. When every house has been visited, Ø is carried back to his own and a herald announces all the fishermen to cast him. The uninitiated are a crowd to crowd over the door to watch.

The assumption is that Ø has had the nature and existence of an animal seven into him; if this constitutional "madness" can be driven out by beating him, he will be restored to sanity. Two long, thin sounding boards have been prepared previously, as well as a number of birch sticks with which the fishermen beat him. One man stands up to lead the drummers, and the sticks rise and fall in unison with his movements, in the manner previously described. So that Ø growls around the house,

---

*This operation will be and hundreds in an transmission of a drive, the power is that of an attack which, having entered a city, compels him to an [illegible] [illegible]

975*
946*
987

closely guarded by his attendants, but as the rite continues, he gradually becomes quieter and at last comes to sit down in a corner upon with other Initiates engaged in either hand. After four rounds of dancing, there suddenly appears beside X the head of an angle, well, as been, according to its perspective. This is his constituents involves, drawn from life by the successful learning of time. The head, usually a cut one, has been carefully fixed by the carpenters, so that it can open its mouth, move its eyes, and give other signs of life. If it is a wall, assistants concealed behind the row of Initiates flanking X move to and fro a gigantic wall wall, bending either realism to the performance. The further remote piece of wood, presumably the pieces of human flesh which Q is discovered, in reality they are usually passed into the hands of the head by carpenters, concealed behind the row of Initiates. The uninitiated see the flesh fall into a box placed before X's feet and mouth seems arising from it, but they do not know that but [illegible] have previously been laid within to cover this. As the music pauses and through the contrast's mouth X bends down and bites at it this an animal (see Plate [illegible]) while all the Initiates present stand up and call out [illegible] four times. When the fourth shout the animal's head is concealed, though the uninitiated believe that it has removed, while the head whose whence is come to cover Q. The Cassidal now takes by [illegible]. Its guardians no longer press so closely round him and [illegible] and many of the Initiates leave he house.

Another advantage to improve the conceptual is sometimes employed. Instead of permitting the disposal of the incubus at once, another Cassidal is chosen to carry it from X. While two guardians hold Q firmly, other placing [illegible] the prospective recipient so that the two are standing face to face, each held motionless. The second Cassidal stretches his hand forward and pretends to draw something from X. At once he begins to grow and throw himself to and fro as if in frenzy, while the uninitiated are told to leave, but they come to know. They need no second initiation, especially as a new neophyte is working so violently that it appears as if it would be only a few moments before he breaks loose and runs amuck. Closely guarded by a band of hahaiat, the second Cannibal is now taken to every house of the village. He seems to be striving to escape, and to be restrained by the hahaiat. All the time he growls and calls out:

[Dove [illegible] 114, p.88 (E) - Analysis]

The Cannibal Dance]

ł .....

The call of ooo can be used only by a Cannibal who has returned from the realms above. X meanwhile remains in his own house, to which the substitute is finally brought and the cannibalistic incubus returned by the call of yo ..... four times repeated.

It was impossible to learn the details of a rite that occurs during the afternoon of this day. The singers have composed two songs for X, one describing his adventures in the land of the dead, and the other the return of the incubus which made him a flesh-eating house. It appears probable that during the afternoon the hahaiat assemble in X's house to learn these songs. It might be added that the ritual of a Cannibal dance differs widely from that of most hamatsa ceremonies, since there is no gallop and no rallycow; the uninitiated believe that the whole affair is so serious that they are not surprised at ritualistic inconsistencies.

In the evening the hahaiat are first summoned to X's house, and hear the uninitiated. X is sitting close to the singers, with a number of hahaiat grouped around him in case he should become frenzied. The singers first sing over the song describing the return of the Cannibal power, with the hahaiat joining in softly. The chorus of every Cannibal song consists of the words:

Hámdzwai, hámdzwai, hámi', hámi'.

It is said that this same refrain is used in all Cannibal songs by the Bella Bella and Fort Rupert people; the Bella Coola, ignorant of the meaning of the words, affirm that they have none.

X now talks in a low tone of voice to the singers, as if telling them of his adventures, and presently they begin to sing the song, as if they had just learnt the theme from X. Frequently the description is increased by X first learning the song and repeating it to the singers in a voice sufficiently loud for the uninitiated to hear. The theme of this, and every other song used for Cannibals, is of the land above and the dangers which X has survived. The singers add new facts and intonations to vary the monotony, but the subjects usually described are:

The far land above with its many trails and the river that flows through it.

The gale constantly raging there which has blown the hair from X's head and the dirt from his body.

The trail across a yawning chasm over which his supernatural strength enabled him to leap. If a Cannibal dies when in consciousness, the Indwarlat bury the corpse secretly and tell the uninitiated that his power failed him on the other side of the abyss so that he was unable to return.

Hyaenas under his various names.

How his power helped him to escape the Ilkhum, "They of the Huge Jaws," evil beings who tried to kill X by melting him into their gaping mouths.

The tabu-lists which are found at the edge of the far land above.

The kindly being Tsonnokhidden, who gave him the necessary power to recross the chasm. The uninitiated believe that unless a Cannibal meets this being he will be unable to return.

No one song for any Cannibal contains references to all these beings and events, but it is on these that the singers draw for their themes, always altering and adding to produce a fine effect.

On this occasion X does not dance,* and the uninitiated are more amplified. As the Indwarlat are acting, one member after another praises X for what he has done, and gives the most solemn warnings to all as to the necessity of complying the river satisfactorily. Towards midnight the gathering breaks up.

* There is a difference of opinion on this point.

Many of the younger and more athletic Indians sleep in X's house, ready to assist him in the "Running Song." About an hour and a half before dawn the uninitiated are awakened by continual shouting and growling from X's house, where the dog runs X's ghostly, run, run, run.

The shouting and noise lead to a spot on the rear of the village, whither X has gone with the musicians and about twenty Indians. Presently the singers begin to chant forth a new song, X's third, of which the theme is again the Cuculhuí's adventures in the land above; the uninitiated readily believe that he has taught the singers these words, though they had been audible to have them from within the houses. There is more shouting as X runs to a second place behind the village, where the same song is said once more. When this has been repeated four times, X is led back to his house.

For four days the uninitiated remain in a constant state of terror. Although the repulsion of the cuculhuíís incident has resulted in restore X's sanity, he is still wild, unable either to eat or sleep. Twice every night the madness conquers him, and he flashes from his house, barely recovered by his faithful Indian attendants. Eager for the flesh of human beings, he rushes at the doors, tearing them down if they should be closed, growling furiously, but his guardians always succeed in dragging him out before he does any real damage. This is repeated at every house of the village. Since the uninitiated are too frightened to look out, it often happens that a substitute takes the place of X on these semi-nightly occasions. During the day he remains within his own house, concealed, on a platform built for him between the fire and the back room.

On the fourth evening, the 8th after his return from above, the Indians are summoned to his house to soothe him so that he will be down on this platform and run. The uninitiated, listening eagerly but fearfully, hear now more the sound of the frenzied whirl-bearing. The beside inform them that X is now sufficiently moved so that he can lie down and rest, and thereafter the mourned ends as the village are disconsolate.

X remains concealed on the platform, supposedly without eating, for four days. On the fourth day occurs the ceremony of washing. Early in the morning a herald goes to every house in the village asking for urine and grease extracted from the heads of useless animals. The fetisheur gather in X's house, to which full chamber-vessels and pots of grease have been taken. No uninitiated are allowed to be present, but from adjacent houses they hear sounds of furious struggling, combined with growling. Presently they see a number of fetisheur carrying X, smeared with liquid, to the river. Some informants state that he is actually covered with urine and fish-oil, others that these are merely emptied within the house and were poured over X, that their collection is merely to deceive the uninitiated. At any rate he is taken to the river, where, in spite of his shrieks, kicks, and struggles, he is four times dressed by his guardians. Often he urines events from the bed of the stream and hurls them at his captors, sometimes breaking them severely. This washing ceases in the conversion of X to sanity. He is taken four times to every house in the village, no longer growling and struggling, and a herald announces that he will dance that evening.

Soon after dusk the fetisheur are summoned and they produce the four songs composed for X. Then the uninitiated are called in. As his songs are sung, X dances in the usual fetisheur style, but more violently than usual, and growling at intervals. The women dance and his four guardians stand close by, spitting into his ears to soothe him.* This is done by calling their heads close to his head, so that a spray of fine saliva is sprayed over him. After dancing, X sits down once more and a meddled cake not that food is to be given to him, he is supposed to have eaten nothing but morsels of human flesh since his departure for the upper world. The women are dan-

* Spitting into ears frequently is associated with curing by means of the shamanistic healing of souls.

[illegible]

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible] many times we female was witness a Cannibal's fit meal. These behaviour are dispatched to ask for food, as if they were begging on behalf of X. Choicest grouse, dried salmon, dried geese, and other luxuries are always given to them and the institutional women are excited at witnessing this affection of food. Sometimes a request is made during the day and the messengers are entitled to call upon any individuality name, to provide grouse or some other delicacy.

The actual feeding is done by a shaman who is after a doctor. He first dips his hands in the grouse, wave them at the fire and rubs them over X's face as the struggling unwilled is held by six or eight dancers. Members of the party keep calling out loud to awake X, who is supposed to be like a wild animal, and to have lost all traces his ordinary life. Like a monster he snaps at the shaman's fingers, while dishevelled eye rolls and the institutional vocals with fear and amazement. When nothing the Cannibal's chants has ceased, a shaman shows one than he is almost ready to eat. The hands who his mouth, and go through the village to inform all what has taken place. The shaman now puts a few mouthfuls of food in a spoon and tries to feed X, who struggles and cry to have greater use of the crucial tooth. Undaunted, he pts small quantity of food actually into X's mouth, handfuls of dancing jaws, and at last persuades him to swallow a little.

"He has eaten," the shaman calls out joyfully, and the horrible report the good village.

An effort is now made to force him to drink, but X only bites the vessel, and the fingers of the shaman, and succeeds in drenching himself with the liquid. But at last he swallows a few mouthfuls.

"He has drunk," calls the shaman, and as before a horrible report his mouth.

The shaman now tells the institutional that X all be all right, but that it will be safe for them to depart, as he leave village. Thereby keep everyone in the village informed of the events.

Schlichtenweith, E.-S. (1922-1924) 1948
NEH Bellacoola NEH

*575
592
996

PLATE I

Photograph by E.-S. Schlichtenweith
Indian Museum of Canada

Mask representing the Thunderer

[p. 84 (a)]

[p. 14(B)]

PLATE I

[illegible]

[illegible] producing a crystal from his stomach

U575
.796
798

[p. 84 (V)]

575
196
142
542
292
787

PLATE I

Photograph by H. J. Harris, Forestry Division of Canada

Camified with bandage in form of a bear

[p. 14 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1926) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

575
778
197

PLATE 6

Photograph by G. H. Davis, National Museum of Canada

Repainting of a dog-sledding expedition

[p. 14 (F)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

X, now almost sane, rushes around the house, shouting ewe-, ewe-, ewe-, while his call sounds loudly, as the whistle is pressed firmly beneath his armpit or against his stomach, tied under a belt. Often the ḵuḵuxiut slip a rope over his shoulders to prevent him escaping again. Finally, he rushes from the house and all the ḵuḵuxiut crowd close about him on the sidewalk without. As many as possible press upwards against his body with their hands, while they shout, ye --, trying to expel the call upwards. On the fourth repetition it is supposed to have been driven forth, and in answer to the tumultuous shout of the ḵuḵuxiut, there is heard the sound of a whistle from above. The uninitiated do not know that a ḵuxiut has been dispatched with one to a mountain peak for this purpose. 575* 796* 787

The ḵuḵuxiut now return to X's house for a meal. The first dish of food is placed before X himself, while one of the marshals addresses him and the audience in the following strain: 575* 796* [539]

Yiwanqiwanc, ximxmo ki! Ḵlaiu di ptaxtu!
Greetings, comrades! Hail to the dreaded one [the Cannibal]!*

Wi, ptaxtu! Nuxin. Nuqhlaxiuk'ḵuḵuqs.
More, dreaded one, *Nuxin. Eat to repletion.

There is no ritual significance attached to any particular words; marshals use their own discretion as to what they say, but the above may be considered a fair example of the kind of remarks addressed to a Cannibal at his first meal. After X has started eating, the other ḵuḵuxiut commence and the marshals deliver their usual admonitions, praising X for what he has done and urging others to emulate his example. Then presents are distributed to those who have been bitten. It is considered that a Cannibal compliments a man by taking a piece of his flesh, and that he is under obligations to the one bitten for the latter having allowed him to exercise his prerogs- 575* 796* 431 424

*Ptaxtu means "The Dreaded One" or "The Fearless One." X is so called on account of the uncanny cannibalistic impulse that has taken possession of him. [787]

*This is the causative form of the word. [195]

*Nuxin was the name of the performing Cannibal on the occasion that this speech was recorded.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 431 424 [773] tive. Hence compensation must be given. Payment for wounds inflicted is really parallel to payments to witnesses of any other prerogative; without their assistance X would not have been able to display his right. Long ago Cannibals are said to have had teeth of such sharpness that they were able to take pieces from the bodies of their victims with ease and quickness. In more recent years, it has been customary for a person about to be bitten to cut himself with a knife so that, when the Cannibal seizes him, a simple sucking at the chosen part will bring forth blood. In view of the honour attached to being bitten, no person to whom such a proposal is made would think of refusing. As previously mentioned, Cannibals do not bite other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts, otherwise their victims may comprise any kukusiut.[14] Presents received by those bitten are called "Bandages." At the time of such payment gifts are usually given to all kukusiut, with additional compensation for the sufferers.

*575 *796 Now that X has eaten ordinary food it is supposed that he is again normal, although special precautions must be taken for the rest of the winter since he is subject to returning fits of frenzy. Consequently, he is never allowed to be alone, but is always followed by a number of kukusiut whose function appears to the uninitiated to be to guard them from the Cannibal. The sight of strangers suffices to rouse him, so that when a canoe from Tāl·io or Kimsquit approaches, a herald bids the uninitiated conceal themselves. On their arrival X rushes to the beach, apparently in spite of his guardians' restraint, and honours several of the strangers by biting them, as he did before he was able to eat ordinary food. On such occasions he then visits every house, attended by his escort, before returning to his own. Inside each dwelling he growls, cries out xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and sometimes shakes or tears off the [14] Every effort is made to convince the uninitiated of the severity of the wounds inflicted. For example, if a kusiut woman is suffering from some malady of the breast which requires an operation, a Cannibal bites her there and non-members are told that the incision, made about the same time, was caused by his teeth. [752]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

planking around the walls, much to the terror of the uninitiated who cower in their blankets, afraid to peer out lest they be bitten. If X should step upon a loose board on any of these rounds of the village, either before or after the expulsion of his cannibalistic incubus, he is partially deprived of the power of movement. He can only tread up and down, marking time on the teetering plank, until repeated cries of hsip have finally soothed him so that he can proceed. Sometimes the stomach of a seal must be shown him before he can leave the spot. Although no one knows why this should so affect Cannibals, at sight of it he rushes forth immediately.

That evening the herald summons the kukusiut and the strangers to X's house. His songs are sung, whereupon X becomes excited and must be cured by the beating of sticks and the four times repeated hsip before he can be induced to sit down. Food is then distributed, while a marshal speaks, and presents are given to the bitten strangers, provided by X or one of his relatives. Such gifts are often of trifling value but the recipients must never show that they think so.

For the remainder of the ceremonial season X goes to all dances under the guardianship of a number of kukusiut. His apparent wildness and ferocity overawes the uninitiated and helps to convince them of the force of the rites. Sometimes in sheer bravado and with an overweening desire to terrorize, X's guardians will cry out that he has become excited; the uninitiated hastily hide and the Cannibal rushes from house to house, ripping off boards and acting as if demented. If friction should arise at some ceremony when only members are present, X often plays a prominent part. For example, in one dance the kukusiut rush around the fire, guided by a rope; sometimes a mischievous man will double it so that the participants are thrown violently against each other. Everyone is excited by the noise of the beating sticks, and the growling of the Cannibals, so that loss of temper is not uncommon. But if X rushes out of the door, the necessity of maintaining his prestige with the uninitiated overrules every other considera-

*576 tion and those quarrelling follow him as he goes to every house
*796 growling and crying ewe, ewe, ewe. By the time he returns home their anger has cooled. It is then necessary to quiet X by means of the elaborate beating of sticks. This is repeated four times, while a kwaiat spits violently over him.

Before leaving his own home to attend a kwaiat dance, a little food is always given to X in case he should become hungry and start biting people. On qutlaw he always dances after the dance of the ceremony,* and when the kukwiat eat together he always receives his portion immediately after that of the marshals. Fear of all Cannibals is one of the most potent deterrents to the uninitiated, but the most dreaded are those, like X, who have just returned from the land above and may at any moment break forth into an orgy of biting. Several elderly informants recalled vividly the terror with which they regarded such a Cannibal when they were young.

[624]
[781]

The kukwiat take full advantage of the fear which X inspires in the uninitiated. On qutlaw nights when the time arrives for the latter to depart, they are often chased forth by the frenzy of X, or one of his fellow-Cannibals who has likewise been to the land above. X starts to call out, ewe, ewe, ewe, and rises to his feet; the singers at once begin to beat out one of his songs and the uninitiated hurriedly flee, while the Cannibal's guardians press close around him as he dances as if to prevent him running amuck among the frightened people crowding out of the door. As he dances and hears his song, he becomes more and more excited; he growls and only the repeated hoip of his guardians and their pressure upon the back of his neck appear to restrain him. Non-members and even those kukwiat who do not understand the full mysteries of the Cannibal dance cannot fail to be impressed. The raising of the arms is supposed to inflame a Cannibal, so if it is desired still more to impress the uninitiated, one of the kukwiat lifts his arms, and is bitten by X. The heralds at once go through the village announcing what has taken place. Meanwhile X, swaddled by the men of blood, doubtless from the house, closely guarded by a number of hadaxiat. Growling, he enters the lowest house of the village and, to the uninitiated there, it appears as if the endeavor of his guardians is all that prevents the biting demon from breaking loose among them. This is repeated at every house in the village, and then X returns to that in which gulam is taking place, where he is guided to his usual corner and a hadzat throws cold water over him. Any senior hadzat, often one who is also a shaman, calls on those present to beat time, and the frenzied enclosure of sticks sounds forth. X remains quiet and more water is thrown over him. This pounding of sticks is four times repeated, and after each more water is thrown over the Cannibal, until at last his temporary fit of frenzy is stilled. Then the hadzatiat set to comfort and leave. It must be remembered that the uninitiated hear the beating of sticks from adjacent houses, and their awe is perhaps increased by the fact that they cannot actually see what is taking place.

[781]

*If several Cannibals have performed in a single year, the order in which they dance is subject to arrangement.

[The Cannibal Dance]

575* 796* [181]

This liability to madness lasts throughout the ceremonial season, effectively suppressing any contrariness considered, and at the same time serving as a bond of union among the hadzatiat themselves, who must sink individual differences of opinion in face of the absolute necessity of upholding X's prestige. A Cannibal novice can likewise become frenzied at any time during the summer following his initiation. [536]

The Cannibal dance entails a considerable amount of physical and mental effort, while if X bites many individuals, as he likes to do as a means of demonstrating his prerogative, he is forced to expend a considerable amount of goods as "Bandages." These two factors often deter a man from performing this dance. A Cannibal who has just been initiated as a hadzat at once begins to bite, and is carried away to the upper regions. He is required, moreover, to give his ceremony the following winter, like any other novice. During the summer he generally remains hidden within his house, and when he goes

575* 796* 536 [131] [124]

[The Cannibal Dance]

[379] to the woods he is always accompanied by a number of kakaxtat [776] to drive the uninitiated from his path. If it were necessary [554] to perform the full rite just described, it would, in effect, limit this dance to wealthy individuals. One reason why it is possible for a poor Bella Coola to become a Cannibal is that on his second, or subsequent, ceremonial, he can give an abbreviated rite, known as Sitcum. The essence of this is [379] that a kindly supernatural being has visited X on earth, saving [776] him from the perils of going sisek. In this case the usual [777] climax follows that of a normal Sacrat dance and is concluded in four days.

After the elaborate rites of some other Sacrat have been concluded, the call comes to X, who responds by growling and biting a few people. The uninitiated are at once expelled from his house. Thanks to the friendly intervention of the supernatural being, usually Alpamine, X's musical powers are impaired so that he does not become infuriated and bites only a few individuals. As with ordinary Sacrat rites, the singers [577] have set a song composed for the occasion, describing the benefactor being who came down to X, and the kakaxtat practise and learn it. No other songs are rehearsed on this night, owing to the extreme solemnity of the occasion; it is a Cannibal rite and nothing can take place at the same time.

The next day is nacinilaqa; a second song is composed and a number of the kakaxtat are sent to collect wood for masks. Six of these must be constructed representing the following supernatural beings: [552] [776]

Alpamine, who has benignly interfered to save X from risking the dangers of a trip sisek.

Sqaulac, a supernatural man-eater from whom the call has come impelling X to eat flesh.

Three Alkpaiac, "Hiddens," who restrain Sqaulac. In the land above their function corresponds to that of the kakaxtat who guard a Cannibal.

Ant'Sisudaais.

In the evening, after the work has been allotted, X's two songs are sung, all that are conceived upon a Cannibal does not go to the land above. 575* 796* 787

On the following day, galum, the masks are manufactured and the ritual proceeds in the usual manner. In the evening the uninitiated are invited to watch or dance, at which X is the first to perform, lengthening his face and protruding his lips so that greater terror is caused to frighten his beholders.

The ritual of the next evening, nakwam, corresponds to the usual pattern. Before the eyes of the uninitiated, X has concealed himself so that nothing can detract from their awe at sight of the masked figures. Alpanaw stands in state behind the fire, sometimes announcing his own name, while Ana'ilk-nalum moves to and fro, adding to the solemnity of the occasion with his explanations, echoed by the heralds. Alpanaw, represented with blood-covered lips, moves around the fire, surrounded by the three Hidden, and he audience is told that this is how they act in the land above. When the guests have gazed sufficiently on these marvels they are sent away, and the masks are burnt in the usual manner, accompanied by the gentle singing of one of X's songs. Late at night a number of dancers go with X to the sidewalk outside his house, where they expel his evil by pressing upwards with their hands against his stomach and calling hoip.

For the rest of the winter X conducts himself in the manner of any dancer who has danced. 575* 796*

Although similar in outlines, the prerogatives enjoyed by Cannibals differ so considerably that no clear picture of the rites can be obtained without detailed descriptions of several. The following is an account of a dance carried out by Lulalimat, a biting Cannibal of Nuxpalit. It was obtained from one of the marshals who, of course, understood the details of every performance. The origin of the name is unknown, although the informant believed that it had been created in this world by the chiefs in consequence of the manner in which a shaman ancestor of the dancer had been in the habit of biting people [424] [115] without apparent cause. It will be convenient to refer to kukulwat as X.

Having first obtained sanction from the nuntsis, X begins his preparations. The continuous whistling that in Kwakiutl presages a call to a Cannibal is lacking, but on the morning when it has been decided that X will start his dance, he discards his clothing and goes to the house in which a kwaiat ceremony is taking place, and from which the uninitiated have accordingly been ejected. After dancing for an instant, he suddenly leaps at a man and bites him. The "victim," warned of what is to happen, has probably prepared himself by making a small cut so that his blood can gush forth easily. Then X rushes from the house, growling ferociously, and biting a number of kukusiut, either men or women, on arm, neck, or leg. Several co-members accompany the Cannibal, while the uninitiated cower within the bedrooms, hoping to be unobserved. A herald goes continually through the village, calling out:

"The dreaded one [Pâsaula] has bitten three [or whatever the number may be] people."

X spends a considerable time rushing around biting people, the effect being greatly magnified by the outcry of his assistants and the terror of the uninitiated who cringe in fear lest they should be bitten by this seeming maniac with the strange power. When weary, X dashes off into the forest to rest; his followers go with him and sit down in two groups, men in one, women in the other.

About noon a herald goes to every house calling out, ipdaap, which means, "Hold him down."

Two or more kukusiut have been sent up the mountain above the village while the others go to X's house, from which the uninitiated were expelled at the first signs of his fury. A rope, previously prepared, is lashed around X in spite of his struggles, and tied to pieces of wood on which several kukusiut sit to increase the weight, but arranged so that X can slip out of his bonds without the ruse being apparent. As a dog-eating

Cannibal is excited by the barking of dogs, so is a man-eater aroused by the sound of people, his prey, talking together. Presently he hears voices from an adjacent house and staggers to his feet, drawing with him those who seek to hold him down. They endeavour to restrain him, and for a short time succeed, but soon he breaks the weighted stick, throws off his cloak, and rushes madly from the house. Of course this is done with the connivance of those who seem to be holding him. When the kakaxiut arrive outside, after delaying one another by all trying to push through the door at the same instant, X has vanished. They cry out ye ·· loudly four times to assist him on his journey, and the man on the mountain, hearing the noise and seeing the people rush forth, drone without exposing themselves. The sound is heard in the village and a shout is raised:

"He has gone up as a bird on rising from the ground."

The kakaxiut return to X's house where they hang the rope on the wall and sit down to a meal during which a marshal admonishes them. There is no singing or other noise because X has gone forth into danger; they are sad at his sudden departure from their midst and full of forebodings for his welfare. Besides, all wish to keep silent so that they will be able to hear the first sounds of his return. After the conclusion of the meal they disperse quietly.

Meanwhile X is lurking in concealment in a near-by house where the utmost pains are taken to ensure that no uninitiated should see him. When it is decided that he shall reappear, two accomplices are sent up the mountain, and one evening when all the kakaxiut have gathered for a ceremonial there is heard a loud thud on the roof. Out rush the kakaxiut and grip X, whom they carry struggling into the house where he dashes around biting the arms and legs of all who come within his reach. Then with a rush he dashes from the house, eluding those who, apparently, seek to detain him, and has vanished by the time they emerge. All cry out ye ··· four times, and the accomplices from the mountain drone in reply. The un-uninitiated, who have seen or heard of X's footsteps, readily believe the fiction that he has returned for a meal, and has once more gone aloft. One informant stated most emphatically that this was his belief when a young man; he had been warned by his father of the seriousness of the ceremonial and told that if he should dare to speak or think disrespectfully of it, a Saxiar would "grip him by the ankle causing the flesh to become rotten." During a Cannibal's absence the uninitiated remain in a state of terror, fearing that, on returning, he may chance to light beside them and devour them. In consequence, they seek refuge in their bedrooms, or at any rate in the immediate vicinity of their houses.

After an absence of thirty or forty days it is decided that X shall return at a certain time. During the eight preceding, he washes and shaves his head to further the belief that he has been to a land where the great wind has blown away his hair as well as the dirt from his body. Several accomplices are sent out, to a mountain above the village, to a house in the valley below, and to an island in the vicinity. In the early dawn the man up the mountain drones and growls, usually four times, according to the arrangement made. The people listen expectantly. After a short pause, the man in the valley makes the same noise; no mortal could cover the distance between the two places in the time that has elapsed, but all things are possible to a Cannibal. A herald goes through the village, crying out:

"We are left behind, we are left behind."

The Sakaziar dash off upstream towards the place from which the sound is still coming, but as they draw near it is stilled, only to break forth presently from the island behind them. The herald goes through the village informing everybody that:

"He has gone away."

Presently X dashes out into a clearing on the island, naked and with arms reddened; he runs around madly while an accomplice in concealment uses a whistle. The Sakaziar pursue him and bring him back, struggling, to the village where he escape to all within reach. As soon as a person is bitten, an assistant covers the wound with undyed cedar-bark. A number of young men and women Sakaciar accompany X wherever he goes, without any special preparation for doing so. When he is weary, he rushes off into the forest where his followers sit down in two groups until he has recovered from his exertions, then he returns and bites more people. Almost every day he goes through the village calling out:

Ipdoqa, ipdoqa, Sakaciar, "Come to hold him down, ye Sakaciar."

About two in the afternoon a number of Sakaciar women assemble on the beach. X, apparently in spite of his guardians, dashes into the lowest house of the village where he growls and bites a few people, while my women present drove. Then those on the beach begin to drone and X rushes out of the house towards them. They become quiet, and when almost upon them, he appears to change his mind and hurries back to the house immediately above the one that he has just quitted. Again the women on the beach drone, and again he runs out, only to return to the house next above. This is repeated until he has visited every dwelling, his course up the village being a series of We. He returns finally to his own house and sits near the back-room.

Two sounding-boards and some beating sticks are brought in and a number of Sakaciar range themselves in a double row under the leadership of a shaman to beat time ready to cure X. Four times the ritual is repeated, amid the droning of the women, and as the leader concludes with the short double jump, the sticks strike the floor with an ear-splitting crash. X now takes one of the sticks and starts to beat time for his own song, but almost immediately goes off into a wild beating like that of a maniac. Everyone cries out heip, which ultimately soothes him. Once more he takes the stick and essays to beat time, but as before goes into a frenzy, and throws it away. The singers have been listening carefully, as if striving to learn

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[The Cannibal Dance]

forth, followed by a number of kukusiut who remain constantly in attendance on him. 575* 796*

X enters the lowest house and sits down near the door, too heavy, with the weight of the crystals, to proceed further. He growls persistently, while the kukusiut women present drone monotonously, and those who have accompanied him utter their cry of hoip. These measures at last persuade the Cannibal to move, but only to the next house, where the same procedure is repeated, and so for each in the village. The uninitiated peer curiously and fearfully from their bedrooms, but would never dream of joining in the cry of hoip. If X should be asleep or otherwise engaged when the voices are heard, some of his assistants awaken him and send him forth. The arrival of strangers also excites X. One of his followers tells him of their coming and when a canoe reaches the river, he runs down into the water and bites as many of the newcomers as he desires. The herald, watching the approach of the strangers and knowing what will happen, cries out to the uninitiated to conceal themselves prior to X's appearance. The guests proceed to the dwelling of their host, but that evening the Cannibal's father, or whoever acts for him, calls them to his house where he gives them presents to validate the biting. If foreigners have been expected, gifts are always saved for them from the previous distribution. The value of the present depends in part on the rank of the recipient, but more upon the feeling of like or dislike with which X's father regards him. A chief naturally receives more than a person of lower rank, although these donations are not returned. 575* 796* 431 [609] [554]

On the morning of the fifth day of X's retirement, some of the kukusiut collect chamber-pots and towards noon he is immersed in the river in the manner previously described. Then he goes through the village four times, on each round visiting every house. The uninitiated are told that the washing has caused his call to depart, and the whistle is heard no more.* 575* 796*

Towards dusk all the kukusiut assemble in X's house. He

*The dismissal of the call at this time may not be the correct procedure.

D. McDowell, E-5 (1932-1934) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

575
196

takes one of the beating sticks and starts as if he were going to act as leader of his own orchestra. As before, however, he becomes frenzied and goes off into a wild spasm of beating, while all present call out hoip to soothe him. As no uninitiated are present, someone usually acts as a substitute for the Cannibal. A marshal now takes the stick away from X, or his substitute, and gives it to the proper leader, so that the song shall not be "lost" through the imbecility of X. The singers chant it over with everyone joining in. By this time it is evening and food is distributed, while marshals in turn give good advice. When the meal is ended the people adjourn.

Later on in the evening all the kukusiut are called back to X's house; when they have taken their places, the uninitiated are summoned and range themselves near the door. The musicians sing X's song, accompanied by the kukusiut, while X acts as if he were trying to dance but is forcibly restrained by his assistants, so that he can do no more than sway back and forth in their arms. The non-members, terrified lest he should escape and bite them, often withdraw before the completion of the song, and under no circumstances remain after it has been sung. The time has now come for X to eat, and a shaman is called upon to feed the recalcitrant Cannibal. The elaborate means previously described are tried, but without avail. X cries hoip, dashes outside with a few followers and proceeds, growling and baying, to every house in the village, effectively wakening and impressing the uninitiated, who have long been asleep. On his return to his own house, all the kukusiut help him to lie down by pressing downwards on his chest with cries of hoip and yulo, meaning, "All right." After some time X answers by saying yulo; he lies down, and the others leave.

X is now supposed to remain on his platform for four days, although actually he merely takes care not to be seen by any uninitiated. On the fifth morning a herald goes through the village calling out, Armlitsap X.

Towards evening he summons the kakasiut to the Cannibal's house. As before, X starts to beat time, but swiftly goes into a wild frenzy of pounding from which he is snatched by repeated cries of hoip. Then the singers take the stick from him and sing over a new song which they have composed for him; this being the fourth time that the kakasiut have assembled, it is X's fourth song, with the usual Cannibal theme. At dusk food is given, the marshals admonish their associates and the gathering breaks up.

575 *
796 *

Presently, as night is falling, the kakasiut return. When they have taken their places, they call the uninitiated, who enter, but remain standing near the door. X passes to and fro around the fire, not completing the circuit, but stopping and retracing his steps when he has passed as far as the upper, upstream, side of it. He assumes a threatening appearance, holding his arms stretched out to their full length, his fists clenched, while, as if to prevent him running amuck among the non-members, two kakasiut go constantly with him, one on either side, uttering the cry of hoip at intervals. At times these two guardians simulate an attempt to shove him into the back-room, but he always eludes them and continues around the fire. Meanwhile the singers, with the kakasiut, sing over X's songs; as each is finished the Cannibal's ferocity appears to rise within him so that he growls, and his guardians call out hoip at the back of his neck, accompanied by the emission of considerable saliva. This is repeated four times, after each of the songs. When these are finished the uninitiated are sent out and the kakasiut eat together while a marshal functions; then they too depart.

A number of kakasiut always remain with X to act as guardians; they replace one another at intervals without specific order, and there is no compulsion upon anyone to assume the task. When the kakasiut have departed, one of these attendants takes the leading part in forcing downwards from X his spiels, the muzzle-like power which binds his mouth against ordinary food. All the guardians crowd around X, [787] placing their hands against his mouth and neck and pressing downwards to the chest as if forcing some object from his chest, constantly uttering the cry of hoip. When the obstacle has been driven down, X is offered his first food, choice morsels of dried salmon. He eats some of this but bites a small piece from the spoon, and dons the same with the dish in which water is held to his lips. The assistance of a shaman is often required to feed the Cannibal.

The powers of, and restrictions upon, X for the remainder of the ceremonial season are identical with those already described. At the end of the period, however, the hahaiat assemble in X's house to rid him of his spirit which, it will be remembered, had been forced from his mouth down into his chest. By means of a violent repetition of hoip and pressing with the hands, this is extracted and cast into another hamat. As soon as the latter has received it, he acts as if he had become a Cannibal. Dashing out, he enters each house in turn, growling and calling out ewe, ewe, ewe, and at intervals ripping up the planking from the floor or pulling off boards from the wall. Then the substitute re-enters X's house, where the power is returned to X himself, who, this done, rushes to every dwelling and repeats the growling and destruction. Though the uninitiated realize that two different individuals have appeared as Cannibals, they are too awe-stricken to feel anything but wonder. When he gets back to his own house, X is surrounded by the hahaiat who call out hoip, in unison four times, while as many of them as can find places press upwards with their hands against his neck and throat to expel the spirit. This succeeds in sending back X's power to the mysterious regions above whence it came. While most of the hahaiat beat time vigorously, a number of them pull down the platform and cast it into the fire. They then have a meal, while a marshal gives weighty advice about the care that must be exercised during the coming year in guarding their sacred secrets from the uninitiated; whereupon they all disperse.

The chief contrasts between this rite and the one previously described for Kimsquit are the lack of the cannibalistic incubus and the presence of the spirit. It must be emphasized that there are differences of individual prerogative alone; many Kimsquit Cannibals perform with spirit, many Bella Coola with incubus.

Although every effort was used to obtain not only the general principles of the rite, but also confirmation of details, it must be remembered that many of these were omitted at the performances observed, so that reliance had to be placed upon the accounts of participants. It is probable that errors of omission have been committed in consequence; these may account for some of the discrepancies, but the more potent factors are undoubtedly lack of uniformity in individual prerogatives, and failure to enforce absolute rigidity in ritual. The two accounts just given by no means illustrate all the variations possible in this dance; others will become evident in descriptions of the rites of Cannibals other than those who can bite the living.

The following is an account of the ritual of a Dog-eating Cannibal, Olnáx i, of Sinaf. Long, long ago one of the ancestors of this man saw a pack of wolves devouring some dogs. In some mysterious way, which even the Bella Coola do not profess to be able to understand, the power of a wolf entered the beholder so that he was impelled to eat dogs. He was then carried away to the mysterious land above where he saw and was assisted by several supernatural beings. The first Olnáx i was able to transmit to one of his relatives his ability to eat dogs, and the prerogative has since been carried out by his descendants. Should the holder of the name fail to tell his destined heir the details of the experiences which are to be embodied in his songs, his successor can obtain these from the singers who, of course, are familiar with the themes used on previous occasions. The repository of the name, Olnáx i, is beneath a huge boulder not far from some carved rocks behind the village of Sinaf (see Plate 6).[1] It is said that many years ago some reckless uninitiated placed poles as levers beneath

[1] [See category 116, p. 84 (F) – ANALYST]

R: McIlwraith K-9 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

the rock and endeavoured to pry it over, but were driven away in fear by the sound of the snarling of wolves which came forth from beneath. It will be convenient to refer to Olnên i as X.

After the customary consultation with the marshals, it is decided that the call shall come to X on the morning after the nakuiam of some other kusiut. Soon after dawn he begins to growl and stands up naked; the call has come to him. He acts as if dazed, tries to talk, but the words seem to choke in his mouth. The uninitiated are expelled from the house and a herald goes out, crying through the village:

"X has been smitten with the power of eating dog."

One is killed and handed to X; he pretends to eat, but actually gives the body to an assistant who disposes of it in some hidden spot. As X takes the animal, a herald shouts:

"X has eaten a dog."

During the day he leaves his house at intervals and parades through the village, accompanied by a crowd of kukusiut; his arms are half-folded as if holding a burden which is supposed to be a dog. As he does so, the herald goes from house to house saying:

"The Cannibal has eaten a dog," and "The Cannibal has eaten another dog."

Late in the afternoon the kukusiut are called to X's house in order to tie him up and so prevent his escape to the land above. A bear-skin robe is thrown over his body, a rope is bound about him and weighted with sticks, but he frees himself and disappears from sight while members of the society shout hoip four times and an accomplice whistles with varying pitch from a near-by mountain.[60] The uninitiated, listening from adjacent houses, are filled with awe and wonder.

The kukusiut gather once more in X's house where the rope from which he has escaped is hung on the wall. Marshal after marshal impresses on them the solemnity of the occasion and the dangers to which X is exposed, while some of his female relatives weep to further the deception. It is late at night before they finally disperse. 575* 196*

[60] In these later accounts of the Cannibal dance, details previously described are omitted. It is unnecessary, for example, to repeat the manner in which X breaks from his bonds and the rites entailed thereby.

Like other Cannibals, X is now concealed for an indeterminate period of time, during which the uninitiated believe him to be in the land above. It is needless to repeat the details of this part of the rite, nor allude to the chaving of X when about to return. Sometimes the mystery is increased by sending a young kwiat to the mountains with a whistle which he sounds at dawn to prove that X is far aloft. When the time comes for his return, the process of catching him is identical with that already described, except that a dog is used for bait instead of a human being. After the capture, the kwiatiat drag X, struggling violently, to his house, where a dead dog has been left near the doorway. The Cannibal seizes it and pretends to eat, while a herald announces in every house what he is doing. Accompanied by a number of kwiatiat, X goes through the village carrying the carcass in his arms, and carefully shielding his eyes to further the belief, circulated among the uninitiated, that if he should open them, anyone on whom his gaze fell would die. After some of the houses have been visited, the dog is passed to an assistant who conceals it, but those who are not members of the society, having seen him tear chunks from the body and apparently put them in his mouth, naturally assume that the Cannibal has devoured it. This procedure is repeated at intervals throughout the day, and always the herald announces how many dogs X has eaten. The bodies of the animals are weighted with stones and sunk in the ocean at night.

About 4 P.M. X is given a black bear-skin to which the carpenters have attached the head of his cannibalistic incubus, a wolf, in such a way that it hangs beneath his left arm-pit. [787] Considerable ingenuity is displayed in the manufacture of this. The skin of the head is carefully removed, the bones are cleaned, replaced, and gummed together, and a hidden string enables the wearer to make the animal's jaws clash. With his

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575
x 796
787

usual escort, X goes to every house in the village; with one hand he shields his eyes, with the other he pulls away pieces of dog flesh, some of which he pretends to eat, while others he thrusts into the wolf's jaws. As he enters, his associates shriek and the women drone. The Cannibal does not circle the fire in each house, merely steps within the doorway and then withdraws, making the round of the village four times. Curiosity impels the uninitiated to peer forth from their bedrooms, and the bloody spectacle increases their fear.

X then returns to his own house where an elaborate structure of rising tiers of steps has been built between the fire and the back-room. The kukusiut take their places on this, while X kneels immediately in front, on the left* side. A kusiut brings from the back-room a cedar box with an upright row of eagle feathers around the upper edge; immediately below there is a ribbon-like girdle of dyed cedar-bark, and below that a similar band of undyed bark. He carries the receptacle around the fire, revolving sunwise on himself four times, and sets it down before X. The box contains hot stones and alder dye, but the uninitiated, who have been allowed to crowd within the doorway, do not know this, nor are they aware that a carpenter is concealed behind X to manipulate the head. This accomplice thrusts pieces of meat through the wolf's mouth from the rear so that they fall into the box, as if the animal were vomiting. At the same time he causes the tongue, that of one of the slaughtered dogs, to go in and out, and X pulls the cord so that the jaws clash together. Steam rises from the box as the meat strikes the heated stones as if it were food warm from the stomach, and clever management makes the scene strikingly realistic. The belief is that the dog flesh eaten by X has passed into the wolf and is now being ejected. When enough has been vomited to give countenance to an assumption that all the animals devoured have been voided, the carpenter pulls the head from sight, as if it had suddenly vanished. The kukusiut cry out four times, and someone throws eagle

*As one looks towards.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

down on the fire; these two actions have the effect of "Making smooth the path of the wolf to the place whence it came."

X, now freed from the malignant influence, rushes out, and a number of kukuxiut accompany him to every house, calling out in effect:

"I have lost my power."

When X returns, he takes a stick and pretends to endeavour to beat out the time of his own song describing his experiences in the land above. Madness overcomes him, however, and he begins to pound rapidly and aimlessly, requiring to be soothed by cries of hoip. The singers ultimately chant forth a song supposedly taught them by the Cannibal, but the details of this subterfuge have already been described. Crystals are sometimes thrust into him at this juncture, or the rite may be deferred until the following night. When thus weighted, X retires to his raised platform behind the fire.

The Cannibal remains on this for four days. If necessary for him to leave the house, an accomplice first clears away all uninitiated persons from the vicinity. If, however, X hears the snarling or barking of dogs, he becomes excited and rushes forth. Consequently, the kukuxiut at intervals bring several animals near to his house and beat them until they yowl. The Cannibal becomes excited, howls like a wolf, rushes out, and, with a few kukuxiut in attendance, dashes into the lowest house of the village. But the crystals have made him heavy; he can only sit on his heels near the door and gnaw his fingers. The kukuxiut hoip at him repeatedly, until he is sufficiently pacified to rise and walk out. Then he howls again and runs into the next house, where the same procedure is repeated; every dwelling in the village is visited in this way, X finally returning to the platform in his home. During the four days he repeats this performance whenever he hears the yelping of dogs, whether natural or instigated by his fellows.

On the fifth morning, two kukuxiut gather chamber-vessels. Later in the day the crystals are extracted and water thrown

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

#575 #996 787 over him,* followed by the usual immersion in the river. X goes to every house, then returns to his own where another song, describing his experiences aloft, is rehearsed. In the evening the kukuxiut assemble once more and tie on X a long, tail-like appendage of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. Then a shaman gives him food, and at once he runs to the lowest house in the village. He enters the doorway and calls out:

"I can smell."

This announcement is repeated in every house, signifying that the Cannibal can again appreciate ordinary food.

X spends four more days on his platform, leaving it only when infuriated by the snarling of dogs. On the fourth evening the kukuxiut assemble once more to learn a song of the usual Cannibal type, and to listen to admonitions from the marshals.

For four days longer X is secluded on his platform. In the evening the kukuxiut gather to practise another song, but this time X dances, while the uninitiated watch with fear and wonder from the doorway. After their departure, X's spiuk is [424] extracted. In this particular dance, its removal is the prerogative of a certain kuxiut who presses his hands along the Cannibal's collar-bone, forcing the malignant muzzle-like power upward and outward. Sometimes his first meal is delayed until this has been done.

#575 #996 This concludes X's dance, though he must obey the same restrictions as other Cannibals for the rest of the ceremonial season and, if he is a novice, for the following summer as well.

[424] Other Cannibals have the prerogative of eating raw salmon. Since these are unobtainable during the winter, carpenters construct imitations consisting of skins of trout stretched over wooden frames filled with the flesh of deer, dogs, or trout. The resemblance is increased by a mechanical device which wiggles the tail. The Cannibal rips these apart with his teeth so that the uninitiated see the meat inside, and readily assume that they are real salmon, while their wonder is increased in view of the difficulty, or impossibility, of obtaining fresh fish in mid-winter.

*This cripples his call.

[The Cannibal Dance]

The most feared of all Cannibals are those who have the unusual prerogative of eating corpses. At present (1922), there is only one man with this right, whereas at least seven can bite the living. His prerogative was recently obtained from the people of Rivers' Inlet, although the ritualistic devouring of corpses was well known to the Bella Coola in former days. All informants agreed, however, that the actual eating of a body was practically unknown.* Even when one was provided and the Cannibal dragged it from house to house, accompanied by an escort of kukwiat, though he sank his teeth into the flesh and pulled forth morsels of the carcass, he invariably disposed of them as soon as he was out of sight of the uninitiated, as in the case of the dog. Of course, blood and small pieces of flesh must have been swallowed inadvertently, but the rite was always essentially ritualistic, not real. More often, the "corpse" consisted of a wooden frame-work, shaped like a human body, and covered with the scraped skins of deer or dogs. The interior was filled with the flesh of an animal, and the whole buried in the graveyard until the meat had become foul. The uninitiated, from a distance, watched the exhuming of this object and concluded that it really was a long-buried body. Fear prevented them from making a close inspection, so that the defects of the imitation were not apparent. The frames were kept hidden from year to year; an inquisitive non-member who chanced to stumble upon one would have to be initiated or die.

On account of the long time that has elapsed since a complete corpse-eating Cannibal dance was carried out, it was found impossible to obtain a detailed account of the ritual. This deficiency is unimportant since all informants agreed that it closely resembled other Cannibal dances.

Like other Cannibals, one who has the prerogative of eating dead human flesh can perform as often as he desires, subject only to the approval of the marshals, who have no hesitation

*Apart from this ceremonial eating, no trace of cannibalism was found among the Bella Coola.

[The Cannibal Dance]

787 in banning the rite if they do not think the dancer will be able to carry it out properly. When the call comes, the uninitiated are at once expelled from the Cannibal's house; later he rushes to the graveyard and exhumes one of the meat-filled frames previously buried. Non-members watch with horror as he sinks his teeth in the "flesh." Closely guarded, he is then taken to every house where, if they are bold, the uninitiated peer forth from their bedrooms and watch his performance. He carries part of the corpse in his arms and periodically sinks his teeth in the repulsive mass. As usual, apparent attempts are made to tie him to this earth, but in spite of them he escapes to the upper regions where he remains for an unusually long period. Great efforts are made to reduce him to a state of emaciation, for which purpose he drinks large amounts of water in which cedar-wood has been boiled. When the Cannibal ultimately returns to earth, the cannibalistic incubus is expelled and he at length becomes normal. When dancing, a corpse-eater constantly bends both hands towards the floor in front of him and upwards, as though raising some heavy object towards his face. Then his head sinks towards this, only to be thrown quickly upwards and to one side, with a wild expression in his eyes. The uninitiated are told that this represents the manner in which he lifts a corpse towards his mouth and bites, only to be revolted by its putrescence. He has, they hear, no actual liking for human flesh, but his incubus fills him with an irresistible craving for it. Frequently he wears on his blanket wooden representations of skulls (see Plate 71), symbolic of the corpses devoured.

575 Rarely, a corpse-eating Cannibal kills a slave and pretends to devour his body as a means of impressing the uninitiated,[1] but usually this is done only under the driving force of revenge or jealousy. If a man hears that a near relative, slave of a foreign tribe, has been killed, he often determines to wipe out blood with blood. He consults a corpse-eating Cannibal, and

[1] Eating of corpses has long ceased among the Bella Coola; the present tense is used merely for convenience.

[1] [see category 116, p 164(A) - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

if the latter agrees to undertake the commission, he must next obtain a slave, a matter of no difficulty if he is at all wealthy. An effort is made to find a victim from the tribe that has committed the murder, though any alien will suffice. The details are worked out with great care so that the slave is sent to the river for water, or on some other errand at the time the call comes to the Cannibal. A shout is raised, and the uninitiated hurriedly run out of the house, followed by the dancer and a body of athletic kukusiut, who pounce on the unsuspecting foreigner. The Cannibal cuts his throat, and the corpse is carried back to his house, where all members of the society are assembling. Part of the body is cut off, then the kukusiut accompany the Cannibal to every house of the village. He carries the mutilated remains, and the uninitiated readily believe that he has devoured the missing portion. The corpse is later dismembered and the bloody pieces displayed, convincing proof of the gruesome meal. It is needless to say that they are carefully buried where there is no danger that they will be found. The rite then proceeds in the usual manner. 575* 796* 567 648

If two biting Cannibals, or their parents, quarrel, they may be shamed into killing and "eating" a slave. Angry words lead to insults, insults to scorn at each other's prowess, until one of the Cannibals throws a stone at the feet of the other, an action which has the significance of: 575* 796* 567 578

"Eat that!"

Since a stone is always symbolic of a slave, the Cannibal so taunted knows what is expected. If he accepts the challenge, he throws a stone at his adversary's feet, bidding him do likewise. The one challenged soon receives a call and kills a slave in the manner previously described; his rival must do the same unless he is willing to admit himself outdone. The occasional killing of a slave under such circumstances does not give to either the right of doing so habitually. Of course the challenged individual is not bound to accept, but if he declines the "dare," he sinks in popular estimation. This [558]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 type of rivalry can be carried out only during the ceremonial 796 season.

567 After killing and eating a human being, a Cannibal must 578 conceal himself for a considerable period, sometimes as long as four years. The uninitiated are told that the great power within him has taken him so far into the upper regions that one or more years must elapse before his return. During this time he can be seen only by kukusiut. The writer was told of one unfortunate corpse-eating Cannibal, Xekalus, who was virtually secluded for eight years, since a stone was cast at his feet every time he reappeared, thus forcing him to kill and eat.
123 This name had been dormant for a number of years until conferred on the writer, who failed to uphold the prerogative.

575 One other type of Cannibal prerogative remains to be 796 described, namely, that of biting oneself. This is even less 424 common than that of corpse-eating, being enjoyed only by two 773 individuals, Qelliaohmq of Stuax and Smmq of the Kimsquit 539 River. The following account of the origin of the latter's prerogative was obtained:

> Many years ago, soon after the first people came to this world, the ritual of the kusiut dances was much more exacting than it is at present. At that time the inhabitants of the earth were still endowed with such semi-supernatural powers that they were able to perform rites that people of the present day can represent only with the aid of carpenters' devices. There was then living in one of the villages on the Kimsquit River a certain Smmq who had the prerogative of biting himself. He once went hunting on one of the mountains, and when he failed to return the people were convinced that he had eaten so heartily of his own flesh that he had died. Although search was made for his body, it was not until the following year that a professional hunter found the skeleton. From the position of the bones it was judged that their conclusion was correct: he had killed himself by eating too much of his own flesh. The chiefs and other influential kukusiût held a meeting at which it was decided that henceforth kusiut dances would only be acted, not carried out in reality. The following winter the name and prerogative were transmitted to the son of the dead man, who bit himself, but not sufficiently deeply to cause serious injury.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In the course of generations, Smnuq has combined with his self-anthropophagic prerogative that of eating dogs. As already mentioned, such a merging of rights, obtained from different ancestors, is by no means uncommon. The following account of the manner in which he carries out (or carried out, for the dance has not been performed for a number of years) his rite was obtained from one of the Kimsquit marshals. Many details are omitted which have been fully described in former Cannibal dances. It will be convenient to refer to Smnuq as X.

As with other Cannibals, when the call comes to X he begins to cry out and the uninitiated are expelled from his house, but not before they have seen him sink his teeth into his own arm, and apparently inflict a serious wound. In reality the Cannibal usually cuts himself in anticipation, so that the application of his teeth merely serves to reopen the incision and cause the blood to flow freely. Dogs are given to X, as to other dog-eating Cannibals, and he is escorted to every house, so that the uninitiated may stare with awe upon his blood-stained body and dripping jaws. Later, when he and the kukusiut have returned to the Cannibal's home, a herald goes to every house, announcing that his fellows are going to fasten X. The rope used in this particular rite is long and thin, with a small loop in the centre for his neck. It is forced upon X with the usual struggling, and again the herald makes his round, announcing:

"We are measuring his arms for cords of dyed and undyed cedar-bark."

These too are placed upon him, and the kukusiut march X, pinioned, to every house, while he growls and gives every indication of being half mad with anger at his bonds. He is taken back to his own house and at intervals throughout the day a herald informs all in the village of the number of dogs he has eaten, and of the number of wounds he has inflicted upon himself.

That night X eludes his captors and is carried away to the #595 #796 realm above. The method of escape and the rites that occur during his absence do not differ from those previously described for other Cannibals, and the means taken to capture him on his return are likewise similar. But soon after dusk a rite occurs which has not been previously recorded. The [416] [824] kukusiut assemble on the sidewalk outside X's house, each carrying a torch made of resinous wood, liberally smeared with gum and rendered more inflammable with frayed cedar-bark. X himself, well guarded, is escorted to the middle of the group, while a herald calls out that he is going to make what he has consumed fly upward. In his arms he carries what appears to the uninitiated, watching from a distance, to be a dead dog; in reality, it is a dog skin, stuffed with eagle down. Four times he turns around, uttering his cry of xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, while his men call out i .... and the women drone. Then, in some way, the down-filled dog-skin is thrown upwards and disappears. One informant had seen this done in his youth, but was unaware of the method employed. The group then disperses and X is taken back to his own house.

About midnight a herald goes to every house, summoning the kukusiut, and especially the singers, to X's. They practise a new song for the Cannibal, and towards dawn it is sung as the "running song" previously described, accompanied by the weird xwa·, xwa·, xwa·. At day-break, a kusiut, chosen for the purpose because he is a fleet runner, pounds at the door of every house, and calls out:

"Come to eat dried salmon," and dashes on to the next.

Thus invited, the kukusiut duly assemble in X's house for a meal.

For four days X remains concealed on his platform, except when, aroused to fury, he makes a tour of the village; and except when making his nightly circuit, during which the frightened uninitiated cover their heads with blankets, fearing that he will smell their breath and devour them. On the fourth day X is carried to the river and washed, in spite of his struggles. While this is taking place a number of kukusiut visit

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

[The Cannibal Dance]

each house in succession, borrowing filled chamber vessels. 575* Five or six men are waiting for X with these, and as he enters 796* his house, they pour urine over him. Thus restored to partial sanity, he cries out in a different tone of voice, and at once visits every house. The ẖaẖaxiut are still with him, but need not guard him as closely since he is now less liable to frenzy. The uninitiated are greatly relieved at this removal of peril from among them. Later in the day ẖaẖaxiut go to the different houses, asking for choice salmon-grease with which the Cannibal will later be fed. The giving of the first food to X, the later sending aloft of his call, and the restrictions which he observes for the rest of the winter do not differ from those described for other Cannibals.

Snung's patron is a snung of the Mountain which became [996] petrified in the beginning of time. At his repository there is a [998] spring beneath a large boulder. Uninitiated persons passing the spot are often terrified by hearing the growling of a Cannibal from beneath the stone. It is in this place that persons [957] suffering from virulent skin disease are washed by X, as described in a previous chapter.

Few particulars could be learnt of the rite as carried out by Sqlliaolmy, though it is said to resemble the one just described in every respect. The prerogative was obtained in a vision of [424] one of the Cannibal's early ancestors, who located the repository of the name beneath a large, flat stone, directly in the [787] old trail up the valley. When anyone treads on it, reverberation is heard. The writer was a spectator when the present [998] 575* Sqlliaolmy gave his dance in January, 1924, but the rite was 796* performed in such a perfunctory manner that little could be 198 learnt from it. The Cannibal wore two bands of dyed cedar-bark on his left forearm, under one of which was a container of red paint. Uttering his cry of xwa, xwa, xwa, and looking around with a wild air, he frequently buried his face in his arm, between the bands. The red paint made a realistic representation of blood, especially as it dropped with red smudges on the floor. On this occasion, the dancer appeared

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 in a flesh-coloured bathing-suit, imitating the nakedness of *796 earlier years. The writer was talking to one of the marshals, 178 a very old man, and remarked how different the present rites must appear to him.

"Yes," replied the old man. "But after all, the change is not so great. In former years we imitated what the supernatural beings did, now we imitate what our fathers did."

Many ethnologists, acquainted with the elaborate rituals carried out on the coast early in this century, have expressed surprise at the rapidity with which these have dwindled to mere shadows. The writer believes that one factor for the Bella Coola decline in ritual, is the realization that the rites are imitative, and that accordingly their significance need not be lost when further imitation is added.

*575 Further research would undoubtedly have added particu-
*796 lars of the manner in which other Cannibals carried out their rites, but to obtain the full details of all would have been detrimental to other types of investigation; it is believed that the above descriptions are typical. Before passing to other dances, a few general remarks on the Cannibal ritual may prove useful.

*575 In view of the arduous character of the dance, and the *796 necessity for impressing the uninitiated with the great power 424 of the Cannibals, the marshals usually prohibit a man from [562] acting unless he is physically strong. Rarely, however, a woman is allowed to be a Cannibal if she has the necessary prerogative, but usually only if she is the last survivor of her family. In such cases the shorter rite is the more common.

[538] As before stated, kusiut origin myths are supposed to be [173] remembered, but in practice few kukusiut know the history of their prerogatives. The process of forgetting has undoubtedly increased in the last few years, but the writer feels confident that they were never maintained with the same care as origin myths connected with the first people.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

000
575 *
796 *
424
539

myths connected with the first people. The following tale explains the reputed genesis of the biting prerogative embodied in the name Nunuqwalaiuts.

Many years ago, a number of lads were playing near the village of Snulle·tl when they were alarmed by the howling of a wolf and ran back to their homes. Next day the sound was repeated, and again they discontinued their play in fear. The third day the same thing happened, while on the fourth the boys not only heard the howling, but saw an enormous white wolf on the mountain above them. Fascinated, they forgot to flee, even when the animal drew near with phenomenal rapidity. It rushed up to a lad named Nunuqwalaiuts, and vanished. At once he became mad and ran to and fro, biting people; the beast had entered into him, and he had become a Cannibal.

His frightened comrades attempted to restrain and confine the lad, but they could not prevent him from escaping at times and biting people. That night he vanished from their sight, though they knew he had gone aloft because they heard his growling as he ascended. For two months he was absent, then suddenly reappeared among them, even wilder and hungrier than before, while his whole appearance had altered owing to the loss of his hair and emaciation. Again the people endeavoured to restrain him, but Nunuqwalaiuts had demoniac strength and could not be tied down. That evening a shaman was called upon, and he used the frenzied beating of sticks in hopes of curing the lunatic, for such he appeared to be. To the amazement of all, in this way he succeeded in expelling the head of a wolf, the cause of Nunuqwalaiuts's anthropophagous tendencies. Thus restored to sanity, he told of what he had seen in the land above, whither he had been carried.[41] Some time after the return of Nunuqwalaiuts it was discovered that the repository of his name was behind a waterfall near Snulle·tl.

Another myth explains the origin of the dog-eating prerogative embodied in the name Hai·alakila. Long, long ago, soon after the first people had reached this earth, a chief of that name lived in Bella Coola. One day his slave, Qalsmus, set out to hunt ducks which were resting on a small pond near the base of the mountains on the south shore of the Bella Coola River, not far from its mouth. Before reaching his destination he heard many people beating time with sticks and, judging that the noise could not have been caused by mortals, returned to tell his master. Hai·alakila at once set off for the spot, taking his slave with [41] Since that time the kukusint have imitated this rite with the assistance of skilled carpenters, and have been able to deceive the uninitiated.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 him as guide. Both heard the beating, and soon saw a pack of super-
* 796 natural wolves eating dog-flesh. The men were able to steal away with-424 out being observed and Hai-alakila told Ṣ̄ālmas to say nothing about 539 what they had seen. A little later he gave a dance in which he wore a wolf's mask and pretended to eat dog-flesh. His neighbours, ignorant of the vision by which this dance had been inspired, were tremendously impressed.

Another exploit of Hai-alakila and Ṣ̄ālmas may here be recorded, although it is unconnected with the Cannibal dance.

One night when they were spearing fish, a forest suddenly arose before them. Ṣ̄ālmas, startled and terrified, began to cry, but Hai-alakila quieted him.

"I am master here," he said. "We are in this adventure together and your task is to keep quiet."

Then a house appeared before them from the depths of the ocean. It was really a sp̄ūmtsk, with its ferocious mouth as doorway, and though Hai-alakila naturally feared to enter, he climbed to the roof, so that he could gaze within through what corresponded to a smoke-vent. The house was filled with valuables of all kinds, guarded only by gulls. Hai-alakila reached inside with his pole, hooked forth one object after another and swung each across to his slave on the mainland to hide in a tree. Unfortunately, a canoe happened to draw near, whereupon the house slowly sank back into the depths.

* 575 Mention might here be made of a Stunx repository, said to 778 be unique in Bella Coola, that contains five Cannibal names.
551 It is in the form of a human being with a tail, kneeling and bent forward so that hands and head touch the ground. A repository is at each point of contact. The names are:

Ṣ̄itlia, the head of the creature; Ānuximān-a, the left hand; Sinuximātl, the right hand; Ālximān-a, the left foot; Xuximān-a, the right foot; Ālquntām, the tail.

In this repository there lives a mātsqus with a copper lining to its mouth.

* 575 It will be seen that these myths help but little to explain
* 796 the kusiut society, or even the origin of the Cannibal dances; 424 they appear to be only rationalizations attempting to account
539 for established customs. For this reason they have been inserted after a description of the Cannibal dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Several Bella Coola were questioned concerning the Cannibal spirit which Boas has described for the Kwakiutl. Some had never heard of such a creature, others had vague knowledge concerning it, and two men were able to give it a name. The one called it Bāxbāxqwanālociwa, the other Bāxbāxqwaiwa. All informants agreed that this creature was not a part of the Cannibal rites of Bella Coola and one man suggested that the cannibalistic incubus rendered it unnecessary. The Bella Coola believe that this Cannibal spirit is used in Bella Bella. During 1923 there came to Bella Coola an old Kimsquit Indian who had left his home many years ago and had since been living at Smith Inlet(?). With him came his son, a grown man, who had inherited from his mother a Kwakiutl Cannibal prerogative which he displayed in the winter of 1923-4. After the dancer had, theoretically, returned from the regions above, a large masked figure representing Bāxbāxqwaiwa entered through the front-door. As the singers beat time, it hopped to and fro, up and down, with snapping beak. The Bella Coola were intensely interested, and one had only to listen to their remarks when wondering what it might be, to be convinced that the Cannibal spirit is a strange concept to them. The most frequent hypothesis was that it was a kaokao, since the masked figure did resemble this supernatural bird. The Bella Coola greatly admired the dance, and were by no means ashamed to confess their inferiority as dancers to the Kwakiutl. After the disappearance of the masked figure, the singers sang the Cannibal's song and he danced in normal fashion, which was commented upon as another difference in custom.

575* 796* 776 [171] [171] [428] [424] [186] [171]

THE SCRATCH DANCE

Only less awe-inspiring than the Cannibal dance is the Scratch dance. Those kukusiut who have this prerogative are able to scratch the bodies of their fellows, so that long, bloody weals result. The privileges and restrictions of Scratchers are closely akin to those of Cannibals, as the following points show:

575* 424 [996]*

[The Scratch Dance]

* 575 They do not blacken their faces on receipt of a call as do 424 most kukusiut.

[302] The theme of their songs is of the land above, instead solely [787] of their patrons.

[533] On visiting a house where a qatlem or nuhusam is taking place they sit with the Cannibals in one of the back corners; this group is given food before any of the other guests.

They do not exercise their prerogative on fellow-Scratchers, Cannibals, or Breakers.

[787] They are liable to frenzy both when the call is upon them and after its departure. In such cases they run forth, apparently guarded and restrained by other kukusiut, and rush into every house to frighten the uninitiated.

They must recompense those whom they have scratched.

[578] They act as peace-makers among the kukusiut, since the necessity of accompanying a Scratcher who pretends to be frenzied overrules all petty causes of strife.

[554] Though any definite concept of graded rank in the kusiut society is quite foreign to the Bella Coola, it is generally felt that Scratchers and Breakers are only slightly less important than Cannibals. The patron of every Scratcher is Swo'oleulx Alqunám, one of the sons of Alqunám; this supernatural being [776] scratches the supernatural ones in the land above, and his father alone can restrain him. The prerogative is fairly common, and it is probable that in early days there was at least one Scratcher in every village.

* 575 The following account of the ritual was obtained from one
* 796 of the Bella Coola marshals and describes the manner in which the dance should have been performed by the Scratcher, [424] Alaxkmaix, his daughter's daughter's son, who had recently obtained the prerogative formerly possessed by his deceased mother's father. It will be convenient to refer to Alaxkmaix as X and use the present tense in recording the proper ritual, though it was largely omitted on the last occasion the dance was given.

X arranges a suitable day with the marshals for receiving

[i.e. - the Scratchers - ANALYST]

[The Scratch Dance]

his call, and when this has been settled, he informs those kukusiut whom he plans to honour by scratching. Since each will have to be recompensed for allowing X to display his prerogative, their number depends on X's wealth. Early in the morning of the day chosen, which is always immediately after the nebusam of some other kusiut, the call comes, and X gives a low hoot. At once he starts wildly rushing around and scratching, so that the uninitiated are only too willing to flee from his terrifying presence. Throughout the day X is escorted by a number of kukusiut to every house, where he rages around the fire, throwing his arms to and fro in an infuriated manner, sometimes scratching one of his fellows, but more often merely acting as if he desired to do so. The uninitiated hide within the bedrooms, greatly impressed by what they see if they dare to look forth. 575* 796* [424]

Towards evening the kukusiut are summoned to X's house, where a dramatic representation, into which the members fully enter, is made of binding him as if he were a wild animal or a lunatic. A rope is stretched around the fire, held by the kukusiut, with X inside. He pretends to be trying to escape, while the rope-holders bend down and move around to hold him within their bonds. Meanwhile a shaman, or some senior kusiut, leads a frenzied beating of sticks which is four times repeated, to cure the madness. A kusiut then grasps the Scratcher's face and moves his mouth four times, to make sure that his jaws can move properly; the meaning of this is unknown. X now takes one of the beating-sticks and sits down among the singers as if about to teach them both tune and words of a song describing his knowledge of the land above, derived from his call. For a few moments he beats sanely, and appears to speak in a rational manner, but soon he goes off in a wild frenzy of senseless pounding. Hoip, hoip, cry the kukusiut to soothe him. After this has been several times repeated, the singers announce that they have learnt X's song, though of course, they have composed one themselves in readiness for the occasion. They now sing it; the audience listens, [757] [533]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Scratch Dance]

*575 and the heralds keep telling all to be attentive. The chorus
*796 for every Scratcher's song consists of the supposedly meaning-[533] less words, 'aii, 'aii, as if a child were crying. It is said that the [171] same refrain is used for Scratch dances by every coastal tribe. After this practice the singers chant forth X's song more loudly, the audience joins in, and he dances. The Scratch
*575 dance differs from all other kusiut ones in that there are no
*796 fixed movements, with the exception of keeping time to the 535 beating of sticks with the feet. The dancer sometimes bends down and forward, with arms closely pressed between his legs, or he bends back with arms thrown upwards; to and fro and back and forth he goes with high steps or short mincing ones, with hops or jumps, his arms waving like the arms of a windmill. The best Scratch dancer is the one who can put most action and originality into his movements. The weird effect is increased by moving the facial muscles to cause strange grimaces. Four kukusiut, two before and two behind, accompany
*575 X. At intervals he becomes excited and seizes his own hair
*796 as if in internal agony, whereupon his guardians press the back of his neck and call hoip to soothe him. His dance completed, he sits down, and no other performers follow him. The [431] presents provided by X and his relatives are then distributed, those scratched and the song makers being the chief recipients, although everyone receives something. Then there is the usual meal, accompanied by admonitions from the marshals, followed by X dancing once more to his song.

Unlike most kusiut ceremonials, this does not complete the night's rites. Accompanied by a number of kukusiut, X visits every house in the village, and dances around the fire with wildly waving arms while the whistle sounds eerily. Since the [535] musicians do not beat time, his dance is without rhythmic qualities, otherwise it follows the lack of pattern just described. When he is brought back to his own house, the frenzied beating of sticks is twice repeated to soothe him, and water is thrown over him. Thus pacified, X goes to sleep and the kukusiut quietly disperse.

[The Scratch Dance]

The ritual of the following day, nusiutälsap, is of the regular kusiut type, so requires only a brief description. A second song is composed, wood for seven masks collected, and the platform is built. As soon as X has returned with the wood-gatherers, he again visits every house, frightening the uninitiated by his wild appearance as he circles the fire, but without scratching anyone. In the evening the kukusiut meet in his house to share in the allotment of work for the mask-making and to practise the songs. The following masks are made: 575* 796* [592]

Älquntäm;
Sno'olxälts Älquntäm, displayed as an ugly-mouthed monster;
Four Holders, similar to those who restrain a Cannibal; Ano'likwolsaix.

After the usual meal the gathering breaks up.

On the next day, qoihm, X is still so frenzied that at intervals he visits the various houses with his escort and frightens the uninitiated. After some time these visits cease, though the uninitiated do not know that X has been pacified by seeing the completed mask of Sno'olxälts Älquntäm. The kusiut to whom the manufacture of this has been entrusted hurries his work in order that X may be quieted as soon as possible. In the evening the usual qoihm rites take place, the kukusiut being often invited before the uninitiated to practise the many songs composed for different dancers; this is done especially near the conclusion of the dances. When the regular ceremonial commences, X is the first to dance, restrained by two couples of kukusiut, as if to prevent him from running amuck among the uninitiated. Afterwards the singers strike up the songs of the kukusiut who have already performed, and each dances. Sometimes, if the rite becomes too protracted, only one song for each is used. Then the uninitiated are sent away and the kukusiut eat together, followed by X dancing to one of his songs. Occasionally, two or three kukusiut are also called upon as part of the ceremony.

[The Scratch Dance]

*575 *796 On the following evening, nakusam, when the uninitiated have been called in, they see Alqantám standing in the centre of the space behind the fire, wearing a large mask and a blanket decorated with tufts of dyed cedar-bark. Ano'likwolxaix moves to and fro as she gives her customary explanations, which are echoed by the heralds. The masked representation of Sno'oluts Alqantám rushes back and forth behind the fire, waving his arms to and fro as if he had an uncontrollable impulse to scratch someone. The four masked Holders move with him, as if to restrain him from dashing among the uninitiated.

"See!" says Ano'likwolxaix. "That is what they do in the land above."

After gazing upon these wonders for some time, the uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut perform a dramatic act. As many as possible crowd around Sno'oluts Alqantám, pressing with their hands against the back of his neck, the seat of [826] the spirit, calling hoip, in an effort to soothe him. This is done four times, without avail; he remains as wild as ever. Then one of the marshals removes the mask, and the same methods are used to try to soothe the wearer. But still they are of no avail. The mask is replaced, and Sno'oluts Alqantám rushes forth, with the four Holders in close attendance, and followed by a large number of kukusiut. Starting at the lowest house, he enters each in turn, dashing around the fire and startling the uninitiated in the same manner that X had done, but not actually scratching anyone. Non-members cower in terror at this invasion of their houses by a supernatural being. On the return to X's home, Sno'oluts Alqantám is pacified by the frenzied beating of sticks. The masks [532] are burnt in due course, after which the kukusiut assemble on the sidewalk outside X's house to sing one of his songs and thus further the return of his call to the land above. Sometimes X himself wears the mask of Sno'oluts Alqantám, more [834] often it is entrusted to another kusiut, but the wearer must obey one prohibition; he must not sleep with his wife for four days. 575* 796*

[The Scratch Dance]

Like a Cannibal, X is liable to frenzy for the rest of the ceremonial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated willingly avoid him, believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every kusiut dance, where his latent madness helps to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kimsquit or Tál ío visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and scratches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be pacified in the same manner. A Scratcher always saves goods to recompense scratched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period excites him to frenzy and he scratches them, irrespective of the time of year. [834] [828]

It might be mentioned that some Scratcher names are indicative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cause of Fear," have reference to his prowess. [551]

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the fear which kusiut dances cause the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances. Kukusiut with these three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Scratch and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share with Cannibals and Scratchers the prerogatives of not blackening their faces; of having as theme for their songs the land 575* 796* 424 [781] [554] [302] [533] [264]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Breaker Dance]

*575 *796 [424] [533] [264] above; of sitting in one of the back corners and receiving the first food at ritual meals; of paying those on whom they exercise their prerogative, and of liability to frenzy on arrival of strangers. This last prerogative, if it may be so termed, lasts for the ceremonial season, and in the case of a novice, for the following summer as well. Moreover, Breakers do not destroy the goods of fellow-Breakers, Scratchers, or Cannibals.

*575 *796 424 539 In view of the similarity of this rite to those already described, no effort was made to collect full details. Different Breakers have minor variations in ritual, similar to those already illustrated. The following is an account of the manner in which the Breaker, Sgek of Snuhli, performed the rite a number of years ago. As on previous occasions, it will be convenient to use the present tense, and to refer to the dancer as X. Sgek gave the following account of the origin of his prerogative.

Long, long ago, soon after the first people had come to this earth, a marriage was about to take place in the village of Snalt-el. At that distant period the people were so powerful that they could themselves initiate kusiut dances, and the bridegroom determined to do so in honour of the event. He chose to imitate the actions of Sänälipmuhlit Älqunäm, one of Älqunäm's sons, whom he remembered having seen throwing stones in his father's house before he, the bridegroom, was sent down to this world.* When goods were piled up ready for distribution as marriage presents, the man began to hurl stones around; one of them ricochetted from a box, struck his bride and killed her. This unforeseen accident solved the question of his name, as by universal consent it was decided that he should be called, Sgek, "He of the Faulty Aim."

Since that time a law has been enforced that no Breaker may throw a rock except ceremonially during his dance, and the marshals punish one who disobeys this injunction. If a Breaker is in the forest with a number of kukusiut, it does not matter if he fails to uphold this tradition; the essential is that the uninitiated do not see him cast a stone, even at a yelping dog, the usual reason for doing so in Bella Coola. [231]

*575 *796 When X wishes to dance he must first obtain the consent of the marshals in the usual manner. He also arranges with kukusiut to have boxes and other wooden objects placed within

[776]

*This being is also called Nuhwunuqulum, "The Cherished One."

2(McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Breaker Dance]

the house to serve as targets, and stones as ammunition. As soon as the call comes, X cries out, begins to throw stones at these objects, and the uninitiated are at once expelled. X is usually led, closely guarded, to every house where he casts more rocks, and may break a number of utensils. Since it is well known that, under normal circumstances, he must never throw a stone, the uninitiated are convinced that he must indeed be animated by a strange power. This being kustāmem, the kakaxiat gather in X's house during the evening to learn and practise one, or sometimes two, songs for him. If X is a novice, the theme is of his ancestor and the accident which originated the dance; on later occasions it is of his patron and the land above. All Breakers do not have Sāwalīqumalāts Alqantām as patron; some have Swakilmāls, a supernatural being who causes wealth to curl up and come to him. The chorus is the same as for Scratchers, the meaningless words, 'aii, 'aii. It is said that this same refrain is used by the Breakers of all coastal tribes, so that their songs can be distinguished from those of Scratchers only by the words. With the food, presents are given to recompense those on whom X has displayed his prerogative, that is, those whose utensils have been broken. Sometimes canoes and other valuable objects are destroyed by Breakers, depending entirely on their desire to exhibit their right.

575* 796* [787] 575* 796* 533 575* 796* [431] [424]

Next morning, wuxutālap, X again becomes frenzied and rushes from house to house, destroying property. Of course this is later paid for, but the uninitiated have no idea that arrangements had been made for the boxes and other objects to be placed in suitable spots. During the day a number of kakaxiat are sent to collect wood for nine masks. When members of the society gather in the evening the songs are practised, and the making of the masks allotted. One of these is of Sāwalīqumalāts Alqantām, four are of Breakers in the land above,* four of supernatural beings who sing there for the supernatural Breakers, and one of the inevitable Ana'kūxu-tsaix.

575* 796* 532 424 796

*The relations of these Breakers to the patron is not clear.

A: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Breaker Dance]

*575 *796 [424] lsaix. X is one of the few kukusiut having the prerogative of using supernatural singers. The evening's ceremony concludes in the usual fashion.

Until the departure of his call, X is liable to fits of frenzy so that on both qotlm and nuluxam he often visits every house and breaks utensils, though his guardians appear to be making every effort to restrain him. Breakers, irrespective of their [424] exact prerogative, are enabled to act in any unusual manner they desire, and strive to excel in peculiar behaviour. A favourite trick is to smear themselves with excrement, either real or imitation. It is difficult to over-estimate the enormous [554] prestige which such actions call forth in the eyes of the uninitiated, to whom it appears that the coming of a call entirely [787] alters the mentality of the recipient, a belief which the kukusiut [828] make every effort to maintain. Nothing further need be said of either qotlm or the preliminaries of nuluxam, both of which follow the usual pattern.

*575 *796 781 When the uninitiated are admitted to X's house on nuluxam evening, they are filled with wonder at the sight of the masked singers, of Sâuoltlymululti Alquntâm, and of the four supernatural Breakers who move wildly to and fro as the songs are sung, as if only the eagle down which the kukusiut blow upon them restrains them from destroying property. The fluent Ant'lîkwulsaix makes the most of her opportunity to describe the wonders which are before their eyes. Then the uninitiated are told that it will be safer for them to withdraw, and hurry out. Presently they are startled to hear the sound of people moving, and the four supernatural Breakers, followed by all the kukusiut, leave the house and proceed to the lowest one in the village. Around the fire go the masked four, picking up stones and hurling them at any destructible property. Most [252] houses contain a number of stones which have been used in [578] boiling liquids, so that there is no lack of missiles. Kukusiut [685] who are wise take care to hide or remove valuable property before this inroad begins, since the wearers of the masks take advantage of the opportunity to destroy the goods of those they do not like. No compensation can be claimed, on the theory that supernatural beings do not have to pay for any damage they may do. Although the property of some kukusiut is destroyed, the chief sufferers are the uninitiated; this serves to increase their fear and respect for the society with which such all-powerful beings are in league. After visiting every house in the village, the party returns to X's, where the masks are burnt, the call sent back, and the proceedings conclude in the usual manner. 575* 796* 781 [578] [685]

2:36:Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Breaker Dance]

A certain amount of information concerning the history of the Breaker dance was obtained from Syek, the owner of the prerogative just described. He is a well-informed man, but the writer had no opportunity of comparing his beliefs with those of his associates, so the following must be regarded as unsubstantiated evidence. This man stated that the Breaker dance is the most important of all in Bella Bella, and that many Bella Coola prerogatives have been obtained from this source, although some of their first ancestors likewise enjoyed it. He further stated that the term, noltristu, by which the Bella Coola always designate a Breaker, is of Bella Bella origin, and that the ancient Bella Coola term was dirtia.[91] Syek also told of an occasion when a number of Bella Bella, present on the qothm night of a Bella Coola ceremony, were disturbed when eating by the thud of a stone thrown, from outside, against the wall of the back-room. Out rushed a number of kukusiut, incensed at the disrespect shown to their gathering. They caught the offender, but released him when he was found to be a Bella Bella Breaker, foolishly demonstrating his prowess. The marshals decided to retaliate and arranged with two Bella Coola Breakers to exercise their rights and destroy the canoes and food-boxes of their guests. They did so, and later paid for the damage. The Bella Coola were thus able to demon- 575* 796* [115] [171] [177] 575* 796* 648 688

[91] Syek and several of his children are the only Bella Coola known to the writer who habitually use the sound "r." For example, he says "Sraler," instead of "Sradil." He says that he is himself unable to distinguish any peculiarity in his own pronunciation, although other Bella Coola are aware of it. [197]

2: McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Breaker Dance]

*575 strate their own superiority; they had paid those who had wit-*796 nessed their prerogative, whereas the Bella Bella Breaker had 648 merely cast a stone without solemnity. Speeches were made,
688 and it was decided that henceforth instead of waging true war
[921] in case of an error in ritual, it would be sufficient if the Breakers exacted punishment by destroying property. That is the explanation offered by this man as to why foreign war-parties have not more frequently upheld the law by raiding. As before stated, the writer is uncertain whether such beliefs are generally held by the Bella Coola and of course the historical accuracy of the information is still more doubtful.

THE Kusiotem DANCES

*575 More awe-inspiring, though less terrifying, than the Can-
*796 nibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances, are the kusiotem dances.
424 In these the dancer undergoes mutilation and death, but his [975] supernatural power enables him to return to life—at least so it appears to the credulous non-members. The five dances known as kusiotem are:

The Stomach-Cutting Dance;
The Beheading Dance;
The Drowning Dance;
The Burning Dance; and
The Swallowing of Hot Stones Dance.

Each of these comprises a distinct ceremonial of great complexity, but only one prerogative is required. That is, a man who has the kusiotem right may allow his stomach to be cut one year, and when he next performs will choose to display his ability to swallow hot stones. In this respect, it differs from all other kusiut ceremonies. Although a kusiotem dancer is entitled to exercise his privilege as often as he wishes, provided his marshals consent, the rite is so difficult that it is rarely carried out.

[973] As far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola of today have no elaborate myths dealing with the origin of the kusiotem dances. They believe that they are performed by the supernatural beings in the land above, and that long, long ago Ālquntām and his associates held a meeting at which it was decided to send them down to mortals. They chose as recipient a certain Onixwalicua of Kimsquit, and the prerogative of giving kusiotem dances has since been possessed by the owner of that name.[a] The following accounts are of the dances performed by a certain Onixwalicua whom it will be convenient to call X. He has six repositories, one for each section of his dance.

Z:Swanton E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bella Coola NE6

As with all other kusiut prerogatives, the impetus to dance can come only on receipt of a call from a supernatural patron, the being Kulslkākmidjut in the case of all kusiotem dancers. The uninitiated are told that a call "falls" on the recipient, and moreover that for kusiotem dances it can take place only when the supernatural beings are rushing out of the house above on the entry of the sun at the winter solstice. Thus kusiotem dances should take place after the winter solstice, although this requirement has not been enforced in recent years.

The Stomach-Cutting Dance

In the early summer X decides to exercise his prerogative the following winter. He informs one of the marshals of his wish, and the latter summons his associates to the secret meeting-place where the matter is debated at length. Danger of exposure of details to the uninitiated is so great that the marshals refuse permission for the performance unless the would-be dancer is a man of proved reliability. Once this consent has been obtained, X quietly proceeds with his preparations, laying in supplies of food and asking his kusiut friends for their assistance. When the dances begin, X attends as do all other kukusiut, though his secret mental excitement increases as the time draws near for him to perform. The exact time of starting is discussed with the marshals, and a prelimi-

[a] There are other kusiotem dancers in Bella Coola.

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

*575 nary announcement made to the kukusiut on the night of some *796 qotlum in the following manner:

As the kukusiut are eating, one of the marshals rises, saying:

"I hear a supernatural one close at hand; some powerful being is drawing near."

The other marshals agree that they too hear its approach and the kukusiut, always eager for dances, impatiently await further information. After further suspense, one of the marshals announces that it is coming for X. No mention is made of which dance is to be performed, and the intimation is wrapped in that veil of secrecy so essential to the kusiut society that they practise it even among themselves until it becomes habitual. During the night four young kukusiut are sent out to the mountains near the village carrying small whistles. The [776] uninitiated, hearing their weird sound, realize that a supernatural being is in the vicinity. This whistling is repeated twice during the night.

*575 Sometimes the actual call comes to X on the following *796 afternoon, but more often after the nebusam in the evening.
787 When the display, whatever it may be, has taken place, whistling is heard from the mountain slopes. The uninitiated are at once expelled, ignorant, of course, of the fact that the noise is made by kukusiut dispatched for the purpose. As they [776] hurry out they are told that the noise is the droning cry of a supernatural being, equivalent to the droning done by kusiut women whenever they are present at a manifestation of the supernatural. X, who appears to be listening, calls out:

"Please say what you want, I will do it."

Then he utters a low hoot-like whistle and sits down, while the women drone. When several minutes have elapsed, X moves, sunwise, to another part of the house and repeats his answer to the whistling which is still continuing. This is done a second and third time, but on the fourth, the call is supposed to have entered X, who cowers as if something had struck him, while the women drone more loudly than before. Then sticks are beaten madly four times and a herald goes to every house

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach- Cutting Dance]

in the village announcing that a call has come to X. Meanwhile forty or fifty kukusiut have surrounded X and accompany him as he leaves his home and proceeds to the end of the village furthest downstream. He enters the lowest house, followed by his escort, and stops before the central fire to call out: 575* 796* 787

"Please say what you want; I will do it."

He circles the fire, sunwise, repeats his call a second time and leaves. The same procedure is repeated in every house in the village, in order from bottom to top, before he returns to his own home. The uninitiated are told that some power has come upon him, but that it is so strange that even he cannot comprehend it. After a short pause, X again sallies forth, accompanied as before, and calls twice in every house of the village. The same ritual is repeated a third time, but on the fourth round, which soon follows, he carries a knife in his hand. Thus it becomes plain to all that X has received power enabling him to have his stomach cut, and the kukusiut show signs of grief at the danger to which their fellow is about to be exposed. Needless to say, the delay in interpreting the call adds to the mystification of the uninitiated, and their wonder at X's power. The heralds do their part by repeating his words with their own comments. [781]

When X finally returns to his own house the heralds summon all the kukusiut to it and the customary ritual of lsuxtämem takes place. The singers beat out and practise a song composed by one of their members for X, the audience listens attentively and then practises it until all are proficient. The theme of every kusiotem song is of the land above and the supernatural beings resident there. The wordless chorus consists of wai'aiye'iu, which the Bella Coola state is the refrain of all kusiotem dances up and down the coast. 575* 796* 533

The second day, nusiutälsap, a second song is composed and a party sent to the forest to bring in wood suitable for masks. In the evening part of the work is allotted[46] and the songs practised. For kusiotem dances, in addition to masks, a 575* 796* 532 [533]

[46]Some is kept for a later distribution.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 number of puppets is always made. Certain kukusiut, known *796 as ānuyax, have in connection with their dance prerogative, the 532 ability to summon and display supernatural objects in the [424] form of small puppets. These are sometimes patrons, more often [787] not, and include not only beings having human form, but snakes, hummingbirds, and other creatures. By calling his being, an ānuyax receives strength which can be transmitted to someone else—so the uninitiated believe—by passing it into [775] the recipient's body. Non-members are told that X suffers death from which he is resurrected by his own powers, rein-
[787] forced by those passed into him by other members of the society through the transference of their puppets. The most potent "patron-puppet" is the giant toad. It is difficult for a [781] white man to understand how intelligent people, as are many of the uninitiated, can be deluded into believing that the somewhat rudely carved wooden figures which they see moving before them are supernatural beings. Emphasis must again be laid on the awe, mystery, and power of the ceremonies in the eyes of those who do not understand them, and the very great skill shown by the carpenters in making use of hidden strings, trap-doors, and other devices to increase the dramatic effect. Puppets are guarded very carefully by their owners and are usually hidden in some cleft of the mountains. A well-constructed one is used when necessary for many years.

*575 Other preparations must be made for the stomach-cutting.
*796 As in all other kusiut dances, deception is practised and X is not really disembowelled. Instead, a wooden, or copper, frame is made to shield his stomach; over this is arranged the skin of a deer or a dog, cut to cover him from chest to thighs, with even the navel imitated. This camouflage is held in place by his breech-cloth and by a strap passing around his chest. He wears a blanket which conceals most of the fastenings so that the artifice is not noticeable in the dim light of the house. The chief difficulty is to find a dog with skin the same colour as X's.
[281] Many animals are killed, and the fur removed by immersion in boiling water, but sometimes half the dogs of a village must be slaughtered before one is found with skin to match.[67] The marshals carefully supervise all these arrangements, but of course on this night the work alone is allotted. The entrails of several dogs are kept and worn by X between his false stomach and the wooden frame. 575* 796* [281]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

After the allotment of tasks in connection with the mechanical work required, the marshals ask four women to come forward. Those selected are usually old people with good voices who, from long experience at the dances, have mastered the two[68] songs used at each kusiotem dance. The theme of these never varies and is believed to have been handed down from the distant past. No prerogative is attached; the marshals and singers merely choose four women whom they think will be good performers. The songs resemble those sung at mourning ceremonies; in fact, they are used with that significance when X has been "killed" by disembowelling. The singers, the women chosen, the marshals, and any other kukusiut who feel competent to do so, discuss in an animated manner the exact wording and tunes of the songs. Then the musicians beat out the time and the women sing one after another, while the audience drones. In view of the solemnity of the occasion, it often happens that senior singers from adjacent villages are invited to be present to render assistance. The necessity for practising X's songs, apportioning the carpentry, and rehearsing the mourning songs has taken up more time than is usual on a nusiutälsap night, and it is late before all is completed. Then, after the usual meal and admonishments, the people disperse. 575* 796* 533

Early the following morning the carpenters and those to whom work has been allotted gather early in X's house. A band, about two feet long, composed of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark is prepared and placed on the 575* 796* 211

[67] Informants offered no explanation as to why this wholesale slaughter of dogs failed to arouse curiosity and suspicion in the uninitiated. [781]

[68] Or four; there was difference of opinion among Bella Coola informants on this point.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 [217] outside of the house above the central doorway. The middle of the strip is pressed together so that it forms a projecting point, some four inches in length. This sign is a warning to the uninitiated that the kukusiut are working within, and none but a member of the society must enter or even pass on the sidewalk outside the door.[69] The central fire is moved forward to leave a larger space than usual between it and the back-room, and two mattings are raised to form two enclosures, one in each of the rear corners.

All day the carpenters work feverishly, and in the evening the kukusiut are once again summoned. When last performed, the rite on qothm was curtailed, and informants could give only an outline of the proper procedure. It appears that X's two [533] songs are practised, as well as the two mourning songs sung by the chosen women. Then all sit silent as if in grief, while the women occasionally utter mournful ejaculations, dreading the danger to which X will be exposed. At this juncture the uninitiated are summoned; they are impressed by the gravity and obvious fears shown even by the members of the powerful kusiut society. In the tense silence, one of the änuyex suddenly bursts forth:

"I will get my puppet-patron and bring him near so that he will be available tomorrow."

He reaches up his arms and makes the motions of drawing something towards him from above, while the kukusiut women drone and the singers and others provided with sticks keep up a clamorous beating on the floor. Presently another änuyex does likewise, and so on until as many as wish to do so have drawn down their puppet-patrons. The heralds maintain a running fire of comments to aid in impressing non-members. The customary lengthy dancing of qothm is omitted, and the uninitiated are expelled at once. The kukusiut have the usual [532] [69] If it is necessary to make numerous puppets this band may be placed in position the previous evening and the carpenters start work a day earlier on the more important tasks.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

meal with admonitions from the marshals; then they too disperse. 575* 791*

During the following day a hole is dug behind the fire of sufficient depth to conceal X, when standing in it, as high as the thighs. Towards dusk he takes up his position in this pit; his face is blackened and he wears the customary cedar-bark collar and a belt-apron to hold the frame in place. An assistant lies down on the floor immediately in front of him with his head in the hole beside X's feet so that the two men, instead of appearing as such, seem to be only one seated upon the ground. As night falls the kukusiut take their places and the more influential members of the society press forward to see that X and his assistant are properly disguised so that the fact that they are really two is not apparent. When all is in readiness, the Bella Coola practice is for a herald to summon the waiting uninitiated, but in Kimsquit one of the marshals orders some of the younger men to extinguish the fire, before this is done, so that as the non-members come to the door their fears are increased by finding the house in deep darkness. The heralds guide them to their places in the front corners, where they sit in shuddering expectancy for about an hour. The stillness is broken only by the occasional sound of a whistle and the laboured breathing of the guests. Suddenly the hush is shattered by the voice of a kusiut calling out four times än·än·ai·, the ejaculation used in pain. [184] [192] [152]

To the spell-bound uninitiated it seems as if the supernatural beings surrounding him had become too much for him, so that he cried out in the agony of his soul. Resinous sticks have been placed in readiness and a fire is quickly kindled. The Cannibals growl savagely in their corners and the uninitiated shiver. From this point forth the ritual in Bella Coola and Kimsquit is identical. [184]

X circles the fire, sunwise, four times and appears to seat himself on the floor with outstretched legs though in reality he is standing in the hole. One of the änuyex stands up and announces:

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 "I will get my puppet-patron."

*796 A whistle sounds, the kukusiut women drone and the un-787 initiated see one of the puppet figurines move across the back of the house, though they do not see the concealed ropes by which this is managed. The figure disappears as if it had entered its owner who goes to X and makes the motion of passing something into him. The other änuyex do likewise. Sometimes the dramatic effect is increased by sending a kusiut to the roof to strike one of the boards as if the puppet had landed from above with a thump; or the owner may come in from the back-room, walking backwards and drawing his puppet after him by means of a string matching the floor in colour and fastened to his foot. Another device is to have the puppets suspended from the roof by means of similar cords, invisible in the darkness. The owner of one of these takes it in his arms and revolves sunwise on himself as he moves to X, and at the same time conceals the figurine beneath his blanket. The last puppet is always the giant toad, the most potent of all.

*575 When X has thus been strengthened for the perils which he is to undergo, a number of the uninitiated are invited to come *796 forward to see him. As they step forth, one of the senior kukusiut kneads with his fingers against the back of the neck of each to strengthen his spirit so that it will not be drawn from him with fatal results. The uninitiated come forward, see X, without realizing that they are really gazing on two individuals, [412] and shudder at a knife which is lying near. This was always of copper or obsidian in the old days.

The actual cutter is one of the uninitiated, though efforts are made to have as operator a son or other near relative of a prominent kusiut so that he may easily be initiated into the society if anything should go amiss. One informant, who was called upon to act when about fifteen years of age, vividly recalled the experience in the following manner:

He was sitting with ten or twelve lads of his own age, each of whom was asked by a marshal:

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
796*

"Are you brave?"

Not one of them was willing to display his courage, even after repeated questionings. At this impasse the lad's uncle, a prominent kusiut, requested that his nephew be asked; so the question was put to him. He answered in the affirmative as his uncle had advised him to do. To the further question:

"Are you willing to do what this man [the performer] may demand?" he also answered:

"Yes," without knowing what he might be called upon to do.

Further preliminaries took place and the frightened boy asked several of his companions to stand near him to lend him their moral support. He was told to go to X, where one of the assistants gave him the knife and told him to examine it. It was a real knife and, as he announced to the assembled gathering, very sharp. X showed him where to insert it, under the left bottom rib, and told him to draw it firmly across to the corresponding point on the other side. The boy did so; the victim cried out as if in pain, his hands shook, and when the entrails fell out, he dropped back as if dead. The youth, believing that he had killed the man, was terrified. Years later he learned all about the ceremonial, but at the time the deception was complete.

A subterfuge sometimes employed at this time is to place a bladder among the entrails, so arranged that it can be inflated from a distance through a tube, making it appear that the intestines are quivering.

As soon as X has fallen, pandemonium breaks out in the house. The kukusiut women weep and wail, whistles sound at intervals, and the effect is like bedlam. Presently two or three of the uninitiated move to the door and harangue the kukusiut in this fashion:

"You have gone too far, you powerful people. We know you are powerful and in league with the supernatural ones, but now you have slain a man. Your power is too great, it is

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

*575 dangerous. Unless he is restored to life before dawn we will *796 slay you."

The other uninitiated marvel that any of their number should be bold enough to taunt the kukusiut, ignorant of the fact that those who do so are really spies whose part in the performance has long since been arranged by the marshals. [688] Instances are remembered when the wooden or copper frame was defective and the performer was killed; in such a case the spies actually slew one or more kukusiut to preserve the prestige of the society. Exact details were unobtainable, but it seems clear that the victims were selected with the aid of the marshals during the night; they were, of course, men of little importance in the community.

The spies prevent anyone from leaving the house and gradually the din subsides, except for the constant wailing of the women, particularly X's relatives. The kukusiut, granted a respite until dawn, allow some of the uninitiated to come forward and pass sunwise around the fire to see the corpse of X with the bloody entrails exposed. At this juncture, the old
*575 women selected for the purpose sing the mourning song, of *796 which the words and tune never vary; they are believed to 533 have been handed down from time immemorial. The theme 539 is of Snitsmän a, a kindly supernatural woman[70] who restores to life kukusiut killed in the performance of their rites. The singer in the upper, eastern, rear corner of the house sings the following words:

Nunuxwḑsam·ixwakotsk'	yao disiaiyäkmidjutnu	siyalaqailaoals
Perhaps you[71] saw correctly[72]	hence you did so;[73]	it is too much iawanutciyekelisi that has been given to you.[74]

[70]Some informants state that there are several of these beings.
[71]Referring to X.
[72]Each vertical line marks the limit of a word or word-cluster, emphasized in singing, and the translation of it.
[73]That is: "You performed your dance in accordance with what you saw."
[74]That is: "You have received power that is too great and too dangerous." The specific reference is to the knife.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

After a short interval, she is answered by the singer in the lower, western, rear corner of the house as follows: 575* 796*

Saqankotsänitwawit	itlasnitsman·aatdja	tkäpälpälqälosdus
Let there come to earth	the voice of Snitsmän·a	to revive 533 539

diyälakaiqum·ilsutdai
the one who has so injured himself.

The general meaning of this song is obvious, although there are several obscure expressions which serve to increase the wonder and fear of the uninitiated. Silence follows the singing, then whistling is heard and a herald announces that one of the puppet-patrons inserted into X has left him and gone to the region above. Similar whistling announces the departure of others at intervals. When several have done so, it is time for the first to return. A thud, made by a hidden accomplice, is heard on the roof and whistling breaks out afresh. Sometimes the puppet-patron returns to X, but more often to its invoker, and the transference previously enacted is repeated over the body of the dancer who continues to lie as if lifeless. Now and then the uninitiated are invited forward to look at him and they notice that the gaping wound is slowly closing, an easy matter to arrange in the dim light of the house. At intervals the puppet-patrons go and return from the land above, and the proceedings are sometimes enlivened by the owners telling a herald, who in turn informs the audience, what the puppet-patron saw on its journey aloft. Usually each goes and returns four times in the course of the night. Each of the women selected to sing the mourning songs performs once, standing in a corner of the house and waving a wand wound with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. So the long night passes. Towards dawn continuous whistling is heard. This is made by several men with a whistle apiece; each begins to blow as soon as the breath of his partner is nearly exhausted. It is known to be the voice of Snitsmän·a. In Kimsquit, but not in Bella Coola, this is the signal for the entry of the giant toad. Carpenters have made a wooden figure of the amphibian and by means of concealed strings it is

575* 796* 787 [533] 575* 796* [776] [184] [532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 [532] made to hop towards X and bend four times over him. The wound gradually comes together, and the excitement grows ever greater. Those near X cry out that his little toes are moving, as indeed they are, then in succession his fourth, middle, first, and big toes begin to twitch convulsively. It is often difficult to find an assistant capable of moving his toes in the proper order.

"He is alive again," call the heralds, and some of the uninitiated come forward to watch the marvel of the dead man's toes moving.

*575 *796 533 X grows gradually stronger and begins to shake his hands as if he were trying to dance. Then, in a feeble voice, he begins to sing, though the only word which comes clearly is Snitsmän·a, the name of the supernatural woman through whose kindly mediation he has been restored to life. This song has actually been composed by the singers and taught by them to X preparatory to the rite. It resembles a shaman's, since it is assumed that X has practically been made a shaman by the intervention of Snitsmän·a. The singers pretend to be listening intently, and then chant it over, as if they had just learnt it, while X shakes his hands as if dancing. The wailing and weeping of the kukusiut women has given place to joy, and those who had been singing mourning songs dance in time to the music. One after the other the änuyex who had cast their patrons into X now go to him to recall them. Each bends over him and pretends to extract something by pressure with cupped hands, at the same time crying out hoip, hoip.

*575 *796 787

Each änuyex then goes through the motions of casting something up into the air with cries of the same nature; this serves to return his patron to the mysterious region whence it had come. The uninitiated are now expelled and the kukusiut soon follow, without receiving a meal.[75] Those who have taken a leading part in the ceremony usually linger with the marshals

*575 *796

[75]According to one informant, the youth who cut X's stomach was formerly detained and initiated into the ranks of the kukusiut.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to discuss the event and lay plans for the future, but as it is now daylight they too soon retire to sleep. 575* 796*

The kusiotem ceremony resembles a double kusiut rite since it comprises two sets of four days and nights. The one on which X's stomach was cut is considered to be lsuxtämem. Accordingly, the heralds call the kukusiut to X's house early on the afternoon following and the regular ritual of nusiutälsap takes place. Some of the younger men are at once sent to the forest for wood to be made into more masks but, with the love of drama typical of the kukusiut, it is assumed that X himself is too feeble to accompany them. Accordingly his power is transferred to a substitute by means of the frenzied beating of sticks and repeated cries of hoip. On the return of the wood collectors, who carry their burdens as usual on tump-lines and set them down carefully, this power is restored to X in the same manner. The work of making the masks is now allotted. For kusiotem, and several other kusiut rites hereafter to be described, the dancer is entitled to show as many of the beings in the Bella Coola pantheon as he desires. Consequently if X is wealthy and wishes to have a spectacular nebusam, he orders many masks. Then the kukusiut practise a number of songs composed by the singers. One, or sometimes two, prepared for X is couched as if he himself were telling what he had seen in the upper regions. They describe Ałquntäm, his messenger Oǫolikts Ałquntäm, and, especially Kulslkäkmidjut, the supernatural being whose stomach is periodically cut in the land above. It is he who has entered X and impelled him to suffer the same mutilation from the effects of which Snitsmän·a has restored him. X himself usually remains concealed behind the matting in the rear part of the house, but sometimes, if he wishes to practise what he will perform the next night, he comes forward for a rehearsal. He still pretends to be very ill, and instead of dancing in the usual violent manner, totters around the fire, supported by several assistants, while he feebly shakes his hands. The women drone, and the uninitiated in the other houses realize that more exciting events are impending.

[482] [424] [556] [776] [787]

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

* 575 * 796 533 The singers have also composed a song for each of the ānuyax and these too must be practised, while the men dance or remain still as they think fit. Since no uninitiated are present the affair is purely a rehearsal. The words of each of these songs is of the manner in which the patron helped X to survive his ordeal. By this time it is late and the kukusiut disperse after the usual meal and admonitions of the mārshals.

* 575 * 796 532 The next day, qothm, the carpenters assemble early in the morning to start work. Since X is entitled to portray any of the supernatural beings who are companions of his patron in the land above, it follows that there is wide variation in his choice of masks to be manufactured. The principal supernatural beings are always shown, and any animals, since all are supernatural, can likewise be displayed. As usual, a few kukusiut are invited at midday to share the meal provided for the carpenters. The number of masks to be provided is often so great that two days or more are necessary for their completion, in which case no ceremony takes place on the night which would normally be qothm; the kukusiut merely gather and again practise their songs. [533]

* 575 * 796 But the day after is qothm. At dusk the kukusiut are called in for a final rehearsal of the songs, and then a summons is sent to the uninitiated, who have been washing and beautifying themselves in eager anticipation. In Kimsquit it is customary to hang some of the masks on a sloping pole behind the fire and the sight of these amazes the non-members. First the singers beat out the song of one of the women mourners and she dances in time to it, while the heralds near the door keep up a steady stream of remarks, encouraging the woman to perform yet more strenuously and to have no modesty about shaking her breasts. Then another of the women dances, followed in succession by the third and fourth if that is the number who sang the mourning songs. Next the ānuyax perform, each in succession accompanying the song composed for him. Now comes the central feature of the evening, the performance of X himself. As the singers strike up the shaman's song which he is supposed to have taught them, he appears, supported by two kukusiut, and attempts to dance, but is too feeble to do more than be assisted around the fire, feebly shaking his hands. He retires, but comes forth once more as the singers beat out the song of regular kusiut type composed for him and which his fellows have practised. If two have been composed, he appears a third time. After X has finally withdrawn, the ritual proceeds in the usual manner, by the dancing of every kusiut who has had a call in time to his two songs. It is late before all have danced; then the uninitiated are given a little food and sent away. The kukusiut eat more leisurely, and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. On account of the solemnity of the occasion, their words of wisdom are even more grandiloquent than usual. The following may be regarded as a typical address: 575* 796* [574] 575* 796* 537

[515] [532] [184] [781] [535] [834]

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES 105
[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

"You have done well, ye kukusiut, in thus carrying out the ceremony so admirably. I thank you. You have done well X, you have done as our fathers did. None of you must ever forget the precepts and example of our fathers who have handed down this rite from dim antiquity. Perhaps when we marshals are dead some of you will become careless and want to alter the ceremonial. Do not dream of anything so foolish. The proper method is that which you have just seen. Try no other."

When the marshals have finished, X dances once again, and the weary kukusiut at length disperse.

The next day, or rather later in the same day, for it is long after midnight before the ceremony is completed, is nakusam. Many of the kukusiut assemble in X's house about four o'clock in the afternoon to try on the masks and attend to the innumerable details. A representation of Ano'likwulsaix is always prepared, as well as those of Alqantäm, Sxsexälaix, and Snanäkäls. The last-named is the "Wise One," "He of Whom Questions are Asked," the supernatural being who decides points of ritual in the dances in the land above. No paint is used on his mask, but a coloured effect is obtained by means 575* 796* 532 [776]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 of the darker hue of the inner part of the wood. His nose and *796 forehead are wrinkled as if in deep thought. Masks of many other supernatural beings and animals have been made, in-532 cluding two which are reserved for kusiotem dances alone. The first of these is X's patron, Kulslkäkmidjut, who is capable of having his stomach cut. A face mask is made for him of the usual human type, and in addition a wooden stomach with a slit which can be moved by strings to display entrails painted [796] on a frame beneath. The second distinctive mask is that of Oqolikts Alquntäm, the herald of Alquntäm. Above his mask is fastened a bird, made of wood, the wings of which can be made to flap by pulling on a cord which runs down under the wearer's blanket. He carries a staff, decorated with alternate spiral bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with another wooden bird likewise provided with flapping wings. By the time the masks have been adjusted it is quite dark.

*575 The uninitiated, listening from their houses, hear first the *796 frantic, but measured, beating of sticks that always accom-[755] panies a curing ceremony. Then Oqolikts leaves X's house, followed by all the kukusiut who have danced the same year and accordingly wear dyed cedar-bark collars, and many others as well. The party goes to the bottom house of the village where Oqolikts pounds on the floor with his staff and cries out:

Xwo . . . .

The kusiut chosen to wear this mask is one who has powerful lungs. The heralds, always in attendance, echo his words and explain to the wondering uninitiated who their supernatural visitor is, and that this is the way he summons the supernatural beings to the dances in the land above. Oqolikts causes the wings of his birds to flap, the party moves to the next house, and thence in succession to every one in the village before returning to X's. After a short delay the uninitiated hear another crash of the frenzied beating of sticks, and again Oqolikts parades to every house in the village. On this, his second round, his announcement is:

"I act as herald; prepare to come."

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

A third frenzied beating is followed by a third round of the village with the announcement: 575* 796*

"The fire is ready."

For the fourth time the kukusiut in X's house beat time furiously, and again Oǫolikts sallies forth.

"Everything is almost ready," he says in each house.

By this time any lagging kukusiut have taken their places in X's house, and when everything is in order one of the heralds calls out to the uninitiated that they may enter. In they rush, and sit quietly in the corners near the front-door. Oǫolikts, his work accomplished, stands at one side of the space behind the fire, while the inevitable Ano'likwolsaix moves to and fro, keeping up a constant flow of conversation. Sometimes Kulslkākmidjut stands behind the fire; on other occasions he has been known to walk through the house, accompanied by two assistants blowing eagle down over him. He moves his face as if in pain, and then lies down behind the fire, where the uninitiated can see his stomach contracting and expanding as if it had been ripped to expose the entrails. At the distance from which they view the spectacle it is easy to carry out the deception. Oǫolikts sits down behind the fire and another supernatural being comes from one of the enclosures. As far as could be learnt, the order of their appearance on the occasion when X performed was as follows, though there is no ceremonial significance attached thereto: 575* 796* 776

Oǫolikts.

Ālquntām. He always wears a huge mask and the actor must have a powerful voice for at intervals he bellows out:

"Mortals! See me, I am Ālquntām," while the heralds and Ano'likwolsaix echo and confirm his remarks. He stalks from one of the enclosures to the central position behind the fire, where he remains standing.

Snusilkāls appears and stands near Ālquntām, his nose and forehead wrinkled in deep thought.

Sxsuxālaix joins the group. These three supernatural ones remain standing for some little time, then they pass into

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

575 the enclosure in the opposite corner to that from which they had emerged.

776 Awamuxtsnum. Three or four masked figures appear together to portray these beings. Their function is to remind Alpuxtäm of those whom he should invite to his ceremonials above.

Snung. As this dreaded monster appears, the uninitiated cower convulsively and the kukuxiut women drone. Several [789] masked figures accompany the Snung around the fire, blowing eagle down over the creature, and Ant'likwulxaix explains to the uninitiated that this is to protect them from the monster. The heralds as usual echo her remarks. After one circuit of the fire, the Snung disappears into one of the enclosures behind the fire.

Haokas. This supernatural, mythological denizen of the mountains, is in the form of an enormous bird with long beak and bony wings. The mask worn with the disguise is usually [592] about three feet in length, in the shape of a bird's head with long beak. A stick passes from its butt down the wearer's back and is held in place by his belt, thus balancing the heavy, projecting bill (see Plate 8).[1] It is hinged so that the performer can make the mandibles snap together by pulling a cord concealed under his blanket. A good actor, and such is [535] always chosen to represent this creature, bends forward and downwards so that the snapping beak almost brushes the floor; then he rises and pauses like a bird when listening and half startled. Next he runs a few steps, in a mincing manner, thus slowly circling the fire, and ultimately passes from sight into the enclosure other than that from which he has emerged. Several kukuxiut accompany the actor, blowing eagle down over him, the women drone and Ant'likwulxaix keeps up a string of comments. After a short pause a second haokas appears and circles the fire with its attendant kukuxiut. The same procedure is repeated for a third and fourth.

Alxwulätnum. This is the supernatural herald for Thun- [532] der, the leading kuxiut among supernatural beings. He wears

[1] [see category 116, p 164 (B) – ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

a mask representing a man and carries a stick with which he 575* beats on the floor as he cries out: 796*

"Come, ye supernatural ones. The most famous kusiut of 776 all [Thunder] is about to dance." 532

Thunder. The mask representing this creature is large and of fearsome appearance with hooked beak and overhanging forehead; it is always carried by a man of powerful physique (see Plate 9).[5] A box has been placed beside the enclosure so 575* that, when Thunder first appears, standing upon it, his ap- 796* parent size is increased. He bends to and fro, and up and 776 down, in an amazing fashion, blowing through his clenched teeth, while Ano'likwelsaix informs the uninitiated who he is, 535 and expatiates on his powers. After twisting and turning for several minutes, Thunder leaps to the floor of the house, and as he does so there sounds a peal of thunder. The uninitiated do not know that this is caused by a number of kukusiut rolling stones to and fro in large wooden boxes within the enclosures at the back. Then he starts to dance sunwise around the fire, bending down and up, shaking himself and stamping violently, his amazing gyrations being constantly accompanied by the reverberation of rolling stones. Escorted by several kukusiut he circles the fire, and after a final stamping and twisting, disappears into the enclosure. In a few minutes he appears again, and repeats his dance. Since no one man is strong enough to carry out this athletic performance twice in succession, the mask has been transferred to another kusiut within the enclosure, but of course the uninitiated are unaware of this. Thunder always comes out four times in all, on each occasion dancing once around the fire. Sometimes four different men perform; sometimes the one who danced first has recovered sufficiently to be able to repeat on the fourth round. The usual explanations by Ano'likwelsaix add zest to the rite. On this occasion the customary dance of Thunder with a fire rattle was omitted.

Sqwqwaxs. Twelve of these beings appear together, dis- 575* guised behind masks representing young girls. They are the 796*
[5] [see category 116, p 164 (c) - AMYLST] 776
[532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 776 pre-adolescent children of various supernatural beings in the land above who play together outside Nusmát·a and refuse to allow any man to approach them. As they circle the fire they sing a song of which the theme is their refusal to have anything to do with a man.

[532] The Hermaphrodite. This being wears a mask representing a cast of countenance midway between a "man and a woman," and speaks in a nasal tone difficult to describe. He circles the fire immediately behind the twelve Syŋŋnesáxs.

As the young girls are about to disappear into their enclosure, the figure of Sxaiaxwax bursts forth from the other and at once the Syŋŋnesáxs hurry from sight, shepherded by the Hermaphrodite. Sxaiaxwax wears a mask representing an [532] ugly and licentious man and carries beneath his bear-skin robe a partly concealed stick. He rushes around the fire as if in pursuit of his quarry, then likewise disappears.

*575 *796 As before stated, the number of supernatural beings shown depends on the wishes of X. On the occasion now being described, the informants agreed that more had been used, but which they were had been forgotten. Sometimes the number is so great that all cannot appear on one night, so the uninitiated are expelled when the marshals think fit and the rite continued on the following evening, making two nebusam. In either case, after the withdrawal of non-members, the kukusiut burn the masks in the manner already described.

For the rest of the ceremonial season X behaves as if he were recovering from a severe illness. He attends the qothm of every kusiut but, like Cannibals, Scratchers, and Breakers, does not blacken his face, sits with them in the rear corners where they are served with food before the other dancers. X is called upon to perform rather late on qothm nights and does so in a feeble manner. Towards the end of the ceremonial season, however, he has regained sufficient strength to move around freely, though he still maintains the mien of one who has suffered a terrifying experience. During the following summer he must likewise remain in comparative concealment, and must never gossip or mingle casually with the outsiders. 575* In addition to a band of dyed cedar-bark on his head he wears 796* one around his stomach.

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

A number of years ago, when the influence of the white man 575* had become strong enough to undermine the old ritual, a Bella 796* Coola kusiotem dancer, instead of remaining in seclusion after 688 the dance, ran away to Kimsquit where lived a young woman 177 with whom he was in love. In the old days this would have led to punishment by a third tribe. When the offender wished to return to Bella Coola he was afraid of the wrath of the marshals, but plucked up courage to come back after several months. The marshals seized him and scratched his stomach with a metal nail so that the uninitiated, seeing the wound, might be led to believe that the man had been severely cut. Periodically the scabs were pulled off to re-enflame the injury and make it appear that a deep gash was slowly healing. The offender, of course, could not protest, since he was a kusiut who had broken the law and was fortunate in escaping so lightly.

The Beheading Dance

Another of the dramatic dances which can be performed by 575* a kusiotem is that of having his head pulled off. Like the 796* Stomach-Cutting dance, it is the prerogative of a Kimsquit man named Onixwaltcua. He carried out the rite a few years [424] after he had performed the one just described. The main points of ritual being identical for all kusiotem dances, minor points already recorded can be omitted. As before, it will be convenient to term Onixwaltcua X, and to describe the dance in the present tense.

Early in the summer X informs one of the marshals of his desire to have his head pulled off the following winter. The one consulted discusses the matter with his fellows; in this case no objections were raised as Onixwaltcua had already performed a kusiotem dance and it was felt that he was reliable. As soon as permission is granted, the would-be dancer asks the best carpenters to meet him in a lonely place in the forest and [532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924).1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Beheading Dance]

*575 tells them that he wants a mask made to represent his own
*796 face. The purpose for which it is destined is not mentioned, 532 although there is no reason why the workmen, all of them kukusiut, should not know, as they actually do. X blackens his face a trifle, making it easier to depict, and lies down as model for the carpenters, who at once start chiselling masks. Each works independently, and usually finishes one, or even two or three, in a day. Five or six carpenters are labouring simultaneously, and when the first group of masks has been finished the marshals, and perhaps one or more influential chiefs as well, come to inspect the handicraft. The masks are laid out in a glade of the forest and the marshals make their criticisms.

"No. The nose is too long," they say of one mask, or,

"The cheeks are too full," with regard to another.

It is seldom that one of the first group of completed masks meets with their approval, but the next morning the carpenters try once more, with X again lying down as model. In the evening the marshals again examine the results. Hundreds (probably an exaggeration) are often made before one is found which satisfies every requirement, and if the carpenters fail to produce a realistic portrait, the rite cannot be carried out. The unsuccessful attempts are carefully hidden in the forest lest they should be seen by an uninitiated person. When Onixwaltcua performed the rite, it was near the end of September before one of the carpenters succeeded in making a satisfactory model.

When the wooden representation has been completed, there is no further doubt about holding the ceremony, and one of the marshals, acting for X, summons the singers and other influential kukusiut to the secret meeting place for a discussion of preliminaries.[n] At this conference X tells the carpenters what [465 he proposes to give them as presents for the work they have 431 done for him; the concept of "pay" is entirely lacking although 533] it is an essential part of the transaction. The singers are told [n] Several details that apply to all kusiwem are here included which were inadvertently omitted by informants in describing the Stomach-Cutting dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to prepare three songs for X, choosing as themes the usual kusiotem facts, with any additional details from the performer's myth which he may give them. The marshals instruct the maker of the successful mask to put hair on it and to attach a neck. 575* 796* 532 [533]

Four days later the same group again meets in the forest and X tries on the mask. When in position it rests on top of his own head with a stick passing down behind his occiput to his waist, where it is fastened by a belt; the general effect is that he has a superimposed head. Minor adjustments are suggested and made and X takes the mask, while the unsuccessful attempts are burnt. The marshals solemnly warn the participants of the seriousness of the rite in which they are about to engage. X conceals the mask with great care in some cleft of the mountains.

At intervals the singers meet and listen to the tunes each has composed, until they decide on the three most suitable, which they practise. [533]

Nothing more takes place until after the winter solstice, when X and the marshals select the exact date for the rite. After a qotlum, the marshals, singers, carpenters, and other kusiut functionaries remain in the house to rehearse the coming ceremony. The head is placed in position, supported by a framework of reeds which can be separated by strong pressure. When X raises his blanket over his own head, the mask portrait alone is visible, and only the wearer's extra height might cause suspicion. Around his "neck," in reality the junction between X's own head and the false one, is tied a rope, so arranged that when pulled from each end, it slips, contracts on the reed framework, and ultimately tears through it to separate the head from the body.[11] Raw meat and blood have been placed inside the "neck" so that, when the mask is pulled off, it appears as if X's flesh were exposed and he falls to the [11]An old man showed the writer the method of fastening, but I was unable to learn it. The rope, instead of being knotted, is wound within itself so that, when the framework is broken, it comes away untangled. [284]

[The Beheading Dance]

*575 *796 [532] floor. The rope draws through itself, becomes untangled, and the blood stains previously placed on it become apparent. The kukusiut rehearse the decapitation a number of times until every detail is perfect. Shielded by the gloom of the house, one of the carpenters fastens a thin cord to the portrait-mask and practises drawing it gradually towards X, who finally rises as if restored to life by the return of his head. The mask is actually concealed and X stands up at his natural height. Since this is the feat which will be done in the presence of the uninitiated, it must be worked out with precision. When the marshals are satisfied that everything is in good shape they permit the kukusiut to disperse. A similar practice is carried out for the Stomach-Cutting dance if the marshals consider it necessary. The night after the rehearsal the call comes to X, who parades to every house in the village. On his fourth circuit he carries a rope in his hand instead of a knife; the kukusiut weep as they did on the previous occasion, and any uninitiated who have seen or heard of the rite realize the fate in store for X. The next day, nusiutälsap, a number of kukusiut are dispatched for wood, and in the evening some of the work is allotted and arrangements made for singing the mourning songs and for the use of puppet-patrons by the änuyex. The marshals take advantage of the opportunity to harangue their hearers.

"Take heed what you do," they say. "Älquntäm and the other supernatural ones have sent down a powerful call to us. Unless we make strong our spirits we will be unable to bear up under the weight of it."

Qothm passes without variation from the type already described, and on the following night the kukusiut assemble early for nebusam. When they have taken their places, the fire is extinguished; then the uninitiated are called in and guided to their places near the door.[78] After an hour's delay, punctuated by the whistles, the fire is built up and X goes around it four times, while the kukusiut beat furiously with sticks. X calls [184] [78] In Kimsquit only.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out that he wants someone to tie up his neck, and, after the usual delay, an uninitiated lad is brought forward for the purpose. The carpenters help him to manipulate the rope, and in reality do the actual tying although they disguise the fact. Then four or five kukusiut seize either end and begin to tug; X cries out as if in pain, the whistles sound, and the women drone. It is most impressive. Finally the head is pulled from the body and falls to the floor, while the apparently headless and lifeless body of X sinks down in the direction taken by the head. Blood and raw flesh are in evidence and the weeping of the women readily convinces non-members that they have watched the decapitation of the dancer. Sometimes the uninitiated themselves are allowed to pull the rope. 575* 796*

The ritual throughout the night is identical with that already described for the Stomach-Cutting dance. The spies guard the doors, refusing egress to all, the mourning women sing their songs, the puppets ascend to the land above and are inserted into X on their return. At intervals groups of the uninitiated are told to come forward; they circle the fire sunwise and see that X's head is lying apart from his body, with the blood and flesh and the severed neck visible. Towards dawn[79] hidden strings are fastened to the head and it is drawn slightly towards the body. One of the marshals calls out:

"It moves! It moves! Do you see it?" and a herald answers:

"We see it move."

The slow movement is continued until the uninitiated, who make periodic inspections, are able to say that it has almost rejoined the trunk. As the first glimmer of light appears in the east, one of the carpenters bends over X and takes the opportunity, while he conceals the dancer's body with his own, to hide the false head beneath his blanket; at the same time X stretches his own head up from under his blanket. The subterfuge is not evident to the uninitiated.

[79]The passage of time at night is judged in villages on the coast by the height of the tide, or the movements of stars; the latter is also practised in the inland settlements. If the stars are hidden, an estimate is made by the number of fir logs burnt through since sunset. [805] [821] [823]

[The Beheading Dance]

*575 *796 [533] [756] X begins to move his fingers in a feeble way and to sing a shaman's song of which Snitsmän·a is the only intelligible word. Of course the singers have previously taught him as much as is necessary of this type of composition, but the assumption is that he has just learnt it from Snitsmän·a who has restored him to life. At this juncture two shamans often approach X and appear to project some power into him whereby he is able to rise and slowly circle the fire, supported by them. He shakes his hands and sings in a weak voice, then stands behind the fire, still supported by the two shamans. This concludes the night's ceremony and the marshals tell the uninitiated to leave. The kukusiut soon follow, except carpenters, singers, and any other influential members of the society who desire to wait to discuss the performance.

As in the Stomach-Cutting dance, four days more of ceremonial follow the severing of X's head, with ritual corresponding to that of an ordinary kusiut performance. Ṫsuxtämem comes on the night after the decapitation. The kukusiut gather [533] in good time to learn a song, the theme of which is X's patron, the supernatural being Sänollxumulelts Ałquntäm, who has his head pulled off during dances in the land above. Mention is always made of Snitsmän·a as well. No further description is required of the ceremonial on the nights of nusiutälsap and qotlim.

On nebusam the first spectacle is a representation of what takes place in the land above. A mask has been prepared similar to the one worn by X, so that it can be pulled entirely from his body. This decapitation is performed by masked figures while the heralds and marshals explain that this is what is done aloft. The upper mask is hidden and the performer, who wears one identical with that which has been pulled from him, stands up to show the uninitiated that his head has been restored to him. Since the performers are supposed to be supernatural beings, it is possible for the beheaded one to be restored more rapidly than was possible when X, a mortal, suffered the same fate. After this deception there follows a procession of supernatural beings according to X's choice. 575*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The proceedings terminate in the same way as those described 796* in the Stomach-Cutting dance.

X must obey the customary restrictions on his movements for the rest of the ceremonial season, and also remain in partial concealment for the summer following. The fiction circulated is that he is still suffering from the after-effects of decapitation. He is legally entitled to perform any other kusiotem rite during [424] the following winter, but it is most unusual for a man to do so on successive seasons.

The Drowning Dance

In a third kusiotem dance the performer appears to drown. X carried out this ceremonial during the third winter after his decapitation, but as usual it will be convenient to describe the ritual in the present tense.

During the summer, as for the Beheading dance, he obtains permission from the marshals. With the latter present, he then arranges with the singers and the carpenters to compose songs of the usual kusiotem type and to prepare a mask. Since X had preserved the mask used at the time of his decapitation, it was not necessary to have one made. The intending dancer [415] borrows from a kusiut friend one of the large boxes used for [252] boiling olachen and this is taken in secret to some lonely spot in the forest. The carpenters cut a hole in the bottom and smear the edges with grease and dirt to conceal the aperture; skin hinges are fastened to one side of the movable section so that it can be opened easily and quickly. They also make a wooden framework the size and shape of X's body, to which the portrait-mask is attached to give a realistic representation of the man himself.

Nothing more can be done until near the winter solstice when the carpenters cut a hole in the floor of X's house, immediately behind the fire, and fasten the section removed with skin hinges to make a trap-door. Then the carpenters, marshals, singers, and other influential kukusiut meet some evening

[The Drowning Dance]

*575 *796 for a rehearsal. The box is placed on top of the concealed opening; X enters it, raises the flap in the bottom, and opens the trap-door through which he squeezes into the space between the floor of the house and the ground beneath. The false body, clothed like himself, has been placed in readiness and X passes it up into the box which he has just left. Water is then poured in upon it and the movable section of bottom fits sufficiently tightly that none flows out. If everything is satisfactory, the box is returned to its owner for safe-keeping.

When the time for the ceremony comes, the senior kukusiut meet for a final rehearsal after the qotlim of a kusiut. Cases are remembered of intentional tampering with the box by [578] some malicious individual, hence the necessity for careful testing. The following night the call comes to X, and he goes to every house of the village with his cry:

"Please speak plainly; I will do what you want."

The ritual of the next four days is identical with that already described and the uninitiated keep wondering what is going to happen. If they should ask any kusiut, the answer given is:

"We don't quite understand what it is. Something dreadful has fallen upon X, but the details are not yet clear."

So the time passes until the night when X is to be drowned. As in other kusiotem dances, the uninitiated are guided to their places in inky darkness and sit there until the weird stillness and awe of it all has had time to take effect upon them. At last the fire is kindled and one of the marshals announces that X wants to borrow a large boiling box from so-and-so, naming the man to whom the prepared one has been entrusted. The owner says that he is willing to lend it and two kukusiut are sent to bring the receptacle. It is placed over the trap-door, and X circles the fire four times while the kukusiut beat time frenziedly with sticks. Suddenly he cries out:

"My patron bids me enter this box and have water poured upon me."

The kukusiut women drone out in fear and the änuyex

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

strengthen him by the insertion of their puppets. Thus fortified, X climbs into the box and, though this the uninitiated do not know, out through the bottom underneath the house whence he shoves the dummy up into the place he has just left. Strings fastened to the figure lead out through the floor, so that, when pulled, the fingers can be made to move and the eyes to blink.[89] The marshals ask four young lads to come forward to pour into the box the water which has been placed in readiness. As they do so, the kukusiut women drone as if in deadly fear and the fingers of the figure within can be seen moving spasmodically. Water is poured in till it overflows the edges of the box. At intervals during the night small parties of uninitiated are called forward to see X beneath the surface, without, of course, detecting the substitution. The mourning women sing, and the puppets go and return from the land above in the manner already described. When the carpenters constructed the flap in the floor of the box they also inserted several small plugs which are pulled out as dawn approaches. This is done and one of the marshals calls out that the water is lowering and the uninitiated, called forward to see, agree that he has spoken truly. What seems extremely remarkable to them is the absence of damp on the floor, as would be the case if the box were leaking. The water has dripped away through the trap-door in the floor, but only the kukusiut know this. Non-members are called forward four times to see the steady diminution of the water, until finally only a little is left. Under cover of the darkness X now re-enters the box, at the same time shoving out the dummy. He sits up and feebly sings a shaman's song of Snitsmän·a, who has restored him to life after drowning, then climbs from the box and slowly circles the fire with shaking hands, singing once more. Now that X has recovered, the spies, who have acted as door-keepers, allow the audience to disperse.

No further description need be given of the rites that follow

575*
796*

[89] It was impossible to ascertain what means were taken to prevent the water dripping out through the holes for the strings.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575
*796

on the next three nights, since they are identical with those of other kusiotem ceremonials. For nebusam a masked figure is prepared, which the uninitiated believe to be X's supernatural patron. The box is placed as when the dancer performed, but the kukusiut, not uninitiated, pour in the water. The latter can see that liquid is entering, and the kukusiut tell them the height to which it has risen, but only those who are taking part can see that the water merely runs out through the opened trap-door in the floor. When enough has been poured in, the masked figure enters the box, remains for about fifteen minutes, and then reappears. After this performance there follows the procession of supernatural beings as previously described.

This concludes the Drowning dance. X obeys restrictions similar to those required for the other kusiotem dances.

The Burning Dance

Still another kusiotem dance prerogative is that of being burnt to death. The details of ritual are so similar to those of the Drowning dance that it can be recorded briefly. The preliminary arrangements are made in the summer as soon as permission to hold it has been obtained from the marshals. A large box of the kind used for cooking olachen is constructed with a hinged flap in the bottom, so that, as with the Drowning dance, the performer can pass through it and a trap-door in the floor.

The details of rehearsal, coming of the call, asking what is required, the waiting for four days, and the summoning of the uninitiated in the darkness do not differ from the other kusiotem ceremonials. When the time comes for the rite itself, one of the marshals announces that X wants to borrow a box from so-and-so. The one prepared is brought and placed over the hidden trap-door. The dancer, strengthened by patron-puppets, enters, passes through the trap-door to the space beneath the house, and quickly shoves in a dummy figure.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Several young uninitiated are called forward and asked to throw the box on the fire, tipping it sideways so that the "man" within is clearly visible amid the leaping flames. With considerable fear they do so, while the kukusiut women begin to weep. Non-members are amazed to hear X's voice from the midst of the flames apparently trying to sing a shaman's song. This ruse is carried out by means of a long stick from which the pith has been extracted to make a tube. It has been soaked in water so that it will not burn readily, and one end laid in the fire; X, concealed behind a row of associates, sings into the other, so that his voice appears to issue from the midst of the fire. Often a singer acts as substitute for the dancer, since the tube effectively disguises the voice. The heralds point out how the body is shaking, and the excited uninitiated do not realize that what seems to be movement is a mere optical illusion, caused by the heat shimmer. Gradually the box is consumed and the figure falls asunder. The marshals explain that X's liver is the last part of the body to be burnt. 575* 796*

When X's body has been reduced to ashes, the spies guard the door as at other kusiotem dances, and the ritual previously described is once more enacted. Towards dawn one of the spies who has left the house, rushes back to report that X is coming from the river. In he comes, with his ornaments of dyed cedar-bark smouldering from the flames. The wonder is intense! Slowly he circles the fire, singing his shaman's song of Snitsmän·a. This concludes the long night's ceremonial and the spies allow the guests to depart.

The descriptions already given of other kusiotem rites apply equally to those which follow the Burning dance. There is the same period of waiting followed by nebusam. Details could not be learnt of the portrayal of the burning which is followed by the customary parade of supernatural beings. As in the other cases, X is secluded for some time as if suffering from the effects of incineration.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The Swallowing of Hot Stones Dance

* 575
* 796

If X desires to show his kusiotem prerogative by swallowing hot stones he must, as in all other cases, obtain the consent of the marshals during the summer preceding the ceremonial season when he wished to perform. He then requests the carpenters to meet him in some lonely place in the forest and instructs them to make two copper plates shaped like his stomach. The outer one must so resemble a human body that the uninitiated will be deceived in the dim light of the dance-house, so the carpenters make even a navel in it. The inner plate covers stomach and chest closely, while the outer is held about three inches away by blocks of wood. The aim of the artisans is that the completed object, when fastened to the wearer by a large collar and a belt, will not appear artificial. When the two plates are finished the marshals and leading kukusiut meet in some lonely spot to inspect the result. If it does not measure up to their high standard of excellence, the rite cannot be carried out. Stones are heated in a fire and lifted, one after the other, by tongs and dropped down inside X's collar so as to fall between the two plates. The supposition is, of course, that he has swallowed them. A support of some kind is fixed at the bottom of the double framework so that the pebbles are held there, with smoke issuing from the navel. After each has remained within the "stomach" for about five minutes, it is allowed to fall out through that opening. If the marshals approve of the manufacture, they consent to the ceremony and the plates are carefully hidden for use the following winter.

The dance takes place after the winter solstice and the preliminaries, including final rehearsal, coming of the call, circling of the village, four days of seclusion, and final calling in of the uninitiated, are the same as those already described for other kusiotem rites, except that women are not present to sing mourning songs, because the performer does not die. When all is ready, X circles the fire four times, amid the furious beating of sticks. The plating over his stomach is not apparent in the dim light, especially as much of it is hidden by his collar of dyed cedar-bark and a broad dance-apron. Sometimes the disguise is improved by fastening the skin of a dog, mountain goat, or deer, over the outer surface. X takes up his position, standing, behind the fire. One of the heralds inserts tongs into the flames and draws forth a stone, taking care that the uninitiated can see that it is red hot. X pretends to swallow this, though actually it drops inside his collar to the receptacle between the plates of copper. The clashing can often be heard as it strikes against the metal, and smoke pours forth from the "navel." X groans and jabbers, i·····, while he shakes his fingers violently. After about five minutes the stone is seen to fall to the floor. Sometimes a number of pebbles are used, though one is often considered sufficient. When the last has fallen, non-members are expelled and the kukusiut eat and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. 575* 796*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with other kusiotem rites, the ritual of this dance is continued for four more days. Masks are prepared and on the fourth evening the uninitiated are summoned. A masked figure, wearing a copper stomach, appears and swallows a stone which later falls out through the navel. This is done four times, while Ăno'likwolsaix explains that the guest from above is repeating his actions at home. Following this performance, a procession of supernatural beings appears, in the manner already described.

Although X is not killed by this dance, as are other kusiotem dancers, he is required to undergo the same restrictions.

THE FUNGUS DANCE

Another of the more important kusiut ceremonials is the Fungus dance, now the prerogative of a woman, Snunkka'ks. The name was formerly held by her brother, who had inherited it from his mother's brother. The first Snunkka'ks came to earth in the beginning of time at Stuux and made his repository [424] [778]

[The Fungus Dance]

*575 at O·qwi·, near that village, where it has remained ever since.
*796 It will be convenient to term Snmikka'ks X.

If X wishes to perform, he informs the marshals of his desire and a suitable time is arranged. On the night of nebusam for some other kusiut, the call comes to X who indicates that it has taken possession of him by uttering a low vocal whistle and peering around as if dazed. Kukusiut accomplices sound whistles from without the house, the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the women drone monotonously. After a few minutes, X walks to the side of the fire nearest the door and [787] again gives his low whistle, still looking around in a puzzled manner. This is repeated a third time at the side of the fire, and a fourth, behind it. Thus the call comes upon [illegible]n. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of wha[illegible]s taking place. The kukusiut begin to assemble in X's house, and assist him by the four times repeated frenzied beating of sticks. Next the singers beat out the words of a song already composed for the occasion; the theme for all songs used by Fungus dancers is the land above. The ritual on this night of lsuxtāmem is identical with that already described in the earlier kusiut dances.

*575 On the day following, nusiutālsap, there is not the cus-
*796 tomary collecting of wood from the forest. X merely remains quietly within the back-room, visited only by senior kusiut 532 officials and a skilful carpenter. The latter brings a fungus which he has found in the woods; it must be a good specimen of the common semi-circular shelf variety with a clear white surface unspoiled by decay. On this he paints a face, showing eye-brows, eyes, nose, and mouth, and fastens beneath a miniature body made of dyed cedar-bark with grotesque waving legs, terminating in eagle claws (see Plate 10).[1] The total length of the figure is about nine inches. The fungus, with pendant attachment, is fastened near the end of a stout rope of plaited cedar-bark about eight feet in length, so that when this end of the rope is held uppermost, the head of the fungus hangs in a normal upright position. The carpenter starts his work on

[1] [see category 116, p. 164 (D)- ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

nusiutālsap and has part of that day as well as all of qothm and nēbusam to complete his task. On the evening of nusiutālsap, the kukusiut are summoned as usual to practise X's two songs. The ritual on this night as well as on the following, qothm, appears to be of the usual kusiut type although one informant stated that complete silence reigns in order to spread the fiction among the uninitiated in the neighbouring houses that X is waiting quietly to commune with the supernatural beings, and that consequently the customary dancing is omitted. This is probably a modern deviation from the traditional usage. 575* 796* [532] [178]

On the night of nēbusam a herald summons the kukusiut to X's house with the cry:

Tcālāts dōnai nuxnkōmi dēkusiutai
Come to the little kusiut dance. [539]

This is merely a rhetorical remark since the dance is really one of major import. They enter, and are at once given a small meal.* Then the cry is raised for the uninitiated. When they are seated, X appears from the back-room, carrying before him the fungus, held by the shorter end of rope projecting above, while the longer is coiled up behind it out of sight. The kukusiut begin to beat time furiously as X slowly circles the fire. Then, solemnly and carefully, he sets the fungus on the floor where, to the wonder of the uninitiated, it disappears from sight as though it had sunk into the planks. This is, in fact, the case, since the carpenters have prepared a small hole in the floor through which it disappears, leaving only the cord lying on the surface. Any four kukusiut men are called forward to support X and stand, two on either side of him. The dancer bends down, picks up the string easily with one hand and draws up the fungus into sight, taking care not to raise it high enough to expose the longer end of the rope passing through the hole. He lowers his burden and the fungus disappears from sight. X whispers to one of his four assistants and the latter calls out, as if just prompted:

*This may be also a modern innovation. [178]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Fungus Dance]

*575
*796

"I want a strong man. I want so-and-so," naming a kusiut of powerful physique.

The man so designated comes forward, passes once, sunwise, around the cord, seizes it with both hands, and strains to pull up the fungus. Sometimes he fails to make it appear at all, or he may be able to produce the upper part of the forehead, and he soon returns to his place, baffled. The uninitiated realize that it is a mere fungus, and the puzzle to them is how X can lift it so easily when another fails. The explanation lies in the long rope, of which they are unaware, passing down through the floor of the house to the space between it and the ground. Here are concealed four strong kukusiut whose duty is to hold the end and allow it to be hauled up to a distance indicated by whispered instructions. It would be a major disaster should they become careless or should the rope break. A second kusiut is called forward, but has no greater success than his predecessor, and a third and a fourth also fail. The heralds keep up a running fire of comments; for instance, if one man is able to raise the forehead into view they remark on the fact, saying that he must be a good man to whom the supernatural beings are favourably disposed. If, on the other hand, the cord is drawn down, removing the skin from the palms of the would-be puller, they comment unmercifully on the dislike manifested toward him. When four kukusiut have tried and failed, X again demonstrates his strength, or the willingness of the supernatural beings to respond to his pulling, by lifting the fungus and dangling body into view. Once more a herald calls out:

"The kusiut wants someone to pull."

The challenge is now open to anyone, member of the society or uninitiated, and one after another comes forward, circles the rope, and tries his strength—but without avail. Even the awe of the kusiut dance hall cannot restrain the mirth of the spectators when the rope is quickly pulled below, a painful experience as the writer knows to his cost. Often it is a little girl

[129]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
796*
532
292

PLATE 7

Photograph by the author

Blanket with wooden skulls worn by a cannibal

[p. 164 (A)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575
*796
532
776

PLATE 8

Photograph by the author

Masked figure representing a Ancker

[p. 164 (B)]

Z:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE 9

575*
796*
776
532
292

Photograph by M. J. Harris, Provincial Museum of Victoria

Thunder dance. Notice the cedar-bark collar with pendant tassels and the framework of twigs decorated with eagle down.

[p. 164 (c)]

PLATE 10

575
796
532
142

Photograph by the author

Dancer carrying the fungus

[p. 164 (D)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 11

575*
796*
776
532

Photograph by the author

Thunder carrying the fire-cattle

[p. 164 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575
*796
532

PLATE 12

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

The slave woman with the child on her back

[p. 164(F)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

who comes nearest to drawing forth the fungus and the spectators comment: 575* 796*

"She must be a good girl for the supernatural beings to show their approval."

At intervals X lifts up the fungus, and his strength is shown especially when the cord has been pulled so far down that he can grip only the very end with one finger. The four kukusiut hidden below sometimes become weary of their work and tie a billet crosswise to the rope so that no one can lift it, but of course this must be removed when X demonstrates his prowess again. Towards dawn the concealed helpers cut the rope and X lifts the fungus, holding it in front of his body while the kukusiut women drone. With four assistants pressing closely around him, X turns and makes the motion of throwing the fungus up into the air with a cry of hoip. It vanishes, and the uninitiated do not realize that it has been palmed to one of the accomplices for concealment beneath his blanket. Then one of the marshals explains to non-members that in the land above the supernatural beings once endeavoured to lift up a fungus, but that X alone, referring to that part of him which visits the dances in the land above, could do so. Accordingly it was sent down for mortals to try, and now that they too have failed it has been sent back. He enlarges on the fact that X, through lying quiet for four days communing with the supernatural beings, has really become one, as is indeed the case with all kukusiut who ascend to the land above or experience other peculiar incidents in the course of their performances. This concludes the ceremony; the uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut soon follow. [787]

Instead of a nakusam of the type just described, X has the prerogative of performing in an entirely different manner of which only the outlines could be obtained. The fungus is tied to a long rope and thrown into the rapids. One end of the cord is held by a kusiut on the bank with the result that the fungus whirls to and fro erratically. The kukusiut assemble on the bank and hurl harpoons at it while non-members watch 575* 796* 424

[The Fungus Dance]

*575 *796 [424] from a distance. When one of the participants has speared the object, it is drawn to shore and carried into the house. The uninitiated are then called in and enter, often covering their heads with blankets to prevent their spirits being drawn from them. None of the Bella Coola appears to know what governed, in the old days, the choice between these two performances.

*575 *796 178 The Fungus dance differs considerably from typical kusiut rituals already described. In part this is certainly due to decay of custom. When the writer witnessed the dance in the winter of 1923-4 it was carried out very crudely by Snuukka'ks, who, unwilling to admit this, was secretive about the proper ritual. Consequently, the perfor ıance of the dance was more of a hindrance than a help to the investigator. But even when full weight is given to this circumstance, it is clear that the Fungus dance is peculiar, particularly in the omission of masked figures on nebusam.

*575 *796 821 [424] The ritual on that occasion was further complicated by the fact that Snuukka'ks has also the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of either the sun or the moon, and insisted on this fact being brought out in connection with her songs. Four of these were composed instead of the usual two, and the supernatural beings described in them were:

[533] Ätquntäm: under the name of Sunxälotla.

[776] The Moon.

[532] Smaien·a: This was introduced on account of being the place from which the Salmon-Bringer leaps to the sun. A mask representing this place of petrified power is always painted with salmon designs and the blanket of the wearer is decorated in the same way.

The Snunq mouths that act as posts at the ends of the sun's course.

Stiſim: A supernatural being dwelling under the river who is able to use a fungus in a dance held there. Detailed information about this creature could not be obtained.

[533] At any eclipse, no matter what the season of the year or

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

time of day, X must sing. The heralds call everyone to his house where the singers at once compose a new song, describing sun or moon as the case may be. They then sing it while X dances. Other kukusiut have the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of the sun, and still others at an eclipse of the moon, but X claims to be the only one entitled to dance at both. 575* 796* 821 [533] [424]

THE MYSTERY DANCE

Mystery is the key-note of all kusiut dances, but in the one termed Ält̓mutsämk that element is brought home so forcibly to the uninitiated that it may aptly be called the Dance of Mystery. The Bella Coola explain that the word Ält̓mutsämk means staqam, "What Is Hidden." The essence of the rite, as explained to non-members, is that the supernatural power which has come to the dancer is embodied in three supernatural beings or in manifestations of them. Unless someone guesses its locations, the performer will die. The Mystery dance is one of the most lengthy Bella Coola rituals and necessitates such a lavish expenditure of food that only a rich man can undertake it. 575* 796* [556]

Accounts were obtained of the ritual as carried out by Qoxołän·i of Tcımotl and Saiχnäs of Kimsquit, both of whom have the necessary prerogative. The details differ so slightly in the two localities that only one description need be given, and the dancer can be spoken of as X. The patron of most Mystery dancers is Sänoltχımulelts Älquntäm, but that of Saiχnäs is Kokostxım, a supernatural being remarkable for his wild and erratic behaviour. [424] [776]

When X has stored up as much food as he thinks necessary, he calls the marshals together to tell them of his desire to dance. In case of consent, they admonish him not to hurry matters but to perform the rite slowly and properly. Preliminary arrangements include the choosing of four kukusiut gifted with good memories to store up in their minds the guesses made by the uninitiated. If many kukusiut are anxious to dance, X usually asks permission on the night of a

[The Mystery Dance]

*575 *796 qotlim, and it is agreed that the call shall come to him on the following evening.

X's first task is to prepare, or to have made for him, a stick which he will use throughout the ceremony. It is of yellow [184] cedar, about five feet in length; in Kimsquit it is decorated with four bands of swan feathers, in Bella Coola with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark.

[787] The following evening the call comes to X. He utters a low whistle, resembling a hoot, goes towards the fire and slowly revolves on himself. The kukusiut women present begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Constantly turning on himself, X slowly moves sunwise around the flames, repeating his hoot three times, once at each side of the fire. He stands behind it and calls out loudly:

"Please say exactly what you want; whatever it is, I will do it."

After the customary frenzied beating, he withdraws to the back-room. Heralds go to all the houses, reporting what has taken place and summoning the kukusiut. When all have gathered, X appears and asks for the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a dance-apron. These are provided, put on him and his face is blackened. Under the guidance of a marshal or singer, the kukusiut men beat furiously on the floor, without time or rhythm, until the leader motions them to conclude with four thunderous beats. In the stillness that follows X begins to chatter loudly, without using exact words, and everyone realizes that this is an invitation to guess who are the three supernatural beings in whom his power is localized. Some- [424] times the meaning is made still more evident by his carrying the stick previously mentioned, which is the prerogative of Mystery dancers alone. The guests enter into the spirit of the dance and call out their guesses, naming little known supernatural beings, parts of beings, or manifestations of the supernatural; sometimes three or four answer at the same time. The four remembrancers have placed themselves near X and it is their duty to recollect the replies. When kukusiut alone are present, to forget an answer is not a serious matter, but later on the uninitiated are similarly invited to guess and then correct remembering is essential. After this has gone on for some time, the singers strike up the tune of a song which they have already composed for X.[52] The theme is always of the land above and the wordless chorus, which is said to be the same for Mystery dancers all over the coast, is 'a'yaiweia. The audience listen attentively so that they will be able to join in. When this has been sufficiently practised, a meal is served, amid the admonitions of the marshals. After a second practice of X's song, all is ready for a circuit of the village, the fact that it is about two or three o'clock in the morning being of no consequence.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 796* [533] [171]

X leads the party, followed by a considerable number of kukusiut, among whom must always be his four remembrancers. They go to the lowest house of the village, which X enters, carrying his stick horizontally above his head, and proceeds with mincing steps to the central position behind the fire. He turns on himself and thrusts his staff to the floor where, to the surprise of the uninitiated, it remains upright. They do not know that the end is pointed with bone and that he has taken care to drive it down into a crack. The singers beat out X's song, in which all the kukusiut join, but he does not dance. One of the singers next calls upon the people to beat time furiously with sticks brought for the purpose, and X becomes excited, shrieking out:

"More! More!"

It is supposed that this clamour soothes his mental anguish. A herald calls on members of the household to register their guesses, uninitiated as well as kukusiut being encouraged to do so. The remembrancers use their best efforts to bear in mind the answers which are pouring in. One of the marshals ex-

[52] The actual tune and some of the words may have been chosen by the singers during the day, or several of them have composed tunes and now beat them out in succession until all have agreed on the best composition. Meanwhile the guests wait patiently, for time is of no moment in kusiut dances.

[The Mystery Dance]

*575 *796 plains that until the three correct solutions have been given, X will be able neither to eat nor to sleep. Moreover, this would mean a continuation of the kusiut season far into the spring. X is supposed to know the three answers but to be unable to communicate them, though if a nearly correct reply is given, he shows it by dancing violently. A clever actor is thus able to instil considerable action into the proceedings by leading on an eager guesser with movements of increased animation, but the result is always the same—his dancing grows weaker as if the one replying had strayed into a false path. A marshal explains that the failure is due to the supernatural being Anuyulikailaix having robbed the guesser of his mental ability. When the replies have stopped, X takes up his stick and leaves the house, followed by his escort. He enters the dwelling immediately above, where the same performance is repeated: this is done in each house of the village.

All the kukusiut return with X to his home where what little is left of the night is passed in eating and in listening to speeches from the marshals.

In the morning the carpenters erect a circular enclosure between the fire and the back-room. It is raised on posts about four feet long, has a diameter of approximately twelve feet, and is surrounded by a wall three or four feet high, often decorated with paintings according to the dancer's wishes. The uninitiated are told that X must remain in this, except when on periodic visits to the other houses, until the three answers have been guessed, and that he must not eat, sleep, or even sit down. In recent years the prohibition with regard [178] to eating has been neglected, but it is said that in the last century one man abstained from all food except fern root for two months. X climbs into the enclosure and throughout the day the uninitiated in the other houses can hear the rattling of his dance apron as he moves to and fro.

Just before dusk the kukusiut assemble in X's home, preparatory to sallying forth to every house in the village as on the previous evening. The remembrancers attend him, carefully taking note of the answers. Sometimes they make their task easier by choosing, provisionally, three replies; if anyone should guess one of these it is immediately changed, because the correct solution must be given only in accordance with the wishes of the marshals. After a circuit of the settlement, X returns to the enclosure in his house where, unknown to the uninitiated, his dance-apron is hung on a peg and he lies down to sleep. One of his faithful remembrancers keeps pulling a string which causes the garment to jingle so that non-members, hearing the noise, imagine that X is still walking to and fro. At any time during the night an uninitiated person may call out his guess, his words easily penetrating the stillness. If X is awake when a good answer is received, he encourages the speaker by a call of "More! More!" and a more violent jingling of the apron. If he is asleep and very weary, one of the helpers responds on his behalf, imitating his voice.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
796*

For two days more X remains in the enclosure except when making a circuit of the village. In the early morning and early evening he visits every house, accompanied by his escort of kukusiut, and in each the same ritual is carried out. With each series of answers the task of the remembrancers becomes more difficult. Theirs is an arduous and important part of the rite because it would be a disaster if, when the answer is finally given, an uninitiated person could say:

"That is what I guessed."

On the evening of the third day spent by X in the enclosure, the fourth night after the call, the heralds summon the kukusiut to his house after he has completed his regular round of the village. They practise another song for X, his second, with theme of the land above as in the first case. The uninitiated are now called in. X circles the fire and, when he has taken up his position midway behind it, the kukusiut beat time furiously and guesses are invited. Though both uninitiated and kukusiut use their imaginations to the uttermost, the result is a failure. When this has been repeated four times, the uninitiated are told to leave, and a meal is provided for the

[The Mystery Dance]

*575 *796 kukusiut who listen as usual to words of advice from the marshals.

X retires once more to his enclosure and throughout the night the sound of his rattling apron can be heard. Here he remains for four more days, except when making his round of the village twice daily, or when attending the ceremony of another kusiut. When a qothm comes, X does not immediately put in an appearance, but waits until all other kukusiut have taken their places. Someone asks where X is, and a herald is sent specially for him. He enters, and proceeds at once to the left corner behind the fire where he stands throughout all the dances, moving his feet as if marking time to the music, but not altering his position. When all have danced, both kukusiut and uninitiated are invited to guess X's secret, and answers pour in rapidly. X heightens the interest by pretending that someone has almost solved it before Ānuyulikailaix "pulled back his thoughts," as the Bella Coola express it. He finally passes sunwise around the fire and returns home.

On the evening of the fourth day after the kukusiut were invited to X's house, they are summoned there once more. First they learn a new song, composed for the occasion, then, as before, the uninitiated are called in and everyone tries to guess the three hiding places. This is followed by the same elaborate feast. Henceforth the kukusiut are called to X's house on every fourth evening, and a new song is composed and food distributed on every occasion. X makes two rounds of the village daily, and attends the qothm of every kusiut. This [556] succession of dances may continue for a month or six weeks; in fact, the deciding factor is usually X's desire to distribute no more food. In former times it is probable that the necessity for an emaciation-producing diet was an important consideration in choosing when to conclude the dance.

The time finally comes when X or his family wants the riddle answered. The marshals discuss the matter on the evening preceding one of the regular gatherings of the kukusiut in X's house. Two important points must be settled. First, what are to be the correct answers? The marshals decide on these, but their judgment really depends on the four remembrancers who are able to tell whether any of the replies they suggest have already been given. When Saiqnäs performed, the answers chosen were: 575* 796*

[The Mystery Dance]

Aimaltua, "The Coming of Foul Weather." This word is said to be in the language of the supernatural ones. The implication is that this phenomenon of nature is a manifestation of the will of the supreme deity. [821] [776]

Nuspuxta Smaiaikila, "The Eagle Down Smaiaikila." This has the significance of "The Peace Giving Smaiaikila" since eagle down is a symbol of peace. [825]

Ḱitłmıntämem, "The Yawning Chasm." This is the mysterious crevasse which opens before a foolish man when he tries to gain success. In cases where a white man would attribute misfortune to lack of ability or to sheer bad luck, the Bella Coola say that this supernatural chasm has opened before him. It is especially applied to failure in the giving of potlatches. [777]

Scarcely less important than the choice of answers is the second consideration, who is to give them. The uninitiated have been taught that X cannot live unless his riddles are answered, and also that whoever succeeds in solving them can do so only through supernatural assistance. As in the case of a person who finds a repository, so must the one who solves the problem be made a kusiut. This is an opportunity for an influential man with a son of suitable age and character to have him initiated into the society, and an eager parent can always be found. He is told the proper answers, and instructed to whisper them to his son the following evening. It is impressed upon the father that this must be done only at the last minute, and that every precaution must be taken to prevent the young man from telling his friends that he has been prompted.

Other matters are arranged at the same time. A shaman must be in readiness to assist in binding the future member of the society to secrecy, and every detail is worked out with care. [756]

[The Mystery Dance]

*575 This is such an important occasion that leading kukusiut from *796 neighbouring towns are often invited to be present. If this is [574] to be done, heralds are sent for the purpose during the following day.

Next evening the kukusiut are invited to X's house in the usual manner, many of them unaware that the answer is soon to be given. The customary ritual is carried out and the uninitiated summoned in due course. By this time X is supposed to have been weakened by his long fast, and to give colour to that claim, two assistants support him as he totters feebly to and fro in his enclosure. Instead of waving his stick horizontally above his head, X now rests his weight on it, with his helpers holding the ends. After the customary frenzied beating with sticks, X again invites guesses, but still no one can find the three answers. Meanwhile the father or some elderly friend of the youth chosen to guess correctly, slips down to where he is sitting and whispers to him to try, for example, Aimaltua. The youth timidly does so, and at once X begins to shake violently, and calls frantically:

"More! More!"

*575 In Kimsquit, though not in Bella Coola, the long drawn-*796 out whistling of Snitsmän·a is heard, though of course the un-184 initiated do not know that four kukusiut have been sent out for this purpose. The excitement becomes intense.

The man who is prompting the successful guesser whispers to him the second answer. The young man calls it out and X becomes more and more excited, shaking wildly and shouting:

"More! More! You mortal."

Finally the third answer is given. In Bella Coola the dancer leaps high in the air from his enclosure and falls to the ground beneath as if dead. Saiχnäs of Kimsquit, on the other hand, whose patron is the wild Kokostxum, becomes frenzied, breaks his stick and enclosure and acts like a raging, though feeble, lunatic. Irrespective of X's behaviour, the marshals ask the uninitiated to withdraw, and the growling Cannibals add point to the request. It is at this juncture in Bella Coola

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Mystery Dance]

that the whistle of Snitsmän·a is heard. The uninitiated, hearing the sound from the other houses, realize that the kindly being is approaching and are not surprised when a herald presently comes around to announce that X has recovered. In Kimsquit, X's frenzy slowly leaves him, and from this point onwards there are no differences in ritual between the two localities. The singers beat out a new song, prepared in readiness, of which the theme is Snitsmän·a, "The Restorer." X dances to it, and afterwards to any four of the numerous songs previously composed for him. Then he sits down, the first time he has done so, in public at any rate, since the beginning of the rite. Food is next distributed, the marshals make their usual remarks and the kukusiut finally go to bed. From this point on, the ceremony follows the regular kusiut pattern; this occasion, when the riddles are solved, corresponds to isuxtämem. The successful guesser is dealt with as an initiate in the manner already described. Some of the uninitiated sitting near the youth often realize that he has been prompted by his father, but they regard this as a mere sign of solicitude, assuming that the parent's supernatural power enabled him to solve the problem. It seems clear to them that he could not have known the answer for any length of time because, like others, he had many times guessed and failed.

575* 796* [184] [533]

The next day is nusiutälsap. In the morning all the kukusiut assemble in X's house to learn another new song; this corresponds to the second of a dance which lacks the long preliminaries of this one. A number of kukusiut accompany X to the forest to get the necessary wood for the masks. Mystery dancers have the right to exhibit any, and as many, supernatural beings as they please, hence a large amount of wood must be brought back. In the evening comes the allotment of work. X may do it himself, but usually he asks his father, or some other elderly relative to act on his behalf. Since all his relatives contribute, the actual distribution of labour is not a task in which X alone is concerned. Ano°likwolsaix must be portrayed, and the three best carpenters are entrusted with

575* 796* 532 [424]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Mystery Dance]

*575 masks representing the three successful answers. Little atten-
*796 tion is paid to actual design, and the workmen use their ini-
532 tiative to a considerable extent.[11] One mask always made is that of Snuslaxwai, a being who appears to act as concealer for Älquntäm. As far as could be learnt, if Älquntäm wishes to conceal anything from a human being, such as the hiding-places in a Mystery dance, Snuslaxwai is entrusted with the task. In addition to the usual well-known supernatural beings, X often orders representations of mammals, birds, or fish; he may even ask a man to make a mask without stipulations and then the finished product is as much a surprise to him as to anyone else. There is no relationship between the masks made [55] and the guesses registered. If X is wealthy, the number to be constructed may run to fifty or more. Nusiutälsap concludes in the usual way as soon as all the work has been allotted.

Two days is not long enough for the completion of such a large number of masks, so nebusam must be postponed, and qotlim is correspondingly delayed for four days. In the evening the heralds invite first the kukusiut and then the eager, though [184] fearful uninitiated. They take their places and in Kimsquit, not in Bella Coola, marvel at some of the masks hanging behind the fire, though no explanation is vouchsafed them until the following evening. Presently the singers begin to beat out one of *575 X's songs and he starts dancing violently, only to stop long
*796 before it is ended. The musicians quickly change to another; he performs briefly, then ceases; this is repeated for a third tune, and similarly for a fourth, a fifth, and so on. If the preliminaries have been long drawn out, X may have as many as twenty songs and he dances to a fragment of each. After he has performed, the singers strike up the tune of any kusiut

[178] [11]Possibly this disregard for exact portrayal of supernatural beings is a modern degeneration. The Bella Coola of today say quite frankly that they have forgotten many beings used by their ancestors, so have no hesitation in inventing new designs and naming them even for natural phenomena which they consider must be caused by supernatural agency. On the other hand, the burning of masks, which seems to be an old practice, would tend to lessen conventionalization in all but the best-known figures.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

who has had a call during the season. Nothing further need be said concerning the ritual of qothm which follows the pattern already described. 575* 796*

During the following day a screen of yellow cedar mats is raised in one of the corners behind the fire; it must be large enough to conceal those who are to wear the numerous masks and give them space to fit them on in comfort. The kukusiut begin to gather late in the afternoon and the usual long discussion takes place as the carpenters decide who shall wear which mask, while the marshals move to and fro. There is no stage-manager to settle disputes, but ultimately order evolves from chaos, and when dusk has fallen the heralds are dispatched to invite any kukusiut who have not appeared. When all is in readiness, a shout is raised for the eager uninitiated, who come crowding in to sit near the door. Ano°likwolsaix moves to and fro, in and out of the enclosure, talking all the time, and [285] and fro, in and out of the enclosure, talking all the time, and telling the uninitiated that presently they will see very powerful supernatural beings. The following account is of the masked figures used when Qoxołän·i last performed the dance; it must again be emphasized that their actual choice depends on the wishes of the dancer and his family, and that the order in which they appear is immaterial. His performance was probably the typical nebusam of a Mystery dancer. 575* 796* 532 776

The first to appear are Snusłaxwai and the three hiding-places of X's power. Since they are always uncommon, it follows that no fixed designs are possible, and the carpenters rely upon their own inventive abilities to paint and carve human-like beings. Ano°likwolsaix gives eloquent explanations as the three stalk around the fire and disappear from sight. It would have been equally proper if they had appeared singly.

Next comes Sänołłxmulelts Äłquntäm, wearing a small mask, barely covering his face; above it, in his hair, is dyed cedar-bark puffed out to resemble a wig. He carries a stick with a band of the same material around the middle, and a tuft at either end concealing a nail with sharp, projecting point. Around the fire he dances frantically, leaping into the air, throwing his arms around as if demented, and at times hurling his rod to the floor where the nail prevents it from falling, much to the amazement of the uninitiated. He stoops to pick it up, reverses it, again throws it to the ground, and again lifts it up, all the time gyrating on himself. Finally, with a rush and a leap, he disappears behind the screen whence he came. One of the senior kukusiut, selected for the purpose on account of his knowledge and intelligence, is stationed near the enclosure, and as soon as the supernatural being disappears he explains to non-members who was the visitor. The ever-talkative Ana'likwulsaix confirms and supplements his remarks.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 * 796 532 776

The next to appear is a mätsqus, a wooden figure about two and a half feet in length with proportions equal to those of a toad. It emerges from the matting at one side of the house, and by means of concealed ropes is made to hop across the floor and return. Behind it there appears a masked male figure carrying a huge wooden hammer; the kukusiut shriek, "Kill! Kill!" and the man strikes at the toad-like creature. It has been made in two sections which can be pulled apart by a skilful manipulation of the ropes; this is done as the hammer descends so that it strikes a bladder filled with red dye in the interior. The colouring spatters in all directions like blood, but after a short interval the animal is pulled together and hops off to the enclosure. The kusiut announcer tells the uninitiated:

"That is a toad from the land above, a mätsqus, which came to visit X. It will soon return to its own home."

After a short pause to let the effect of the last apparition sink in upon non-members, the kukusiut raise the cry:

"Look up there."

A porcupine emerges from a small hole in the matting and crawls down a plank, then turns and goes back, pulled by ropes invisible in the semi-gloom. The figure consists of a real skin carefully stripped off and stretched over a wooden framework. The announcer declares:

"It is a porcupine from above, come to visit X."

[522] Two clowns now appear together. Each wears a mask,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776
575*
796*
522
[532]

representing a man whose mouth is open and whose face is wrinkled in a grin spreading from ear to ear. They go around the fire laughing and playing, rolling on the floor and indulging in all kinds of antics, with constant fits of laughter, so deep that it seems to come from their stomachs. Only one or two men in the community can make the hoarse sound required, and they are always asked to appear as comedians. They are entitled to make witticisms, often of an obscene nature, at the expense of any of the spectators, and the ẖẖwsiat always join in laughter at the victim. Sometimes the singers beat out a short tune and the performers dance clumsily, to the amusement of all. When they have withdrawn, the announcer explains that these two spend their time in the land above playing and jesting. If the preliminaries are long delayed, the clowns may be sent out to keep the audience amused while waiting for the more important beings.

the more important beings.

575*
796*
532
776

The Hermaphrodite next emerges. As previously described, he dances around the fire, singing in a peculiar nasal twang, intermediate between the voice of a man and a woman. Few men can do this satisfactorily. When the Hermaphrodite has disappeared, the announcer explains that he always remains outside the house in the land above where he plays with a number of women who stay there, and over whom he is lord. His face is that of a woman, his voice that of a woman, but he has masculine characteristics as well.

Then comes Sxaiaxwax, clad in a blanket of evergreen boughs and wearing as ugly a mask as the maker can devise. The pattern varies according to the skill and originality of the carpenter; a common design is that of a snout-like mouth, somewhat resembling a pig with eyes askew. Sxaiaxwax cannot speak, but he dances around the fire spitting, blowing, and making inarticulate sounds in his throat. When he has gone, the announcer explains that Sxaiaxwax is a very evil being who spends all his time trying to seduce girls, especially those who play with the Hermaphrodite outside Nusqulxwaista. With them he never succeeds, but sometimes he comes to this earth

[The Mystery Dance]

575 with fatal results to his victims. The uninitiated listen and 796 are impressed as Ano'likwolsaix confirms and supplements what has just been told them.

532 After a short pause, the announcer cries, O.....,
776 which serves as an invitation and precedes the appearance of every supernatural being. Snuuq emerges, a man clad in a bear-skin blanket covered with evergreen tufts, and wearing a mask of which the eyes can be made to swing open or shut by the pulling of concealed cords. The monster does not speak; merely circles the fire, terrifying the beholders by his ferocious expression. When the figure has withdrawn, the announcer explains the significance.

The next to appear is a Deer, Sno'olxlts Ālquntām, "The Foolish Son of Ālquntām." The skin and antlers of a real deer are worn by two men with sticks thrust down the legs to make are worn by two men with sticks thrust down the legs to make the representation appear life-like. Two more performers with human masks follow, trying to catch the creature which frisks around the fire and avoids them by escaping back into the enclosure. The announcer informs the audience that this is no ordinary animal, it is a deer from the land above, the son of Ālquntām. This mischievous creature is said frequently to [578] destroy the back-room in his father's house, hence it is a mild term of reproach to call a person Sno'olxlts Ālquntām.

After the usual delay comes the Varied Thrush, an actor [825] with mask representing a bird. This is considered to be the finest bird songster; the Bella Coola say that all animals, including even mountain goats and halibut, gather to listen to its melody. The performer sings, then withdraws, and the announcer and Ano'likwolsaix explain who has just disappeared.

Next is Wolf, a man wearing a tail and the stuffed head of one of these animals. He circles the fire, howling like a wolf, the performer having been chosen for his ability to imitate that sound. The announcer tells the uninitiated that they have just seen a wolf from Nusqulxwaista, and have listened to it howling for Ālquntām; as usual, Ano'likwolsaix confirms his statements. Non-members recognize that Deer, Varied Thrush, and Wolf are really persons, but they have no idea who or what they are, while their whole training, combined with the atmosphere with which the whole ceremony is surrounded, makes it easy for them to believe that they are seeing supernaturally endowed animals. If an uninitiated person should voice his doubts, he would be reported at once to the marshals by a spy and forthwith made a kusiut. 575* 796* 582 776 [781]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Mystery Dance]

The next to come forth is a figure wearing a mask representing a man, and carrying a long stick to the end of which is tied a bundle of burning rags. The actor must be able to run swiftly, and, as he dashes at full speed around the fire, the strips of cloth are drawn out into a flaming stream behind him, producing a spectacular effect in the semi-gloom. Ano'kiwelsaix explains that this is Shooting Star, a supernatural being who behaves peculiarly and who has, therefore, passed rapidly and without the droning invitation that accompanies the passage of the other visitors. When Qaxalin i gave this dance, the rags were dipped in coal-oil to make them burn brightly, and one informant thought that this particular supernatural one was, perhaps, not shown in the old days. It must be remembered that details of the ceremony are constantly changing according to the skill and inventive ability of the carpenters. [178]

To the accompaniment of O····· from the announcer and the droning of the women, there next emerge four masked figures representing the four Carpenters. In whatever ceremonial they appear, their masks are the same because they, as master-artisans, are supposed to have fashioned them for themselves. They dance around the fire without singing and disappear behind the enclosure. Ano'kiwelsaix explains that these are Masmasālānx, the Carpenters of Nuxqulxwaista.

Now Ojolikts Alqustām comes forth. He is the herald of Alqustām who summons the supernatural ones to Nuxqulxwaista for the winter ceremonial. He wears a man's mask, surmounted by a wooden bird which can be made to flap its wings by means of a hidden cord, and he carries a staff on top

2: McDougall E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

*575 of which is a similar bird that disappears within the rod by the *796 pulling of a cord. This being is person of other kakaxiut, but this does not deliver X form displaying him at his ceremonial.
592 Ogalkiu Alpanlem goes around the fire, moving his head in a 776 jerky fashion over his shoulder as if motioning towards something, and Ant'itsmalanic explains that he was issuing an invitation on behalf of Alpanlem.

Then the meeting is drawn aside to expose the figures of Xemsemilalis, Xemcem, Omgemkilka, Similalis, Sumkilka, Semcem, Sulcemem, Kulilac, Simsit *, and Titcapilio *, each wearing a mask with his distinctive painting on it. Xemsemilalis stands in the centre as chief of the party; he calls out impressively, but without using words, then, as he changes his tune, all the figures turn around curwise, shouting as they do so. After this has been repeated four times, the meeting is restored to place. During this, Kulilac and Simsit * do not remain stationary like the others. The former, wearing good blankets and a mask painted with red to give the appearance of an angry man, moves constantly to and fro among the other beings as if trying to obtain presents from them, while Simsit *, the Kingfisher, hops around in imitation of the jerky motions of that bird, continually poking his head forward and pulling it back. When they have vanished, Ant'itsmalanic tells the uninitiated who were the figures they have just seen, and how fortunate they are to be visited by such powerful beings.

After the usual pause, there appears Thunder's herald, Sumsilanem, wearing a mask in human form and carrying a staff in his hand. He leaps violently on the floor with his rod and cries out:

"Come all ye supernatural ones to the dance of Thunder."

At once Tlapu either rushes forth or sticks his head over the meeting and bellows forth:

"No! No! Don't come."

After Sumsilanem has circled the fire and retired to the enclosure he can still be heard violently pounding on the floor and inviting the people to Thunder's dance.

2:58:Dewalt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellecrete NEA

Thupu follows, wearing a huge mask, and goes around the fire, incessantly saying to all: 575* 946*

"No. No. Don't come." 532

When he has withdrawn from sight he continues to counteract the herald's invitation. Ant'ikwelaic explains that Ahwaiknow is herald to the mighty Thunder, while Thupu is a jealous-minded individual who does his best to ruin all ceremonials. She adds that he will not succeed on this occasion, and that Thunder will presently appear. 776

As evidence of Thunder's near approach there next emerges Rainwater, a masked figure who dances silently around the fire, raising and lowering his outstretched arms. Ant'ikwelaic hurriedly gives the name of the visitor, then the announcer cries out as loudly as possible: "Thunder the mighty, the leading kachina of all the supernatural ones is coming; he will condescend to speak to the uninitiated."

The women drums and the kachina beat violently with sticks on the floor, then the meeting is drawn back to disclose Thunder himself, standing on a raised box. He wears a huge mask, with hooked nose and bulbous forehead, which is so heavy that the wearer must have pads of soft cloth to ease the weight against his skin. The upper part of his body is entirely covered with dyed and undyed cedar-bark, his wrists and ankles are similarly adorned, around his stomach is a dance-apron, and in either hand he carries a stick embellished with more bark. Sometimes for a considerable period he does not move from his stand, but remains silent, throwing his arms back and forth towards the corners of the house where a number of men are rattling heavy stones in boxes to increase the reverberations of thunder; this extension of the arms serves to concentrate in himself his power which is manifest in the sound. When he has sufficiently impressed the audience, he turns around and leaps down; the drums beat, the sticks rattle, the men working the boxes with stones shake them violently, and Thunder shrieks out, all of which, added to the crash with which he has landed upon the floor, makes a colossal din. He dances around the 575* 946* 776

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575
1996
776
[532]

fire, while the women drone out an accompaniment. The mask has but one opening for eyes and nose, blinding the performer, so that he has to be guided by X, and two other kukwist, though the necessity for their services is not apparent to the uninitiated. The faces of these conductors are blackened and they wear collars of dyed cedar-bark, but no masks; one of them carries some eagle down which he keeps blowing over Thunder's head. To the ignorant spectators it appears as if these guides were really deferential attendants.* When the mighty supernatural one has almost completed a circuit of the fire he stops, holds out his shaking arms over it and absorbs power from the smoke; then ressends the box behind the matting from which he first jumped. One of the kukwist thrusts into his hand a perforated rattle containing smouldering cedar-bark. Carrying this (see Plate 11),[5] Thunder again leaps down and dances around the fire, guarded as before by X and two assistants, but this time shaking out burning sparks from the rattle. Now, instead of the drumming of the women alone, there is a prodigious racket as he goes around; the drums are beaten, the sticks are rattled, a man concealed on the roof stamps and clatters on the boards, another pounds on loose planking with a heavy stone, while Thunder himself keeps calling out in a booming voice. Again he pauses to absorb power from the fire before retiring behind the matting, which is then drawn. The announcer cries out:

"The fire kwisa of the supernatural ones has been with us; his fire is too wonderful for us."

[533]

He drums and there appears a masked figure of Sipalowém. This being dances around the fire, without speaking, but at intervals drenching the audience with water from a dish which he carries. When he has completed his circuit and withdrawn, Ax'kwalnaix discourses upon Thunder, informing the uninitiated that his fire-rattle is the bird of the lightning, a mysterious creature about which little is known. She adds that *Similar guide attendants often accompany other supernatural beings.

§ [See category 116, p 164(E) "Analysis"]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sipalxnaw is the rain that accompanies a thunder-storm, hence the water with which the audience was soaked. 575* 796* 776

There next comes forth an actor wearing a man's mask and carrying in his hands a sounding-board and beating-sticks, as if he were a singer, ready to perform at a ceremony. He arranges these in place, constantly glancing back over his shoulder towards the enclosure, then calls, and out jumps Niqlo, wearing a mask which makes his face appear long and very narrow. He shuffles his feet, moves his head from side to side, sways his body to and fro as if he were starting a spectacular dance, finally gyrates wildly for a very short period, without accompaniment from the man who preceded him, and then goes back to the enclosure instead of circling the fire. The apparent singer picks up his equipment and follows his principal out of sight. Ewi'lkwulaic explains that Niqlo is a most spectacular supernatural dancer, who was unwilling to give an exhibition of his full skill on this occasion. [532]

Meanwhile preparations have been made for the second appearance of Thunder. The large mask is so heavy and constricts the breath to such an extent that very few men are strong enough to bear it for more than two dances around the fire. The first wearer has now transferred his disguise to a second man of about the same build, and when the matting is again drawn aside, it is to disclose Thunder standing on his raised box as before. Often a few variations are introduced; instead of extending his arms to attract his power, he may simply revolve with waving arms and turning head. When ready, he signals to those with drums and beating-sticks, then jumps down with a crash which is echoed by all the noise-making contrivances in the house. Thunder dances around the fire much as upon his first appearance, and inhales strength from the smoke of the central fire before returning to the raised box. He receives the rattle containing smouldering bark, and once more circles the house; after that he withdraws and the matting is pulled into place. Sipalxnaw comes forth and drenches the audience with water, but Ewi'lkwulaic does not [532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 speak on this occasion as the explanation has already been 746 given.

776 After a short pause the announcer calls impressively:
"Take care! The kaokas are coming."

From within the enclosure there is heard the clacking of beaks, and presently a kaokas backs out. The mask, about [532] three feet in length, is that of a long-beaked bird, of which the lower mandible can be made to strike against the upper to cause the snapping noise. The wearer has little clothing but much dyed cedar-bark which conceals the stick that runs from the mask down his back to counterbalance the weight of the projecting beak. Another kaokas likewise comes out backwards, then a third and a fourth. The four dance around the fire, snapping their beaks and uttering their cry, Hao, hao, hao, in unison to the stamp of their feet on the floor. X, with three assistants, accompanies them, apparently out of respect to the supernatural visitors and to guard the uninitiated from them in case they should become ferocious, but in reality to [532] direct the steps of the actors whose cumbersome masks prevent them from seeing where they are going. A touch from one of the guides, or even the sound of his voice, is enough to tell the gyrating performer in which direction to move. When the kaokas have disappeared, Ano'kiwelsaix explains who the visitors were.

[532] Next appears a Snail. The mask used is human in form, and the painting may or may not indicate the being represented. The wearer proceeds very slowly around the fire, turning neither to right nor to left, and withdraws. Ano'lik-nalsaix explains that this is a Snail from Nusqulxwaista which has come to visit X.

[532] Another man-like figure now comes forth, his mask painted to represent a fish. Like the Snail he circles the fire without any special type of dance and withdraws. This is the Red Rock Cod, a fact which Ano'kiwelsaix makes clear to the uninitiated.

Finally, the time comes when the last supernatural visitor

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

has retired from sight. Ano'likwolsaix gives her customary dance, her head bent as if she constantly wished to rest it on someone's shoulder, and her opposite arm waving violently. After one circuit of the fire she withdraws from sight behind the matting. Then the marshals tell the uninitiated to withdraw, and the growling Cannibals hurry them forth. The evening's ceremonials conclude in the usual way, except that the masks are not burnt. 575* 796* [776] [532]

The length of time required for the figures to appear and perform is so great that nebusam can seldom be completed on a single night. When the marshals decide that it is too late for further drama, they can call a postponement at any time; the uninitiated are told to withdraw and the kukusiut disperse shortly afterwards. The following evening they are recalled and the ritual is carried on from the point where the break was made. In this account it has been assumed that it is possible to complete the display without postponement.

Four nights later everyone is called back once again. The kukusiut first take their places, and then the uninitiated are summoned. The ritual on this occasion is identical with that just described for nebusam with the same promenade of supernatural beings and the same explanations by Ano'likwolsaix. After the uninitiated depart the masks are burnt, two at a time, in the manner previously described, this being the last event in the Mystery Dance. [532]

THE DANCE OF Winwina

Noakgnum is not, according to Bella Coola mythology, the only bringer of salmon to the river, nor is he the only one whose action has been dramatized as a kusiut dance. A similar purveyor of fish is Winwina[*] who comes every year to Bella Coola. Boas (p. 38) has recorded the origin myth connected with the rite, and states that the movements of this being influence the duration of the kusiut season; this observation was not confirmed. Winwina is supposed to return from the 575* 796* 776 825 184 824

[*] Also called Kwakwatlatsa, "What Brings Our Food."

2:. McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 *796 776 825 184 824

land of the salmon early in January, and it is owing to his successful raid that there is a plentiful supply of fish the following year. The fact that the Bella Coola attribute the same function to Noākynim provides no difficulties to native philosophers.

"Different individuals have different stories," they say, and the fact that the two are contradictory is a matter of no consequence.

773 824 825 539

The incidents described in the following myth are always spoken of as having taken place long ago, and yet the coming of Winwina is an annual event, a confusion disconcerting to the investigator though not to the Bella Coola themselves.

Winwina[*] once led a raiding party against the salmon, whose home is far to the west, and against the berries who live in a flat and warm country beyond even the land of salmon. His crew consisted of birds who are spoken of in the myth by unusual designations, said to be either their supernatural or their kusiut names. One informant spoke of these beings as individuals, and only added that they were birds as an afterthought, while another emphasized their avian rather than their human characteristics. This is not surprising, considering that the story belongs to the distant past when birds and human beings were not as clearly differentiated as they now are. Winwina's crew consisted of:

The Bald Eagle, Tsāwak;

The Hawk (l) species, Ānukiqakstin;

The Raven, 'Ānwaqālain, "He Who Talks at Dawn and Wakens Everyone";

The Water Ouzel, Tlīkmaxstlīkla, "The Walking One";

The Great Blue Heron, Masaxilian, "Long Neck";

The Hermaphrodite, Ala'yas;

The Cormorant, Kwakwatl'la, who joined the expedition at Bella Bella as a passenger;

Four lazy supernatural beings, Kamālāl.

The expedition was under the especial protection of Kalasta, a female supernatural shaman, who guided the canoe in which the raiders travelled by the force of her intellect as if it had been a compass. After a lengthy journey, the party reached the land of the salmon where the clouds obligingly drifted low in the heavens so that the fish could not see their

[*] A word etymologically connected with wina, the Bella Coola term for raid.

[192]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Winwina]

foes. Each of the crew captured a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 773

The Bald Eagle captured the spring salmon, Oltoldimut, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk captured the sockeye salmon, Nunuitkentinum, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers." 539

The Raven captured the hump-back salmon, Ănukpmaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers."

The Water Ouzel captured the dog salmon, Sgaistwa, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the calm weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron captured the cohoe salmon, Kpapstustusailaix, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant captured a variety of dog salmon, Ostpax, for the Bella Bella.

The Hermaphrodite was also successful and filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of berry captives.

As soon as the raiders had achieved their purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their booty; since that time there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and released the dog salmon there; that is why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola kukusiut have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reasons given for the use of Wiwuina as patron likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Alquntăm placed the name Nunushmai in a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Qo, near Staur. He had two reasons for so doing: he did not wish it to be defiled by passersby brushing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the name to be the first to see the return of Wiwuina. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have purified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nunushmai has had the kusut prerogative of seeing Wiwuina. 424 773 778 [776]

[The Dance of Winwina]

424 Another kusiut derived the prerogative of having Winwina 773 as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 43). After 776 Raven had seen Noākynim and obtained him for Āllilimnā-losaix, he flew down the fiord once more, observed Winwina, and made him patron for Omqomkilika.

*575 The ritual of the dance of Winwina does not vary, irre-
*796 spective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

[778] This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository [424] is actually in the ocean a few yards from shore.

[184] Winwina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the January moon is full;[97] accordingly X consults the marshals and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a raised enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most kusiut dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the kukusiut happen to be present on the evening of this day, X mounts to the enclosure and sits there, looking westward for the return of Winwina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X [292] wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail feathers, but his face is not blackened.

For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the west, and meanwhile no uninitiated dare even to pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the kukusiut who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning, [805] [97] Owing to faulty calendrical observations the exact date is seldom found.

[The Dance of Winwina]

though perhaps you cannot hear him because Winwina is making so much noise." 575* 796*

The meaning of this statement is difficult even to surmise and the Bella Coola themselves appear to be ignorant of it. It is said that the words are archaic. The kukusiut women at once begin to drone and the uninitiated flee, sometimes falling over one another in their eagerness to escape from the house, for the whistles are sounding and X has had his call. An eloquent kusiut stands beside him, apparently listening to him, and at intervals whets the curiosity of the audience by saying:

"I will tell you all about it in a minute."

The person who appears to be listening is one who knows the story of Winwina and as soon as X has stopped, he proceeds to relate it to the audience,* as if he had just learnt it from the dancer. It is possible that even some of the kukusiut are deceived, but in any case they are so accustomed to acting that they practise it even when no uninitiated are present. The singers are especially attentive and presently begin to strike out a new song composed for the occasion. The theme is of Winwina himself and his bird crew, and of the lazy Kämälälkt; the audience listens eagerly and practises the composition. Afterwards food is distributed amid admonitions of the marshals as is customary on the night of kustämem. [533]

Next morning a second song is practised for X, and then a number of kukusiut go with him to the forest to bring in the wood required for the ceremonial. In the evening members of the society assemble in X's house for the allotment of carpentry tasks. The most important requirement is a canoe, shaped like a bird, and with bird figures as members of the crew. Considerable ingenuity is displayed in the manufacture of this; it is large enough to fill most of the rear part of the house, and, being bottomless, can be made to move by men concealed within. Several carpenters usually work together at this task. X also orders wooden replicas of the different 575* 796* 532

*Perhaps this is the reason that the origin myth of this dance is better remembered than most.

[The Dance of Winwina]

*575 *796 532 kinds of salmon captured by Winwina. In their efforts to make realistic representations, the artisans often use the skins of steel-head salmon, the only variety obtainable in winter, stretched over wooden frames, and painted. Various women are asked to make imitations of berries captured by the Hermaphrodite. In each case X requests one woman to make a certain berry, root, or bark used for food, and so many are needed that he often becomes weary from constantly calling out his requirements. As on other nusiutälsap, the songs are practised, food is served, and the usual ceremonies occur.

The next morning, that of qotlim, the carpenters, both men and women, start early at their work. The method of making the salmon has already been described, but a word should be said about the berries. They are made of dyed cedar-bark, undyed cedar-bark, and snow-berries, the only material available in winter. The workmanship varies enormously; some realistic articles are turned out, others are exceedingly crude. In the evening booth kukusiut and uninitiated are summoned to X's house for the usual protracted ceremony of qotlim night.

*575 *796 825 Nebusam follows the next day. The wooden salmon and berries are placed in a convenient spot behind the fire, and in the evening X asks some one of the senior kukusiut to assist him in their display. Sometimes one of the marshals undertakes this duty, and at any rate they have to express their approval of the dancer's choice. The kukusiut are the first to assemble, and when the last details have been arranged the uninitiated are called in and marvel at the canoe behind the fire. The kusiut chosen to assist X stands beside it, holding the wooden spring salmon in his arms, its head upstream.

"What is it?" he asks the uninitiated. "If you recognize which salmon it is you will be successful in catching that kind next summer."

The uninitiated are thus urged to guess, but fear of the kukusiut acts as a deterrent, and it is often some little time before a plucky youth calls out which salmon he thinks it to be. Once the first answer has been given, it is only a matter of a few minutes before some alert young man gives the successful reply. 575* 796* 825

[The Dance of Winwina]

"Yes," says the kusiut holding the salmon. "It is a spring salmon, called Oltoldimut by the supernatural beings. Tcäkwak captured it."

The bearer goes once around the fire, still holding the salmon, while the kukusiut women drone and the sticks are pounded furiously. Four times during his circuit he tosses the fish in his arms as if it were jumping, and all the kukusiut call out ye···· he····, as they do when a salmon jumps in the river. He finally throws the fish on the central fire and the beating of sticks stops with almost startling suddenness. The same kusiut next picks up the wooden representation of a sockeye salmon and the same procedure is carried out; it too is thrown on the fire when its species has been ascertained. In succession, imitations of hump-back, dog, and cohoe salmon are displayed and cast in the flames. It is seldom that the uninitiated realize that the fish are being shown in the order of their coming in the spring, and their consequent failure to answer promptly is a source of considerable secret amusement to the kukusiut. The Bella Bella dog salmon, held with its head downstream, is the last fish shown. The representation is always made long and lean, to the annoyance of the Bella Bella, and when the holder makes it jump, the people call out nothing but he····.

Soon after the last salmon has been burnt the displayer holds up the first bunch of "berries" and calls on the young uninitiated women to guess what kind is represented. 575* 796*

"If you guess right, you will find plenty of them next summer," he says. 824

Somewhat shyly the girls register their guesses, but the choice of berries is so great and the workmanship so poor that a considerable time often elapses before the correct answer is given. As soon as this is done, the exhibitor carries the fruit around the fire and throws them on the flames in the same

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Winwina]

*575 way as with the salmon, except that the jumping is omitted.
*796 The order of display is according to the time of ripening for 824 each, but there is so much difference of opinion about this that no rigid order is maintained. The first shown is always the cow-parsnip, but after that there is no definite sequence. The following "berries" were shown at a dance not many years ago: cow-parsnip; Ribes laxiflorum; wild gooseberry; tall bilberry; thin-leaved bilberry; blueberry; black huckleberry; red elderberry; dwarf bilberry; Ribes bracteosum; salalberry; Canadian buffalo berry; wild red raspberry; blackberry, Rubus spectabilis Pursh.; salmon-berry; black hawthorn; flowering juneberry; bunchberry; wild rose; red bearberry.

The informant was not certain that the above was the exact order in which the berries were shown on the occasion described. It is probable that it is approximately correct, however, since he added that the wild strawberry had also been shown, but as he could not remember its correct place he had omitted it. Other old men stated that the following food [262] plants had been used at other Winwina dances: ilk, one of the [177] Fritillaria, species undetermined; perennial clover; black raspberry; crabapple; cranberry; fern root; bracken root. Foods introduced by the white man were shown at a recent dance, including: potato, carrot, turnip, and a miniature can of pre-[273] served peaches, such as are commonly used in the manufacture of native wine.

*575 Sometimes no one is able to guess the object represented,
*796 and when all have grown discouraged the exhibitor puts his ear against X's mouth. The uninitiated assume, of course, that the dancer's supernatural power makes it easy for him to tell the answer and that he is transmitting the information to the bearer who promptly gives it. If an uninitiated person should guess the correct response rapidly, it is taken for granted that she has found favour with the supernatural beings. When the last berry has been thrown on the fire, a kusiut stands up and starts a song describing the Hermaphrodite and his actions in the land above. The singer provides his own time by beating

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Winwina]

on the floor with a stick and the women sing with him. Food is then given to all and the people disperse. 575* 796*

It will be noted how greatly this dance differs from the usual kusiut pattern, especially in the omission of a nekusam when masks are used. Instead of the ritual just described, X has the option of using another, similar to the customary kusiut type. The following ritual has not been carried out for many years so it is probable that many details have been overlooked. No information was obtainable about the motives governing X's choice of dance. [424]

As in all kusiut dances, the first essential is to select a suitable time, a matter of arrangement with the marshals. The night chosen for the coming of the call is often the nekusam of some other kusiut, and the uninitiated are at once expelled. The kukusiut gather in X's house, where the singers beat out the song composed for the occasion, describing Winwina and his crew, especially the four Kämälälkl who were not only too lazy to capture any booty, but wanted to sleep all the time and could be roused only by being drenched with cold water. The audience listens attentively and then practises the song; X often dances but it is not important since no uninitiated are present. There are no unusual features in the ritual of this night of Inxtämem.

The next day is nuxiutälsap when the wood is brought in for masks, the making of which is allotted in the evening. Five only are required; one of Ano'likwolsaix and four of Kämälälkl. The ritual is of the ordinary type both on this night and on qutim. [532]

When the uninitiated are called in on the evening of nekusam they see X standing behind the fire, as if to guard the two masked figures standing on either side of him. Fluent speakers are selected to wear these masks of Kämälälkl and they enliven the proceedings by their arguments.

"I captured the sockeye salmon," says one.

"You liar!" replies another. "You were asleep. It was I who seized the sockeye salmon."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 They dispute in this manner concerning the capture of every kind of salmon and even about the berries. Ano'likwo-lsaix keeps up a running stream of comments to the uninitiated.

"Listen to the stupid Kämälälkl. That is what they did when they went with W'inwina. They spent most of their time sleeping, and the rest of it arguing. Don't you be such silly fools as they are. Watch what you are doing, and you may be fortunate enough to see me in the woods and become a kuziut."

As soon as the uninitiated have watched these beings for a time, they are expelled and the ritual ends in the usual manner.

763 776 In conclusion, a word may be said regarding the attitude of the Bella Coola to W'inwina and his canoe. Like all other supernatural manifestations it is capable of bringing good or evil to the beholder. An ancestor of every W'inwina dancer must have seen it and obtained it as patron, but it is a dangerous visitor none the less. Sometimes, at night, a hunter encamped on one of the fiords hears a grunting sound accompanied by short paddle strokes; if he calls out "yaa!" loudly, no harm will come to him, but if he omits to do so he will soon die. One informant affirmed that within his lifetime a party of Kimsquit hunters were waiting for high tide when they heard the grunting. They failed to hail the craft and presently a sound reached them as if a number of paddles had been placed in the water to check the course of a canoe; in fact, the ripples splashed on the shore at their feet. In a few years they were all dead.

THE DANCE OF MOTHER-NATURE

*575 *796 824 [184] [776] One of the most interesting of the Bella Coola dances is that portraying Nawaxéka, who is virtually Mother-Nature, giving birth to the flowers and trees in the spring. The following account is of the manner in which Kalée-i, a Kimsquit man, performed the rite. The ritual appears to be identical in Bella Coola, so only one account need be given, and the performer may be spoken of as X.

This dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject to the usual consent of the marshals. No description need be given of the coming of the call and of the ritual of lsuxtämem. A large amount of wood is required, and on the night of nusiutälsap the many carpentry tasks are allotted. A large masked wooden figure is made to represent Mother-Nature herself, two more of the elderly women who attend her, and one of the inevitable Ano°likwolsaix. Besides, masks must be made of almost all the flowers and the trees, their number only limited by X's willingness to reward the carpenters. It is said that formerly as many as three hundred masks were sometimes ordered. 575* 796* 824 [532]

[the Dance of Mother-Nature]

No detailed description is required for qotlum, but the ritual on nebusam differs from that of all other dances. Early in the morning a number of kukusuit gather in X's house where the carpenters decide on two old women to wear masks representing hags of great age and ugliness. A number of kukusiut accompany them to the bottom house of the village where they call out: [532]

"We are in great trouble. Our daughter's child is long overdue. If you know of any good medicines, will you not give them to us for her?"

The kukusiut drone when they see and hear these supernatural visitors, and many of them give medicines to the old women to increase the realistic effect. This is repeated in every house of the village.

That night when all is ready, the uninitiated are called in and take their places in the two corners near the door. They see in the central position behind the fire a large wooden figure wearing the mask of a woman in the pangs of labour with enormously distended stomach. She is Nunuoska, Mother-Nature, though the uninitiated do not know this as yet. She lies on some raised planking; slightly below her are two old women carrying sponges of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, as if they were midwives prepared to wash a new-born infant. Two matting enclosures have been constructed, one in each of the rear corners of the house, large enough to hide the per- [532] [844]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 formers who are chosen for their small stature. Ano°likwolsaix
*796 stands up ready to explain as usual. One of the actors now 824 comes forth from beneath Mother-Nature's stomach, as if born [532] of her, wearing a mask surmounted by a carved stick repre-[844] senting the leaves of the willow. The nurses handle the performer, as if washing a new-born child, and announce:

"It is a boy, Willow Leaves," just as a midwife might state the sex of an infant.

Willow Leaves dances around the fire, at intervals saying, "I am Willow Leaves."

Ano°likwolsaix adds her comments: "Yes. There is Willow Leaves, see him."

The masked figure goes into the matting enclosure out of sight. The next plant to be born is Gooseberry, for whom the same procedure is carried out, before he, too, disappears. In succession, a few minutes apart, come Nettle, all kinds of Grass, and Western Skunk Cabbage. Each is washed and the sex announced; then the figure dances and Ano°likwolsaix comments as before. A good dancer is always chosen for the next figure, Black Cottonwood, who is "born" in the same way, but instead of vanishing into the enclosure remains dancing to and fro on the upper, upstream, side of the house. After him comes "The Dancing Tree," the American Aspen. An agile man is likewise chosen for this part and he remains dancing back and forth on the lower, downstream, side. Ano°likwolsaix announces, amid breathless interest: "The South Wind is coming."

*575 This figure enters the house by the front door, wearing the *796 mask of a handsome young man. He goes to Nanuaska like a 824 doctor called in to assist, and when he stands up, her face 532 appears like that of a happy woman who has just given birth. The uninitiated do not realize that a new mask has been put on Mother-Nature while her face was hidden from their sight. The South Wind then retires to the lower side of the house, where he dances to and fro near Aspen, at intervals going up to his patient. In rushes the North Wind, but he is too late to accomplish his design of destroying Mother-Nature in the act of delivery, and he remains dancing to and fro on the upper side of the house, not far from Black Cottonwood. The advent of the South Wind has helped Mother-Nature, so in close succession there follow masked figures, representing the plants, trees, and shrubs known to the Bella Coola. Those first to appear, prior to the coming of the South Wind, have been early ones in the order of their showing signs of green; afterwards there is no fixed sequence, except to follow as closely as possible that of their appearance in the spring. When Black Hawthorn is being born there is great difficulty; he kicks, squirms, and cries, requiring the assistance of both attendants and the South Wind. As soon as his name is announced the meaning of the trouble becomes plain; it is because the fruit is bitter and causes griping in the stomach. The performance is a lengthy one; the same masks appear repeatedly, but the painted stick representing the flower or leaves is changed. Through the long period of their birth, the Willow, Aspen, North and South Winds continue their dancing, the North Wind trying at intervals to reach Mother-Nature, but always repulsed by the watchful South Wind. To the uninitiated it appears wonderful, perhaps miraculous, that so many beings can be hidden in so small an enclosure; in reality, no more than fifteen actors are used, they simply change their masks and reappear. The last masked figure represents After-birth, a moss which does not appear until late in the season after all the other plants have come to life. Instead of going around the fire, this figure hides quickly by lying down out of sight.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 796* 824 532

The uninitiated are sometimes sent away at this point, at other times they are allowed to wait to hear the meaning of the whole ceremonial. X asks an able hasiat to act as orator. This man explains that we would have no food if the South Wind had not been able to drive away the North Wind before he hurt Mother-Nature as she gave birth to the plants, which form so important a part of the food supply. If not already expelled, the uninitiated are sent out at this point and the

575* 796* [824]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 kukusiut send back X's call in the usual manner. Then, two 996 by two, the masks are cast on to the fire and the ceremonial is over.

THE DANCE OF THE TALLY POSTS

[773] As previously described, a tally post is erected in the land [777] above for every Bella Coola at birth. As long as this memorial [753] is upright and firm, the individual to whom it refers enjoys health and prosperity, but if it becomes crooked he falls ill.
[424] The uninitiated believe that several kukusiut have the prerogative of climbing to the land above during the ceremonial season and straightening leaning tally posts. This is such a [178] useful ability that it must have exercised great influence on [164] the uninitiated in early days, but the rite has not been properly carried out since the smallpox epidemic in the last century. The following account was obtained from two old men [115] who remembered the manner in which a certain Owikstl of Tsmoil performed a year or two before "The Great Sickness." Neither of the informants was a kusiut at the time, but they were able to supplement their recollections of the dance with what they afterwards learnt when initiated, so the following account is probably accurate in outline though deficient in detail. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X, and describe the ceremony in the present tense. It was also performed at Kimsquit many years ago.

The rite resembles kusiutem dances in many respects. X must obtain the consent of the marshals during the preceding summer, and their permission is refused unless the prospective dancer is a man of proved discretion. If they agree, X asks a [288] number of kukusiut women to help him by making a very long and strong rope of nettle fibre. At intervals the work-women gather for the purpose in the back-room of X's house, taking [488] care that no uninitiated see what they are doing. Every effort is made to ensure that there is no flaw in the rope as a break would be a serious matter, punishable by death.

Near the winter solstice the marshals choose a suitable time for the dance to start, and X suddenly cries out that he is feeling peculiar. The night selected is usually that of the nuhuxam of some other kusiut, and X is at once escorted to his own house from which the uninitiated are expelled. For that night and the two following he remains concealed within, leaving only when necessary and taking care that no uninitiated see him. During the afternoon following the third night of concealment, a large number of kukusiut gather in X's home and escort him to the lowest house of the village. He goes around the fire shaking a rattle violently and calling out: 575* 796*

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

"More! More! Please say exactly what you want and I will do it."

The uninitiated have been told that X has been unable to comprehend the impending call, hence they have no difficulty in realizing that this is a request to his supernatural patron to be more explicit.[11] This appeal is repeated in every house of the village in order from bottom to top. The rite is so important that X often summons kukusiut from neighbouring towns and, on the occasion described, the dancer proceeded to Sunaf with his escort and there entered every dwelling with the same request that he had made in his own village. [628]

In the evening X returns to his home where presently the kukusiut gather from the villages that he visited. The uninitiated from adjacent houses hear whistling so are not surprised when heralds enter to announce that a call has come to X. The ritual is of the regular lnxitämem pattern and a song is composed and practised; the theme is of X's ability to visit the land above but the type is that of a shaman's song. The ritual concludes in the usual manner. [533]

The next day, nuxiustälxap, the customary raised enclosure is erected and a number of kukusiut gather wood in the forest. In the evening the carpenters are requested to make a long ladder, the only paraphernalia required. The evening's ritual ends as usual. [417]

[11] The patron for this dance could not be learnt.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

*575 *796 [417] During qatim and nakuam days the carpenters gather in X's house where they construct a long ladder. The uprights and rungs are of split cedar, and each of the latter is decorated with a tuft of dyed, and a tuft of undyed cedar-bark; two white eagle-tail feathers are fastened to the top. In the afternoon of nakuam, a kusiut who is also a chief blackens his face, dons a collar of dyed cedar-bark and sallies forth to invite guests from the adjacent villages. About the same time the smoke-vent in X's house is pushed back and the ladder is erected, projecting a considerable distance above the roof. The uninitiated see it clearly and wonder what it may portend. In the evening the kukusiut assemble and the singers beat out X's two songs for the benefit of the guest visitors. Then the uninitiated are called in. They see the lower part of the ladder, and gaze with wonder on X who keeps walking backwards and [292] forwards in his raised enclosure, clad in a dance-apron and a black blanket to which is tied one end of the long rope. Two kukusiut assistants hold a section of it as if to anchor him. The dancer carries a rattle which he keeps shaking violently. His two songs are sung and everything is now ready for the main performance. Still shaking his rattle, X climbs the ladder and disappears from sight through the roof, dragging the rope after him. The sound of the rattle grows gradually fainter and fainter, but the cable is steadily drawn up through the opening. It is so realistic that the uninitiated hardly require the explanation given by an eloquent kusiut that a strange power has come to X, enabling him to climb up a ladder which lengthens of its own accord until he will ultimately reach the land above. The orator explains how the dancer will be able to straighten the tally posts, and thus have it in his power to govern the life of an individual, though normally it is only the supernatural beings who can do so. In this connection he employs the term [192] mulatsta, a word seldom used which has the significance of "A Measuring of the Span of Life."

As at kusiutem dances, spies guard the doorway and threaten death to the kukusiut unless X return in safety. No one is permitted to leave, and the uninitiated gain in amusement as the seemingly endless rope continues to be drawn up through the roof, although the cattle itself can no longer be heard as if X had passed beyond earshot. They do not know that he has merely stepped from the ladder to the roof of the house, and thence to the ground, taking care to loop the cord over a projection so that he can continue drawing it out steadily. He has carefully practised cording so that he can gradually lessen the intensity as if he were passing beyond ear-shot. One of the marshals describes the dangers to which X is exposed on his journey aloft, and calls on the kakaxiut to sing his two songs to aid him. They are sung several times, but no others are used during the long night, nor are puppet-persons employed as in kwakiutlan rites. The rope is being drawn from a large coil on the floor near the fire, and when the carpenters notice that it is nearly exhausted one of their number slips out to call X to stop his climb. Presently, one or two yards of rope are quickly pulled through the hole in the roof and then all movement stops. 575 * 796 *

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

"He has jumped," cry the kakaxiut.

A fluent kaxiut explains to the uninitiated that the roof of the land above has opened before X's ever-lengthening ladder, that he has leapt from it to the ground above and tied his rope to something. On one occasion, a malicious xiut cut the cable hoping that no one would notice the break, but luckily one of the wonderful carpenters noticed it in time to knot the two ends. The kakaxiut always explain that the rope is X's point of contact with the lower world, and that if it is severed, he cannot return. Accordingly, if the broken end had been drawn up through the roof, X could never have come back, and only his secret death would have served to maintain the reputation of the society. [172] 575 * 796 * 570 681

The rope remains stationary for some time, and then is seen to be coming back through the aperture. 575 *

"X is returning," whisper the kakaxiut to one another and the excitement becomes intense. 796 *

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

Slowly and steadily the rope is lowered to the carpenters who coil it in a long row at the foot of the ladder. As soon as another climb, as this part of the ceremony is expected to take quite as long as X's secret, and must not be finished until just before dawn. At last the latter round of the cords is lowered and presently the ladder itself begins to shake. Two or more senior members of the society climb up through the coil and enter, amid the drumming of the initiates women, with the novelties. The uninitiated gaze at him with fear and awe.

"He is indeed wonderful," they say to one another.

X's face was painted black and white when he entered his cabin, but it is now clean and the uninitiated hardly need to be reminded by the initiate women that the strong wind in Bella Coola has blown all paint from his skin. He sits down beside an eloquent initiate to whom he talks at length and who excites the curiosity of the audience by telling them that they will soon hear all about it. When the talk is finished, the orator stands up and tells what the novelties he saw in the land above. He states that X found a certain number of tally posts leaning and straightened them, but he never mentions what has been done here preserved. The uninitiated assume without question that X has just given the orator these details, though in point of fact he has done nothing of the kind, his apparent confidant having been chosen for his skill in inventing interesting items. As soon as the story is over, the uninitiated are told to leave. While the usual meal is being prepared the carpenters haul down the ladder and cast it into the fire without ceremony. The initiate listen to the usual admonitions of the novelists as they are, and then disperse to the early dawn, wearied from the all-night session.

Most of the village sleeps through the day, but in the late afternoon the lovelle summon the initiate to X's house. The dance of the Tally Posts resembles a initiate in the sense that four days of ceremonial follow the four days just described. The evening following X's secret is instituted, the second of the whole performance. The ritual is of the regular type with the companion and practising of a song. 575* 946*

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

During the evening of the next day, naturalmente, the usual ceremony ends are allowed. Only three masks are required, one of Bel'lilmaiam and two of supernatural beings named Mishem, as if they had the power to heighten or curtail the lives of human beings. The ritual or gulim [illegible] to special description. Late in the afternoon of nalmem the Bellmim assemble in W's home and the uninitiated are presently assisted to see them all such forth with their masked figures in their midst. Assuming, of course, that these are supernatural visions, the frightened non-members return to their houses where they pass forth or the figures as they parade up and down the dance beside the river. They can easily recognize Bel'lilmaiam, but not for two companions whose faces are painted black and white, and who have projecting, stone like mouths. After this pantomime and a certain amount of dancing, the party return to W's house whether the uninitiated are presently summoned. The two Mishem dance around the five white Bel'lilmaiam explains their power over the lives of mortals. The Bellmim now ask the uninitiated to withdraw and the ceremony ends in the customary manner. [532] [532]

W must perform this full ritual at least once after obtaining his Bellmim name with respect to it, but on later occasions he may, if he so desires, limit himself to the second part of the ceremony with the appearance on earth of the Mishem. [424]

THE DANCE OF THUNDER

According to Bella Coola belief, the supernatural owes to the upper land assemble human beings in performing Bellmim dances. Like mortals, some of these always are more powerful and more feared than others, but the senior Bellmim among them is Thunder. Corresponding to the prowess of his person, the dance of his human protégé is one of the most important Bellmim rituals. The essential feature of it is that Thunder calls all supernatural beings to witness his dance, and in consequence 575* 946* 424 946

[illegible] to follow as much can do the same. The ritual of release of a Thunder dancer is accordingly identical with that of a Mystery dancer. In the field an effort was made to obtain accounts of what had actually occurred at dances rather than of what should have happened, as the dance of Mystery, previously described, several of the usual features were omitted, and these were accordingly left out of the account. They will now be mentioned in connection with the dance of Thunder, but the fact must be emphasized that they belong equally to all Sacred dances in which the dancer has the prerogative of showing all supernatural beings, including Thunder.

[55] In Kimsquit the name of the Sacred having the prerogative of singing of Thunder signifies, "The Known," with reference to his power. The native term could not be learned. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X.

The Thunder dance is of the normal Sacred type in every respect, so no account need be given of the ceremonial of the first three days. Many snakes are ordered on the night of [illegible] and these are really only in rehearsal. During these days the supernatural uninitiated are excited to see the masked figure of Sal'Ulmalnis emerge from X's house, accompanied by a throng of Sacred who chase all but members of the society back to their houses. Following them comes Thunder's herald, Hemdimem, calling on all to prepare to come to the dance of Thunder, the healing Sacred of the supernatural beings. This messenger circles from[illegible] to summon the supernatural ones to Thunder's dance, the reason that all are to dance at X's ceremonial. Immediately behind Hemdimem comes Tlapsi, the Defamer, protesting that Thunder's dance is not worth attending once he, and he alone, is the sole Sacred of the supernatural ones. Sal'Ulmalnis with her usual comments to the remarks of the two masked figures. This series of invitations and counter-invitations is repeated four times during the day, to the wonder of the uninitiated who peer out through chinks in the houses and around corners of the buildings. Sometimes Hemdimem and Tlapsi pass from

[The Dance of Thunder]

[illegible] to physical enjoyment, and one occasion is remembered when the latter was thrown from a cave into the river. 575* 796* 776

In the evening the Indwiwi are fit called in, to be followed by the uninitiated in due course. Thunder dances in the manner already described, though if possible, with even more vigour and abandon than when it was only one of the performers in the Mystery dance. Succeeded in that dance, he performs twice, on the second occasion carrying a rattle containing burning shreds of cedar-bark. After each circuit of the central fire, Rainmaker appeared drenches the audience, as rain accompanies a thunderstorm. The dramatic skill displayed is always impressive, and a touch of comic realism is added by the concerted remarks of Thapsi who does his utmost to bafflele Thunder. [522]

The time hearer for the expert dancer, Nisqla, appears after Rainmaker. When the ceremonial is carried out with care, he wears a skull mask to show that he is ghost who has come from the land below to assist at the ceremony of Alemalinaxa. As he leaves cries he sings a wordless sangel the dead. The skill of Nisqla as a dancer is due to the fact that he is a yearling movements great among supernatural beings. The uninitiated look forward with eagerness to witnessing a remarkable dance, but after a few violent convulsions the performer withdraws, followed by the musicians. [532] [533]

It would be needless repetition to numerate all the supernatural beings who follow, so remarks will be made only of those who are considered especially appropriate to the Thunder dance and who are accordingly shown in almost all occasions. Wawas Wren is a masked figure who hops about in an agile manner similar to that of the bird within earth, and Rabbit Shawine imitates the movements of an earthly rabbit. Ancilla-malaxa explains to the uninitiated the Thunder would like to [532] make the flesh of animals but that he is too big and too hot to approach them, so sends Wasqulin a his messenger. The masked figure representing that messenger a stick about one foot in length beneath his blanket, so runs around the house [525] with short, mincing steps. At intervals he pulls forth his stinger and rushes at one of the spectators, poking the weapon at him and humming fiercely. The writer took the part of a supernatural mosquito at one of the dances held in the winter of 1922-3 and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the ḥakaciut were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers. Another being who often appears at a dance of Thunder is Rainwater-Dropping-from-the-Roof. The masked figure walks slowly around the fire and Ant'lkwalcais explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the plaiting. The Clowns are never omitted, and always cause amusement amid the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the sage remarks of Ant'lkwalcais. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a masked figure slowly toddles forth. It is Snail, who started at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrived too late to be present at the dance of Thunder. Snail circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

[The Dance of Thunder]

Dances whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patron occurs. If Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"It [he does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too lustily up aloft. Ewe ...."

The call of ewe ... is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any ḥakaciut women present at once dress, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lowest house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and

2:Mc:Howaith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Thunder]

the uninitiated are expelled. If several hakaxiw in the same village are prestigio of Thunder, each makes a circuit independently, but they agree to meet afterwards in the house of one of their number. Here all members of the society assemble for a meal provided hurriedly by X, or to a number of meals if several have Thunder as patron; in this case there is no pooling of food. The marshals take the opportunity of giving their customary admonitions, as if it were midwinter. Next the singers combine their ideas and beat out a new song of which the theme is Thunder who never rests; it is worded as if X were speaking and describing what his patron is doing. This song is sung and resung until all present have learnt both tune and words. If there are several hakaxiw with Thunder as patron, a song is made for each and practised in the same manner.

When all is ready, one of the hawiłła calls to the uninitiated. Each song is sung to the accompaniment of beating sticks while a dancer performs. Instead of X, this is an old man or woman who has not had a call for many years. Often the hakaxiw selected is so old that he or she can dance only with the support of a stick; no reason could be learnt for this surprising deviation from the usual practice. If several songs have been composed, a new dancer performs to each. After the last dance the uninitiated are expelled and the hakaxiw men follow. Since no call has come, it follows that it is of a ceremonial, though not of a sacred nature, and does not take the regular course of winter dances. It is said to "make good the path of Thunder," the term employed being identical with that used for the dance on subsequent after the burning of the masks.

Nothing more need be said about the Thunder dance, except to give the following origin myth:

Long ago, long before the white man came to this land, but still longer after the first settlement, four brothers left Kimsquit to hunt mountain goats on Mount Pamphlett, near the Kimsquit River.* It was September,

*This mountain is also known as Stump Hill. Salmon Mountain, in deep consultation the fish in question and it is said that long ago, in the very beginning of time, a salmon became purified there.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

the guests were plentiful, fat, and unsuspicious, so that before nightfall they had killed four. Well satisfied, they lay down in a cave to sleep for the night. At that time no one knew what supernatural being caused thunder; the earliest inhabitants of the world had possessed that knowledge but it had been forgotten in the intervening generations. Towards midnight the hunters were awakened by a loud boom and wondered what could have caused it. Presently they saw approaching a figure resembling a man, with a weird nonhuman face, who carried in each hand a huge rock crystal.* He raised and lowered his arms as if pounding, as each movement the crystals struck each other, producing the booming sound and also emitting a flash of light. The elder brother, Sadi, told the others to cover their faces with their blankets and to keep their eyes closed, because some evil and powerful creature was drawing near. But the second brother, who had caught a glimpse of the two crystals and greatly desired them, watched curiously, hoping for an opportunity to steal them. Thunder, for it was none other, ranged around, at intervals he passed across to the other side of the intervening valley on a sidewalk which grew before his feet to form a bridge for him, and as it, too, he was able to recover his steps. Several times Thunder crossed and recrossed, accompanied by reverberating peals. He came near the four brothers and danced, then lay down while he emerged from his mantle. The second brother began to feel excited, gradually the feet movement, but to was powerless to move, before dawn, when Thunder vanished, he had been crushed to death.

The three survivors buried the dead man in a hastily made grave in the face of the cave and were home, abandoning the mountain game which they had killed. Sadi, though grieved at the loss of his brother, felt that the latter's death was his own fault for paying when he had been warned not to do so. Not long afterwards the two younger brothers died. Then the sole survivor told a carpenter to make him a mask according to a design which he could describe. In this way the face of Thunder was portrayed in wood. When the mask was ready, Sadi wore it and gave an imitation of the actions of his parents, as one had even seen anything like it and the people were amazed.

No great antiquity is ascribed to this myth and it gives no explanation of questions which at once arise in the reader's mind. The type is fairly common in Bella Coola; in fact, the only unusual part of it is that the visionary received a further prerogative rather than one of the forms of good for-

*This is said to have been equivalent to the bracelets of a Thunder dancer.

2:McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

came previously described. To the Bella Coola philosopher, apparently no explanation is needed of the manner in which Sacks was allowed to use his experience as the basis of a Sacrier dance. The assumption is that he was a Sacrier at the time of his experience, although this is not clearly stated. The last to use the name died about 1900, each Sacks having had the prerogative of giving the Thunder dance.

575*
796*
537
424
[777]
[551]

THE GHOST DANCE*

Among the numerous patrons of Sacrier dances are Ghosts. The term, Acksaskas, applied to a shaman whose power is derived from a ghost, is also applied to Sacrier with one as patron, but the two functionaries must not be confused. It is a fairly common prerogative and there are Ghost dances in every village, their right depending in every case on some experience of an encounter with a ghost. The following is an account of the manner in which Sapsac of Tsimsit performed his ritual, it may be regarded as typical of all, and the dancer can be referred to as X.

575*
796*
[775]
[750]
[424]

At any time during the ceremonial season X consults with the masksals to decide upon a suitable time for his performance. On the evening preceding, normally the guest of some other Sacrier, the masksals seem that his call is imminent. X makes his final arrangements and asks the assistance of a number of his fellows.

When the relevant rites of the following evening have been completed and the uninitiated have returned to their own houses, they are startled to hear whistling from the forest near at hand. It is not the inconsiderably profound sound that accompanies the coming of a call, but random whistling with the mouth; everyone knows that this is the language of ghosts. A violation from them is by no means unknown, and always dreaded, so at once there is excitement and everyone screams in the bedrooms. Presently lantrils go through the village

575*
796*
789
[775]

*This ceremonial is implied with the dance of the same name among Indians of other coastal areas.

[191]

[The Ghost Dance]

[Ref] 595 *996 787 [Ref]

announcing that the dead have come with a call for X. Meanwhile a number of bakaiai assemble in the dancer's house where he strips off his clothing and covers himself with dirt and ashes. In all other bacial dances the performer dresses to beautify himself, or at least to blacken or put his face according to some definite pattern, but X's aims to increase the appearance of the dead who are conventionally untidy.

After some delay, X rushes forth in the midst of his cort and enters the lowest house of the village. The frightened occupants are hiding in their bedrooms, but they peer through cracks and watch X as he bends to the floor, picks up handfuls of dirt and throws them wildly in all directions, heedless of what damage he may do. It is obvious that he is frenzied and mad, like Cannibals who have received their calls. His bacial associates pretend to restrain him, but he always overcomes their efforts and continues to hurl dirt. At last he withdraws, goes to the next house and there repeats the performance. This is done in every dwelling in the village. Most of the occupants in X's own house have it so soon as the bakaiai begin to assemble, and by the time all others have fled, as they hear the party returns there are only members of the society present. The frightened non-members hear the frenzied howling of the as efforts are made to cure X of his madness, but without avail. Soon a sound of wailing is heard, and the heralds come and announcing that X has vanished—the dead have returned. The bakaiai spend the rest of the night in his house, only listening to speeches from the mourners, and dispersed next dawn.

X's return to the land of the dead is of varying length. Occasionally he returns on the night of his disappearance, having been absent only a few hours, or he may remain in hiding for several weeks. The usual time for his reappearance is the night after his departure, and with him always come a number of ghosts. The ritual on his return is always the same, irrespective of the duration of his absence.

At dusk the heralds call the bakaiai to X's house there

[The Ghost Dance]

they sit in silence, awaiting his arrival. Presently word is sent 575* to him, for he is always hiding near, and he comes through the 796* door and sits near the fire. But he does not resemble the man who left the village. His face and body have been stained [787] green with crushed leaves, in imitation of the colour of the [302] dead; in his hand he carries a bone, said to be part of the leg of a dead man, though in reality it is from a deer. After him the ghosts enter one by one. They are a number of kukwiut who have been painted black and green to give them an un- [302] earthly appearance; there is no fixed pattern, each following his own, or the carpenter's ideas of the uncanny, though the body colour on which the other tints are smeared is usually white. Each dead man has a special name and each acts accordingly in an eccentric way. One enters walking backwards, another hops on one leg, and a third walks on his [775] hands—because ghosts always act in the opposite manner to mortals. Each trills in a peculiar way and performs something like a dance, waving his arms to and fro, up and down, constantly pointing with one finger, before lying down close to the central fire. With them enters a woman with painted face, [776] clad in a blanket and carrying a basket on her back; she is Alpwalas, who gathers berries in the land of the dead. She begins to go around picking up any small articles that she sees and depositing them in her basket, from which anyone picks them out at will and returns them to the places whence they had been taken. One of the first actors to appear carries a stick for time beating, and acts as leader of the ghost singers.
Whenever a spark from the fire lights on one of the dead, causing the latter to jump, the leader pounds violently with his stick. When all are present, the leader beats time and they commence to leave. Ghosts are fickles, however; consequently, [775] instead of going straight to the door, some go in one direction, some in another, but all are at length shepherded outside. X and his visitors, with a large number of kukwiut, go to every house in the village repeating the same procedure, in silence, except for the trill of the dead men. The uninitiated do not

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 leave their bedrooms, but peer curiously and fearfully around
*796 the edge of the boards. Finally the party returns to X's house, whence the uninitiated hear the sound of sticks being beaten in a frenzied manner, but without the usual rhythmic cadence. Each kwaiat beats as he likes, because it is an affair [775] of the dead with whom all things are queer and unnatural.

*575 The ghosts wash and take their places in X's house where *796 the singers are working on a new song. The words, as if spoken 775 by the dancer, describe the land of the dead; how everything 533 is green there; how the river flows from west to east so that the sun travels upstream; how the shades wished to make him a chief, and deceived him by not giving proper presents; how he visited the various towns scattered along the river, finding the bone in one of the houses; and finally how the dead told him of any mistakes in ritual that had been committed in the Bella Coola villages, in Kimsquit, or in Tal'ea. This last is, of course, common knowledge, but the Ghost dance is the only kwaiat ceremonial in which such information is used in the text of a song. Details are given, but the wording is so ambiguous that when the uninitiated later hear the song they do not comprehend its meaning. Since the kwaiat have concealed the error referred to, the necessity for veiled allusions is apparent. Everything connected with the Ghost dance is carried out in the reverse order; thus, the reference of X to presents which he did not receive is merely an intimation that he will presently bestow gifts on the singers and the other kwaiat who have assisted him. The wordless chorus of the song consists of [791] 'aiyi'aiyaiyi, a phrase said to be the same for Ghost dances among all the coastal tribes. The songs are sung in a set, while the audience listens attentively; then it is sung vigor-
*575 ously by all, while X dances. His style differs from that of all
*796 other kwaiat; first one arm and then the other is kept extended, downwards, at an angle in front of the body with the 535 forefinger pointing to the ground. This method of dancing is 424 the prerogative of all Ghost dancers and provides a variation to the somewhat monotonous performances on different occasions.

2:Mc:Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Dellacoola NEA

[The Ghost Dance]

qulem. When the dance has ended, X gives presents; first to each spectator, and then to those who have assisted him, starting with the singers. This is the last event of the evening and the kukwiut disperse. 575* 796* [931]

The farrow of doing things in the reverse order appears not only in actions, but in the order of the ceremonies. Those just described, although at the beginning of the ceremonies, resemble a sukwam in many respects. Consequently, it is not surprising that the next night is qulem. The singers are the first to assemble and they compose a second song for X, with the same theme but different words and tune to that already prepared. Meanwhile the kukwiut are gathering and when they have learnt the new song, the uninitiated are summoned. No enclosure has been built, and X is much in evidence. His body has been painted green with a preparation of grass rubbed in water, he wears the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a kind of head-dress with a triangular projection over his forehead. His two songs are sung, and X dances vigorously to each in the manner just described. This is followed by the customary qulem ritual, kwiut after kwiut dancing as the singers beat out his two songs. Finally a Cannibal begins to growl fiercely in one of the rear corners and the uninitiated fan hurriedly. The kukwiut set together, listening to the admonitions and remarks of the marshals, and then X dances once more. Among the peculiarities of the Ghost dance is the fact that the call may be returned at this point, or X may again become mad, according to the wishes of the marshals. If they desire a further display of his insanity, he rushes out as soon as he has finished dancing and proceeds to the lowest house of the village. A number of kukwiut follow him, and engage in a struggle to prevent him from picking up handfuls of dirt from the floor and throwing them in all directions in an aimless manner. As a matter of fact his guardians take care that X hurls approximately the same amount in each house, as none of them is willing to have more damage done in his own house than in others. After a visit to each dwelling, the party returns to 575* 796* 787 [312] [292] [533]

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 *796 [797] X's, where he is soothed by the four times repeated frenzied beating of sticks and his call returned whence it came.

During the rest of the ceremonial season X becomes mad at intervals and displays his insanity by rushing to every house and throwing dirt and sand. His Sekeiar escort is always with him, and the procedure is identical with that already recorded. X makes no recompense for the damage inflicted, so it is probable that his fellows do not regard his dance as an unmitigated pleasure, but nothing can be done to deter him from exercising his prerogative.

[424]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CHARMER

*575 *796 796 [522] [831] Although the Bella Coola are probably as moral as members of any other tribe, they enjoy humour of an obscene nature, and a dance which never fails to provide amusement is that of the Supernatural Charmer. The person of this is Sainsuimuh, a beautiful, unmarried, feminine being who is also named Mlqmin and Nuuhmaitum. She is thought to disregard the efforts of her supernatural relatives to marry her, and comes to this earth where she bestows her favours not only on human beings, but on animals. Her prestige at Kimsquit is a young man, Ellaiaiah, at Bella Coola, a young woman, Kuuhmu; like all other Sekeiar names these can be used either by men or women. It is said that Ellaiaiah's prerogative is derived from the experience of an ancestor in past ages, whereas that of Kuuhmu was inherited from generations ago by a very powerful chief. The ritual in each case is identical, so the dancer can be referred to as X. Each has the prerogative of singing not only of Sainsuimuh, but also of the being known as Wiwinumuh. Many months are required at the rehearsals of either of these beings, so it is customary for X to perform with respect to Sainsuimuh one year, and to Wiwinumuh at the next or a subsequent ceremonial season, though the actual songs always refer to both persons.

[531] [532] [534]

*796 *575 When X wishes to dance he consults the mandals, obtains their consent, and then makes final arrangements as, normally, the gulon of another dancer. Next night the call comes to him in the ordinary manner, and the heralds go through the village announcing what has taken place. The uninitiated are expelled at once from X's house and the tsalaxiut promptly assemble to listen to the song being composed by the singers. The theme is of Sainxcimuk; how she came down from above and travelled all over the world shamelessly luring men and animals; how various supernatural beings tried to restrain her without success; how she went to the house of Sqil and was trying to seduce several young men living there when Wiwaxwaxwa appeared and endeavoured to make her behave herself, but without avail. The song then describes Wiwaxwaxwa who seems to be a warm wind, engaged in a never-ending duel with the cold winds.* No detailed description is required for the ritual of nuxnuxtilag, where a second song with the same theme is composed, or of gulon, since these follow the typical Sainxcimuk pattern.

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

During the afternoon of nuxnuxtilag, the tsalaxiut gulon in X's house to try on the completed masks and make the final arrangements. Whistles sound as continuously that the uninitiated remain either within their own homes or near them, ready to hide in the bedrooms if necessary. Within X's house the carpenters are supervising the choice of masks; a Raven mask able to speak like a woman is, as usual, chosen to represent Sqil'tlamkum; another with similar qualifications is selected for Sainxcimuk, while the other masks can be worn by almost anyone. Presently a strange procession leaves X's house and enters the lower house of the village where the uninitiated leave for the inner rooms, but watch proceedings through cracks between the boards. First comes X himself, his face blackened and wearing the usual collar. He remains standing near the door and watches as Sainxcimuk enters and slowly proceeds around the central fire; she wears a mask representing a young and beautiful woman. Behind her come her lovers,

*Valuable information concerning the identification of Wiwaxwaxwa masks can be obtained.

[The Dance of the Supernatural Charmer]

each wearing the mask of a man and each with the clothing and distinctive marks of a particular tribe: Tsimshian, Haida, Bella Bella, Rivers Inlet, China Hat, Kitimat, Fort Rupert, Smith Inlet, Cowichan, and as many more as X has wished, not forgetting Bella Coola itself. On at least one occasion representations of a white man and of a Chinese were used. Sometimes instead of one, there are two of each tribe. Each figure pretends to be pursuing Saimseimdt and keeps up a running fire of complaints:

"She left me for a worthless man; oh! how unhappy I am," says one, and another adds:

"Alas, I enjoyed her only once."

Each uses his own imagination in making comments, frequently drawing on personal experiences with faithless women. Ana'kkwulnaic explains everything, and the heralds echo the remarks. Saimseimdt looks around for a handsome young kaniat woman and says to her:

"How many men have known you?"

The heralds repeat the question and tell the woman not to be bashful, but to speak the truth. It is considered excessively funny for her to answer a number in the hundreds, even more than the tale of Saimseimdt's lovers. This is a time when obscene remarks are allowed and, indeed, expected. A short distance behind the hurrying procession of those who have loved Saimseimdt and are still allured by her, comes a supernatural being disguised under the mask of an old man. He is her father, who keeps giving her good advice and begging her to forsake her evil ways, but she pays no attention to him. Finally, just as she is about to leave, there enters an old, old man with white hair and a wrinkled face; he totters in leaning heavily upon a stick and calling to the woman to wait for him. She heeds him not, but goes out of the house while he staggers feebly around the fire, voicing his complaints and his appeals. Ana'kkwulnaic explains that he is Sinqtcac, who fell under the spell of Saimseimdt long ago in his youth, and for whom her beauty had such a fatal attraction that he has followed her ever since. Pity for strangers is not a strong Bella Coola 575* sentiment and the audience laughs heartily at the spectacle 796* of the doddering old man in vain pursuit of a heartless woman who is forever young. A considerable number of kukuciut [522] always accompany the procession, pushing their way out with [609] Ano'kkwalaxis and Simpraxi. Several of them carry whistles [152] concealed beneath their arm-pits and the noise of these serves to maintain the dignity of the occasion.

[The Dance of the Supernatural Charmer]

So many masked figures are used that all cannot accompany Xoimxoimdi into each house. Those unable to do so remain on the sidewalk outside, holding one of her lovers, a live male mountain goat. At the next house another group of the charmer's victims enters and the ceremonial just described is repeated. The same is carried out at every dwelling in the village. Xoimxoimdi and her followers stop a few minutes in X's house before starting out on a second round, in which the same ritual is carried out. This is done twice more, so that each house is visited four times.

By this time dusk has fallen and all the kukuciut except those acting as escort to X have gathered in his house. Presently the uninitiated are called in. Xoimxoimdi is standing on a low box behind the fire, encouraging her masked lovers to come to her, and bestowing her affections indiscriminately in a heartless manner. The rivals shove each other to and fro realistically and though blows are not actually exchanged, great care must be taken to prevent masks from falling in the [522] mock encounter. The efforts of the unfortunate Simpraxi to reach his desire are always a source of merriment. Ano'kkwalaxis as usual explains the significance of it all. Sometimes a cradle is brought in, over which Xoimxoimdi croons while a [533] song is sung, describing her as the mother of many creatures of whom the fathers are animals. It is uncertain whether this part of the ceremony takes place before or after the sham fight or, indeed, whether it is not another type of nakamu which X can use at will. The ritual concludes in the normal way with the expulsion of the uninitiated, the dancing of Ano'kkwalaxis, *575 *796 the burning of the masks, the dancing of X, and the return of his call.

During a later season when a call comes to X, the ritual deals with Wiwaintwal, but only the outline of the ceremony could be learnt. The theme of the two songs composed for the occasion is of Wiwaintwal and how he fights with his enemies, the cold winds. His only weapons are fierce roaring and a belligerent expression, but these suffice to keep his adversaries at a distance, especially his principal foeman, the evil wind, Nacdáqoo.

[533]

There is no deviation from the usual type of kwoiat ceremonial until the day of sulaxaw when a fight takes place at the river's edge where all, including the uninitiated, can see it. The kulaxiat of the village are divided into two parties, of which one comes from upstream, the other from below, meeting in front of X's house. The leaderless combatants shove each other two and fro, without actually coming to blows. Wiwaintwal remains behind one party, encouraging his warriors by his roars, while Nacdáqoo spurs on his supporters by valiant gestures, without daring to come too near the combat. Wiwaintwal's followers finally win the day and drive back the other party. Ancl'kwalcaic is much in evidence, explaining to the uninitiated, who cower in the shelter of the houses, that this is the way in which the winds fight in the land above. That evening non-members are called to X's house where they witness a combat of the same type. The ceremonial concludes in the usual manner.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL LOVER

[524] Another kwoiat ceremonial which closely resembles that just described is the prerogative of a young Bella Coola woman named Qwa'nalt who inherited it from her mother's mother's sister's son. It will be convenient to refer to her as X.

When X wishes to dance, she first obtains the consent of the marshals in the normal manner and chooses a convenient day for the coming of her call. Then the kulaxiat gather in

[533]

2:Mcllwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Dance of the Supernatural Lover]

her house while the singers compose a new song. The theme is of her patron, the young male being, K'uat ixal-a, "The Big One." It describes how he came from above and went far and near over the earth in lustful pursuit of women, how each victim fell in love with her seducer so that she followed him in all his wanderings, how Loon befriended him, and how he exchanged his blanket for a covering of abalone-shells. 575 * 796 * [538] [796]

On nacuxtilap when the tsalaxiut as usual go to the forest, they bring back not only wood for masks but also the trunk of a large cedar tree, at which the carpenters work during the two succeeding days. On nakacum a parade occurs of the supernatural beings similar to that in the dance of the Supernatural Charmer, but the masked figures represent women, not men, of the different coastal tribes. K'uat ixal-a leads the procession and pays no more attention to his mistresses than did Sxinxcimult to her would-be lovers. There is the same licence for lewd remarks, of which K'uat ixal-a takes full advantage when he calls the attention of the young men to his following, and asks them how many mistresses each has had. [532] [381] [222]

In the evening the uninitiated are called to X's house where the first object they see is the tree-trunk, converted by the carpenters into an enormous bird. Wooden wings and a loon's head have been provided and the whole is painted in imitation of a loon's plumage. K'uat ixal-a is in evidence, wearing a bird disguise. Presently a matting enclosure in one of the rear corners of the house is thrown open, and the uninitiated see the throng of his mistresses who rush forth, almost coming to blows in their eagerness to reach their seducer. Ax'ilkwulaxie stands on one side and explains the significance. After the mock combat has lasted for a few minutes, a Cannibal begins to growl and the uninitiated hurry out. The ceremonial then concludes in the usual manner. [532]

This dance differs from all other tsaxiut rites in one respect, since the call can come to X several times during a single ceremonial season. Of course there is no compulsion; she uses her own discretion as to whether she dances more than once, [424] but a proud and energetic dancer sometimes repeats a ceremony three or four times.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE SUN DANCE[21]

One of the forms in which Alquntăm appears is that of the Sun, and in that case he is referred to as Sunxălotla. Considering the importance of this deity, it is rather surprising that the kusiut dance of which he is patron is not more impressive. Efforts were made to obtain full details of the ceremonial from several informants, but only a number of incidents and a bare outline could be obtained. In part this was due to the fact that none of the informants[22] were themselves protégés of Alquntăm, but this is not in itself sufficient to explain the comparative unimportance of the dance, since full accounts were obtained of other rituals from those who did not own them.

Nothing was learnt of the origin of any of the Sun dance prerogatives, except that ancestors of the owners obtained them from Alquntăm. It is a common right, and kukusiut having Alquntăm as patron are found in every village, among them being Qoxelăn-i of Tsmotl, and Naxnaxliwalaix of Nusqalst. As far as could be ascertained, the ritual of various Sun dance performances is identical, so one account will suffice and the dancer can be termed X.

Like other kusiut dancers, X can perform at any time during the ceremonial season, subject to the approval of the marshals. The call comes to him in the normal manner, the uninitiated are expelled, and the kukusiut gather in his house to practise the songs which the singers have just composed. The theme is of Alquntăm, describing his manifold functions, and particularly that of guiding the Sun. The following day a second song with similar theme is composed, and in the evening the tasks are allotted for the manufacture of masks. Four are required; a large one representing Alquntăm himself, one of [21] Needless to say, no connection or similarity is implied with the dance of the same name in other areas.

[22] Except one man who had forgotten all details since his conversion to Christianity many years before.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Sun Dance]

Ano'likwolsaix, and two of the supernatural Clowns. In addition a white disk, about four feet in diameter, is ordered with a human face in the centre; this represents the Sun with Alquntäm. No detailed description is required until the night of nohusam. 575* 746* [532]

The kukusiut gather in the dusk and summon the uninitiated as soon as all is in readiness. On entering, they see the huge and imposing figure of Alquntäm standing in the centre of the space behind the fire, flanked by a number of the most important kukusiut as if to pay respect to him. X stands immediately behind, repeatedly throwing one arm over Alquntäm's head and crying hoip to soothe the visitor. The two Clowns move to and fro, all over the house, making what remarks they like as if they were spoilt children. Ano'likwolsaix stands on one side, explaining the meaning of it all, and giving the names of the supernatural beings represented. Suddenly the white disk appears against the back wall near the roof, slowly passes sunwise across the house, and disappears. The uninitiated recognize that it is not the Sun, but to them it seems miraculous that this body can move as it does, and they easily accept Ano'likwolsaix's explanation that this is the way Alquntäm crosses the heavens. They do not know that for the last two days the carpenters have been exercising their ingenuity in arranging cords so that the object can be drawn across smoothly and steadily. Again the sun "rises," and crosses the back wall, only to disappear from sight. This is repeated twice more, making four times in all. It is said that sometimes the Sun is made to spin just before it "sets," but the method could not be learnt. At this juncture the uninitiated are sent home and the proceedings conclude as usual. [522] [821]

In addition to performing in the customary manner, X is required to dance on other definite occasions, without the coming of a call. According to some informants, X must sing of his patron at the beginning of the ceremonial season, coincidently with the protégé of Nodkynem. This is probably correct but details were unobtainable. In any case, when the [424]

[Re Sun Dance]

* 575 *796 [124] [121] dance of Nuklemem is omitted owing to the large expenditure required, X must sing, without a call, in conjunction with the Wi'a dancer. In this case also the details are lacking.

Likewise at the winter solstice, when the carrying Mqumem at last enters Nuqulvumiza to greet the waiting supernatural Sukwiat, it is incumbent on his prodigi to perform in his honour below. The singers are always ready with a new song for the occasion, and in the evening his fellows assemble in his house to learn it. X wears the usual ceremonial collar, but he lacks the awe-inspiring qualities of a Sucier who has had a call. When the song has been sufficiently practised, the uninitiated are brought in to listen to it and to watch the dancing of X. At the conclusion of the performance they are given a little food, provided by X, which they carry away while the Sukwiat remain to eat at their ease and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. It is probable that the ritual carried out at the beginning of the ceremonial season is identical with the above. [121] One old man stated that long ago it was customary to dance in the same manner at the summer solstice; this might be expected, but confirmation was unobtainable.

Like the prodigi of Thunder, X is sometimes called upon to perform during the non-ceremonial season. But whereas a Thunder dancer acts when his person is apparent by peals of sound, X must do so when his person is invisible through an eclipse.* The ritual is almost identical with that already described for a Thunder dancer so nothing but additional details need be inserted. X visits every house shaking a rattle, which is not the case with Thunder dancers. After his circuit of the village, the Sukwiat gather in his house where the singers are [533] composing a new song describing the phenomenon. The words explain that Eclipse, the supernatural being Nuqulvi, has blocked or destroyed the path of the Sun, and add how disastrous it would be if the Sun could not recover its way. Later on, the uninitiated are called in to watch X's dance which, like the sun that takes place at a thunder-storm, is said to "make good the peril" of the patient. It would formerly have been a very serious offence for a Sun dancer not to perform at an eclipse; his failure would probably have been punished with death by the marshals. One informant vividly recalled his fears when he failed to perform at an eclipse soon after his conversion to Christianity, and concluded that he had been in deadly peril from the marshals in spite of the white man's law.

* 575 *796 [121]

*The Bella Coola term both for "eclipse" and the being responsible is Nuqulvi, which also means "A Fire That Has Died Out."

[796] [192]

THE MOON DANCE

The Sun is not the only heavenly body that acts as patron to Social dancers, the Moon also has many human principles. Among them is Nakwindo, "The Moon When It Is Unobscured," of Tomoi, from whom the following account of the Moon dance was obtained. As usual, he can be spoken of as X.

The Moon dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject, of course, to X's wishes and the consent of the marshals. The coming of the call is heralded in the usual manner and the Sahaviar presently assemble to learn the song just composed. It describes the following supernatural beings:

Kitsilinam:[a] A woman who lives in the moon and who can be seen in certain of its phases, always carrying a bucket of water.

The two Kipmatiar: These two beings are able periodically to blacken the Moon's face, thus causing an eclipse.

The two Sakwindo ar:[b] These kindly women clean the Moon's face after it has been blackened. It is these beings who cause or earth to assist witches Sahaviar.

The song also describes how an supernatural being dares to pass the Moon's house during an eclipse, a prohibition similar to that observed by uninitiated with respect to passing outside a house where a Sahaviar ceremony is taking place.

[a] Jenkinson's the usual name for place, no reason was given for the application of the same designation to the women living in the moon.

[b] There is difference of opinion among the Sahaviar as to whether or not there is more than one of these beings.

[illegible]

[illegible] THE WILLIS CIRCLE EXPEDITION

[illegible] The detailed description is needed for the commencement of other instructions or guides. On the evening of the former day the cradle are unbroken, one for Arcturus, who appears to be confined with the Moon itself, one for each Alpheratz, one for each Deneb, and one for Rasalhague.

Late in the afternoon the Galactic assembly in X's house is see that everything is in good shape. A large oval has been opened across the back wall of the house and on it a disk representing the Moon, with a human face in the middle. When the usual formalities the assistants are called in. Eight Galactic a mission assembly alone in the two back corners of the house, while the two Alpheratz are in the central space behind the fire, constantly moving their arms to and fro. Suddenly the Moon itself appears against the evening. A carpenter, concealed behind the screen, directs to course so that it drawn in a chart are across the background and disappears. Rasalhague explains to the assistants that this is the track of the new Moon, low down on the horizon. A second time it "rises," and moves across in a longer and higher curve, which Rasalhague says is the longer orbit of the coming Moon. On its third course it is still higher, and on its fourth appearance it moves across the full width of the house over the roof, which Rasalhague describes as the course of the full Moon, far above the mountains. He also explains that we are indebted to Galactic a for showing the Moon's face after the Alpheratz have blackened it, as otherwise no light would be visible. This ends the spectacle, the assistants are now away, and the ceremonial concludes in the manner already described.

This constitutes the Moon dance as practised during the ceremonial season, but in addition it is required to dance whenever the person is hidden by an eclipse. On such occasions the ritual is identical with that described for an eclipse of the Sun.

[illegible] THE DANCE OF THE [illegible]

One of the disciples who came to visit in the beginning of this [illegible], whose name was [illegible] has given this to me able to write by [illegible] from the and now is publishing, and this [illegible] every [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[The Dance of the Murdered Slave]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

This ceremony is an example of the great diversity in Bactar dances. Instead of the usual person in the hand circle, the dance woman is considered to be definitely located on the earth, at a spot near Siam. Moreover, the call comes through her actual appearance. The writer would have liked to have further details of the dance, but they were unobtainable.

THE DANCE OF THE CROW

Since every Bella Coola has, at the present time, some sort of Bactar dance, it would have been possible to collect the details of a large number. Only the main outlines of the dances which follow were obtained, but it is hoped that the complexity of those already described will suffice to explain the scope of the Bactar society. In some cases the details were omitted to save time, in other cases the informant was ignorant of them. The latter cases is responsible for the shortness of the Crow dance.

This ritual is the prerogative of a Bushbi Bactar, Yendjo-i, "The Crow," a name which refers to the die when the first Sun* collapsed in the beginning of time. Presumably one of Yendjo-i's ancestors was present at the fall and chose the name in consequence. The dancer's person is the hand circle, but the connection between this animal and the name has been forgotten, as the father of the performer frankly admitted. He suggested that probably one of his ancestors remembered having seen an crow before coming to this world, and chose it as patron for a dance which he instituted with respect to the name Yendjo-i. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X.

X can perform at any convenient period during the ceremonial season. When the call comes, the ritual of the first three days follows normally, except that the songs usually are supposed to have been unknown. Before sunrise the sequences prepare a dummy crow, using a skin stretched over a wooden framework. A long rope is fastened to this and the figure thrown into the water so that it sways to and fro

[The Dance of the Otter]

THE BOLLA CUSTOMS [illegible]

below a rapids. Case is taken that the uninitiated do not observe these arrangements. Bleat soon as sunset the heralds go to every house with a cry:

"Come to watch the Burar with the supernatural one in the river."

The uninitiated are wise enough to remain within their houses as the Saburiat troop down to the bank of the river. Presently X appears, clad in the usual ceremonial costume. He is given, as it is pursuit of the dark shape which can be seen swirling to and fro in the water. Non-members, watching from the background, are amused to see what appears to be a struggle, followed by the emergence of X clutching an otter in his arms. They are too far away to perceive that it is merely a dummy, nor do they know that a Burar has caused the performer by cutting the rope at the proper time. As X reaches shore with his burden the Saburiat women dance. Forcing his way through the throng of his admirers, the performer goes to his house where the uninitiated presently hear the funeral beating of drums repeated four times. The dummy is carefully concealed in the back-room so that it can be used if necessary on a later occasion.

As X comes ashore, water is splashed in all directions from the dummy and also dumped several of the Saburiat. Everyone to whom this happens is expected to give his clothes to a herald, and a man of civil disposition never hesitates to do so; in fact, he welcomes this opportunity of displaying his generous nature.

It is probable that a number of medical figures appear on the evening of saburam, but detailed information is lacking. It might be added that a question as to whether the catching of this otter had any influence on the ability of X as an otter hunter was repeated by the informant as highly humorous.

THE OTTERS [illegible]

In the beginning of time Dinnat of Kinnapit married a Bolla Bolla woman who brought as part of her dowry a burar dance with Ortegua as patron. This was first used by Salgmanti, a relative of Grimpoli, and has since been the prerogative of the owner of the name, whom it will be convenient to call X. Being of foreign origin, there is no equivalent in Kimaqui; in fact, there is none even in Bulu Bulu itself, where the Dorter society is believed to lack both healing power and secretal authority.* The Ortegua dance is thus the only one without a repository, so far as could be learnt it is not performed in Bulu Cuala. In Bulu Bulu the original site was connected both with the crash and Dorter repository, but in Kimaqui with the latter alone.

When X wishes to dance, which may be at any time during the ceremonial season, he consults the manikin and picks a suitable date. On this happy day, the carpenters are requested to make an ortegua, sometimes using a wooden as basis. On the day that the call comes, the dummy is placed in the water of the fort, close to shore. Suddenly the bandit raises the cry that a supernatural being is coming to X. The assembled ministrant flee from his house and the Dorter assemble. Presently the dancer rushes forth, followed by a band of his fellows, and plunges into the water. From a distance non-members can see arms and legs flying to and fro, blood flows as the Dorter struggling in the shallows strike each other's crown, and they have no hesitation in believing the bandit who reports that a fight is taking place with a writhing ortegua. X is not known to have whom, until the drawing of the number.

That night the ministrant are called to X's house where the dummy ortegua, guarded by the dancer and several other Dorter, is placed behind the fire. Bamboo strings have been fastened to its arms so that it moves and seems to be alive. One of the singers takes a horse and beats time, steps, and all the Dorter call out [illegible]. This is repeated four times, accompanied, on the last repetition, by the return of the ortegua whence it came. This is done by pulling the body from sight, but of course the ministrant do not know this. X

* This is, of course, a Bulu Cuala version.

[The Octopus Dance]

[illegible]

[illegible] Crowded begins to grow and soon the Dancers are left alone in the house. The singers have set a new song for Ŧ and the crowd continues the dance of any other functions. No description is needed for the ceremonial that occurs on succeeding evening.

On the evening of sabbath the ceremonial are commenced in the course. The exact number of medical figures dance would not be known, but among them is always an octopus. The rite concludes in the usual manner.

The presents given in connection with the Octopus dance are more valuable than those bestowed at most burial rituals, accordingly some but wealthy people are able to carry it out. The hamlets especially are always benefitted.

[illegible]

One of the most peculiar and irregular of burial dances is that performed by a certain Ŧ[illegible], whose ŧ will be known as ŧ. Its patron is the supernatural woman Ŧ[illegible] Dark-Shade, whose home is beneath the thick overgrowth of the river valley, thus explaining the darkness and shadows found in such places. Ŧ's repository is beneath some large rubber near the northern side of the Bala Cada valley, a few hundred yards above the end of the fort; it is probable that other dances with the same patron have repositories in other dark and gloomy spots.

When Ŧ wishes to dance he must as usual obtain consent from the mandals who hold that he (she) the performance and when the adepts or mellors. The reason is because the patron, Dark-Shade, alone of all supernatural beings, has the power to open every repository. Ŧ brings her to the village and in consequence calls come to every dwelling[illegible] which would be unbearable during the first ten weeks of the season. On the evening of the day selected for the beginning of the dance, Ŧ sends away from the village with three or four dancers, [illegible] repository is the one in the cell near the repository, as has the best dance, the commonly dance.

[The Dance of the Dark-Shade]

[illegible]

575*
796*

[illegible] Dark-Shade.

[illegible] and his companions are utilizing the last hours of daylight to collecting a large quantity of gum. They build a fire, and by its flickering light the dance is carried out gum so carefully that even his mark and nails are invisible, a fact suggestive to spectators Dark-Shade. Early the following morning the singers and their hitherto idle have almost danced during the current season are all on hand cover a [illegible] and his party when they arrive on board. Wearing of the idle is favourable, the canoes are [illegible] on the river. As they come in sight of the village, the singers strike up some [illegible] tune, and in time to it everyone on the platform between the canoes begins to dance, each using the side proper to his prerogative. It is an unusual scene. The natives [illegible] the approach, and gaze with wonder upon the strange dark figure. It is all so unusual that they must hide angry from the hitherto to withdraw to their houses, where the [illegible] through chinks in the walls. Members of the [illegible] from the river bank and, as Dark-Shade draws near, an [illegible] cries out that a call has come to him. The [illegible] have previously decided who shall dance in this [illegible] and informed them accordingly, sometimes it is a dance [illegible] already performed once during the season, or it may be [illegible] who has not performed for many years.

575*
796*
787

All the natives accompany Dark-Shade and his [illegible] to [illegible] from which all mentioned have long been [illegible]. The singers compose a new song of which the words are [illegible] as if Dark-Shade, not [illegible], were speaking. The dance [illegible] of one, and a number of years ago, is:

575*
796*
[539]

"Let [illegible] each one in [illegible] moments."

Unfortunately, the details of [illegible] dance were unavailable. Dark-Shade herself remains for four days hidden within [illegible] house, though he attends the ceremonies of other [illegible] of his presence there on the nights of [illegible] and [illegible]

[illegible] means of one to the uninitiated, who marvel that a man can [illegible] still appear like an ordinary mortal when he has just brought a supernatural visitor home. According to one informant who, however, is not well versed on hamatsa matters, there is neither guise nor subterfuge, and Dark-Shade is merely seen every after four days. This may be the case, but the dance has not been carried out for many years, and the man frankly admitted that he did not know the details. It seems more likely that there is some kind of ceremony, since a song would not be composed unless for a definite purpose.

The coming of Dark-Shade complicates the hamatsa ceremonial since a number of dancers receive their calls simultaneously. In this case the ritual is carried out in unison which requires, for example, the composition of one song for each performer on hamatsa. Calls never come in this way to dancers with important or complicated prerogatives, but it is a useful means of dealing with those whose right is merely to sing of their patrons. On subsequent the patrons of all are displayed, a method which has the advantage of producing a dramatic effect which would be lacking if only one were in evidence. The coming of a call by means of Dark-Shade is called nulmalmat, "Emerging from Below to Plain Sight." Another time when several calls may come simultaneously to different hamatsa is at the winter solstice when, on the entry of Hamatsa, the supernatural beings rush forth and some of them fall, causing calls to come to their human protégés.

THE MAN WHO WAS OVER MAN

Tsyakmyl, the man who was purified with his Cross Lake wife and four children at the beginning of time, is person for a Kimsquit hamatsa man named Emsem. His repository is just above high water mark on the east side of Dean Channel, about five miles from its head, and about one hundred and fifty feet north of the legal fishing boundary. This is almost immediately opposite Tsyakmyl's station. The repository is beneath the ground, and its doorway is a house which became

[The Dance of the Stone Man]

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

for the Salmon of unknown that have performance by those with the same name are only possible with the assistance of carpenters. This dance has not been carried out for so many years that the details have been forgotten.

THE DANCE OF THE BEARS

The Bella Coola notice that in autumn many of the birds disappear, to be seen no more until spring. Ignorant of a warmer climate to the south and of the causes of migration, they explain the phenomenon by saying that Hamatsa collects the birds in some mysterious place for the winter and releases them in the spring. It is believed that he does the same with supernatural birds in the land above. The acting free of the birds, which is in effect a masquerade, is known as Gwanalal and is personified, he is the patron of a Dance named Gwan. For the reliance of this man's dance a large circular cage containing wooden birds is constructed. By means of a regulation of hidden strings they are made to "fly," to the extreme amusement of the uninitiated. This is one of the most complicated Dance steps. Contrary to the usual practice, no night dance is used for fear that it might settle on the strings and betray their existence to the spectators.

THE DANCE OF EXHAUSTED THE NIGHT

The patron of this dance is a being who has the power of bringing nightfall, and later, sleep. In accordance with his double function, a dual personality is ascribed to him. In fact, he is almost two beings, as Sanghaniel, "Darkness," he causes night to come once every twenty-four hours, whereupon as Sisiamen, he brings sleep. The Dance provided displays an elaborate figure with black painted masks, representing both phases of his person.

THE DANCE OF THE WHIRLWIND

Whirlwinds, though of rare occurrence in British Columbia, are known to the Bella Coola who believe that they are caused by the being Snaiksamamen. Like all supernatural creatures, Whatever usually remains in the land above but sometimes visits this earth. He is patron for a dancer who displays a mask representing him in characteristic form, the design of which is said never to vary.

THE DANCE OF THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bella Coola believe that an earthquake is caused by the earth slipping very slightly from the group of Dzonoqwa. This being is patron for certain dancers and whenever a tremor occurs, his prestigiti call their associates and a dance is held. This may, of course, be at any season, and the ritual during spring or summer is charged with that described for dancers whose patrons are Thunder, the Sun, or the Moon. The dance of the song is of the manner in which Dzonoqwa performs his function of holding the world. A call from Dzonoqwa may also come in the natural manner to one of his prestigiti during the ceremonial season, but the ritual is of the usual type and merits no special description. In Kimsquit, Dzonoqwa is patron to a dancer named Nilhalelaka.

THE DANCE OF THE MOUNTAIN

The height to which the tide shall rise is decided by a mythical supernatural being, Skaldzin-ooza, "Tide-Measurer." He is patron of a dancer named Tsil, whose repository is near Bella Coola. One of Tsil's ancestors brought the rite with him from above in the beginning of time. The songs used in the dance describe how Tide-Measurer sees a stick in deciding how far the waters shall rise. During the day of substance the attendants are said to go to their houses but, by peeping round the corners and through chinks, as they always do, they are able to see a masked figure walk into the room, and throw down to the dancers a stick which he carries. This is repeated four times during the day.

THE DANCE OF THE OTHERWORLD BOILERMAN

There are supernatural beings who act as patrons to further dancers, and since all mannerisms and birth are, in a sense, supern[illegible] natural, any of them can act in this capacity, though it is usually added that the animal in question is the one resident in the land above. One person of this type is the ordinary river bullhead. It is said that long ago this fish agreed to allow his friends, the salmon, to the ocean, but was persuaded to remain in the river to act as nurse to their children in his house, the river bottom. Early in the world's history he objected to people coming to dwelling, that is, pulling up the salmon from the river bed where he was wont to lie, and thwarted his enemies by sending a very cold wind. Even once that some boys are not allowed to fish for bullheads in winter. So far as could be learned, this dance has no special features.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL [illegible]

One of the supernatural beings living in the land above who is patron for a certain factor in the food of a female having [illegible] is known of this being, even for appearance is subject to death. For the enhance of her prestige, a number of males representing herring, as well as human the beings, are present. When the ceremonial are present, one of the disguised figures calls to his fellows to bring their nets and capture the fish.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL DOG SALMON

Another fish dwelling in the land above is Tsilkidzinoo, the supernatural dog salmon. He is patron of some factor but the meat of the dance, known as [illegible], was not obtained. The similarity between Tsilkidzinoo and Tsilkidzinoo, those who wear [illegible], appears merely to be an accidental resemblance in terminology, dependent upon a word meaning "[illegible]," or "[illegible]." The significance of this in connection with the supernatural dog salmon could not be ascertained.

THE DANCE OF [illegible]

In [illegible] it is believed that [illegible] has a husband, [illegible], who is patron for several factor dances. His function is to remain in [illegible] any ceremonial who chance to

J. McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEG Bellacoola NEG

575*
796*
776
184
[755]
[532]

mumble upon a repository and are cracked down by his wife. Like a shaman, he does this by blowing violently upon the back of the victim's neck, and calling out, hoh. From constant repetition his mouth has become large and round. When displayed on sakscum, the mask representing Atmaqhaitela is painted black and has bulging, blown-out cheeks, and a round protruding mouth as if in the act of blowing. Neither the dance nor belief in this figure appear to occur in Bella Coola itself.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BARK-GATHER

In the land above there lives a supernatural woman who spends all her time in pounding cedar-bark such as is used, either dyed or undyed, for ceremonial objects of different kinds. Her name is Sqelqelmen di Sesaltela and she is patron for various tsalaciut. On the sakscum of her Kimsquit prestige, she appears as a masked figure engaged in her usual occupation and makes a circuit of the house while a salmon is displayed. The relationship between this being and the salmon is problematical, and it is uncertain whether or not the same rite is practised in Bella Coola.

[532]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL AWAKENER

575*
796*
776
[532]

Every morning in Nesqalemcim the woman Sqaiqhaqumada goes around waking up the supernatural beings. She is patron for several tsalaciut dances. On the sakscum of her prestige, a masked figure representing the Awakener goes to every house in the village and pounds on the doors, but does not enter, to the relief of the uninitiated who have sought refuge within the bed-rooms.

THE DANCE OF DAWN

[521]

Not only must the supernatural beings be around in the morning, but every day the Sun himself must be requested to appear; this is done by the beings known as Xemcemcim, who are patrons for several tsalaciut. On sakscum they appear and Ana'lkmalmaic explains to the uninitiated who they are and what they do. With them comes the being Ooxtoma, "The Sleeper," wearing a mask to represent a drowsy man who constantly yawns and rubs his eyes. It is explained that this being delights in sleep and does not care if the sun never rises.

[The Dance of Dancers]

THE DANCE OF THE GREEDY ONE

Nanoilcoxtem, also called Tatsai-ic, is a greedy creature who spends his time going from one supernatural being to another in the land above, always begging for food. He is patron for several kukwiat and on the nukwum of one of his pentlqla a masked figure representing the Greedy One visits every house in the village asking for food. The uninitiated retreat to the bed-rooms, but the kukwiat comply with his request. In consequence the dancer's house is filled with food which is given away to the kukwiat guests.

THE DANCE OF THE REPOSITORY MAKER

Some repositories were constructed in the beginning of time by the supernatural being, Nanadjipum, who is patron for several kukwiat. On the nukwum of one of his pentlqla a figure, masked to represent a male being, appears and Ba'ilk-mulcoix explains that this is the maker of repositories. It is uncertain whether this being is found in Bella Coola or only in Kimsquit.

THE DANCE OF Alpanim's SLAVE

In the land above there lives a slave of Alpanim who spends his time providing fuel for the fire in Nanpalmoxtem. He is patron for a Bella Coola kwiat, though the details of his dance were not obtained.

THE DANCE OF Alpanim's HERALD

Qpalkiz Alpanim is patron for several kukwiat. During the nukwum of one of his pentlqla a masked figure representing him visits every house in the village, bidding the kukwiat

J:56:Dewalt E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellecoola NES

575*
746*
776 assemble to witness the dance of Alpanism. This is his function in the land above, as it is natural for him to do the same in this world.

THE DANCE OF Alpanism's FISHERMAN

Alpanism in the land above has a servant who uses a hand-net, ooie, in fishing for his master. He is accordingly known as Alpanism's Ooeyanim, "Fisherman," and is patron for a Iscint.

THE DANCE OF THE TOP

The playful Sinailymaldy Alpanism has a favourite toy consisting of a stick which can be made to spin between the hands. This top, if it may so be termed, is patron for some Iscint. The writer was unable to learn how it is displayed on ceremony.

THE DANCE OF THE FEATHERED HAMMER

The patron of one Iscint is a hammer which in some way was changed to stone in the beginning of time when the Bella Coola River first flowed to the sea.

THE DANCE OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR

A Iscint named Bilkmo has, as patron, a grizzly bear resident in Symsqwa's house.

424
575*
746*
534
[178]

VARIOUS OBSCURE MYTHS

In most cases Iscint dances have been preserved until the present day, although the myths on which they depend have long since been forgotten, but the reverse is sometimes the case. The following myths, were recorded with few, or no details of the associated dances. In several cases, one of the same type has already been recorded, so that the significance will be apparent.

A CONFUSED DANCE MYTH[]

Long ago there lived in Sinac a man and his wife who were powerful, prosperous, and able to give their children many good names. This

Related by Mrs. Willie Mack.

[115]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

424
575
796
539

secrets around the jealousy of several of the chiefs who caused the death of the couple by means of sorcery. Six children, five boys and one girl, the last the youngest of the family, were then left orphans. No one helped them and they suffered greatly from lack of proper food and clothing, besides being forced to bear unreasonable responsibilities and trials. One spring the six went to the forest to gather hemlock-bark for food. The eldest boy climbed a tree and threw down pieces of bark which the little girl helped to pick up; at least her brothers all told her how much she was helping, a kindly fiction because she was really too young to be of assistance. One piece of bark blew some little distance away; she ran to get it, but in a moment came hurrying back in fear, saying that she had seen a stranger man clad in a bear-skin blanket, with dyed cedar-bark and eagle down in his hair. At first the five brothers did not believe her, but at length they went to investigate and found the man, as she had described. He was lying on the ground but sat up when they approached.

"I have seen your poverty," he said, "and how you have been afflicted through no fault of your own, but solely owing to the jealousy of the evil Sisaa chiefs. It was they who killed your parents, but now I give you such power that you will be able to retaliate."

"Your name shall be Nacim," he continued as he turned to the eldest brother. "You shall be a Cannibal. When you dance energetically, instruct someone to cut your stomach vertically and your vitals will fall out, trembling. They will return to you at dawn and you will then fully recover, having frightened the unintended."

"Your name shall be Sang'ºmai," he told the second boy. "You, likewise, will be able to have your stomach cut, but you will not be a Cannibal."

"Your name shall be Nagaw," he said to the third brother. "You will have the ability to go to the land above to inspect rally posts. You will be able to forecast the length of a man's life from the condition of his post, and to cure the sick by strengthening those that are leaning."

Turning to the fourth brother he continued:

"Your name shall be qaw. You are to be a wa'a dancer, with power to give food and grease to Gaqawkilda and his brothers in the regions above. On such occasions you will wear a head-dress of branches covered with eagle down."

Then he addressed the fifth and youngest lad, saying:

"Your name shall be uwa'a. You will have a Sacisa dance in respect to that designation, but without special ability."

Finally the stranger turned to the little girl and said:

"Your name shall be Sisaimaka'i. When you dance you will be able to use any one of our songs and have as patron any supernatural being

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 424

you choose. You will be more powerful than any of your brothers and it will be you who will retaliate on the murderers of your parents, because you will be a shaman." 575* 796*

The man, a supernatural being, of course, told the six that their repository would be the blue pool on the shores of which they had met him; it was oval in shape, about twenty-five feet long and twenty wide. He added that its name was Nuqwanlieplstw·i. Having given his instructions, the strange visitor vanished. 539 [778]

The six orphans returned in a somewhat bewildered condition to Sisa·. They went into the house where they were staying and ıxwal·a, who was about eight years old, disturbed a cross old woman with his harmless play. In unreasonable anger she spanked him severely, and his older brothers told their sister to try her newly acquired power. She passed behind the old woman; by so doing she attracted to herself the latter's spirit without making even the motion of taking anything, and without the victim being aware of her loss. Qwaisasin·i stuck the supernatural element on a stick, as one spits a potato, and threw it on the heap of excrement piled up behind the house. Presently, when the woman wished to use the convenience, she took a stick with the intention of breaking it for sanitary use. She went to the platform for the purpose but it broke beneath her and she fell; the stick she was carrying pierced her heart and she died. The accident was, of course, due to the loss of her spirit. The five brothers were delighted with the realization that their sister was really as powerful as the supernatural one had said she would be.

The boys next told their sister to slay the principal chief, who had instructed a sorcerer to kill their parents. Qwaisasin·i went behind him and attracted his spirit to herself; she broke it between her hands and presently the owner fell dead. Though secretly delighted, the brothers thought it wise to appear grieved, and accordingly sent ıxwal·a to weep. As he was doing so, a kindly old woman patted him on the head, saying:

"Don't distress yourself, little boy. It is the man who killed your parents who is now himself dead."

But she had no idea that it was one of the orphans who had caused his death. Within a few days Qwaisasin·i captured and destroyed the spirits of two other chiefs who had had a part in the slaying of her parents; in each case the man died within a few hours of his loss. These four deaths so worried the people of Sisa· that all the chiefs determined to leave, since the malady, whatever it was, seemed to kill only those of importance. They took down the cedar boards forming the walls of the houses, piled them on canoes and made ready for departure, taking no heed for the poor people, including the six orphans, who were left shelterless.

2: McIlwraith E-S (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

424 Qwaixosán·i moved to and fro among the chiefs as they were busying
* 575 themselves in preparations for leaving, and drew to herself the spirit of
* 796 every one of the party. As they pushed off from the shore, she put these 539 on a board which she set afloat behind them. It capsized in the first rapids, immersing the various spirits, and presently the canoes were upset and their occupants all drowned. The six orphans continued to live at Stax where they intermarried with the poor people and in time the village increased in population and fully regained its old importance.

This myth has many points of resemblance with those described in vol. I, chap. IX. Each of the six orphans, and especially Qwaixosán·i, received the boon of supernatural good fortune, but the present given to the five took the form of a kusiut prerogative. The names so received are either in use at the present time or have but recently become dormant. Nuxim was used by the father's brother of the woman who related the story; Song·mai belongs to her son, a boy about eight years old; Nuxem is the property of another youth, related to the family; uxem has been lent to a friend, subject to recall at any time, and Qwaixosán·i is used by a girl relative about twenty years of age. Each of these has the prerogative of carrying out the dance given to their ancestor at Stax, long ago.

ORIGIN MYTH OF THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CARPENTERS[108]

In the beginning Ālqunítem sent down to a point on the upper reaches of the Clearwater four brothers, Nisitsamlaix, Waixxum, Ālqunítem, and Haí·k·hala with several sisters whose names have been forgotten. They thought they were the first to reach this earth but presently, to their sorrow, saw Tlákuskila, a man who had preceded them, and the women cried bitterly in their mortification. Ālqunítem had given Nisitsamlaix shamanistic power which he now used as he rubbed his hands over his sisters' faces to carry away their tears.

"Become fog," he said, as he held the palms of his tear-stained hands towards the land of the Ta·qa·xl people.

[821] That is why there are thick fogs in the vicinity of Alert Bay to the present day.

Nisitsamlaix and his relatives moved a short distance down the valley [115] [108] Related by Susamboat Annie.

Libbie Hewitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellecrosse NES

where they settled. Ajapaxtow had given him the ability to kill mammals and birds by merely projecting his power at them, and in this way he obtained food for the whole party. He could also revive his victims with the aid of a peculiar stick bearing orchestra, consisting of square cones. These he arranged around a fire balanced on knees which he could move with his feet; as he pressed, the cones became animated and beat time lovingly. It was Ajapaxtow who had given him these non-human stick-beaters. Nimkumbeis tried to turn mammals into men, but succeeded only with the eyes of the wolf, wherefore these organs appear human even today.

Ajapaxtow gave Nimkumbeis the prerogative of carrying out a dance dance, which has been performed in the same manner ever since by the owner of that name. His patrons, for he has four, are the supernatural Carpenters. Nimkumbeis has the further prerogative of wearing, when dancing, a wooden head-piece over his forehead representing Qe'ks, probably one of the blackbirds. On the night of nabenum, when the uninitiated are called in, masked figures of the four Carpenters appear, each carrying a conventional specimen of his work. Boas (at end) illustrates the masks proper to these beings. Ax'ikumbeis is, as usual, in attendance and explains the significance of the apparitions.

ORIGIN MYTH OF THE DANCE OF Nanaiqqnam[108]

There was once a middle-aged woman who had not been initiated into the ranks of the kukwim. She decided that she could gain this distinction only by seeing Ax'ikumbeis herself, so with this aim in view she set out to search for the supernatural one. First she penetrated to the source of every creek entering South Bentinck Arm; then proceeded up the Nechetacunnay River to its very head, again visiting the head-waters of every affluent, and finally went up the Bella Coola River, as before, exploring each side stream. For a whole year she travelled without seeing anything supernatural.

At the source of the Clearwater she came to a lake on the other side of which she could see a single column of smoke. It ascended without twist, coil, or movement, as if it were solid, so she knew that it must have a supernatural origin. Bravely she skirted the shore, till she saw that the smoke was rising from a house made of evergreen boughs. Stealing nearer, she beheld Ax'ikumbeis herself within, working with a woman Nanaiqqnam. Ax'ikumbeis was using rock crystals to strike the woman senseless, and then reviving her; but all the time was causing Nanaiqqnam to sink into the ground. Breathless with excitement the [108] Related by Steamboat Annie.

424 [illegible] until the unfortunate [illegible] had almost vanished
* 575 from sight. Then a sound betrayed her to [illegible].
* 996 "If you are a nuxtal," she said, "come to."
539 The woman did so, and [illegible] continued:

"I am [illegible]. You have found me, hence I give you a kaxiat dance prerogative. You will have [illegible] as patron."

The woman returned to her home, where she performed a kaxiat rite in which she portrayed the sinking of [illegible] into the earth.

ORIGIN MYTH OF A PECULIAR REPOSITORY

In the beginning of time there came down to Ewanta, a point a little distance below Mount Nuxalkí, a woman whose name was Spunyachalinia. Alquantím had given her a kaxiat prerogative with a peculiar repository in four parts, as if two were in either hand. Their names were Spalnjíquim-a, Sac-kuxmate-a, Sisiúm-i, and Sumcimim-i. When she danced she wore a wooden head-dress representing Woodpecker, and the masks used (her patrons?) were the sun when it is red, and an eagle. This dance has since been carried out from generation to generation by the owners of the name Spunyachalinia.

[798]
[539]

424
* 575
* 996

Kaxiat Prerogatives Other Than Dances

The most valuable possession of a kaxiat is the dance which he has the right to perform, but each member of the society has, in addition, a somewhat peculiar object, sometimes material and sometimes intangible, known as a skaxiat or yeaxwas. The meaning of these two terms will become evident in the description of their uses, meanwhile they can be termed "prerogatives." With every call, this possession of the dancer's comes automatically to him, though it can also be attracted to him by other means and without a call. There is no connection between the patron and the prerogative; for example, one kaxiat who has one of the sons of Alquantím as the former has, as the latter, the Hummingbird. Another may have Fog, Sleep, a Snake, or one of many other objects, animate or inanimate. The "patron-puppets" described in kaxiatem rites belong to this class.

[787]

In almost every case the origin is lost in antiquity, and the owner knows only that it belongs with his dance.

These prerogatives are used when the uninitiated are present; they are essentially secret, but provide considerable amusement and are a welcome interlude in the serious rites. When the prerogative is made visible, carpenters must be employed to make it, and be paid for their work, hence this part of the ceremonial is often omitted. When no handiwork is required, it is more frequently called into play, but even in such cases its employment is not universal. Not being an essential part of the Dancer rites, the use or omission of a prerogative is a matter which concerns the dancer alone, and he acts strictly in accordance with his own wishes, whether or not he desires the ceremony to be are repeated by every possible show. It is impossible to estimate with accuracy the relative frequency of employment, but it is probable that prerogatives of the type under consideration are used in about one-third of the Dancer ceremonials.

If a dancer decides to display a material prerogative, he consults with a carpenter before the coming of his call and asks him to make, for example, a wooden Hummingbird. On the night of Isanawu, when all the kokwiar are present, the bird is seen to move across the back wall of the house, pulled by concealed strings. The dancer rushes to it and appears to catch it, in reality hiding it beneath his clothing. The women drum and the heralds announce to the uninitiated in the neighbouring houses what has taken place. Carefully holding his hands cupped, as if clutching something of great value, the dancer moves to the centre of the house and returns the bird to the land above by throwing his hands upwards while the kokwiar call out Aaip. This is the usual procedure when the prerogative is a bird, a small mammal, or a reptile. The same ceremonial is often repeated on the night of wacinaiap, particularly if the ritual proper to the occasion does not suffice to occupy the requisite time. If the prerogative is immaterial, the ritual differs. For example, when it is Fog, the dancer stretches his hands upwards, as if receiving something from above, and then makes the motion of throwing this "somefling" into one of his companions. The recipient acts as if blinded, staggering around the house and colliding with articles of furniture as his fellows. One after another receives the same penance, until perhaps half the company are acting as if moving in a dense mist. Sometimes they reel from the house, falling into bushes and walking into the walls of other houses, as if deprived not only of sight but also of all sense of direction. The prerogative of Fog was given to Wintermistes (II, p. 1xxi), but many other bakeries enjoy the same right from other sources. After a short interval, the dancer goes to the victim and makes the motion of drawing something from him, thus restoring his sight and sanity. Fog is then recovered sick in the manner described for a Humminghird.

When first told of this custom, difficulty was experienced in visualizing the animals of the bakeries to what they realize in a more dramatization, lacking the presence of the uninitiated to give it zest and purpose. When several performances of this type had been witnessed, the difficulty vanished. The bakeries enter whole-heartedly into the spirit of the affair, regarding it as a game, and yet as a game in which they must acquit themselves creditably. Each recipient endeavours to excel his fellows in the realism of his performance, and his blind staggers never fail to cause merriment. The Bells Code delight in acting, and this is an occasion on which they can indulge their tastes to the utmost, without fear of disaster if an error should occur, such as hampers them in the presence of the uninitiated. Moreover, each strives to assist the performer, and these two reasons combine to make the whole a success.

[522]

Although these prerogatives are often used on the nights of kwaimow and wuiwishkap, the time most suitable for their appearance is during the ritual of sewadjat, which may be translated as, "The Restful Ceremony." The Bells Code say that the word is derived from sewa, a pillow, and that the meaning of sewadjat is a ceremony of "Pillowness," that is, resting, combined with pleasant relaxation. In spite of the number of prerogatives, it sometimes happens not a week or more 424 elapses without a Dorisi willing to perform. In such a case 595* the marshals instruct the heralds to summon the kokoriri for 796*

the Rustic Ceremony to a house from which the uninitiated 787 have been expelled. When all have assembled, the singers lead out the song of any Dorisi and thousfiance joins in, although the owner does not dance. Song-four song is repeated, the singers choosing particularly those with they fear may be forgotten. The uninitiated, who hear far singing from the adjacent houses, wonder what it may signify. The marshals arrange with a Dorisi willing to receive his prerogative, and even after midnight this person puts on a ceremonial collar, even though no call has come to him, and is ready to play his part. Sticks are distributed and one of the singers leads the audience in frenzied beating. This collar to bring the intangible prerogative to the willing Dorisi, she makes the motions of cracking something in his uprounded hands while the women dance. Amid the continual pounding of sticks, the dancer circles the house and presently throws what he has received to one of his fellows. The actions of the recipient of Fog have already been described, but there are intangible prerogatives of other kinds. One of these is Rabbit; the owner hops in imitation of the animal to any Dorisi, presses his cupped hands against the other's chest, and the latter likewise begins to hop. He in turn passes it to a third, he to a fourth, until finally the owner withdraws his prerogative and returns it above. The kokoriri become so interested that they often forget to continue the beating of sticks, a matter of no importance since no uninitiated are present. No one offered the prerogative from the owner ever declines; to do so would expose him to ridicule and a refusal is unthinkable according to an elderly Bulla Coola. Another prerogative of the same type is an Adze, in which case the possessor pretends to be using that tool. When finally withdrawn by the rightful owner, he often makes the motion of throwing it on a rafter instead of sending it back above; in this case it can be used again leave to the season without being brought from above. A Bat prerogative impels the owner, and likewise the temporary possessor, to move lightly to and fro like a bat; it can be thrown from one side of the house to the other, and is "caught" with arms stretched far above the head. Sleep, like Fog, can be projected into a number of individuals simultaneously, and causes all to slumber; while Anger causes everyone to fight with his neighbour. Still another prerogative of the same class is Ants. Some dancers have Bull-roarers, as is also true for some xaxaat dancers. Details of their use were unobtainable.

Although these prerogatives always amuse and please the kukwaxat, they also have two serious aspects. The insertion of one strengthens a kwaxat, and in the case of a Cannibal, Scratcher, or Breaker causes him to become frenzied. Whenever this happens he rushes forth to all the houses, frightening the uninitiated, always attended by a band of kukwaxat. Moreover, the injection of a prerogative so stimulates a kwaxat that he is more liable to receive a call. As many as fifty kukwaxat may have prerogatives of this type thrust into them during a single "Restful Ceremony." Of course not all of them receive calls, but one or more of them is likely to do so. The writer endeavoured to investigate the attitude of the Bella Coola on this point. Only kukwaxat are concerned, since they alone can have this power inserted into them. They realize the deceptions practised by the society, and no individual interviewed claimed to have been so strengthened that he received a call, yet all stated that this had been the case with others. There is no doubt that the projection of a prerogative directs the recipient's attention to kwaxat matters, and may often lead him to the point of giving his dance. In any event, the "Restful Ceremony" gives the marshals an opportunity to stimulate the interest of the members of the society, and to impress on them the desirability of dancing. The uses of "patron-puppets" have already been described.

In addition to these prerogatives, which normally remain in the land show and come to their owners only on special occasions, there are four of similar type considered to remain constantly within the possessor's body from the time of his admission, with respect to the name with which the right is associated. One of them, the one of crystals for initiation purposes, has already been described. The others are windstone, beadles, and sirwen, all unmodifiable terms.

1224
2275
7[illegible]
7[illegible]

One use to which the four of these prerogatives is put is to encourage the bakwiri to hasten to the house in which a ceremony is taking place. Delay in part and period of all dances, but particularly on bumbum and nacimilinga the bakwiri are often very slow in arriving. In such a case the dancer himself, one of his friends, or a marshal, may ask the owner of a windstone prerogative to perform. It will be convenient to refer to this factor, who may be man or woman, as X.

The uninitiated have been told that X carries in his right knee a rock crystal which he can thrust into anyone through the arm. The bakwiri do not share the belief, but they have acted for so long as if they did, that it is probable that they almost place credence in it themselves. When X performs, he leaves the dancer's home and goes in a crouching attitude, yelling fiercely, to the lowest house of the village. As he enters, the uninitiated flee to the bed-rooms, but peer curiously and fearfully through the cracks. X rushes to and fro, still crouching, while the bakwiri appear to be trying to avoid him, but at last he seizes either a man or a woman. In spite of his victim's well-simulated struggles, X makes the motion of thrusting something into him, whereupon the person cries out as if in pain and pretends to be nauseated. Away rushes X, enters the next dwelling, and does the same. This is repeated in every house in the village. As they go to the house in which the ceremony is taking place, the victims pretend to be suffering from a stomach-ache, caused by the foreign substance within them, and this pretence is maintained after their arrival. After some delay, X takes a stick and beats furiously four or five times with it, while the singers accompany him with strike and drum. Following another pause, he does this once more, causing the owner to lose of the crystals. The herald then the different houses to report what has taken place and the regular round of the evening continues in due course.

Occasionally the wachiuo ritual is elaborated to improve the ceremonial. Within this century a woman received a crystal in the manner and, as non-members were told, it became stuck so that the owner could not recall it. In this case two Iskatcie were in grief, the woman who had lost her crystal, and the one who had it within her body. The former went from house to house for several days, weeping and asking that the Iskatcie insert their prerogatives into the possessor's body to drive out the crystal, while the sufferer maintained a crouched attitude as if in intense agony. Her home was in Synapo-ta, but she went even to Sawi to see whether the Iskatcie there could not help her. Meanwhile the ceremonial were both amended and improved. After several days the marshals of the two villages decided to try in unison to force out the crystal. It was day-time, and they gathered around the stricken woman in an open spot between the two villages, while the uninitiated peered with interest from the background. One Iscatcie after another called his intangible prerogative to himself and passed it into the sufferer, and after each insertion the owner of the crystal tried to withdraw it, but without avail. After each failure, the one who had used his possession recalled it to himself by pressing with cupped hands and calls of Aaip, then sent it back above. Throughout the ceremony, a man with a loud voice kept informing non-members which prerogative was being tried. At the insertion of Ants, and again of Anger, the sufferer reeled, but the owner of the crystal could not bring it forth. It had been decided that a Bird-Arrow was to be the successful prerogative, and when this was inserted by its owner, the woman staggered, fell, and rolled wildly on the ground, her arms and legs flying apart in all directions. Then the joyful owner was able to draw back her [illegible] [illegible] and the sick woman at once recovered. 575 *

Another prerogative of the same owner is bubbin. As the 796 * kakaiut are gathering and before the main ceremonial of the evening, the man or woman with this prerogative can display 787 it if he or she desires. He stands up, stamps, then bends down and begins to beat with a stick on the floor; the singers, who know what is to take place, quickly join in. The stress to concentrate the performer's power, consisting of the ability to scratch the external genital organs. The stick continues to sound as the performer moves about the house, acting in accordance with his sight, and at the same time rolling his eyes and licking his lips. Choosing either man or woman as he desires, he calls out his name, and the person addressed must come forward to take his hands. The power is thus transmitted and the one so chosen begins to scratch, with the same accompaniment of rolling eyes and licking lips.

"It is sweet," he cries.

The power is then returned to the owner, who later passes it to another victim, until the marshals decide it is time to proceed to the main rites of the evening. The use of this pre- [522] rogative is a source of never-ending amusement to the kakaiut. [796]
The only explanation given of this somewhat peculiar ability is that it is practised by the supernatural beings in the land above. Like every other kaiut rite, it can be performed only by a person who owns a name in which it is embodied.

Sis'wain, the third of these prerogatives, is to imitate the 424 action of holding sexual intercourse. Like the last, its use is 575 * limited to the house in which a dance is taking place, and can 796 * be carried out only while the audience is waiting for the main 787 ceremony. The performer, man or woman, stands up with a 831 rope pressed close across his stomach, held with hands clenched 522 at the hips. It is said that in this position nothing can pass behind him. The singers and other kakaiut begin to beat time to concentrate the actor's power as he stamps around in a crouching posture, crying hoip and shaking his hips. Pre[illegible] mostly he begins to groan, and calls the name of either a man or a woman. The person so designated must take the performer's hands, thus neutralizing his power, and a his turn begins to shake and groan, amid the laughter of all. Presently the "gift" is returned, and here passed to another recipient. Sometimes a modest woman shakes her head instead of her hips, to the intense amusement of the audience. After some time the owner draws his power to himself and the main ceremony of the evening proceeds. It is said that the supernatural beings above perform ceremonies.

The Dance of a Kusiat

A detailed description of kusiat dances and ritual has now been given, but certain special features still remain. One of these is the method of disposal of the body of a dead member of the society. In dances which are completed in four days, there is little likelihood of the performer's death, but this is by no means uncommon during the long seclusion of a Cannibal for example. In this case there is no wailing, and the death is concealed from the uninitiated, sometimes even a wife being kept in ignorance of her husband's decease. A mask representing the person of the dead man is hung in the house behind the fire as a constant reminder of what must be done. From the ceremonial point of view, the serious aspect lies in the fact that a call has come which has not been sent back, and which cannot be sent back by the receiver. The marshals discuss the matter and agree that it must pass to some kusiat, a near relative of the deceased, who is informed of the decision and does not dare refuse, even if he should wish to do so. After a delay of two or three days, the body is taken secretly to the grave and buried, while the kusiat sing the dead person's song. This causes the call to shift to the chosen relative who completes the ceremony in due course. In the case of a Cannibal, for example, a considerable amount of time is allowed to elapse, and meanwhile the uninitiated are told that the kusiat are still waiting and watching for his return.

Where all hope has been abandoned, they are summoned and the relatives complete the ceremony, doing only that part of it left undone by the original recipient of the call. The principle is the same as that described when a novice dies, that someone must finish the rite. This aspect of the kusiut ceremonial is still preserved ceremoniously as the winter found to his cost. It was proposed that he be formally initiated into the society, but this was not allowed on the ground that he would not be present the following winter to complete the rites necessitated by the coming of the call. 575* 796* 766 787 [23]

The Final Rite

The commencement of the kusiut season is regulated by the coming of Nuskynum, but its conclusion is a matter of arrangement. By February the number of kukusiut wishing to dance has become negligible and the marshals decide to terminate the ceremonial season. It must be remembered that an enclosure has been built in every house where an important kusiut dance has taken place, and that as long as these are in existence the uninitiated have not been allowed to live in those houses. The social life of the community has accordingly been profoundly disturbed. Of course several dances may have taken place in a single dwelling, but even allowing for that, the fact remains that the uninitiated have been forced to dwell temporarily in perhaps only one or two houses. The most obvious mark of the end of the ceremonial season is the destruction of these enclosures. 575* 796* 591 784

A few nights after the last nukusum, the heralds summon the kukusiut to the house in which it took place. They sit down but the usual droning is omitted. Presently sticks are distributed and one of the singers takes his place to lead in the customary frenzied beating. But before he raises his baton, one of the marshals, or another kusiut with ability in that respect, steps to the centre of the house and spits noisily in all directions, his aim being to deluge the house and spectators with a spray of saliva. Then the singer leads the beating of 575* 796* 787 784 sticks, while everyone calls out, heip. This is repeated four times. The sticks continue to sound irregularly as the younger men pull the enclosure to pieces and throw it on the central fire. By these means the kukwisut have been freed from their contact with the supernatural and, perhaps even more important, the repositories have been "tied up," to use the native term, for another year. Those members of the society whose dances have taken place in the house now wash the black from their faces and all share a light meal. The marshals take this last opportunity of addressing their fellows, impressing on them the necessity of maintaining the secrecy of the rites during the summer season. Above all, they warn them to hide the whistles and other paraphernalia most carefully. This concludes the season's ceremony in the house in question; some of the kukwisut withdraw, others remain, and the uninitiated are free to enter and take up the old threads of family life, as it was before the coming of the first call.

* 784 * 575 * 796 [787]

If it is not too late at night the party may move to a second house and remove the taboo from it in the same way. More often this is done on the following night, when a second body of kukwisut are allowed to wash. Another house is visited on the next evening, and so on in succession till all the enclosures are burnt and the only visible mark of what has happened is the collar of dyed cedar-bark worn by each novice.

[424] There may be certain prerogatives connected with this finale which could not be learnt owing to its discontinuance for many years. In fact, one old woman claimed to have a definite right to sing at the destruction of the enclosures, but it was unfortunately impossible to investigate the matter.

* 575 * 796 182 571

Concluding Observations and History

It is virtually impossible to overestimate the importance of the sociological aspects of the society. During the ceremonial season the whole fabric of social life is altered; families are divided, parents and children being separated in many even though an infant in arms, though uninitiated, can be brought to dances by its mother; distinctions between rich and poor, slave and freeman, become of slight importance; all that really matters is whether a person is or is not a dancer. Membership in the society seems to the uninitiated the most desirable thing in life, although their fears are always so strong that they never come to dread actual admission. The feeling of class consciousness which exists in a somewhat mild form at other seasons of the year, gives place to a powerful sentiment of superiority on the part of members of the society over those who are not so fortunate. Even the respect normally shown to chiefs is submerged since they, too, are subject to the rule of the marshals.

Apart entirely from this attitude of superiority and inferiority, is the bond of fellowship engendered among members of the society by the rites. Whoever happens, the uninitiated must be deceived. Moreover, the psychological effect of gathering nightly in a body for a specific purpose is tremendous. Night after night they eat together; night after night they listen to the words of the marshals, who impress on them the need for co-operation and secrecy, who hold before them the good example set by their fellows who have carried out rites successfully, who emphasize the fact that they are doing as their fathers did. The ceremonial import is of greatest consequence at all these gatherings, but when the uninitiated have withdrawn the hakaxint relax somewhat and enjoy themselves. The food itself is always of the best and some of the usual restrictions are removed. It is, for example, the only time that women are allowed to eat the flesh of seals. If this delicacy is provided the marshals enjoy the tidbits, but after Cannibals, novices, and others have received preferential treatment, the remainder is distributed to all and sundry.

It has been stated by some writers, especially those unfamiliar with the significance of native ceremonial life, that the dances of the coastal tribes are orgies of immorality. This point was investigated with care and it may be stated posi-

*575 *796 577 279 [684] ously that such is not the case among the Bella Coola. As the present time both drunkenness and vice are rampant, but neither of these practices is apparent on the nights when dances are taking place. The writer was present at many kusiut dances, in each case attended by practically every resident, and during them he saw only two drunken men. With regard to these, the sentiment of the influential members of the society was one of regret that the marshals could no longer exercise their prerogatives and punish the offenders. As several Bella Coola expressed it:

"Our dances are sacred and ceremonial, a drunken man spoils them."

As a rule they do not regard drunkenness as a serious vice, if a vice at all, hence this attitude was illuminating. It is more difficult to speak with certainty about morality; no breaches of it could have occurred at the ceremonies witnessed, nor was there any evidence that the excitement led to any licentious actions. On the whole, the dances are desirable since they provide a source of tremendous interest and importance. Vice flourishes with lassitude and boredom; anything that stimulates the people reduces it, and when the Bella Coola are engaged in ceremonial rites, the sentiment of the seniors of the community is strongly opposed to anything that interferes with the solemnity of the occasion.

*575 *796 577 834

There is no reason to suppose that these factors were not present in former times, more potent than now when belief in the supernatural powers of the kukusiut has passed away. The whole question of sexual morality at kusiut dances was investigated with considerable care.

One point emphasized by all Bella Coola was that no kusiut was allowed to have relations with an uninitiated person, whether his wife or not, during the period that his face was blackened and he was wearing a ceremonial collar. The reason for this prohibition seems to have been one not of morality, but of the necessity for preserving the dignity and secrecy of the kusiut society. An offender was punished by being struck [688] by a marshal with a billet of firewood; such a blow was never repeated and might or might not cause death. The woman with whom the member had misbehaved himself was either initiated at once or killed if her relatives could not provide a name and paraphernalia.

575*
796*
577
834
[688]

Relations between members of the society were less severe. Particularly during the long nights of kwatimow and nuxmalinqs, when only kwaxicat were present and when men and women, often scantily clad, were closely associated, there seems to have been a certain amount of immorality. It was by no means a time of license, nor was laxity encouraged by the marshals; intercourse between members of the society did not conflict with kwaxicat regulations, and was accordingly a matter that concerned the individuals alone.

Relations between the actual dancers and members of the other sex were formerly governed by strict rules, rigidly enforced by the marshals. After the coming of a call, a man could hold intercourse with a kwaxicat, provided that he did so in his own home, but in no other. But after nakawm, when he left his house, continence was demanded until the end of the season and the burning of the enclosure-platform. The only exception to this rule was that if a second dancer received a call in the same house, the restrictions placed on the first were raised while the call was actually upon the second; that is, between kwatimow and nakawm. After that both were subject to strict continence, unless a third call came to the same dwelling. The Bella Coola of today offer no explanation for this law, save that disregard of it was displeasing to the supernatural beings. An offender in this case was likewise punished by being struck once by a marshal.

[688]

The religious aspects of the dances, as exemplified by the attitude of the Bella Coola to the masked figures and other phenomena, was described in the early part of this chapter, but additional observations may now be made. The writer realizes that the reader must find it difficult to understand how the uninitiated can be deluded into thinking that masked

575*
796*
781

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

575 796 781 figures are really beings from another world. The explanation lies in the profound belief of all Bella Coola in the near presence of the supernatural; consequently, a supernatural explanation is the one normally given for all unusual incidents. The dances themselves are filled with strange manifestations, particularly the weird whistling concerning the origin of which the uninitiated have no idea. Once convinced by this means of the presence of unknown powers, it is easy for them to believe that the masked figures are visitors from the other world. Nor was their belief in former days shaken by certain representations which were palpably false, such as that of the sun. No one could believe that the disk which moved across the back of the house was the sun itself; but on the other hand it seemed marvellous to the uninitiated, ignorant of the means used to portray it. To the white man there seems a fundamental difference between a supernatural being and the representation of a strange object made to move by unseen means, but to the Bella Coola both belong to another realm, and are accordingly akin. Moreover, there were occasions when the uninitiated must have seen the shifting or actual falling of a mask, for example, during the fight with wasps. But here again the deep belief of the non-members came to the help of the kukusiut, who told their guests that this was caused by the coming of a call to the actor, and what might easily have become doubt and suspicion was thus changed to respect.

The writer laboured under two tremendous difficulties in [178] collecting information about kusiut matters; the present dances are mere shadows of what they formerly were, and there are [123] no more uninitiated. His presence and quest for information served to stimulate interest and led to a partial revival of the old rites, but the bulk of his material was obtained from infor- [114] mants rather than from actual observation. It is a universal characteristic of mankind to idealize accounts of former practices, so it is not only possible, but probable, that the foregoing descriptions are more perfect than many of the rites to which they refer. Even when full allowance is made for this, the fact still remains that the kukuiat were able to carry out dances in which they deceived the uninitiated. Above all, it is clear that those who were not members of the society had the greatest respect for the powers of those who were, and although doubt may have existed concerning the identity of the supernatural visitors, there was not the slightest concerning the ability of the kukuiat to have, for example, their stomachs ripped open. The writer discussed this point with too many old men and women to have the slightest uncertainty on this point, and he feels confident that anyone who could have listened to the account of a reliable old man concerning his fears when he had "killed" a kukuiat in this manner, would have shared his conviction.

Jacobsen E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

575* 796* 781 114

It would be fascinating to discuss at some length the probable history of the kukuiat society, but this would entail a comparison with the rites of other coastal tribes and belongs to the realm of comparative ethnology. This monograph deals only with Bella Coola practices as the writer saw them or heard them described, so that the history of the society can only be treated from this angle. It appears certain that the rites have increased in secrecy. One old marshal with whom the matter was discussed remembered having heard that long ago masks were constructed in the presence of the uninitiated. Considered as an isolated statement this would have little value, but in conjunction with information derived from Kimsquit it becomes of importance. It is true that in Kimsquit the masks are made in secret, but they are shown to the uninitiated as masks, and the writer was told of one instance in which Thopots, during his round of the village, fell into the water and remained there all day, to the amusement of non-members who recognized that he was merely a disguised human being. It is even said that long ago the manufacture of masks was entrusted to influential uninitiated. It is clear that there has been a tremendous increase in secrecy even at Kimsquit, and a great deal more at Bella Coola. The writer believes that

575* 796* 178 184 532

*575 long ago the kuxiut society was composed of individuals re-
*796 garded as having supernatural endowments, and who perhaps 178 believed this themselves. In course of time their influence 184 increased to such an extent that they were able to convince [532] non-members of the supernatural origin of objects used in their ceremonial.

[115] Unfortunately, information from Kimsquit was obtained almost exclusively from one old man, who, though a marshal well informed in kuxiut matters and in many ways an almost ideal informant, had long since realized that the dances could be nothing more than representations, and it is possible that his remarks were coloured by this knowledge. Though he tended to minimize the attitude of belief with which the un-
[781] initiated regarded masked figures, yet he fully agreed with every statement made by the Bella Coola themselves with regard to the firm belief of non-members concerning the supernatural powers of the dancers. He also confirmed statements
[688] respecting punishment if an error should occur, and mentioned the shooting of a Bella Bella dancer who had allowed his mask to fall during a nusuk dance. As far as actual ritual is concerned, the differences in procedure between Bella Coola and Kimsquit are unimportant, and differences in belief are less than they appear at first sight. The Bella Coola kuxiut [981] seem to have perfected their organization and to have been able to impress the uninitiated to a greater extent than their Kimsquit fellows, but the fundamentals of the society are identical.

*575 Traditions concerning the early history of the society are *796 probably of little value historically, but they are important as 193 indicating the mental attitude of the Bella Coola. Considering the importance of the society there are relatively few accounts of what took place long ago; the Bella Coola know that it exists, believe that the rites are identical with those carried out by their ancestors for generations, and theorize no further. It was only in the beginning of time that things were radically different; it is believed that then all the people were endowed

2:34c:Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

with such powers that they killed one another in their performances. Consequently, they decided to dance only in the winter months, and merely to imitate the actions which had been previously carried out. 575* 796* 173

There are other traditions, probably with an historical basis, describing conflicts with the a'alk. The Bella Coola say that long, long ago there were not enough kwaiat names for more than the old people to be admitted to the society, and that though members were regarded as having supernatural powers, yet the a'alk, confident in their numbers and strength, used frequently to assail the supremacy of the kukwiat. On one occasion, when the latter had prepared an elaborate feast of smoked goat flesh for themselves, the a'alk collected their weapons and demanded a share of the feast. The kukwiat, furiously angry, felt compelled to yield, though later they took revenge through the destruction wrought by many Cannibals and Scratchers when frenzied. It is said that even recently if the kukwiat did not invite the a'alk to one of their dances, they were always careful to placate them by sending half of the food as a present. 575* 578 173 [424] [551] [431]

Sometimes the a'alk, collectively, were bold enough to kill a kwaiat, particularly if something had gone amiss in a dance house. Or other motives might be strong enough to outweigh respect for a member of the society. On one occasion a chief, who was not a member of the society, was told that his wife, who was, had been in the habit of prowling off at night with a Cannibal. The jealous husband prepared his bear-spear and slew the Cannibal when next he entered his house during a frenzied rampage of the village. Kukwiat, both from that village and others in the vicinity, combined to cause the murderer's death with the aid of a member of the society who was a professional killer. 575* 578 682

Success did not always come to the kukwiat in quarrels between members of the two societies. Long ago, the a'alk were invited to a qulem in a village in the upper Bella Coola valley. One of their own dances was taking place, but they 575* 578 796*

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#575
578
#796

accepted the invitation. The house was so crowded that the uninitiated in front were driven forwards by pressure from the rear until they encroached on the space behind the fire. An elderly kwaxwat decided that this was a good occasion to frighten the visitors, so he whispered to a recently admitted member of the society:

"You fall down, and I will explain that it is because you have attracted to yourself the spirit of an uninitiated person."

Under most circumstances this would have terrified the uninitiated, as indeed it did the majority. But the leader of the a'alk, perhaps excited by the dance in which he had just taken part, refused to be impressed. He knew that the kwaxwat would threaten to throw the spirit of the offender into the fire, irrevocably compelling the owner to follow it, but he was not afraid.

"Let us see your powers," he said. "Go ahead with your throwing of a spirit into the fire."

The kwaxwat responsible for the scheme knew that it must be carried out, and only hoped that, as the spirit was about to be burnt, the owner would offer to pay for its return, as usually happened in such cases. He instructed the fallen kwaxwat to proceed and the latter rose, fumbled at the back of his neck, as if drawing something forth, and thrust the "something" into the fire. Breathless with fear, the uninitiated waited for someone to be forced into the flames. But nothing happened. It was a dangerous situation for the kwaxwat, and as the only means of maintaining their reputation, they began to whisper that the man must have accidentally extracted his own spirit instead of the alien one. The heralds repeated what was being said, and the guests watched to see what would happen. The unfortunate kwaxwat was surrounded by a group of his fellows and thrust into the fire, although their acting was sufficiently good to make it appear that they were trying to check him. By these drastic means the kwaxwat were able to add to the prestige of their society, though it is said that the a'alk leader

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

996*
575*
578

expressed the opinion that the whole affair was a stupid blunder.

The Bella Coola state that long, long ago the usual outcome of friction between a'alk and hakaiat was the incorporation of members of the former society into the latter like any other uninitiated. The following account of an incident of this kind was obtained from a Kimsquit man who regarded it as historically accurate.

173
575*
578

Some five hundred years after the first settlement of this earth, the members of the two societies used to live amicably together during the summer, which was not surprising considering that both contained members of the same families. But during the winter the hakaiat all gathered in a village on the Dean River for their dances, while the a'alk also performed at the same season in the village of Tpalkoi, opposite the present Mastiten Cannery below Kimsquit. There was considerable jealousy between the two organizations, and the members were always seeking an opportunity to deride and ridicule their rivals. A Cannibal dance had been given by the hakaiat and the a'alk, who were present as uninitiated guests, had watched with wonder the disappearance of the performer into the mysterious realms above. But a few days later, Xmamdzin, a chief and leader in one of the a'alk dances, happened to be in a lonely part of the forest where he was amazed to meet the Cannibal. The latter, confident of his supernatural power, spoke:

"In meeting me today you have met disaster, you will soon be a corpse."

Xmamdzin, a middle-aged man of powerful physique, was not impressed by the other's powers, whether physical or supernatural.

"No," he answered. "It is you who have fallen into trouble. You are old and feeble and if you try to injure me it will be the worse for you."

"My age has nothing to do with it," retorted the Cannibal. "You have met me and will die."

At this juncture two of the Cannibal's guardian companions appeared, but Xmamdzin still did not fear because they were both old and uncouth, whereas he had no one. But when two more hakaiat appeared,

This Kimsquit informant stated that long ago a similar segregation of a'alk into one village and hakaiat into another took place in Bella Coola. Bella Coola informants know nothing of this. The populace of the uninitiated from houses in which hakaiat dances are taking place leads to a division of the village, and it is easy to understand how two sections could have been created without definite intention. This would hardly account for a separation into two villages and no explanation for the statement is offered.

[621]
[591]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

178 he hoped into silence, knowing that the odds were too great for him. The Cannibal realized that if this powerful man could be initiated into 575 their society he would be a source of strength, so he said:
578 "You are now an initiate of mine."

Xmxmdzix understood that this meant he was to be initiated into the kwaxat society. He agreed, but asked to be permitted to complete the a'alk dance which he was performing that evening, and to get beating sticks for which he had gone to the forest. The kukuxiut were only too willing to grant this dispensation in their joy at having a valuable convert.

On his return to the village, Xmxmdzix told his fellow a'alk that he was going to be a kwaxat and they were greatly grieved at loss of their leader. That night they gave the dance which had been started and composed a song of which the theme was the way in which their rivals had fallen until their heads were upside down. The kukuxiut, mocked in this way, found that this was a prelude to further trouble with the a'alk, but Xmxmdzix duly carried out his promise and was enrolled as a kwaxat. Dazed at their leader, many of his disconsolate associates were admitted as kukuxiut, and ever since that time there has been relatively little friction between the two societies. In due course the Cannibal gave his dance with a song describing how he had met a strange creature over whom he had prevailed; this was, of course, the uninitiated Xmxmdzix.

To these two is attributed the origin of the practice of [209] showing to decide priority of invitation giving. It is said that [196] both Xmxmdzix and the Cannibal once wished to invite the people to a ceremony on the same evening and agreed to shove against each other to decide which should have preference. Xmxmdzix prevailed, and the Cannibal duly postponed his dance and went with his associates to the winner's house.

As before stated, stories of this kind dealing with the al-[198] leged history of the society are of slight value. As far as they go, they agree with other evidence pointing to the gradual growth of the kwaxat society from a band of elders endowed with supernatural power to a society with enormous prestige, dominating the life of the community and entirely overshadowing the a'alk who seem once to have been their rivals.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER II

SONGS

533*

Introductory — Sisaok Songs — Xe tla Songs — A'alk Songs — Nusäxkämx Songs — Marriage Songs — Mourning Songs — Shaman Songs — Kusiut Songs — Non-Ceremonial Songs

Introductory

THE singing of songs is an essential part of all Bella Coola rites so that a study of them is important, entirely apart from their musical value. Their texts throw light on the beliefs of the performers, on the aims of the ceremonies, and, above all, give concrete instances of what the uninitiated are led to believe. This is particularly true of those used in kusiut dances, and for this reason all songs have been deferred until this chapter in which they can be grouped together. [790]* [575]*

The texts of songs are difficult to obtain. Snatches of many are remembered, but few individuals are acquainted with the complete version. A phonograph was used to record the music, and it was soon found that very few people were qualified to sing into the machine. Some became confused and forgot the words; some began to laugh; and some lacked the poise to attempt to sing. One elderly Kimsquit man, Jim Pollard, was found to be the best and most reliable singer, and he was used almost exclusively for phonographic work. Hence the records are stamped with his musical technique. Others approached his ability, but he alone preserved an art which had been common in former days. Over one hundred songs were obtained with the assistance of this man. 126 115 533*

The text was always obtained before a song was sung into the machine, thus assuring that the recorded version agreed with the written words. Even with this check, the writing down of songs is extremely difficult. Choral endings are widely employed, consisting of non-essential suffixes inserted for musical effect. It was often impossible to record these in the 126 533* 195

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

126 text, although they are obvious on the phonograph records.
195 In singing, moreover, sounds, especially vowel sounds, are altered to fit the tune, a factor which accounts for further *533 discrepancies between record and text. A frequent device is reduplication, a word or group of words is repeated in singing when not called for in the spoken version. Finally one sound occurs in singing which is practically unknown in speaking, a velar s (recorded as ʃ) which gives a whistling effect. Most choruses and some whole songs consist of meaningless sounds; in such cases the tune alone is important and no attempt was made to record the syllables.

It was quite as difficult to obtain interpretations as to record texts. Songs which have been handed down for generations abound in archaic expressions which are meaningless even to the older men: some recently composed are full of metaphorical devices to conceal their real significance from the uninitiated. The result is consequently a series of words which, taken one at a time, convey no meaning. In many cases it was impossible to obtain literal translations, even with the willing assistance of younger men familiar with English. Every effort was made to get the general meaning, and it is felt that this object was tolerably achieved, though the transcriptions may not be sufficiently accurate for grammatical analysis.

*533 Singers function at every ceremony; in fact, its success depends so largely upon their efforts that they are always *796 important members of the community. Some singers are *575 created by the validation of an ancestral prerogative; others by having composed a suitable tune. The young man who has [554] done so, calls one of the established musicians aside and hums [424] it to him; if the hearer is favourably impressed, he may learn and repeat it to his fellows, and if it wins their approval, the [555] composer may be asked to join their ranks for the occasion on which it is to be used. Thus encouraged, the young man is likely to try again, or he may be invited to assist at some ceremony for which a large number of singers is required. If proficient, he is certain to win recognition in course of time,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

until it is accepted by all that he is one of the men who should be called upon to take part in all rites. If possible, he endeavours to legalize his position by a distribution of presents. Men are always eager to become singers, both for fame and for emoluments. 533* 796* 575* [555] [424]

New songs are required every year for sisaak and kusiut dances, necessitating an almost limitless number of compositions. Singers frequently make use of fragments of old tunes, or snatches from half-forgotten songs, but they are ridiculed as inefficient if the plagiarism be too obvious. Tunes are always prepared in advance; in fact, proficient composers spend much of their time at all seasons of the year in humming over to themselves possible combinations. When word is passed around that a song is required, they meet in some lonely spot and each who has one in readiness hums it, tapping a gentle accompaniment. After considerable discussion, one is selected as being the most suitable and the singers make themselves familiar with it. Words are then put to it, consisting of fragments from the ancestral myth of the person for whom it has been prepared, or from some other theme appropriate to the occasion. Sometimes this is done by the composer of the tune; sometimes by another singer more familiar with the subject. The provision of words is considered less difficult and less important than the composition of a tune; no one knows the source of inspiration for the latter, but the former is said to come from either the heart or the head. All ceremonial songs are divided into three sections; kelulo·s or first part, ăs·iko·tl or second part, and ălax or third part, separated from one another by the siutnălas, wordless chorus. The three parts correspond, approximately, to verses and each contains four, rarely six, subdivisions. In mourning songs there are sometimes as many as six or eight ălax, and the whole is correspondingly lengthened.

On the night of a ceremony, the singers always take their places beforehand for a final rehearsal. Each brings his own beating-stick, a stout baton about two feet long to pound on the floor in time with his singing. The only other musical [534]

2: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 instrument is the drum.[1] In former times the drum consisted 796 solely of a box, though recently skin drums have been adopted 575 from the Carriers. There is usually one singer especially pro-[534] ficient in using this, though sometimes another takes his place;
[177] all such arrangements are completed during the final rehearsal. A final decision is also reached as to who shall fill the three principal parts, sankwulsàm, âhaia, and lualkum. It is the duty of the sankwulsàm or leader, to regulate the time; he squats facing the others, who are grouped in a close semicircle, and indicates the rhythm by pounding with his stick on the floor. When a song is to start, he first taps rapidly, then modifies and regulates it throughout. The leader should be the best musician among the singers, and the same individual usually functions on all occasions although a rearrangement is sometimes necessary. In the centre of the singers sits the âhaia, announcer, who must possess a powerful voice. As already mentioned, every song consists of three parts, each with several subdivisions. When the leader has beaten time rapidly to indicate that the singers are ready, the announcer bellows out the words of the first subdivision so that all the audience can hear them. Crash! goes the leader's stick and his voice gives the key for singing the words just called out, in which the audience is expected to join. As they are finishing, the announcer roars the next subdivision, and the same procedure is repeated. Instead of proceeding to the third, the announcer often next returns to the first, following it by the second. The subdivisions of a single part are never sung through in order once only, there are always repetitions and ramifications according to the discretion of the announcer. At the end of the first part, the leader again beats time rapidly in which his fellow-singers join.
[535] If a dancer is performing, he crouches down without making any effort to keep time with the rapid tapping, and the singing ceases. After a short pause, the second part is sung in the same manner, followed likewise by the third. The function of [1] Rattles, made of dried maple, are used by some masked dancers, but they can hardly be termed musical instruments.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola ?E6

the kulkum, prompter, is equally important, though less obvious. As many as one hundred songs may be in constant use in the course of a single kusiut season, and it is impossible for any one individual to remember them sufficiently well never to become confused when calling them out. Consequently one or more prompters sit beside the announcer, ready to whisper to him the words of the next subdivision. Prompters are expected to be thoroughly familiar with the myths of all performers and, since they neither announce nor sing, they are able to concentrate their whole attention on remembering the words which have been considered suitable. 533* 796* 575*

This somewhat complicated mechanism ensures a minimum of error in all important rites. Mistakes do creep in, however, and it is related with glee how on one occasion the singers completely forgot a text and substituted a description of a mask used at the rite in question. Moreover, even the solemnity of a kusiut dance cannot entirely check the love of the Bella Coola for practical joking. A blind singer once laid down his stick for a moment, whereupon one of his companions licked it away. It appears to be virtually impossible for a man to sing unless he can accompany himself by tapping, and the frantic efforts of the sightless one to recover his baton almost betrayed his companions into obvious mirth. Occasionally, too, a prompter neglects his task[1] and the announcer is forced to improvise, while the leader endeavours to conceal the error by lengthening the pause between subdivisions. 533* 796* 575* 522

Marriage songs, shaman songs, non-ceremonial songs, and a few others of special type are sung by an individual, unaccompanied. The technique is, therefore, quite different from that just described. Dance songs of all kinds should, if complete, have the three parts; these are indicated as A, B, and C 533*

[1]During the winter of 1923-4 there was only one man in Bella Coola with sufficient skill and poise to act as announcer and prompter. He found it impossible to perform both duties and requested the aid of the writer as prompter. The texts were written down, and it was the writer's duty to sit beside the announcer, waiting for a nudge signifying that he had forgotten the next subdivision. From personal experience the writer can state that the task of prompter is worrying in the extreme. [123]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 in the following examples. The subdivisions as called out by the announcer are separated by vertical lines and, where possible, a translation of each is given. The sounds of wordless choruses were not recorded. The different types are arranged according to order of mention in this monograph.

Sisaok Songs

*533 575 796 The themes of sisaok songs differ according to the purpose for which they have been composed. For instance, when a young person is being initiated into the society, the words usually refer to his crest, the tutwinam which brought his song; at potlatches, to the goods which will soon be given away and the phrasing is often grandiloquent; sometimes the two concepts are combined. These differences are clearly shown in the examples which follow. A few sisaok songs have been preserved for generations, but most are newly composed for each winter season and the old ones forgotten. Since few rites of this type have been carried out during recent years, it was difficult to obtain complete versions.

*533 Song Used by Wilnlks (a) of Kimsquit when Initiated into the Society (b)

A Litsumuxyum·o	sti'ähsaolt	shälpalmiḥdai(c)	didahanda
Go out	ye citizens	to see	the arrival disiutsäli of my supernatural being.

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (d)

B Diqulxandai	dablähmdux	dikukpilxdai	dikstälwalamstomx
That is what	brought down	my grandfather(e)	and has left for me(f)
Alhäbumidjudux	mumutxnai	mumutxnai	häxilxpqulxandai
Be careful	my children	my children	it will spear you dalt'lahmxdai	dilwalhastälxaiyla
what has come to me	my crest(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Yaxadusdux	didiḥoxdai	didiḥoxdai	Diqänäxmälwalo
Shame him	the unsuccessful one(h)	the unsuccessful one.	He desires

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

ala sklpamiqwas	wemawmastas	wastamamsyals
eagle down on his head(i)	ye children	of chiefs.

xaxaxaxaxaxaxwai

[meaningless concluding hum.]

(a) For some unexplained reason this song has been used without change for three generations. It was composed for a certain Stahmp, willed by him to Wi'talas, who transmitted it to the present user. [424 428]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 22, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) All suffixes of dai should probably be daix, but in singing the final x sound is usually indistinguishable and has accordingly been omitted throughout. The d sound is often sung as d̂ but the one spelling has been used consistently. [195]

(d) The wordless chorus of this song consists of a series of grunts which are said to be the voice of a heron, the crest of Wilnlks.

(e) The meaning of this is: What my grandfather brought down.

(f) The grandfather of Wilnlks had willed to him the right to use this crest. [424 428]

(g) The man from whom this song was obtained did not know what was the crest of Wilnlks. He judged from the text that it must have been the heron, although this is not one of the generally recognized birds.

(h) Meaning: The heron which has failed to jab its prey. When this song was used, a masked figure of a heron appeared and stabbed several of the spectators, who were later reimbursed for having permitted a prerogative to be displayed. [431 424]

(i) An ambiguous expression for presents.

Song of Aqalais of Kimsquit when Initiated into the Sisook Society(a)

A Yeyailiwatimutkymas	a'awashmapas	Yas skaiskhqiplaistas
Be of good courage	ye of the potlatch(b).	Use up and down(c)
dialsultanakhulaistas	Yaimatnmnimulman	dinuqmalsmimdai
your land.	They have met with an accident(d),	the house being flooded (e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sa'alkqwustin-iuals	aldikaiyassaiyalls	kapulasdimutilnaawastas
Watch their faces [to see].	whose will become amazed	when rises to flood sawas-atskwamastas	Kasiostmai-akms	dasqwallakelosqudai
the Kimsquit River(f).	They who use dishes (g)	will prepare their biggest ones.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 12a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) The wording shows that the song was to be used at a potlatch.

(c) Meaning: Make use of in all directions.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#533

(d) Referring to the expected guests.
(e) The literal translation is that it is full of water, but the meaning refers to the large amount of olachen grease prepared for the occasion.
(f) A euphuistic reference to the amount of food about to be given away.
(g) A reference to the expected guests.

Sisaok Song Composed for Spuxcpuxta, a Kimsquit Woman(a)

A Skuiqpátimuthu	aististsto-ekimi	Ałłstaxpłłcumidai
Why are you adorning yourself,	my mother (b)?	Is almost ready to seize (c) me

yau dił'łłłtwuxudai what was sent down for me (d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Nuuuuskdimutit	xuanutstwałdanuał
Carry with both your hands	what is heavy for your house(e)

ałdiactwaiwałindai	dilxutum-łdi^{xw}dai
when the guests enter,	repay them with food.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 12b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) The text is worded as if a girl were addressing her mother about an approaching potlatch.
(c) As an eagle gripe its prey.
(d) Meaning: My crest is almost ready to seize me.
(e) A reference to the goods prepared for the potlatch.

Song of Nuxpuxda when Initiated into the Sisaok Society(a)

A Ałłinoaita	setnutsaitwmiłdai	łłapstłiandai	xwanumxmamału
Come,	come and hear,	he is about to start	a story (b).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Xyumłpdai	aiyaxtstałtwudai	wastałłtim	xuatutstałtwł-imłi
He is pleased	Echo(c)	when he can	alter his re-echoings (d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Łaiyumłinudai	yau stałwałum-imudai	Diaiyałłaixudai
They(e) will start	to laugh at him(f).	Even now he is starting łałłquxwałxus to imitate Raven(g).

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 *
[115]
[776]

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tal as Charlie and Steamboat Annie.

(b) Meaning: He is about to display an ancient right; this song was used at a potlatch.

(c) That is: Echo is pleased. This supernatural being was used as tsimsum.

(d) Echo is said to display a proud and aristocratic disposition by trying to imitate the voices of others.

(e) That is: Human beings.

(f) Echo.

(g) That is: In his pride he is trying to imitate the voice of a great chief.

Song of I'mastikh of Kimsquit(a)

A Qsnqwilsilkx(yaikmalnx
I am angry,

sk'ayinmqwalmh
I shall presently display

wa'ax'lismistikhx(b)
the water that was brought down

skmk'lismsrstumistikhx
by him(c) who came down(d).

[wooden cover] (e)

B Jamsilkmx ustumqwskx
Were ready for

Ji'kmsthanis Ji'kmsthanis(f)

pdi'xsmstutumis his dishes(g).

Yaxilkmmstikhx
It was sometimes as large as a pond(h).

[wooden cover]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 43a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) A figurative expression for olachen grease.

(c) Referring to one of the dancer's ancestors, a chief who descended to Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

(d) This song was used at a potlatch and is accordingly phrased grandiloquently.

(e) The wordless chorus consists of an oft-repeated aaam which is said to be the note of the pigeon. The singer was unaware of its application.

(f) Ji'kmsthanis was a chief who, in the beginning of time, came down midway between Kimsquit and Kitlope.

(g) That is: Dishes, carved in form of his crest, were awaiting Ji'kmsthanis on his arrival.

(h) A reference to the great abundance of olachen grease.

Song Used for [illegible] of Kimsquit(a)

A Kstalimstqmsmqwlp(b)
They(b) will come to receive di qsmitsadai

my valuable goods(c)

dicslqwskhlsdai which Ji'qwskh(d) di'lskmsisdai brought down.

[wooden cover]

*593 B *Ämmuntsqaitqd*ïoo* Count how many times will distribute ayuxtsinuhumuh

my mother,

ayuxtsinuyumuhu
how many times

ähkämuwtsinuh
she will scatter (presents).

W'ïkstmuxpmïhu
Will hide (the guests).

ähkuts-umuimuhu
our returning food and goods(c).

[WOOSLAM COOKE]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 45b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was used about 1915.
(b) Meaning: The guests.
(c) This song was used at a potlatch and is accordingly phrased grandiloquently.
[556] (d) One of the dancer's first encounters. It is not claimed that Ämmuntsqaitqd actually brought to earth the goods which his descendant is about to distribute, but the wording is ostentatiously bashful as if the dancer were unwilling to claim the honour.
(e) That is: The food and goods which we are about to give in return for previous donations will entirely overwhelm our guests.

Song Used for W'ukhs of Kimqwïl(a)

A uyupähkwmïyu
Clear the way!

Dähkämudui
Is coming down for me

dïxtsïhdui
my supernatural being(b).

Dähqwundumdui
It bears

ïtkyupïxum what gray

ähwuhïmuh to those who sing(c).

[WOOSLAM COOKE]

B Sïqïmïmmïp
Do not insult ïtqp'ïhïhtap*

you have less than dïmuxhuqïn

my father(d).

Ämuhuïqmïk
Always is increasing umïqïmdui my bow(f)

mur-uhïn-hunïh(e) in my house(g).

[WOOSLAM COOKE]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 45b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) This song was used at a potlatch. Those used on such occasions were prepared carefully and are accordingly the best remembered at the present time.
(c) That is: It bears presents for those who sing and assist the ceremony in any way.
(d) That is: Do not pride yourselves on equalling my father, he is greater than any of you.
(e) When this song was being sung for the phonograph, this subdivision was temporarily forgotten and replaced by a repetition of the third division of the second part.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

(f) The receptacle for valuables.
(g) That is: I am constantly having to increase the size of the box in which I keep my goods.

Song Used for Łáloxmán·a(a)

A Sawiyāmalnamals | dasahldimut·amlits | wastanlamhalidats | siostáloxtanamls
It is from my ancient myth that I gain strength for myself(b).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Skámálostmainuxisqudux — Had just gained the summit | dámundamiskidux — whither he was going | aiyaoyaskálalmisdux — when he got dálukwalayemkis — his shamanistic power | daqwnusainustcqidux — which showed the way | nuyálxikdimutstcqidux — the solitary, depressed one(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skámálxwpákmainuximqudux — He arrived | oldáqnkaoskidux — at the river,(d) | nutciyakimqwlnandux — they gave him

swinamkilaqwsitl — comforts and riches, (?) | aiyailmnatskidux — the child of | Yelsqwikaiyaskidux — Yelsqwikaiya(e).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 17b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of the first part of this song.
(c) The text is taken from a myth previously cited. The first Łáloxmán·a, utterly depressed and weary of life, went off alone into the forest and was finally very fortunate.
(d) Kitlobe River.
(e) Yelsqwikaiya was presumably father of the first Łáloxmán·a.

Song Used for Łáloxmán·a(a)

A Nustlxwoldimutxwas — Be bold! | Yas áldihmainulilsdai — The ability to hold potlatches(b) | di'ixfmnteiyadjutldai — has come strongly to him hánulloikaiyailsndai — on his shoulders has put it | aiyastlaiāmsudai — that chief, | yas diqaostcālasdusdai — and has scattered it to all(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Yas ka'alaiqtmalsan — I do likewise | yas skáitkimākmilsan — in all my actions(d). | Skásxálxálydimustāmkits — Sometimes like a land-slide are wasnālimālstsals — my goods(e); | ska'alasfmāntitsals — I shall stand above | was·tāmsstāmmdcstsals — all other chiefs.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*593 C This is probably the type of song with only two parts; if a third was composed, it has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 17a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) The intangible ability of a chief, "Success."
(c) The literal translation is obscure; the meaning is that success has come to a chief who has taken it upon his shoulders and then dispensed it, in the form of presents, to all. The reference is to one of the dancer's ancestors.
(d) This song was used at a potlatch, and in this second part the theme changes from the past to the present.
(e) That is: My goods are as overwhelming in their abundance as a land-slide.

Song Used for Laksmsh(a)

A Ăstmoĕnalĭnk: Where is	dal'aiyatsdix the talking,	dslalcimdix the voices(b)	a'lksqala without(c)?

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ălimsp Come	ahlcmp and see,	tixmsqs they are(d)	dasmstimpali my friends.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C This type of song has only two parts.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 40b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to be very ancient.
(b) The voices of the supernatural beings; that is, whistling by nsaal accomplices.
(c) That is: Outside the house.
(d) A reference to the supernatural beings without.

Song Used for Trimlain, a Man of Sinaf(a)

A Ălstcirmqhltsdaxinkqaiyelsp Why do you(b) not come direct	oltsalsem to my house	shmuqapsdimmsp to eat, shsmlsdimmsp

to fill yourselves to repletion?

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Mĕlĭlshqualsm' One time	stsmlsq'linsatim they put him to shame(c)	alsqualsmalsli: when he lived in	matsalmalsl the expanding house(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 59a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Humpbacked Tomsap. This song is said to be very ancient.
(b) Plural.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(c) An incident in the dancer's ancestral myth; one of his forefathers succeeded in shaming a rival chief. 533*

(d) Many origin myths describe houses, provided by Alpuxtem for the first settlers, which expanded of their own accord to accommodate guests at potlatches. The reference is to one of these, although it was impossible to record the myth itself. [773]

Song Used for Qwai of Kimsquit(a)

A Pálnapdlais Rouse yourselves for it,	ste'ákeult ye residents!	Shéiyukipdai See which is my supernatural being(b).	eiyadicyamis

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

B Nesiwukstukdus At the bottom(c)	dukkiliyimdus the first-comer(d)	skinnamsois seated himself	mes malcomilais of our provided food(e).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 8b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. Qwai was his mother's brother.
(b) The dancer's associates are invited to gather to witness his performance.
(c) That is: The mouth.
(d) Referring to one of the dancer's earliest ancestors.
(e) The reference is to the Kimsquit River which teems with salmon; the dancer describes the fish as the fare provided for his ancestral family by Alpuxtem.

Song Used for Qwai of Kimsquit (a)

A or B(b) Limmamsdlais Go out and see,	ye ste'ákeult ye residents!	Tutsimmiandai It is apparent(c) diyalaiai what travels everywhere(d),	diqwatilai: a what brings our food(e)	dunalyamskimis from its home(f).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

C Dipmaqulus That is	dittilhmpdus the chief	Lidliokikka(g) Lidliokikka;	ditqmaqualmis he carries a heavy burden(h)	[776] [424]
wutmqtidai in his canoe	lenalyamskimis from his land.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 8a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Only two of the three parts are remembered.
(c) The actual meaning of tutsimam is: What is Apparent. Its use in this case is, therefore, an untranslatable pun.

*533 (d) A somewhat beautiful reference to the power of the dancer's tutelemem.
(e) Another arrogant reference to the tutelemem.
[776] (f) In Bella Bella.
[424] (g) This is a Bella Bella being of whom little is known by the Bella Coola. The right to use him as tutelemem came from a remote ancestor.
(h) Presumably, the dancer's right to perform.

Fragment of a Song Used for Tsapsis, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Alpacmacsin Protect your faces,	mulicwnimamp you quiet people!	Sakaxnamsin Is always shooting arrows

Inakatsiyatlsis
my crest(b).

[WASPS CREST]

B and C have been forgotten.

[WASPS CREST]

Kymsiss Don't do that,	tsiplimamamdiyitl they will cover us with valuables(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to be an extremely ancient one, used by some of the earliest settlers; the tune is said to be entirely different from any recent nuxalk compositions.

[424] (b) The dancer's crest was the wasp, an insect which is believed to sting by the [825] discharge of invisible, minute arrows. This admonition to the guests to hide their [773] faces was, of course, a boasting reference to the goods which would be distributed at the approaching potlatch. None of the first settlers was sent down to earth as a wasp, but several, including Nankila, were guided and assisted by these insects to such an extent that they have been regarded as crests.

[558] (c) It is customary, when quoting this song, to add this final remark. It is related [424] that, many years ago, a Kimsquit man used his wasp prerogative, but was shamed at the potlatch by being inundated with goods from a rival. Since that time, none of his descendants has dared to use the right and the admonition against doing so has become almost proverbial.

Fragment of a Song Used for Nuqwikmkain of Kimsquit(a)

A Kyemdjilkmm We all go	ckalijakwilkki to see(b).	Dijapdjakwlki He(c) informs us	matinqatsis of what he carries.

B and C No more of this song is remembered, though it was used at a potlatch about 1910.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louis Hall.
(b) Meaning: To gaze upon something supernatural.
(c) An unnamed supernatural being.

Fragment of a Song Used for Sneeshalo, a Man of Salmon House(a) 583*

Ki'shilpmilkaio	nanamy
Whence came those(b)	who were too late?

No more of this song is remembered.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Refers to guests at the potlatch.

Fragment of a Song Used for Sakumaw-a of Kimsquit(a)

Xatipanaiye	natipanaiye	hoodai
I am happy at seeing you(b),	I am happy at seeing you,	good-bye(c).

No more of this song is remembered.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 31b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Presumably refers to the dancer's totemism, Beaver, obtained from his mother's mother, a Kitsilas woman. [424]
(c) This word is said to be in the Haida language.

Song(a) Used for Lanaiyaw-i'(b) of Kimsquit(c)

A Kinawhaxumdimaxdimalhan	Ra'nauk(d)
I make two of myself(e).	Raven(f).

ckdjindjakaiyaxlandja	Ra'nauk
I make a huge whale of myself,	Raven,

ahtcilpmaxdaw	Kanawakdimaxpinn	ckdjindjakaiyaxlandja
at the place of lucky finds (g).	People will dismember me,	I make a huge whale of myself(h).

[WOOSAAN CANOE]

B Kinadimdjaxtck'	dutcahalaio	ckdpang' ctalakai
I stand upon	my point(i);	I cry out loudly(j)

dimkimgakai with respect to my position as chief.

[WOOSAAN CANOE]

C Kanawakapd'	Ckdkiyandjakp	Ohapaimaxlamk	wacalakalk
Go yourselves!	Pick out what you want!	My house	is open(k).

(a) It is doubtful whether or not this song should be included in this section. It was used by a professional warrior at a potlatch but, like all others with his [701] [575] [424]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1928) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533

[701] prerogative, he was debarred from seclusion in the back-room and consequent initiation as a xnask. The exact relationship between warriors and members of the xnask society is obscure.

[575] (b) Lasaiyaw-k' is a Kitkatla name from the north. The first owner moved to Kitlobe where he married, and the designation was transmitted to his descendants.

[424] One of the latter migrated to Kimsquit, where the name has since been handed [177] down from generation to generation though its original source has not been forgotten.

(c) Recorded as song VII D 36, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been used about 1870.

(d) Vocative form.

(e) That is: I double my importance. This kind of expression is popular among chiefs.

[424] (f) Qoui is one of the ancestral names of Raven, the dancer's crest. In thus addressing the bird, he called attention to his ancestral history.

[262] (g) The home of the first Lasaiyaw-k' was near a point where dead whales often drifted ashore. The dancer likens himself to a whale on which people will dine.

(h) Such repetition is not uncommon. The dancer implies that his wealth will be divided in a manner similar to the cutting up of a whale's carcass.

(i) A promontory owned by the first Lasaiyaw-k'.

(j) That is: I summon people [to a feast.]

(k) An invitation not to be taken too literally.

Xe-tla Songs

The tunes of xe-tla songs are believed to have been handed down, unaltered, for many generations. The words, too, are frequently ancient although the singers sometimes make slight changes so that they will be more suitable for the chief in whose honour they are being sung. Owing to the decline of cere-[796] monials in which they were used, few xe-tla songs are now remembered.

Xe-tla Song Used by Sinapul of Kimsquit(a)

[727]

A Alinayuuo	Ahlrual'aihdai	Di xakeimpdai	dexulmit
Come!	See!	The chief	a man stands in the bow(f) di yalsatsal'aihdai of those who travelled everywhere.

[WOMAN'S SONG]

B Aleiqualnxyaxsit	di'antsaxlailhdax	eiyattiyamtlhdax
He did so,	my pattern(g),	whence I came(d);

Smithsonian E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[illegible]	[illegible]
he circled and returned	Sasq[illegible].

[illegible]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 39a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) A sign of victory, eagerly watched for when a war-party is returning. [727]
(c) A reference to Wiwat, one of Sisaqal's first ancestors in the beginning of time. He made a journey to the Skeena, returning from there with canoe and paddles decorated with sun designs. The exploits of his descendant are compared with those of his partners, that is, his first forbear. Such references to family history are sources of pride to the chief being honoured. [773]
(d) That is: From whom I am descended.

Fragment of a Xe-da Song(a) Used by Sisaqalilas of Kimsquit(b)

A Xaiyamawalas	di ithaiwaydai	haiijaiwaxis
Presently he will be ashamed	that chief	if I get ainaXilkalaidai my copper.

(a) Both tune and theme are said to be of Kwakiutl origin. [177]
(b) Recorded on song VII D 36b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

Fragment of a Xe-da Song Used by Sisaqal of Kimsquit(a)

A Xaxaiikpamalaxdai	yas (?) dipatsiyaiiwadai	Oldipaiiwaiiiwadai
They are smiling,	greetings to the not-crowded place!	They drink

xemis gamaxdja
the food of white men(?).

[illegible]

B and C have been forgotten.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 41b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Literally: Hide!
(c) This song was used at a potlatch where the fare provided was whisky. The tune is said to be very ancient although new words were composed for the occasion. [556] [279]

A'alk Songs

A'alk songs somewhat resemble nusak ones and, like them, are difficult to collect completely. Parts of many are remem- [575] [796]

#589 [575] [799] bered, but the rites in which they were used have been practically discontinued for several years so that unabridged versions are almost impossible to obtain. A'alk themes vary according to the ceremonies in which they are used. For potlatches, they consist of incidents from ancestral myths; whereas for non-ceremonial occasions following the kusiut season, they deal with current events. The following examples are divided into these two classes.

THEMES DRAWN FROM ANCESTRAL MYTHS

Ki'ups Song Used for Nuximalkin, a Man of Kimsquit(a)

A Tsyuxwumulaie They give valuable counsel,	ditlwdiudai my goods(b);	dudpuxwlaxdudai they formulate their own opinions

ddlipuxwdudai | ajuxlai-ainxtdudai | ddlumxwdudai concerning to whom of those seated in my house I shall give presents(c).

[TRANSLATION CONTINUED]

B Ki'ulsiyuxdjmulaudja I speak lofty	dulldjimuljuds of everything(d).	Wanlxwimuljdumuxt Through them(e)

ddjmulxtimuds-uals | ddumxwimulds-ly | ajxumuxw ulxulxuls
I become elevated, | my power to give potlatches (n) | my male relatives(f).

[TRANSLATION CONTINUED]

C Kuxwulxwulxtd'mals Presently I shall stand	dumu'jlxuds-lidur within the box	dumuuljuxwulidur at the corner door(g), ualulldlimulldudu

where flowed to all(h) | dumuxlumuds-lidur
the corner skins(i) | lumlulldimulu of Tsulxulldmul(j)(k).

(a) Recorded on song VII D 31a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The goods which I am about to distribute advise me. This statement is not to be taken literally.

(c) It was impossible to obtain a translation of each subdivision.

(d) Relate to the dancer's many prerogatives.

(e) Relate to his male relatives.

(f) The dancer had obtained several prerogatives from ancestors, treated particularly.

#424 [773] (g) A reference to the dancer's origin myth (I, p. 229). The house of his first forefather, ursyaqual, had its door in a back corner instead of the centre front.

(h) That is: Whence were distributed at potlatches.

Lib. Howaith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEh Bellacoola NEh

(d) Brought from above as a present from Sqaemen.
(e) One of the dancer's first ancestors.
(f) Combined themes such as this, referring both to the approaching potlatch and the dancer's origin myth, are common at potlatches and kekwiatal.

am'hl'a Song Used for Kimcpastimum of Kimsquit(a)

A Kaiyemalaus | ckimsqumsqyilsdas | kimsaiustadas | ne'kimskilsalais Presently the people who lack prerogatives will envy(b) what I possess. Because dimsmaiyalas | dam'hl'aradai it increases sensually, it is am'hl'a(c).

[WOODLAND CROWS]

B Sam'kimas adamdas | Pumpalatdimat | 'am'ad'ainmy'mis
In the beginning there came down | Pumpalatdimat(d) | with his river(e).

Skamamtsyi: | tqwmqwsimalsamtsyi | mashas ualy
He meets himself | at the mouth | of the "Heavy One"(f).

[WOODLAND CROWS]

C The last part has been forgotten(g).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 30a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) The word mqum, which is translated as envy, is used only for the desire of ancestral prerogatives which can never be attained except by those who are members of the ancestral family concerned. [424] [614]
(c) It was impossible to obtain literal translations of the subdivisions.
(d) A name which Smamas (I, p. 332) took for himself on earth. It is claimed that the composers of this song erred in using this designation.
(e) Smamas came down to the Kimsquit River, but the grandiloquent phrasing expresses the sentiment that man and stream came together.
(f) The Kimsquit River is sometimes termed W'atkis as its name as chief. This designation was obtained by Smamas from Bella Bella, with his marriage to a woman of that tribe, and bestowed by him on the river. [103] [424]
(g) This song was used during the winter of 1923-4 and nearly led to friction. It is claimed that the right to the name Kimcpastimum was lent to a Kimsquit man who failed to return it. The borrower has been dead many years, but when his son pretended to dance, one of the singers who was related to the original leader refused to take part in the singing. [578] [426] [424]

Thaiyakam Song Used for a Kimsquit Man(a)

A ana'shqudja | aiyadimsinqas | dimsimaldada | aiyamamtsakals
I have obtained | the ancestral right | which displayed | my forefathers(b).

[WOODLAND CROWS]

Ø: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

#533 B Yaqwiwuqwulxdux He agreed | shklalimdux to being dropped(c), | tinlitsqwuduxs he spoke the eagle language cheerfully.

Ainxwmuxwuxdux Xemxut(d).

[WOODLESS CWONOT]

C The last part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 32a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) That is: Which my forefathers displayed.
(c) It is said that some of the first settlers were unwilling to be sent down to earth.
[773] (d) Xemxut, one of the dancer's first ancestors, came to earth in eagle form and accordingly spoke the language of these birds.

Fragment of a Tlaiyakum Song Used for Sinaqul of Kimsquit

Nuxlwuktuktay It is ready; | dal'lalimdux his . . . . . (a) that was sent down | skanamti'xis has taken its stand | nanuld at Dean River(b).

[WOODLESS CWONOT]

[424] (a) The term signifies any object, whether tangible or intangible, sent down from above in the beginning of time. In this case it refers to the dancer's Ilaiyakum prerogative.
(b) A reference to the coming to earth of Smaxan. See vol. I, p. 332.

THEMES DRAWN FROM CURRENT EVENTS

Nuxqual Song Used for Nuqsqdmis, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Tsilpachmdux Let us stop | shlirwulliuxcip elevating(b) him(c); | tamkistraullix he uses without authority xwlwuitstalimuts a chief's name(d).

[WOODLESS CWONOT]

B Qaxiwukdajlt' Is feeble | yuo distimuxytmhals the dancer(e); | spilpuxp let him accept from me | alt'alim-idmls what he likes(f).

[WOODLESS CWONOT]

C Alaisdudux He was likewise(g) | disiastlualimts my first forefather(h); | spqlalkmdals I summon guests aiyuxtwimutalmls for what I am about to display(i).

Smithsonian E-5 (1921-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) Recorded as song VII D 28a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The tune is said to have been handed down for more than two hundred years. 533 *

(b) That is: Let us stop paying the customary respect to.

(c) It is not remembered which chief was thus held up to the scorn of his fellows.

(d) That is: He does not act in accordance with the traditions of the name he uses.

(e) That is: The dancer is feeble. This refers to another nusqual dancer who, owing to his poverty, had not performed for many years. It is not known whether he was the same individual as the one derided in the first part of the song. [558]

(f) To flaunt another's poverty in his face is the height of Bella Coola rudeness. [735]

(g) That is: He, too, was a nusqual. [576]

(h) The ancestor from whom the prerogative was derived.

(i) That is: In virtue of my nusqual ability. This appears to be a departure from the usual theme of a mocking song.

Nusqual Song Used for Ḵwixlakilakʷ, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A	Tuhsdjidjsdamalnumit	yuḵwixlakikkwsudai	skä'ānutsāyenmixwaiʿ
	Please do not deny,	Ḵwixlakilakʷ(b),	listen to your sewuḵpātnuxwaiʿ drums(c).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

B	Sāmamaudjsmōdu	nuyaiyutwilhaiʿ	ahāltāmstaḵailsandai
	I alone	am content(d);	is increasing aiyadispalimutsdai

my prerogative(e).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

C The third part has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) It is not uncommon in nusak and a'alk songs for the dancer to address himself in this way. [575]

(c) That is: Be ready to listen to drums beaten at one of your ceremonies.

(d) The dancer is deriding another nusqual who has not performed for a long time. [558]

(e) This song differs slightly from the usual mocking type in lack of specific references to the person derided; lack of reference to an ancestral myth, however, shows that it was not composed for a potlatch. [556]

Song of a Kimsquit Nusqual(a)

A	Dipuxupo	ḵälnhlaiʿ	ḵustāhumxwas	disisut
	That is he,	the impostor,	the chief	of the paddle(b).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 B Sāostxtxaxwao | elāsults | skā'ālpsdulsdai | dismāt·ms̱djs
Go within | my house, | I am giving food | to my friends.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

[614] [424] [685] (a) Recorded as song VII D 28b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It is said that this song has been handed down for generations in an ancestral family; they now regard it as a family possession and would consider its use by others to be stealing.

[609] (b) Many years ago a solitary Bella Bella used to paddle to Kimsquit almost every year. He was dressed like a chief and had the mien of one, so that his hosts assumed him to be a person of importance. It was later found that he was a poor man. The mocking of foreigners is a common theme of a'alk songs.

am'hl·a Song Used for Xımxımlaix(a)

*533 575 578 A Nulwultukaxānamqwalsan | sīlxwosmaikila
He has fallen so that his buttocks are uppermost, | Hail(b)!

Damunmulsan·imut | skusiutdas
He has come to hurt, | that kusiut(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C. The second and third parts have been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 3c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) A mockingly deferential salutation used in a'alk songs describing the kukusiut.

(c) Xımxımlaix was an a'alk who is said to have seen a Cannibal kusiut when the latter was supposed to be in the land above. A song was composed about the incident, and the above fragment has been remembered for many years. Xımxımlaix was initiated into the kusiut society; see vol. II, p. 265.

*533 575 796 203 As already described, whenever a dancer is performing, the women utter a peculiar high-pitched drone and the heralds call out remarks suitable to the occasion. A phonograph record[3] was made of the drone, followed by a cry suitable for either sisaok or a'alk dances. The following words are virtually sung:

Yelosāldimut | stālhmpakais
Do not err, | chiefs.

[3]Recorded as song VII D 29c, National Museum of Canada.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Nusäxkämx Songs

The texts of nusäxkämx songs are fragmentary and unsatisfactory. The rites in which they were used have long been discontinued and, since they were never ceremonially important, there was nothing to impress either tunes or words on the minds of the singers. In addition, it is probable that the songs were always less carefully constructed than those of other types. 533* [796]

Song Used for Qolon(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

Qixänaowitaiya	sîhmstänäbtcistaiya	sätwimmlsndai
Be happy,	ye people,	it is about to come,

däsqwituyumdai	däqolonlaotcaiya
that hidden one(c),	Beaver.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Qoloni'i	Qoloni'i	wa·xai·yai
Beaver(d)!	Beaver!	wa·xai·yai(e).

(a) This word means "Beaver." It is most unlikely that it was the dancer's own designation, more probably a nickname used in connection with the nusäxkämx rite. [551]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 9b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
(c) This signifies a person who is hidden ceremonially, such as a kusiut dancer who has gone to the land above. The dancer expected to be a Cannibal and the rite in which this song was used served as a kind of rehearsal. [796] [575]
(d) This refrain replaces a second and third part of the song itself.
(e) A meaningless series of choral ejaculations.

Song Used for a Kimsquit Woman(a)

Axnnuxdimqwduks	tlopiwacsudax	tuxwismaoskidax	älusmätskidax
They heard	of Fawn(b),	when they were playing	long ago(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9d, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) The theme being of a fawn, the dancer wore a deer-skin. [535]
(c) As in many nusäxkämx songs, the words refer to an ancient story, probably one describing the adventures of deer and wolves; see vol. II, p. 425.

Song Used for Waoziqslaix, a Kimsquit Man(a)

Lilitwmusänimx	waowunjoqsän·ai	waiztski	sqolänops
Run in all directions,	ye dogs,	for the first time	it is there nunuqaolsmm	ostcäxänam	maoitc	maoitc

he brings much food(b),	go below the house	?(c)	?(d).

[776] [192]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (a) Recorded as song VII D 9c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
[776] (b) Presumably a reference to Noakxnim, the dancer's kusiut patron(?).
[192] (c) The meaning of this word is not known; it is considered to be quite distinct from the identical term in Chinook jargon for "deer."
(d) The meaning of the whole song is extremely obscure.

Marriage Songs

*533 As marriage songs, two distinct classes may be considered:
585 A. Those used at weddings;
[586] B. Shaming songs used in connection with divorce rites.
[578] The former are said to have been handed down from the distant past and consist of a few almost meaningless words. The latter are composed whenever required, and consist of foul allusions to the person being ridiculed.

WEDDING SONGS

Stuux Marriage Song(a)

Nunusiqwāldimutqwanitl	yao ixlāqwlaiyulao	altusaqwnainuxpis
Danced for joy	Qwlaiyu(b)	when they brought ai'ailmnanaodax	yao dutxasxr-misudax
the girl	from the place of light(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 3b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.
[773] (b) Qwlaiyu came down with usuyuyut in the beginning of time, and brought,
[424] as a gift from Alquntām, the prerogative of dancing at weddings. He landed at Kimsquit, and no explanation is given by the Bella Coola for the use of this song by the people of Stuux.
[773] (c) A reference to a marriage among the first people on earth. One of Qwlaiyu's associates married a woman whose relatives had brought light with them from above.

Kimsquit Marriage Song(a)

Sāk'lālālimqwsuduks	yao daxomtnlalaoals	wasāsqolxnāsdomdax
They sent down	Xomtsla(b)	with his relative yao ixlāqwlāyulaoals Qwlaiyu (c)(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 2b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(b) Xemtsk came down from above with uyuyuyut in the beginning of time; he had the prerogative of dancing at weddings. 533*

(c) Qulaiyu likewise came down with uyuyuyut, bringing the same prerogative as Xemtsk. 585

(d) The rest of this song has been forgotten. [773]

Fragmentary and short as are these songs, they are more elaborate than many used at weddings. These frequently contain no words, merely an ancient tune accompanied by humming and meaningless choral interjections.[4] [424]

SHAMING SONGS

533*

Songs of this type are sung by the singers while the principal performer dances; in this respect, they resemble susaok compositions and differ entirely from the abbreviated and individualistic wedding songs. Though used primarily to shame a runaway husband or wife, one is sometimes employed on other occasions. 586 578 [585]

Song Used for No·ɬwna(a), a Kimsquit Woman(b)

A Yelakaiẓ	dalima	Mistelos	sälnaixtus	dämnalicaiya'a
Has too much	looted	Mistelos(c)	further,	he has taken with her

tcakwaakusltumal	dämnälicaiya'a
my child, Tcäkwaäkis(d),	he has taken with her(e).

[103]

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sänolḑoldimut	sawästähmmtsaḷs	ikäs·äkänulsaixts
Be brave,	mothers(f),	when I speak of your ugliness(g);

alaskdjäsliwanap	wanusḑwdsätsahmgaḷs
you have had much trouble,	your breasts have become long and pendant.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) This word means "The one (feminine) with the very hairy pudenda." The woman in question had run away from her husband and the nickname was conferred at this shaming Hlaiyäkum rite. [551] [553]

[4] Two examples of such wordless songs were collected. They are song VII D 2a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard, and song VII D 3a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533
586
578
[103]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 35a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) That is: Mustlos has looted too much. He was the seducer of Nə·ɢwna.

(d) This ancestral name is one of the designations of Mount Nusɢalst.

(e) This repetition merely adds force to the complaint of the aggrieved husband. It was impossible to obtain an accurate translationof each subdivision.

(f) Referring to old women in general.

(g) In this second part, the theme changes from the specific plaints of the aggrieved husband to his condemnation and criticism of the whole female sex. Such combinacions are common in shaming songs, and are often accompanied by a change of tune.

Song Used for Nulkitl(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Dixsoloks	dəsxwilətliwatom	diqwawlamkdjutl
Being poverty-stricken(c)		has come to this rite

nulkaiyaitldai
Nulkitl(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Diəltɢəmətsltom	wasqilixilals	əltakaiyak'
All the foul expressions used by men are applicable to(e)		the crippled

yasilias
Silias(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) This song was sung by women to shame Nulkitl who had deserted his wife. It was the work of a feminine composer, Nuxem.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 38b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) It was impossible to obtain translations of each subdivision.

(d) Any weakness is picked upon in a shaming song. Nulkitl must have failed to perform rites of any kind, and the feminine mockers chose to deride him for this instead of his faithlessness.

(e) It was impossible to obtain translations of each subdivision.

(f) Silias was one of the regular Kimsquit singers who had shown especial aptitude in the insertion of obscene expressions to songs used by men to deride faithless women. The women apparently considered this a good opportunity to voice their general disapproval by coupling his name with that of Nulkitl. Silias had suffered a broken arm when fighting and it had been badly set.

Song Used for Som(a), a Kimsquit Woman(b)

A Wastəlɢpstutdjalustnuwit	aiyaoyəsoyomsudsaix
Do not talk too much in a proud manner(c),	Som,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

waz·munmalnmnimetnu	si·xwotldimutnudja	xwas·iāsqiliqaoals		533*
you are the prey of misfortune,	you unmarried mother;	you are sqili(d), you women		586
xwaā'lālye·ya·lusals	Änāna	Yumtcaia	somtcaia	578 who pretend to be virtuous(e).	Alas(f)!	I am ashamed,	I am Som(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Qānmaxwalxs·alotskidax	dāsboilditsālotskidsaix	yao oldistānāsul·LX
Exactly similar	is the little boy's nose	to that of the round-headed aiyaoyaqolosdidai	Änāna	Yumtcaia	somtcaia
Qolosti(h).	Alas!	I am ashamed,	I am Som.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) This differs from most ilaiyākam songs in that Som was an unmarried mother, not a faithless wife. She was held up to scorn by the men of Kimsquit and this song composed for her by a certain Blo·qwas. [848]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 38a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) It is said that women, even of slave blood, used to endeavour to increase their importance in the eyes of their children by boasting, falsely, of ancestral history. [554]

(d) A term of opprobrium, difficult to translate. It is said to imply slave ancestry, but is more probably a mere epithet, referring to the female organs. [195]

(e) This is addressed to women in general.

(f) An expression of pain or sorrow, used under all circumstances. [192]

(g) The theme is here changed as if it were Som herself speaking. This is a common device in all kinds of songs.

(h) Qolosti was supposed to be the father of Som's child.

Mourning Songs

Mourning songs excel all other Bella Coola compositions in length, complexity, and wealth of detail. Especially those composed for mighty chiefs contain numerous references to the ancestral history of the deceased and mention incidents referred to in origin myths, a source of pride to the survivors and of envy to those who listen. 533* [765] [766]

Song Used for Qowi when Mourning his Son, Qwinao(a)

A Stāmalma | waxlākdatoms | ilālinaywao | sānābsulipai
Why has my son done so(b)? Come, ye who are residents of foreign lands(c)

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533

ānustcayenmipdai	dinulhnānkumlaixia	Diwal·ixwlimdai	Xdāstālhmxlaixia hear	my mourning song.	He(d) has gone.	The chief daqwnmlsandāx	xwasiut·ālsaixia

has taken him,	his supernatural being(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sasamyeqwilulsika	yeilākwakilasudax	dustāmtamx^{w} dimotsilskidax
Was good	Ilākwakila(f)	when, unaided, he made the river

aiyaxduwanuqtudax	Yao duixnuwixslax	aiaqwax'tcinas·udax
at Rivers Inlet(g).	Hail to the widened river	of Raven(h)!

Aiyakā·mālsandax	skānusmāllaiyailsandax	Dā·lālqwālesandsl
He(i) will soon become petrified there(j).		He(k) seized

yayaxwo'om·aitlsoitl Yexwomaitl(l).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Kālkwanāsnukmas	skāstāltmxnu	kāmai·ts	Kānmnamāknukmas
Be thou highest(m),	chief(n),	please.	You will hold two skānuxieknu	Ixkāklaixnu	olā·stamg^{w}misxaixia guardians of light(o).	He(p) will carry these	when he descends to the river(q);

wasālkwmmdom	wa·kis·udax
that was what brought	Waākus(r).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C(s) Skāmālusk'lānāmkisk^{w}	yao ilslukwalātomitl	xils·iosqwiainuximals
Had just come down	the shaman-like power(t)	when he(u) used it

wasis·utstnaosuals	daspuxpuxqmālosdusdax	daāsāts·imitskidax
to open the road(v);	eagle feathers(w)	he used(x).

Aiyatākālāhmlsan	dasqwnutsamstānaoals	Yao dāsxulkdimutstānao
He succeeded in finding	the place of his food supply(y).	Greetings to what has filled

stāmxithlqwālesitl those who speak with us(z).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skāmālnuqwasamnuxisk^{w}	Ilaliaki'lak'	ya·snubusamnuxitdax
Had just stilled the rough sea(aa)	Ilaliaki'lak'(bb)	when there rose from below

tcālāhliadudai	Sistālhmg·yānmaksilsandax	Yelnain'akwas
the copper house(cc).	From it the brothers became chiefs(dd).	The good Nain'akwas,

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

siâlîyakimiandax all, everywhere, know of | Tlaowika'lis Tlaowika'lis(ee). | Tinlelnamiandax They(ff) crossed repeatedly yao oldulcawôtsudax to Tcawat(gg).

(a) The first four parts of this song were recorded as song VII D 7a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It is said to have been composed about 1870 for a chief whose son had been drowned. It was later used for a nephew of Qowi, and will henceforth be employed only by members of that family. [424]

(b) That is: Why has my son died?

(c) It was impossible to obtain translations of each subdivision.

(d) Referring to the dead son.

(e) That is: The supernatural being, the chief, has taken him. The reference is to the deceased's crest animal, a common rhetorical device in songs.

(f) An ancestor of the deceased and one of the first settlers of the world. He came down to Rivers Inlet.

(g) Tlakwakila is said to have widened, or even to have made, the principal river at Rivers Inlet. [773]

(h) Tlakwakila came in the form of a raven.

(i) Referring to Qwinao.

(j) It was impossible to obtain translations of these two subdivisions. Qwinao, now dead, will be irremovably connected with the scenes of his first ancestor.

(k) Meaning Raven.

(l) The mother of Qwinao who had died several years earlier.

(m) The theme now changes as if Qowi were addressing Qwinao.

(n) Referring to Qwinao.

(o) Refers to the supernatural beings who rouse the sun and moon and thus cause their light to shine on earth. Mention is made of these in Qwinao's origin myth. [776] [821]

(p) The theme changes again from direct address to Qwinao to a description of what he will be doing owing to his ancestral history.

(q) That is: He will be in the form of one of the guardians of light when his life descends, at a memorial potlatch, to Rivers Inlet.

(r) That is: That was what Waâkis brought. Waâkis, another of Qwinao's first ancestors, could not find a suitable place to settle in the beginning of time. After fruitless wandering, a whale emerged, vomited violently, and was changed to stone. The animal thus became Goose Island, and its vomit the rugged rocks at one end. Waâkis settled on that island. [773] [823]

(s) This song has three third parts.

(t) That is: The first people, with their shaman-like power, had just appeared.

(u) Referring to ux-wunaisa, another of Qwinao's first ancestors, who also came to earth at Rivers Inlet.

(v) At that time the routes between different settlements had not been discovered.

(w) More specifically, the coarse, long breast feathers.

(x) ux-wunaisa used a supernatural canoe which frequently changed to eagle feathers. [773]

(y) Refers to Sea-lion Island where he and his descendants used to hunt.

(z) Refers to the Bella Bella; several of Qwinao's relatives had married members of that tribe.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 (aa) Referring to a spot outside Smith Inlet.

[776] (bb) That is: Tłałiakī'lak' had just stilled the rough sea. She was another of Q̓winao's first ancestors, the most powerful of a group of four consisting of her brothers, Nain'akwas, Tłaowika'lis, and Tłáliałłis, and of herself.

(cc) Q̓omoqwa's house, a reference to an incident in Q̓winao's ancestral myth.

(dd) The house contained whistles and other valuables which they obtained.

[551] (ee) That is: All people, everywhere, know of Nain'akwas and Tłaowika'lis. Each name, though singular, has a plural significance since the other brothers are likewise implied.

(ff) Referring again to the band of first settlers.

(gg) A place on the mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island.

Song Used for Sinuxetł(a)

A Yao kä'äsmaiusdimqwdax	dänuło̓ldaiämk'łdiłs	yao ikäłskadnimodaox
They(b) will presently inform(c)	my dead relatives(d)	when they reach

yao oldätxwuniqwdstax	dukukdjudjimułtsidax	duołnułtxämäłłimdax
the outer places(e);	they(f) see(g)	where they first came down.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ken·ambołm·itsmäłsin	aiyawasmaiustałsałs	äłtusäłainaoskidax
I clothe myself with(h)	my ancestral myth,	as it was däsołtutiye·mskidax	xdunununuq̓wsim·älstskidax	aiyałämtsai'aisudax

in the time	of the Nunuq̓smäls(i)	house.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skämałnubusamnuximk^{w}	däsqwnutsamstänaołsandax	stämitulq̓wläsitł
Had just emerged(j)	the place where our relatives get their food(k).

Aiyadaomätatxstax	täłłłxikdimut·skidax	aiyawaäkis·udax
Thither went	when it became dry(l)	Waäkis.

Siälkiyukłdinłsandax	däno'osqän·ämkłdałł	aiyatämän·ukstitł
That is why	all people, everywhere, know	of my ancestors(m).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 37, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. Both words and tune were composed by him about 1907.

(b) Referring to Waäkis and his band, (I, p. 350). Sinuxetł was descended from this group of first people.

[192] (c) The significance of this word is stronger than inform. It means that Waäkis will relate to the deceased their ancestral myth.

(d) The chief for whom this song was composed had lost several relatives.

(e) Referring to Goose Island, Yel·äxłaix, where Waäkis landed.

(f) Referring again to the deceased.

[192] [775] (g) The significance of this word is stronger than see. It means that those recently dead will gaze with rapture on the places which belong to them owing to their ancestral myth.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(h) That is: I incorporate myself into.

(i) The reference is to another of Sinugul's myths dealing with the coming to earth of Hamcat near Kimsquit. Nunuḡsmāls was the name of his house. 533*

(j) Referring to Goose Island once more.

(k) That is: Goose Island where our relatives, the Bella Bella, get their food, had just emerged and become visible. It was impossible to obtain a separate translation of these two subdivisions.

(l) Referring again to Goose Island. This small piece of land is shaped like a whale, and, as already described, it was originally one. Ālqunsām bade the animal come to the surface to be changed to stone; then Wāḵs settled there as soon as the water had dried from what had been its back. [773] [823]

(m) The literal translation of each subsection may be inaccurate.

Song Used for Yeālos of Kimsquit(a)

A Yenooisandax	wakwalundal	sāhxwaixisndai	*disonx*ʷ*sudai*
It is good(b);	our(c)?	has lifted	the sky(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Q̱āqwaxqwisandai(e)	disiutsudai	skāaiyaldumdai
He was Raven(f),	the supernatural one	when he descended dinulhniktāsdai

the post(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Snuqwla·xlisndai	distāltmgdai	yeyālosdai	sāliplisdai
He is bright(h),	the chief	Yeālos;	he carries siāsxwilāklaixs	dilāliās·udai

a unique	copper(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 47a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been composed over one hundred years ago and since used repeatedly.

(b) With the significance of: It is highly satisfactory.

(c) The meaning of this word is obscure. It refers to the crest of Yeālos with the added implication of a memorial. It applies to the memorial rite being given. [765]

(d) When a chief dies, it is said that the people in their grief feel as if the sky were pressing them down. A memorial rite lessens their sorrow and lifts the burden. [152]

(e) When this word was being sung for the phonograph, the singer erred and replaced it by part of the first word of the third part.

(f) That is: He was in the form of a raven. The reference is to one of the first ancestors of Yeālos.

(g) Meaning one of the posts which stretched between earth and sky in the beginning of time. [773]

(h) This refers to Yeālos. He was formerly weighed down with grief, but by giving a memorial rite he is like the sun as it shines out brilliantly from behind the clouds.

(i) A reference to a special kind of copper mentioned in the chief's origin myth.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Used for Xaiāqałtl of Tāl·io(a)

*533 A Tcaiyutsxskākwanātnu Stop crying, | nuyālxiktuminu I bring comfort to you, | ǵdinusxemiānaoałs the light(b)

sawaałqwalā·nnu of all your brothers(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B *Kaālihm·ikisk*ʷ He(d) will stand upon | yao dutcākwāla·tidax the house that expands(e), | yao dustukwałstskidax hail to that which gave shaman-like power(f)

yao dāixmohmskidax to him who went under the water(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) The first six subdivisions of this song were recorded as song VII D 58, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tāl·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie.

(b) Signifying the light of the sun. The reference is to an ancestral possession of Xaiāqałtl, the mention of which soothes his grief.

(c) That is: That shines on all peoples.

(d) Referring to the dead chief being mourned.

(e) Mentioned in Xaiāqałtl's origin myth.

(f) Referring again to the house.

(g) One of Xaiāqałtl's first ancestors. The myth could not be obtained.

Song Used for Yexthn of Sunxt(a)

A Sawānwałsālits·uduks Like a dog is | disiosāloxlāmms my inheritable tendency(b); | sinunusxwłāmkilsałs is continually shortening

sawaālxemnuxilsałs my xem(c).

Ānānai Alas! | Ḳokāmā·tsai Please! | Dāmnātsai My child(d)!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Istaaidjamālsandja I am like | yexqax·āxwsilasudax Qax·āxwsila(e), | dusnustkakiyimskidax when talons seized

ǵdasłixwnisālots·kidax his cherished one(f).

Ānānai Alas! | Ḳokāmā·tsai Please! | Dāmnātsai My child!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) Recorded as song VII D 55, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tal'io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. 533*

(b) So many of Yexthn's ancestors had been drowned that he considered such a fate to be an inheritable tendency and mourned accordingly. This song was composed for a memorial potlatch held after the drowning of three of his sons. [761] [827]

(c) Xem means, literally, the successive rising of the sun from day to day; it has therefore, the significance of: The span of life is shortening. [195]

(d) This wail replaces the usual wordless chorus.

(e) Raven. This is one of his rarely used chief's names.

(f) The reference is to an incident related about Raven in the beginning of time. He made, and gave life to a son who was his chief joy and delight. Alqunt̄ám wondered what the creature might be and sent down one of his eagle-like supernatural birds to seize him. Raven, ignorant of the reason for his son's loss and with no idea that he was being carefully guarded, was absolutely disconsolate. The myth is recorded in vol. I, p. 83. [773]

Shaman Songs

In contrast to the carefully prepared and logically worded mourning songs, many of those used by shamans are extremely incoherent. This is natural in view of the belief, already described, that the words and tune are given to a sick person at the time that he is cured. Those who recover from an illness are convinced that they must have received a supernatural visitation, and at once begin to ponder on the song brought to them at that time. A person of imaginative temperament easily persuades himself that the words which begin to form in his mind were actually brought by an agent, and, having thus deluded himself, it is easy for him to convince others. The coherence of the text thus depends upon the ability of the patient, a factor which explains the extreme lack of skill in many compositions. The examples here given are, perhaps, unusually complete. 533* 756 [753]

Song Used by Ninitsamlaix(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Wárumlnulnumqudu	skānīnitsamlaiyes
In the beginning(c)	the life-giving power(d) was made;
yoo diaí aiyaitul	aldānālsiwaandai
that is what we have given	within them(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (f)

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

*533 756

B Nuyamhmlimilnk | dinuslkhldinilsdai | dilqtlqtqm-idul
They(g) sang | over my wash-basin(h); | they all watched over yulukwalitmm

my shaman's power(i).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Ănuqwiltumilnk | wanuslukwalitsdu | ămăsqumilsaix
Became open | the place of shaman's power(j); | there I saw

Thitcplitan-alsaix Thitcplitan-a.

(a) This man received his name and his ability to cure the sick from Thitcplitan-a about 1850. He was very ill, apparently on the point of death, at the time of his visitation.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 45a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) The first part is worded as if supernatural beings were speaking.

(d) The reference is to the healing ability granted to shamans who have themselves been cured when seriously ill.

[753] [776] (e) That is: Human beings. It is believed that a person can be cured only if Thitcplitan-a or some other supernatural being implant within the patient's body some of the healing power.

(f) The two choruses of this song have different tunes, an unusual feature.

(g) Referring to supernatural beings; this part of the song is worded as if Nisitsamlaix were speaking, and describing the time he was made a shaman.

(h) Reference to the wash-basin shows that Nisitsamlaix had the ability to cure the sick.

(i) The theme is worded as if supernatural beings had tended and brooded over the power which they ultimately sent down.

(j) The reference is to Nusmăt-a which, as the home of supernatural beings, is consequently the place from which comes a shaman's power. When Nisitsamlaix was at the point of death, it seemed to him that the sky opened above him so that he was able to gaze upon those resident there. He watched the supernatural ones conferring about his own fate, and gazed with joy at the departure of Thitcplitan-a to rescue him.

[551]

Song Used by Sikwalxwlhx(a), a Bella Coola Woman(b)

[195]

A Wilukxivilanmy | aiyawase-ny^{w}ali | dinuyămhmalim | aiyalqmămila
It waved up and down | Sang^{w}(c) | when they(d) sang | of salmon(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sanuspulimilnk | dinuslkhltinilsdai | dilomăhm-ăllundai
They(f) placed eagle down | within the wash-basin(g) | where I was(h);

dinul'ăkmm-ămqăllsdai
he(i) pulled me forth.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Hillwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEh Bellacoola NEh

C [illegible] | yas [illegible] | [illegible] 599
I gazed upon | what gave me power as a shaman(j) | when it stood up 956
[illegible]
in the centre of a place of petrified power(h).

(a) This was the woman's tsaiat designation; her shaman's name has been forgotten. [551]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 56, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tal-ia Charlie and Steamboat Annie.

(c) That is: The sky moved up and down. Grandiloquent phrases of this kind are frequent in songs used by shamans. [195]

(d) Refers to the supernatural beings.

(e) Ximatmile is said to be the word for salmon in the language of the supernatural beings; it is used by mortals in the rites following the taking of the first spring salmon. The shaman has received some of her power from a fish. [198] [226]

(f) Refers to the supernatural beings.

(g) Reference to the wash-basin shows that the shaman had power to heal the sick.

(h) The meaning is obscure. Apparently the shaman had been carried away by Thintpilitn-a and treated by immersion in a basin in which eagle down was deposited.

(i) This refers to the supernatural being, Ăuuuitsinum, who restores to life mortals killed by the receipt of too much power from Thintpilitn-a. It is clear that this fate befell the shaman. [776]

(j) The woman is said to have received power from several sources, salmon, ghosts, and Thintpilitn-a herself. It is impossible to state which of her supernatural patrons is referred to in this subdivision.

(k) The woman must have been taken to one of the spots where cures could be effected by the power of a supernatural being petrified there. [955]

[551]
[776]

Song Used by Nuxnăx-mălaxair(a), a Kimquit Man(b)

A Ăuăqsmiyuxsuuli | uaxistăldxuuli | aiakuxiaat
Look at the teeming supernatural beings above(c), not one is my equal(d), | wise one(e)!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Suxpăyiktaiyam'uli | sănutxyuxtxumulxuuli | aiakuxiaat
You must sometimes when at night to meditate on what I am bringing your mouth(f), | wise one!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Sutumyăluxăli | sănuxăltăxtxuuu(n | aiakuxiaat
You must sometimes use your wash-basin(g), | wise one!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*583 756
551
776

(a) "The One Who Dances Near the Fire." This is one of Ťlitsplitsw-a's designations and, therefore, one of the names she gives to those she cures.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 20a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) As is often the case, the theme is worded as if Ťlitsplitsw-a were speaking.

(d) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions.

(e) Referring to Nuxnăx-mălaxsix; such self-praise is a common device in songs used by shamans.

(f) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions. Reference to the mouth is in connection with the way a shaman accompanies his song by furious clashing together of his teeth. Ťlitsplitsw-a herself does this.

(g) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions. Reference to the wash-basin shows that the shaman had power to heal the sick.

Song Used by Xumxmaslaix, a Kimsquit W'omen(a)

A Sqapănăl'ailamlı	nulıkwalıltumănl	nuyălıltumănlı
All(b) have given me	the power of a shaman;	give me mental strength naiyuxsiat

the good supernatural beings.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Nuqwiplimilıxlu	aiyudiseyo-ny^{w}sudai	dimstuqunum-ăllundıt
They opened	Sonq^{w};	they saw me nuqăldjudum-ăldıundıl(c) as they peered down.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 21a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It was used when the woman first danced as a shaman.

(b) This refers to supernatural beings in general. The song is worded as if the shaman herself were speaking.

(c) When a record was being made of this song, the singer forgot this subdivision and substituted for it the final one of the first part.

(d) It is said that there was no mention of a wash-basin in the third part and that, accordingly, the shaman had no power to heal the sick.

[551]

Song Used by Nuxsimmalmum(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Yuo shmstănăsı	aiumiuulıxu	pitu-lıtumuxsıh	skusiustıldja
Hail! Mortals,	I(c) repeat(d);	I give life,	I am a learned one.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

B Ăhmrăstlimaqs(e) They measure when(f)	shănălhmstnnamhow will be visible	shăsiăstdumqdai my wisdom,

599
756 slukwalaiyăkai:

my ability as a shaman(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten; it is said that in it there was reference to a wash-basin, showing that the shaman was able to treat the sick.

(a) "The One of Whom All Sick People Think," a name received from Thlăxplăkw-a. [551]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 32b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(c) Referring to Thlăxplăkw-a; this part of the song is worded as if she were speaking.
(d) That is: I do as I have done before.
(e) When this song was being recorded on the phonograph, the singer erred and replaced this subdivision with the first of the first part.
(f) That is: They decide upon the time when.
(g) The reference is to the dramatic performance which marks his status as shaman; this part of the song is worded as if the shaman himself were speaking.

Song Used by Tcitsumdzleiy(a), a Bella Coola Woman(b) [551]

A Ănumstiwălnn Is ready	dinăzlhkstaiyăzdai my wash-basin(c),	diptsmămp I will use it

shălămhdjut-am-ădjap when you(d) come for treatment.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C. The rest of this song has been forgotten.

(a) "The Sleep-Giver," a name received from Thlăxplăkw-a. [551]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 27b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie. In 1922 he was about seventy years of age and the song was used by his step-mother.
(c) This reference shows that the shaman had power to treat the sick.
(d) Referring to human beings in general.

Fragment of a Song Used by Nuuxtmumămm, a Bella Coola Man(a)

Sănăhăxhmăkănăzdai Held me in his cupped hands	yuo dikăziăzdai the learned one(b),	shumăzhumăzăzdai when he bore me mălămhdjutshumăzăi:

to the place of treatment.

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

#583 756

(c) Recorded on song VII D 42b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(d) That is: The supernatural one held me in his carefully cupped hands. The chorus is worded as if the shamans were speaking and describing the way he was carried away to some far-off spot for treatment.

Fragment of a Song Used by Ăkwiyamtsm, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Ăwwiyăwwăwăwăwăy Laughed	ciyawwayye ay"ăy Zway"(b)	dawayăwăwăw when they(c) returned	*ăăăwăwăw

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

emphatically that the songs which they used were little more than series of meaningless phrases, often in languages unknown to the hearers. It was possible to collect the two following examples of this type: 533* 756

Siya siya(a).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 31b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

It is believed that this song was composed by Raven, but no one has any knowledge of when, or for what purpose, it was made. A snáyem used it in Bella Coola many years ago, and the words and tune have since been remembered. Siya is said to be the word for maw in a language spoken on the west side of Vancouver Island, so it is assumed that the visionary must have come from that region.

The second example consists of a single word:

Ayulize(a).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 31c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

Ayulize is in a language unintelligible to any of the Bella Coola. This word and tune are supposed to be even more ancient than the first example.

Kusiut Songs

Kusiut rites are the only ones now carried out by the Bella Coola with even approximate completeness, and many of the songs used at them are still remembered by all. A number of dances took place during the period of investigation and the texts of all the songs used were collected, as well as the music of the majority. This explains the full versions of the examples in this section as compared to the preceding ones. Moreover, it is probable that kusiut songs, composed with care by the singers, have always been more logical than those employed by shamans in which the fiction of supernatural instruction has been preserved. In former times, kusiut songs were always 533* 575* 796* [126] [756]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 newly composed whenever required, though in recent years
*[575] old ones have occasionally been re-used owing to lack of ability *[796] on the part of the singers. The following songs have been arranged in the same order as the descriptions of the kusiut dances at which they were employed.

Song Used for Anaxpamm-ain, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Sewulème(yt)wumk | wuxtlpatsi(yt)ku | ikkxpmxtwulmuljukk
Everything(b) | shook slightly(c) | when he came(d)

ikmxlliyxlelymk to the first point.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ikmxtlqalkulmk | ikimuxytkwu(yt)ixk
Have made up their minds | the calendrical experts(e);

ixmqwkmdimxtkmk | kmklyxtlxqlmk
they have curtailed | through their greed(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Nuxmqxqxyle(yt)xqwxqe | yxx dixuqlxinhxdxi | yxx dixmxxtkhx
Constantly rattle | water(g) | the dishes

dixuxlliyxmxqxdxi which elevate him(h).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 46a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been used about 1870.
(b) This is a reference to Sang[ow].
(c) This is a grandiloquent expression, such as are common in kusiut songs.
(d) Referring to Nutkpum, the dancer's patron.
[805] (e) That is: The calendrical experts have come to an agreement.
(f) That is: They have abbreviated the period of waiting owing to their greed. This song was used by the kukusiut at one of their gatherings during Nutkpum's approach. At Kimsquit no uninitiated were present on such occasions so it was possible to indulge in comments without betraying the secrets of the society. The significance here is that the experts were so greedy to share in the food that they agreed to say that Nutkpum had arrived before his proper time.
(g) That is: Water constantly re-fills. By water is meant food and mountain goat grease.
[556] (h) That is: The dishes of which the contents, when distributed, increase his status.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

Song Used for Yexsila, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Wdukssisilexamlsi | aiyamasyo·ny^{w}sualsi | dlitsiklimadjutlsi
Rocked and waved | Sony^{w}(b) | when launched his craft aiadsiutlsx

the supernatural one(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Nuxpemtuxsilcowilsha | uexamnampalutlxamlsi | dsikamilxomulimdux
Were happy | the passengers(d) | when was leaving yae dalillaksdux his canoe.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Nufuxsmitumilssiha | uenxutsteisudux | Dasexsuldimutlisudux
He(e) makes smooth | where he paddles(f). | Lights a fire

sinowakymmsudux | dasnokaktyal'limdux | kamilnuilankldisdux
Nookymm(g) | ask him for food | those of the first town(h).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 15a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, used during the kusiut season of 1923-4, is said to be an old one.
(b) That is: Sony^{w} rocked and waved.
(c) That is: When the supernatural one launched his craft. The reference is to Nookymm.
(d) The reference is to the passengers in Nookymm's canoe.
(e) Referring to Alpuxlam.
(f) That is: Alpuxlam smooths the waves before Nookymm's course.
(g) That is: Nookymm lights a fire. This reference in the text shows that Nookymm is the dancer's patron.
(h) That is: The inhabitants of the first town ask him for food. The exact significance is obscure, although the reference is to the inhabitants of the first salmon town.

Song Used for Nuxim, a Bella Coola Cannibal Dancer(a)

A Lilwmilbuxulisdulsi | aiyamasyo·ny^{w}sualsi | Dasbalaixnimulsi
Has opened | Sony^{w}! | Thence has come danger, thence dinuxdymudhldix has come power(b).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Wasuilpildimulla'uxsi | uaixquxumlsi | sinmulallimdix
isidpdimulpudux

The chiefs(c) are in agreement as to the amount of food which the eagle(d) is to eat(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 C Ipdxstmaxdumilnka | yao dāilsamāmucda | kāmālpaxolaiskidax | ilaleyāndusdax
There was a big cloak for his(f) forefather; two men held him in it(g).

Yao sxsxsxfālaixsudax
Hail, Sxsxsxfālaix(h)!

(a) This song was composed and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(b) Referring to the call. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of these two subdivisions.
(c) Presumably referring to the supernatural beings in the land above.
(d) The dancer's cannibalistic incubus was the eagle. The slightly vague expressions are necessary to deceive the uninitiated.
(e) It was impossible to obtain a translation of each subdivision.
(f) Referring to the dancer.
(g) The meaning of this is obscure. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each subdivision.
(h) The dancer's patron.

Song Used for Kol·iaiyuhmx, a Bella Coola Cannibal Dancer(a)

A Sawasqolkmailaixmālnks | a'lihilkaliwamlais | dasnumnskainultim
No one spoke | at the meeting(b) | when he counted

ensāxlpsmāltimais
how many should be eaten(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sawasmmmmlysālao | waānutciyudjalaix | ālāsnulwinudjikels
Alternately, two men | kept giving him food(d) | in his house(e);

yao dahnhn idjudax
there is incessant growling(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wasnutcāxālāmlumdai | aiatāqwan·ik'lilsdax | Yao da'ālpāmlilsdusdax
The wood shivered(g) | as he walked(h). | Hail to the shaking off(i)!

Yao sxsxsxfālaixsudax
Hail to Sxsxsxfālaix(j)!

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
[787] (b) The uninitiated assume this to be a reference to the meeting in the land above at which it was decided to send down a call to the dancer.
(c) That is: He, the dancer's patron, decided how many human beings should be eaten. The reference is slightly peculiar since Kol·iaiyuhmx has the prerogative of biting himself.
(d) The uninitiated assume that this refers to human flesh.
(e) Referring to his repository. The exact meaning is intentionally obscure.
(f) A reference to the growling of the Cannibal by which the uninitiated are frightened.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(g) A reference to a wooden sidewalk in the land above, described sketchily to impress the uninitiated. 533*

(h) The significance is as follows: The Cannibal is so powerful that, as he walked on the sidewalk, it trembled so that anyone else standing upon it was numbed as if he had been holding a metal bar struck by a heavy hammer.

(i) Sexsexkālaix, the dancer's patron, guards his path along the sidewalk by shaking his fingers. This has the further implication of presents, since these are referred to as dust flipped off during the shaking. The whole phrase is intentionally obscure.

(j) The dancer's patron.

Song Used for Exwuntnam, a Kwakiutl(a) Cannibal Dancer(b)

A Sānuqwlānkldinitsisandja	xdāsdixwodjamadilsdai	dinunusqāxemānk'lidals
They(c) proffer me	my own food(d),	then cried

aiyaoyelqoominoaku·ls Qoominoaku(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sānuyexwlimilsk	yao Sexsexkālaixdai	oldālknixālosmisdai
They(f) called out,	hail, Sexsexkālaix(g),	when wanted to eat

yao Bāxbāxqwanālosyua Bāxbāxqwanālociwa(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wasnusāxdimutlaoals	waqwatlqwatlnusamals	wasnuhaohaowalsas
They come to me	the masks(i),	the haohao(j)

yaexbāxqwaiyasudax of Bāxbāxqwaiya(k).

(a) This man had long been resident in Bella Coola and decided to perform his Kwakiutl dance, to the great interest of the Bella Coola. This took place during the kusiut season of 1923-4, the first time that such had ever occurred. [177]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 44, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The song was composed by Kimsquit Alec, and is probably translated from the Kwakiutl.

(c) That is: The supernatural beings.

(d) That is: Human flesh.

(e) This is a Kwakiutl supernatural being, the dancer's patron, and equivalent to the Bella Coola Skwanāt·ān·a. The dancer's call consequently rose and fell as at a mourning rite. [171]

(f) That is: The supernatural beings.

(g) That is: Sexsexkālaix and the other supernatural ones called out.

(h) That is: When Bāxbāxqwanālociwa wanted to eat the dancer during his sojourn aloft. Bāxbāxqwanālociwa is a Kwakiutl supernatural being who is model to their Cannibal dancers.

* 2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (i) The exact interpretation of this word may be inaccurate; the reference is to the masked figures which will presently appear.

(j) Plural.

(k) Bäxbäxqwaiya is a Kwakiutl supernatural being. The Bella Coola do not profess to understand this allusion which, they say, is quite contrary to their own usage. The implication is that the haohao actually exist within Bäxbäxqwaiya.

Song Used for Ł̇isiqwam, a Bella Coola Scratch Dancer(a)

A Wasukk̇ältwanulitsäls Was like a hurricane	aiyawaseyo·ng$^{w'}$swäls Song$^{w'}$(b)	äläsäskäiesłłomdax | when his(c) face projected dänuskäxmnuläłtsdax and made me cry out(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sanunuł̇nmlaixdumq'dax Sanunusmmlaix(e)	daqwuntanakäinuqälsdax has taught me(f).	Diäskł̇äämkulił̇stulidäls | My parents are preparing to wanunuqwiutsnamläls distribute goods(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wasäläłcimnulits I was close to	yao nuskäsiutsta the repository	wasiłpalqämnimutsłdums when it opened and taught me

ałdikälkäl·äłmił̇sdai what I should presently do.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 13a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, composed by Reuben Schooner, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(b) That is: Song$^{w'}$ was like a hurricane.

(c) Referring to the dancer's patron.

(d) That is: Made me cry out in the manner of Scratch dancers. It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these two subdivisions.

[776] (e) A supernatural being who scratches in the land above.

(f) This song was used at the dancer's initiation and is accordingly worded as if he were speaking and describing his experiences.

(g) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

Song Used for Ałimałwalaix, a Bella Coola Scratch Dancer(a)

A Sawasaiksämäłsandja It was long ago	wasinaixlunutsłłumdai that they(b) made ready,	diaiyaotcainuqälsłaix that they changed, dänuskämnuqałtsdai

my scratcher's cry(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

B Sālosamānamlimdai | yao nuskāsiutsta | yao ẓdiāltẓamātaludjas
He(d) sat down above | the repository; | that is whence came(e) diālḳwuntāliwasldjaix my inspiration(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skāmālqwīlusaiyaiẓelsdai | aiatimaiyens·udai | dāsyellākainulim
The face had just become angry | of his father(g); | it was too much(h)

yao di·tsḳālestnamldai | oltās·tākānakaiẓas | oldilixwnimotḳodai
when he scratched; | he went away to a | man of placid temperament(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 14a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Referring to the supernatural beings above.
(c) A reference to the peculiar cry used by all Scratch dancers. The phraseology is intentionally obscure.
(d) The dancer's patron.
(e) That is: It was he who taught.
(f) In the sense of: What enabled me to perform.
(g) That is: His father's face had just become angry on account of the excessive scratching. His father refers to Ālquntām, father of Sno'olxālts Ālquntām, the patron of Scratch dancers. The theme declares that Ālquntām was annoyed at the superabundant zeal of his son. [776]
(h) In the sense of: It was more than he could bear.
(i) The meaning of these two subdivisions is problematical.

[424]

Song Used for 'Nāx·wtān·a(a) a Bella Coola Scratch Dancer(b)

A Nusikmāltumilsnka | omātutsamalimlaix
There is violent talking above where(c) | the patrons are meeting;

diālqelaiyainulimlaix | dlsixsixkultomlaix
they give too much(d) | to the one that is hidden(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Pots·utcltomilnka | dānuskaẓmāmkitsdai | dāsnuliḳwainulimdai
Is increasing | the crying(f); | return to him

diāsmok'kum·itsdai his cedar-bark ornaments(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Dipoxpoxhainuldānals | swalaxmdimutlals
He(h) rushes around too much(i) | those left are troubled(j)

dās·ẓelakainulimlaix | ālānutcimikldumals
when too much | is the talking above(k).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533

[424] (a) This is a Rivers Inlet name, the dancer's prerogative having come from that area.

(b) This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(c) A reference to the house in the land above. The somewhat grandiloquent phrasing is to impress the uninitiated.

[424] (d) The dancer had prerogatives both as Scratcher and Cannibal, a rare combination.

(e) The dancer must, presumably, have been in concealment for some reason. The implication is that the fear and danger of his powers had been increased from the fact that he was out of sight.

(f) That is: The crying is increasing. The reference is to the peculiar cry of all Scratch dancers.

(g) That is: His cedar-bark ornaments return to him. These indicate that he is about to dance.

(h) Presumably referring to the dancer.

(i) The wording is as if the kukusiut themselves were startled at the excessive vigour of the dancer.

(j) The significance is that those who have not received calls are terrified at what has come to the dancer.

(k) That is: When there is too much talking above. The uninitiated are led to believe that lengthy discussion in the land above presages some strange power coming to the dancer.

Song Used for Smmkka^{a}ks(a), a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(b)

A Wasmnulmälusiktis	a'länusgayanemltits	sawäshkotsilao	waxqunsämläls
I am terrified	at what I hear(c),	more talking	by Älquntäm.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sipudjutnäleslao	sawakamäsdimutals	äläsxmlmlaixlum
They(d) have hidden themselves,	they do not want to die(e),	they are debating furiously,

yao gdisiaxyaosaixlao their faces become strange(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Samxqwisitimutldulaix	yao disilkaoals
Some have parted in anger,	their thoughts being at variance;

dixilkänkum allsndai — they move round to be with those of the same opinion(g); [623] alänodjonotsltimäls — they agree with a wise man(h).

*[575] *[796] (a) This woman performed during the kusiut season of 1923-4, the first time a Fungus dance had been displayed for many years. Four songs were composed for her.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 23a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(c) The theme is worded as if the dancer were listening to the supernatural beings discussing the call which they proposed to send down. The uninitiated are led to believe that she actually has this ability. 533* [787]

(d) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(e) The implication is that the power of the dancer is so great, and the rite so dangerous, that even the supernatural beings themselves are afraid.

(f) The discussion is so animated and on such an important subject that the faces of the participants take on strained expressions.

(g) When a Bella Coola meeting is being held, those who hold similar views usually group themselves together. [623]

(h) A man of forceful character has expressed himself and the others concur.

Second Song Used for Smnikka^{a}ks, a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(a)

A ustlstutsitlaqo | uxlasamsmayemkelt' | ska·tlamqwiasinuxits
It is true what my mother | recounted to me(b); | has opened to me

aiyawasoyo·nx^{w}'als
Sonx^{w}(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Yao kaqwixomatsk'qoltsaix | alticalunamk'limlsaix
He(d) told me to raise my head to see what he was holding(e), tcisixwismaklaoals | sawaqulxwaixlats

the model(f) | of the gathering above(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Sqwalxolixomalaoals | amitkusdimutalals | yao disiksnalosidjol'lao
Bent their heads together(h) | all the chiefs(i); | those of lesser prestige

anusqixitlwamlats fled away in fear, unable to participate(j).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 25a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, composed by Peter Nelson, was used during the kustiut season of 1923-4.

(b) This was the second song used when Smnikka^{a}ks danced, and the theme follows, to a certain extent, the first one. The uninitiated are led to believe that the dancer was able to see what her mother had described to her in previous years.

(c) That is: Sonx^{w} has opened to me.

(d) Referring to a supernatural being, probably the dancer's patron.

(e) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions. The implication is that the dancer was sitting with head bowed on her chest when the supernatural one bade her look upward to see what he was holding out to her in his hand. [787]

(f) Model is a poor translation. The reference is to the rite above on which the dancer patterned her performance.

(g) A reference to the gathering of the supernatural beings.

(h) As if in secret and animated discussion.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (i) A reference to the leading supernatural beings.

(j) That is: Unable to participate in the meeting at which it was decided to send the dance down to Snumkkᵃhs.

Third Song Used for Snumkkᵃhs, a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(a)

A Sätlämhdjuł'ldumilnka All(b) have failed,	djiszizsustemayulcoalz they(c) have decided	sinukultemälz to send it(d) down

sewälumstemälzemälz to mortals(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Wasnuisthltum-ainksdai No one soils	dälel-slxumdai what we see(f);	yao diälqumlaizlzindai it warms us(g), aiszuxälotla

hail, Suxälotla(h)!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Snmqsizumnulitsdai I heard the growling of a snmq(i)	yao dinsizlimultumdai	dikälpsdjudimämhulisdai as they(j) were preparing matters(k),

snusaiks-älxinsosumälz
the skeleton(l) was as a bed to it(m).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 24a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, composed by Kimsquit Alec, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(b) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(c) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(d) Referring to the Fungus dance.

(e) The significance is that the supernatural beings, having failed to raise the Fungus, have sent it down for human beings to try. The words used imply that it has been sent as a patient to a doctor. This boastful phrasing is to impress the uninitiated.

(f) That is: What we see, the Fungus, is bright, shining, and unsullied.

(g) The meaning is obscure, perhaps that the sight of the supernatural object strengthens the beholders.

(h) No reason could be learnt for this reference to Suxälotla.

(i) The composer assumed that the dancer's patron was a snmq. It was impossible to obtain an individual translation of these two subdivisions.

(j) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(k) That is: As they were discussing the sending down of the Fungus.

[773] (l) This refers to a skeleton, belonging to Alqunätm, which remains in the rear part of Nusmätᵃ. It is frequently mentioned in song but no detailed information about it could be obtained.

(m) That is: The Fungus was resting upon the skeleton. Such references, not fully understood even by the kukusiut, increase the awe and wonder of the uninitiated.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

Fourth Song Used for Smnkka^{a}ks, a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(a)

A Skämälkupstaignimuts	yao tcikusiutlsai	ältäpxwulsaixnulitälis
Has now recovered	the kusiut woman(b),	after they(c) exposed wuxulkamlaitälis

the heavy burden(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ximiqo·tsldumilsika	dimuninaks·amaisandax	dälkäpäxmemqodai
There is light at the edge(e),	looks down	the much revered

enilatlaikilasudai
Moon(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Waskilslxl·aiqalstaix	dikusiutstunaosuais	daskatcämkusam·alisdai
They(g) become frightened	of that kusiut(h)	whenever he displays disqoqolimqoxlaix his blackened face(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 50, National Museum of Canada; trio, Täl·io Charlie, Reuben Schooner, and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Nebuchadnezzar, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(b) That is: The kusiut woman, the dancer, has now recovered. The implication is that she was grievously stricken when the power first came, before she knew what was required of her.

(c) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(d) Referring to the Fungus.

(e) Referring to the edge of Song^{w}'.

(f) That is: The much revered Moon looks down. The Moon is one of the dancer's patrons and the song asserts that he looked down on her when he heard that she was in trouble. "Much revered" refers to the attitude with which she regards her patron. [776]

(g) Referring to all kukusiut, human as well as supernatural.

(h) Referring to Moon.

(i) That is: Whenever he blackens his face. At an eclipse the face of the moon is said to become blackened, and the song implies that this is done deliberately by Moon in order to perform a kusiut dance. [776 821]

Song Used for Saiqnäs, a Kimsquit Mystery(a) Dancer(b)

A Sätialtimotaowit	yaälkimstäntälosa	olikäps·liwatatup'
Stand firm and be brave,	mortals(c),	when you guess(d)

dikehalo'stamldai its place of concealment(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 B Aiatälsiyutlsudja | älaqwntänaoswals
Observe(f) the supernatural being | where my thoughts are centred;

älhxmämlixwlimdai | dämätsltomimlsdai
becomes hidden | my place of power(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Waskolänäl·älamaks | dikänänuskxitsdai
No one can contradict the words of | my pattern(h);

dinuslaxwaiyulsaslaix | dinunudjonostemdai
it is the unsolvable mystery | of Älquntäm(i).

(a) That is: Älmutsämk.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 41a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(c) The words are addressed to the uninitiated whom the dancer pretends to regard in the same light as supernatural beings regard mortals.
(d) This song was used on one of the occasions when people were called upon to guess the hiding place of the dancer's power.
(e) That is: The place where my power is hidden.
(f) An invitation not to be taken literally.
(g) That is: My place of power becomes hidden. The implication is that the supernatural beings have carefully concealed it among themselves.
(h) The being from whom the dancer has obtained his inspiration.
[776] (i) Nonodjonostem is another designation for Älquntäm.

Song Used for Änudakänuts, a Kimsquit Mystery(a) Dancer(b)

A Istästutwinakumldap | gdiänuqwntnikmmldai | yao gdisikeloxsamlip
I am grateful to | Änuqwntnikmm(c); | you(d) have succeeded in guessing(e)

diämatsltomimlsdai
the hiding-place of my power.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Säqwäl·alimilsks | yao tcisnitsmän·anaoals | skäaoltxwosam·alisdai
They(f) called upon | Snitsmän·a | to drone(g)

sänulukwalältaoals for the shaman-like one(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) That is: Älmutsämk.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 40a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was used about 1910 at Kimsquit.
[776] (c) A supernatural being who gives inspiration.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(d) This is addressed to the uninitiated, one of whom has guessed correctly. 533*
(e) The assumption is that this has been done with the aid of Anuqwuntnikmm.
(f) Referring to the supernatural beings above.
(g) That is: To utter her supernatural droning cry.
(h) The reference is to Sno'olxlts Alquntäm, the dancer's patron. The meaning of the whole passage is obscure but seems to be as follows: Sno'olxlts Alquntäm was perturbed at the coming of the call to his protégé and, to help their fellow, the other supernatural beings called upon Snitsmän·a to drone. This sound has a healing effect and would, therefore, enable human beings to solve the mystery. The phraseology is intentionally obscure. [776]

Song Used for Willie Johnston(a), a Bella Coola Thunder Dancer(b)

A Skämälnutwinmutsuls	didaxdakän·äldai	sixäyaotcam·älisandai
I have just heard	it(c) coming down;	it changes its voice äläälälälitäls above our heads(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Stirwotsamlimilsika	dikusiutstunaosuals	yao skäoskimänldisdai
They asked plainly	the kusiut(e)	to lead the frenzied beating of sticks(f)

sewequlxwailals
at the gathering of the supernatural beings in the land above.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Soälktmaxlamilsika	wokälälxwoälälimats	däsnustkit'limisandai
Too many to be seen	are those called(g);	when they increased dinutsymälsdimutldumdai the water(h).

(a) The Bella Coola name of the dancer was unfortunately omitted.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 57, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, announcer and prompter, assisted by Täl·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(c) Referring to the call.
(d) It is doubtful whether this statement is more than a rhetorical device to impress the uninitiated.
(e) Referring to Thunder.
(f) Thunder, one of the most powerful of the supernatural kukusiut, has the prerogative of leading the orchestra of stick beaters to "cure" a fellow-dancer. The song states that his fellows requested him to perform this function. [776]
(g) That is: So many are in attendance that they cannot be recognized. The reference is to Thunder's dance in the land above, for which the supernatural kukusiut assemble from all directions. [773]
(h) The allusion is to the rain which follows Thunder's dance. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Used for Ämamtci, a Bella Coola Thunder(a) Dancer(b)

*533 A Issaxkilikamahlutsduks | yao iasixwin imut-alsdax | altasiknuwasumtais ahlxwaltumal itsais

I cannot tell whence comes what(c) I hear, I cannot tell where it is; there is nothing but fog above, I am in trouble(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Aiqwalxwekmem-akudai | sä-lanykämdimutdasdai | dinunuqumlaixdusdai yaiyulätimutsudai

The hands of everyone helped Yulätimut(e) in the wonderful works he was doing for himself; all wanted him to do the same for them(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Senonstkäxk-umälimqudai | diyaiyaxdimutdasdai | dialpikmelasdusdai
Is moving again | the fire-holder(g), | it is being shaken by saiutlaikilasudai Thunder (h).

[776] (a) Ämamtci has two patrons, Thunder and Yulätimut. During the winter of 1923-4 he was initiated into the kusiut society as a Thunder dancer; in the following
*[575] song, reference is made to both his patrons, but he would have to be introduced once more, with a second name, before he could dance with respect to Yulätimut.
*[796] (b) Recorded as song VII D 51, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, announcer and prompter, assisted by Täl-io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Täl-io Charlie, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(c) Referring to the call.

(d) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

(e) One of the dancer's patrons.

(f) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

[776] (g) That is: The fire-holder is moving again. The reference is to the article [821] shaken by Thunder which causes lightning. In dances, this is shown as a hollow rattle containing smouldering cedar-bark of which fragments are scattered in all directions.

*[575] (h) The dancer's second patrons.

*[796]

Fragment of a Song Used for Naxnäx-mälosaix, a Bella Coola Ghost Dancer(a)

A Qis-kuatstätimotilox | Aiyawastwinutsmim
Why is there no name(b)? | Each(c) speaks proudly of himself(d);

dinulqutamilsandai | sciqualiayasudai
they use as house posts(e) | their shin-bones.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

(a) Recorded as song VII D 11b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This was incorrectly announced on the record as a shaman's song.
(b) The meaning of this is problematical. Ghost dancers habitually deride the dead and this is certainly a veiled allusion of a derogatory nature.
(c) Referring to ghosts.
(d) That is: Each uses the kind of grandiloquent language employed by chiefs. [195]
(e) More specifically, the two uprights nearest the front-door.

Song Used for Ẓomcua, a Bella Coola Sun Dancer(a)

A Sawäs̓kämaiutsiaoals | waaiyalilaxastai | säoaoliwots·amalit |
The two | Aiiläxa(b) | drone in unison when yao dinaxliwatomdai

he(c) enters(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ältäpäksmem·äqodai | diponponilamatemdai | lälitnaxliwatomdai |
All(e) watch as he draws near at the time they called him(f); is waiting(g) |

däs·umumlkänäldusdai his salmon blanket(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skämälamtainulim | yao dilqwalst'liwalisandai(i) | oldiläkänikstäsdai
They invite the lofty one to place himself(j) | on his seat;

siaunxälotladai
hail, Sunxälotla(k).

(a) This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4. The patron of the dancer, a woman, is Sunxälotla, the name of Älquntäm as Sun. [776]
(b) Referring to the two Aiiläxa who drone daily as sun and moon travel.
(c) Referring to Sunxälotla.
(d) That is: When he enters Nusmät·a at the winter solstice to join the gathering of the supernatural beings. It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for these two subdivisions.
(e) Referring to the supernatural beings.
(f) A reference to the gathering of the supernatural beings before the winter solstice.
(g) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for these three subdivisions.
(h) That is: His salmon blanket is waiting. The reference is to Älquntäm's blanket with salmon on its lining. [776]
(i) When the song was first used, this subdivision consisted of a repetition of the second subsection of the second part. This was considered poor technique and the phrasing was altered for later occasions.
(j) It was impossible to obtain individual translations of these two subdivisions.
(k) The dancer's patron.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Used for Snuyaxlikwan·a(a), a Female Bella Coola Sun(b) Dancer(c)

*533 A Ánuximnulitsduks | wa'álusikálán·itsaìs | se·nämkekm·alimdai diziálqapstailaixgas

There was light above me when they(d) opened the very powerful thing for me(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Łakwálsdutsmlimilsika | dizgayawa·kmlimdai

Loud voices(f) are discussing his(g) multitudinous works(h);

dásnuqpánlánamldumdai | disnuslkákstiniłsandai

when he stirred sunwise | the water in the shaman's wash-basin(i).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Was·ámkwalmmqudu | ska'álpálgaluslaixas | dálqwlxos·am·itłoaìs yálsmayaikilasuaìs

Smaisikila(j) and his associates are immortal; they g[illegible]rd life. In the beginning of time they created Álpálgeloslaix(k).

[551] [424] [776]

(a) This is a Rivers Inlet name, inherited by the present owner as a result of the marriage of one of her ancestors with a Rivers Inlet woman.

(b) According to a strict definition, Snuyaxlikwan·a is not a Sun dancer. Her patron is Álqunäm, but she does not refer to him as Sunxálotla, Sun, but as Smaisikila.

(c) This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(d) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(e) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(f) Referring to those of the supernatural beings.

(g) Referring to Smaisikila.

(h) It was impossible to obtain individual translations of these two subdivisions.

(i) The reference is obscure. Allusions to wash-basins are usually found only in songs used by shamans; it is said that the dancer had a prerogative of that nature in Rivers Inlet, and insisted on it being mentioned in her kusiut song. This is contrary to Bella Coola custom.

(j) The dancer's patron.

(k) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions. Álpálqeloslaix is a supernatural being with the ability to revive mortals; little is known of him and he may be a Rivers Inlet being.

Song Used for Áiqwaiosamlaix, a Bella Coola Moon Dancer(a)

A Yao istásqomhuyálsduks | disludutsdimutlisandai | yao ela'ámásaoaìs sawaásiutsuaìs

I was surprised at what was told to me; it was too much, it described(b) the descending supernatural being(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Aiakāsptsmālōlnandja I was not good enough(d)	alridāk-ānalldai when came to me	dikilomamātstsldai my patron;	533*

sumpmstqmonmallnndai
I told him so.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wasqulwulstsltiamālnks No one passed outside his house(e)	āmātsqsamālimdai within sight	diqoilqolimfadai when blackened his face

enilalalkilasudai
Moon(f).

(a) This song, composed by Reuben Schooner, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.
(c) The reference is to the call. The meaning of this whole first part is highly problematical; the references are intentionally obscure to impress the uninitiated.
(d) That is: I did not have sufficient goods to distribute for a ceremony.
(e) The theme here changes from a description of the dancer's experience to an account of his patron's actions in the land above.
(f) That is: When Moon, the dancer's patron, blackened his face, no one passed even within sight of his house. As uninitiated are forbidden to pass in front of a dwelling in which a kusiut dance is taking place, so supernatural beings avoid the vicinity of Moon's house when he is performing. The blackening of the face refers to an eclipse, but has an added significance since it is an intimation of a dance. [776] [784] [821]

As already described (II, p. 229), the Otter dance differs from most kusiut rites and the songs are likewise peculiar. They do not vary from year to year and the following example, used during the season of 1923-4, contains many points of an unusual nature, not even understood by the participants themselves. It has only two parts, each with a different tune, and the performer carried out her rite by dancing in two distinct ways. In the first part, she raised and lowered her fore-arms as is customary, but followed this with a smoothing motion, as if she were levelling upturned earth. The significance of this seems to have been forgotten entirely. 533* [575]* [796]* [535]

Song Used for Kawūn-i, a Female Kimsquit Otter Dancer(a)

A Alaiaxlaqodax It has always been so,	yao dafiryumyumdax it(b) has no shame(c);	sewāskpālstnamsdax all see it

*533 yao dsaxiulâlax when the supernatural one comes down(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS (e)

B Wa'kcots-ämäpalax | ma-i-payawak'mitsdax | dis-takoxsiwulidsdai
He(f) is pleased at what I have been doing, I have exposed to him the thing of dsinxpamisîpdai | dialâwailâldsdai | yao Ālqantaimxadai

great worth(g); in like fashion calls his people(h) | Ālqantam(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 27a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was used during the hamat season of 1923-4.
(b) Referring to the otter.
(c) That is: It is blameless. The meaning is obscure.
(d) A reference to the catching, by the dancer, of the figure of an otter, a spectacle watched by all.
(e) The wordless chorus is unusually long.
(f) Referring to the otter.
(g) Presumably referring to the rite in which the figure of an otter is used; the whole part is practically unintelligible.
(h) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these five subdivisions.
(i) That is: Ālqantäm summons his followers just as I have called you. The unusual lengthening of this part, combined with an apparently illogical mention of Ālqantäm, suggests that the last two subdivisions may be relics of a former third part.

Song Used for Anaximälas, a Bella Coola Bark-Beater(a) Dancer(b)

A Ipaktsxälalnaxîn | yao xtänaxpamiblâsx | dälat-lwalstimalînadai
diwalâlxtimalîldalsdai
The one(c) who was talking so vociferously to us was so excessively happy that I almost curbed his mirth(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Wa-alyatx-an-älimk' | aiadiriams | ma-nano-yanlim
They(e) alone heard | the song | they practised

älkpatwaiudlals
at the gathering of the supernatural beings(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Smalänäx-ämälim | xawa'amomätsts | xixlixlixhamnäs | aiaxnälals
Counts his work(g) | the patron(h), | the Bark-Beater | of Anaxälis(i) [776] (a) The dancer's patron was the supernatural Bark-Beater.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 11a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been composed about 1900 and has since been used repeatedly. It was employed during the hamat season of 1923-4.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(c) Refers to a supernatural being. 533*
(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations of these four subdivisions. The meaning of the whole part is obscure.
(e) Refers to the supernatural beings.
(f) The translation is accurate for the part as a whole, though the interpretations of the first and third subdivisions may possibly have been transposed. The significance of the words in relation to the dance is obscure.
(g) That is: Keeps count of how much he has done.
(h) That is: The patron counts his work.
(i) The supernatural Bark-Beater was the dancer's patron.

Song Used for Anuximūx-a, a Female Bella Coola Carpenter's(a) Dancer(b)

A Itsiastum-ilsiba | uxranxdjahm-idsudali | uxxwal-ihm-allsandja
When I was bold and head-strong(c), I nearly killed myself, I went to the place of(d) alspaxalemaqual;

dreaded power.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sāluxjhmanltominili | pdinuxqwiatmmldai | xdiziaslakāler-aiyu
Nuxqwiatmm(e) placed eagle down upon my head; for that reason the carpenters(f) pdinuxpekstimut-ouali made light(g) for me(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Samoxhāmdimatqudydai | yqyulltimutstudai | xdjiqudxutnūm-āmkidali
Long ago(i) | Yulltimut | made this rite unaided, alstim-ux-dnaoali

the child(j).

(a) Her patrons were the four supernatural carpenters. [776]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 26a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kuxiut season of 1923-4.
(c) This song was used at the dancer's initiation; the text describes her experiences for the benefit of the uninitiated.
(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.
(e) A supernatural being about whom nothing could be learnt. [776]
(f) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.
(g) In the sense of: Provided illumination.
(h) That is: The carpenters showed me the way to power.
(i) In the beginning of time.
(j) A reference to the figure of a child which is made to walk as a puppet at this dance. No further information could be obtained. [532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

*533

Song Used for Sinaximtl, a Female Bella Coola Kwiat Dancer(a)

A Ititkumuslitsdak | sa mem-ustsiyatsmh | yas skitsmuqulu
dikstsistsmlsh

My path was lush, crooked and erratic when I searched for a supernatural being(b), when I finally succeeded(c).

[WQOCASS CSSSCC]

B Ăsuqustymaqs | yas mukhlutsts | dizisqumulitsdai
I was stationed firmly above | the repository; | at times it was hidden, dikithmustsimlitsdai

there was no road(d).

[WOOCASS CSSSCC]

C Skimilkumkumlsadai | dikuqwistsmulsdai | yu qwiqustsimlitsdas
Pounded with his stick | Nuxqwistsmu(e); | he succeeded in opening it(f), dizilqumlsiqumls and light appeared.

(a) There are so many kwiat dances that it was manifestly impossible to obtain details of them all. This song, composed by Nehachalmoxw, was used at the initiation of Sinaximtl during the kwiat season of 1923-4. The neophyte, a mere infant, did not dance and no information was obtained concerning the proper conduct of the rite. Her patron was the supernatural being, Nuxqwistsmu.

[776]

(b) This being an initiation song, those who are not members of the society are regaled with an account of the alleged experiences of the neophyte.

(c) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(d) These assertions are not to be taken literally; they are all for the benefit of the uninitiated.

(e) That is: Nuxqwistsmu pounded with his stick. He is the dancer's patron.

(f) Referring to the repository.

Song Used for Ăsuskstsmu, a Bella Coola Kwiat(a) Dancer(b)

A Yas [illegible] | sikikstsikitsh | ma'skimuqmh
yas ăsus'likuskstsu

When I was an uninitiated person(c), I used to wonder what Ăsu'likuskstsu was like, but I was entirely wrong(d).

[WOOCASS CSSSCC]

B Ăsuksmis'mqs | yas mukhlutsts | sikpstkiwustsmh |
It(e) is hanging beneath the roof of | the repository; | everything is open to mustsmlsiqumlsh me, my limbs have opened it(f).

[WOOCASS CSSSCC]

J:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

C Wa'qalaxwalaxa I see the coming	xilqlaxwa'xwalai figure(s),	yas dzoxi'yaxlaxi hell Sisi'utlaxi	533*

yas Sqaxsiwaxlai Sqaxsiwa(l).

(a) This song was used during the kwiaiai season of 1923-4 as the initiation of an infant into the society. The full ritual was not performed on that occasion, and it was impossible to learn the proper procedure. The neophyte's parent is Sisi'utlaxi Sqaxsiwa, whose prestige as usually known as Broken Arrow, but Kwakiutlaxa has neither of these prerogatives. [176]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 45, National Museum of Canada, 1911, Broken Arrow, Tsi'ts Charlie, and Jim Pelkiel, the last-named acting as interpreter. This song was composed by Broken Arrow.

(c) The theme is worded as if the neophyte were speaking to the uninitiated whom ranks he has just left.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(e) This refers either to supernatural power or to some object infused with it.

(f) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions. The meaning of the whole is obscure, although the implication is that the Kwakiutl now knows everything having, figuratively, frayed upon the repository.

(g) More accurately, the memorial figure, the meaning is obscure.

(h) The dancer's person.

Kwakiutl MOURNING SONGS

533*
965
575*
[166]

Several prominent kwakiutl died during the spring and summer of 1923. Memorial rites of the usual nature were held, but in addition several kwakiutl mourning songs were composed and used in their honour during the next ceremonial season. When a relative was initiated, his song contained numerous references and words of the type normally restricted to mourning songs. Such a combination may occasionally have taken place in former times, but the present comparatively common usage is due to the difficulty of holding regular potlatches. In each case the kwakiutl rites were abbreviated, and no description of the proper ceremonial was obtained. The following are examples of combined kwakiutl and mourning songs:

[177]

533*

Song Used for Xelmut, Combined with Mourning for Tsiatsi(a)

#539 A [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
I kept talking to myself as if I were crazy when I was near(b)

[illegible]
the supernatural(c).

[illegible]

B [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Peacefully, now, | Tsiatsi(d) | will do so

[illegible]
the eagle-mind man(e).

[illegible]

C [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
They(f) give him | the covering(g); | hail to the provided food

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
of Xemsem.(h) | the mourning(i) | illegible.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 18a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The exact relationship between Xelmut and Tsiatsi could not be known.

(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

(c) This first part of the song follows the usual hactat pattern; the words are arranged as if the receptors were addressing the uninitiated.

(d) The dead man who is being mourned. The theme is now of the usual mourning type.

(e) A reference to Xemsem, one of the first settlers of the earth and an ancestor of Tsiatsi. As described (I, p. 230), Xemsem came to earth in eagle form and mentioned calling for food. This is an anthropomorphic word.

(f) Presumably referring to the supernatural beings.

(g) Thus in: The form of an eagle. The theme continues as a mourning song, describing the fate of the deceased.

(h) Thus in: The food brought down by Xemsem as a gift from Hqamim. Chicken was the provender supplied to him.

(i) A reference to Mount Dasdq, from which Sasas are said to have been born within the last century and a half.

(j) Dasdq, being the road of Xemsem, is delighted to welcome one of his descendants and shows his pleasure by blowing smoke.

[779]

Song Used for Sekamen, Combined with Mourning for Tsiatsi(a)

A [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
They(b) measure | the supernatural; | is to spread

[illegible]
to be common human(c).

[illegible]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

583*

B [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
It is so(d); | the two(e) crests | had acted himself between

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Yehaha(f); | he binds them together(g) | and the same likewise(h).

[illegible]

C [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |
Ḵpaxtlaw was the first creator in the beginning of time; we still peek from

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
his works(i). | As my memorial (?) is | illegible.

(a) The exact relationship between Ḵ'ala̱mum and Yehaha could not be ascertained. The first twelve subdivisions of this song were recorded as song VII D 13, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tala Charlie and Steamboat Annie.

(b) Presumably referring to the supernatural beings.

(c) This part of the song is worded as if the neophyte were addressing the uninitiated; the meaning is consciously obscure, though obviously beautiful.

(d) That is: It is true.

(e) Referring to two crests owned by the deceased; the song has changed to a mourning theme.

(f) That is: Yehaha has secured himself midway between the two crests.

(g) By incorporating himself into both.

(h) The whole song was extremely difficult to translate and the reference to a name was absolutely unintelligible.

(i) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions; in fact, even the free translation may be inaccurate.

(j) [illegible] appears in the dancer's ancestral myth, but no real explanation could be obtained for mentioning him at this point.

Song Used for Ḵala̱'xtmut, Combined with Mourning for Yehaha(a)

A [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
He(b) meets a supernatural being who gives him the words of a mourning song

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
for his father; then he proceeds to the land above(c).

[illegible]

B [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Where the land | Yehaha(d); | he sits down within

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
he expansible house(e); | they laughed | illegible.

[illegible]

[773]

*583 C Ka'xgumskqwlnudux | Ti'xwstlicudux | ululilicudux
Is like a fire | Ti'xwstlic(g) | the copper of(h);

ski'kpalumqwlnudux | yululutp(ya.udux | uiulwuk'ed(idux
has carried him round(i) | his grandfather | Nulindji(j).

(a) Recorded as songs VII D 5 and VII D 6a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. VII D 5 is a two-minute record, and as the song was too long, the last part of it was concluded on VII D 6. This resembles an ordinary mourning song, and is said to have been used formerly as one at Kimsquit. During the season of 1923-4, however, it was used at a hamat dance given by Lalal'nimut, son of the deceased Yakulu.

(b) Referring to the dead Yakulu.

(c) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these six subdivisions, and even the free interpretation may be inaccurate.

(d) That is: Yakulu wants the best. The meaning is that the dead man is seeking out the finest elements in his ancestral myths.

[779] (e) Referring to a house at Nuqulst used by his first forefathers; it had the power of expanding so as to provide room for all who came to potlatches.

[551] (f) The name of the house.

(g) A Bella Bella name owned by Yakulu.

(h) That is: The copper of Yakulu is bright and gleaming like a fire. The reference is to a copper mentioned in the deceased's ancestral myth; the article furbished itself in delight at the sight of one of its first owner's ancestors. Such boasting remarks are frequent in mourning songs.

(i) In the sense of: Around the places where his first forefathers ranged.

(j) That is: His grandfather, Nulindji, carried him around the scenes of the experiences of his first forefathers. Nulindji was a Kwakiutl chief.

Song Used for Sipmaw, Combined with Mourning for Yakulu(a)

A Sumqqwmidjuwilsutilulu | a'Kpqywmidjululli | ulumlplulqulu
I was careful, I watched myself, when I felt strange(b); I rose above the ground(c) when I reached(d) ulumklulum

the repository(e).

[illegible]

[551] B Sumulqlulmlulumqw' | yulumulmlumulu | yulumulilmulumulu
As soon as he saw | Sumulmlum(f), | the lordly mountain(g)

yus ululqlulmlumulu illuminated itself(h).

[illegible]

C Nuqulqlumqwlnumil | ulqlu ulu'mil | nudulu lmululul
Rejoined | Qulum(i); | she welcomed him(j)

nulumlumlululum to the expansible house(k).

2. McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) Recorded as song VII D 19a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4; the exact relationship of Siymaw-a to Yäkotles could not be learnt. 533*

(b) Siymaw-a was being initiated into the kusiut society and this part of the song describes, for the benefit of those who were not members, her experiences when she discovered her repository. The theme states that she felt peculiar when she reached its neighbourhood.

(c) An expression inserted to impress the uninitiated.

(d) Individual translations for these three subdivisions could not be obtained.

(e) When this song was being recorded on the phonograph, the performer erred and substituted for this subdivision the following:

ałmuntaiasuałs
where I went.

(f) One of the names of Yäkotles. The theme here changes to the usual mourning type, describing the experiences of the deceased. [551]

(g) Referring to Mount Tsudz near Kimsquit.

(h) This mountain is said to have been an active volcano within the last century and a half. The first ancestors of Yäkotles landed upon its slopes, hence the mountain became wrapped up with their fortunes and showed its delight at welcoming one of their descendants.

(i) That is: Ḡałmo rejoiced. She was one of his first ancestresses.

(j) That is: Ḡałmo welcomed Yäkotles.

(k) A house which figures in the origin myth of Yäkotles. It had the ability of expanding to accommodate as many guests as assembled. [773]

Song Used for . . . . . (a), Combined with Mourning for Ḡomänakwala(b)

A Ił'anałłmaałja | ałkłałaułłłsdai | diqxułłimułłłsandai
I(c) was in trouble, I was in fear, when I saw illuminate itself(d) ałmułłałłłsdai

the place of petrified power(e). [773]

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Kämułxałłłmaqułłsandai | Ḡomänakwalasudax | ikän·xłiwan·uxim
Is now established(f) | Ḡomänakwala(g) | at the place of ałłłłwałxałłłłłsdax his established name(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (i)

C Kämqałłłłłłmaqułłsandax | yu·łsuximäxałsdäx | skäi·kpałłłoyuqułłsandax
Welcomed him(j) | łsuximäxałs(k) | and guided him around ałłłpałłłłałłłłłsdax

the places of his crests(l).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (a) A female infant whose name was not known by the singers from whom this song was obtained.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 53, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tāl·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Tāl·io Charlie, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of an infant great-granddaughter of Ḷomānakwala.

(c) Referring to the neophyte. This part of the song is worded for the benefit of the uninitiated.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

[773] (e) This might apply to any mountain where a group of the first settlers landed, but is said to refer to Nusḳalst, the home of the dead man's ancestral family. The implication of the theme is that the mountain erupted; Mount Nusḳalst is not regarded as a volcano, and it is possible that the composer confused the origin myth of the dead man with that recorded in the preceding four songs in which there are references to the illumination of Mount Swaḳ at Kimsquit. Such a mistake would not be impossible in view of the decadence of Bella Coola culture.

(f) In the sense of: Has rejoined his ancestral crest.

(g) That is: Ḷomānakwala has rejoined his ancestral crest.

(h) That is: At the place where the first to possess his name came to earth.

(i) An unusually long wordless chorus separates the second from the third part.

(j) That is: Ḷomānakwala.

(k) That is: Sānuximāxots welcomed Ḷomānakwala. The former was one of the latter's first ancestors.

(l) A reference to the localities where his first forefathers came to earth.

[776] Song Used for Lilituumlaix(a), Combined with Mourning for Ḷomānakwala(b)

A Aiyailaixdimuthlandai | tuḳuxḳuxḳumlaixḳodax | sawastānimulmistax |
All is ready, proceed | thou "Opener"(c) | who brings what puts yao ditcaitcaiyutslaixao an end to all our grief(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ālticiakumlimilsuka | dastālkumxayakstdax
He(e) is waiting with outstretched hand | for the chief(f);

shānuihm·ilxwisdax | yutcākwaākaiyustdai
now he stands upon | Tcākwaāks(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

[773] C Shānwantaālsisqudax | sawatcākwālot·dadax | shānunlkals·mimqulsundax
Sits down within | the expansible house(h) | Snunlkals(i) xustnutlkmdimutsudai on Sānutlkmdimut(j).

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) "The Beautifier." This is one of the appellations of the infant's patron, the otter, so-called because people adorn themselves whenever an Otter dance is given. 533*

(b) Recorded as song VII D 16a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of Lilitwumlaix, a female infant distantly related to Ḷomānakwala. [776]

(c) A reference to Otter, the neophyte's patron. The significance is that chiefs have an opportunity to display, "open," their generosity by lavish giving at every Otter dance. [556]

(d) The elaborate ritual of an Otter dance dispels grief. It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions.

(e) Referring to one of the dead man's ancestors. The theme changes, and is henceforth of the usual mourning pattern.

(f) Referring to the dead Ḷomānakwala.

(g) "The Loftiest." This is one of the many designations for Nusḍalst, one of the dead man's crests.

(h) A reference to the expanding house described in the dead man's origin myth. [773]

(i) One of Ḷomānakwala's names.

(j) This is another name for Nusḍalst. The meaning of the whole part is: Ḷomānakwala sits down within the expansible house on Mount Nusḍalst. There is the added implication that he seats himself as does his supernatural namesake in the land above.

Non-Ceremonial Songs

The Bella Coola are not an intensely musical people. Singing in unison is an essential feature of every ceremonial rite, [796]* but, when alone, an individual seldom bursts into melody from sheer joie de vivre. They have, however, a certain number of non-ceremonial songs, shorter and more diverse in theme than any of those previously recorded. The people themselves do not attempt to classify them, though they can conveniently be grouped in accordance with their themes. Some deal with [825] love, others are sung jocularly at sight of certain birds or mammals, while a third class can only be described as miscellaneous. Still others accompany stories and games; these are included in vol. II, chap. V, and appendix B. 1

Love Songs

Men sometimes compose songs which they sing, unaccompanied, to their lady loves. Occasionally, too, the maker of a popular one will teach it to his friends who will serenade the 533* 832 424

1 [See cat. 116, pp. 543 to 567 - ANALYST]

*533 [832] [424] woman, he taking the leading part. Such songs are not private property. Women, likewise, compose songs about men, though these are usually of a mocking nature and are sung only by a group of girls when on a picnic or fern-gathering expedition.

Man's Love Song(a)

Kàlàpnoàlio	oliasoyo·nɣwta	maxmilànmsta	skàkwnsdjinu
If you went(b)	to Sonyʷ,	I would become a star,	I would capture you.

Kàlàpnoàlio	oltusulotwdax	susloi·lànmsta	skàkwnsdjinu
If you went	to the ocean,	I would become a bull-head(?)	I would capture you.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This is said to be an ancient Bella Coola love song.
(b) The vertical lines indicate merely the end of a word group, not a clear subdivision as in ceremonial songs in which the services of an announcer are required.

Man's Love Song(a)

Kàlàpnualtuq'	olàkolukmɣao	sawàskwaqwaiyials
If you should go	to the land	of the bull-head,

almàkwammsto	skàmohmtcinu	skàislixwdjinu
I would change myself to a kingfisher,	I would dive down,	I would eat you.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The singer composed this song about 1900.

Man's Love Song(a)

Saiyulàamldinitsqwsokoks	aiyel·a	xaiyel·a
?	aiyel·a(b)	xaiyel·a(c)

Sàuusukkomàwlàk·etsl	oldjxdjxdjx	aiyel·a	xaiyel·a
?	her	aiyel·a	xaiyel·a

Wa·ràsi·eqeyoalais	xaiyel·a
?	xaiyel·a

533*

Wastamyelsuqu	yadinʼlkts	oldjxdjxdjx	aiyelʼa	xaiyelʼa
?	good opinion	her	aiyelʼa	xaiyelʼa

(a) Recorded as song VII D 6d, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) This word has no meaning.
(c) This word has no meaning.

The above is a very popular song, said to be ancient. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain a literal translation although the significance is well known. A free interpretation is:

"They say I loved her very dearly? No! The dimple in my left cheek merely smiled at [had a good opinion of] her."

It is often sung when a man is accused of being on unduly friendly terms with a girl.

[198]

Man's Love Song in Chinook Jargon(a)

Klunäs	karta	naika	tamtam
I wonder(b)	what	I	think(c)
kapʼa	okak	taii	klutcmän
of	that	chief(d)	woman;
haiyu	naika	wawa	yäkʼa
a great deal	I	talk	her(e);
helo	cem	naika
no	shame(f)	I(g).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 48, National Museum of Canada; singer, Reuben Schooner. The singer completed the record with a Bella Coola song of which the text could not be obtained.
(b) Literally: Perhaps. This word is used for many dubitative expressions.
(c) This song follows the usual English pattern so it has been arranged in lines.
(d) In the sense of: Important.
(e) That is: I have been talking a great deal to her.
(f) This is the English word "shame" which has been adopted into Chinook.
(g) That is: I have had no shame in what I have said to her.

Kimsquit Woman's Love Song(a)

Sismqulks | wasliluks | dilliukpdimuldai	alxwopmäklaixdisxänmitlmem
Why is the man talking so much(b)?	I don't like him any more.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 Ähx | axdjanl | olalaiaoa
Come(c), | let us lie down together | not far away.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This is the type of song sung by a group of women on a picnic.
(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.
(c) This is addressed to another man.

Woman's Love Song(a)

Kismätldudjaia | diyuhnkstaiyätsdai | yao oldisnnäx | aiyaqolosti
I do not want him | to lie down with me | that slave | Qolosti(b).

Aqtaxyälqotsamnu | qänuxom·iken·u | kaipainuxstix$^{w'}$
Don't go too far down(c) | or you will be unable to stop defecating(d).

Skämätsitomdxlts | siqoadiinuldjilnu | skä·neponiqetsxw'
I went to sleep, | I dreamt of you(e), | how disconsolate I am!

(a) Recorded as song VII D 38c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
[578] (b) Qolosti was a man who specialized in composing songs that mocked women, hence the singer used his name in this derogatory manner in retaliation.
(c) The implication is that her lover had been fondling her face, and that she did not wish him to touch her body. The three parts of this song have no apparent relationship to one another.
(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions. The introduction of the obscene expression is unexplained.
(e) Referring to her lover.

*533
226

ANIMAL SONGS

Fishing Song(a)

This song is sung by boys as they cast for trout.

Waitutupän·ai·, | wasänukxmits | wasänukxmits
Come along, trout(b), | I want to triumph, | I want to triumph, yao tilqualtänas | iltutupän·i

over you biggest | trout.

Äsitutupän·i | äsitutupän·i
I fish for trout, | I fish for trout.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*
226

Nuthlhlwaqotnmkx Swallow right down(c),	oldisxtcntcnki to your very tail,	oldisxtcntcnki to your very tail;

Ginxtawnhalulan-islaix
why you cannot even break one of our hairs(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
(b) The vocative form is used.
(c) That is: Swallow the bait.
(d) A reference to the use of human hairs for fishlines. The lad is, of course, trying to "dare" the fish.

Fishing Song(a)

This is a song sung by lads as they splash in the water after minnows, trying to drive them ashore.

Waksdimān·u Who is your father?	Waksdimān·u Who is your father?

Qualaiyulānk "Rotten stomach"(b)	dimān·u is your father;	qualaiyulānk "Rotten stomach"	dimān·u is your father.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 26b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) It is uncertain whether this refers to any particular kind of fish, or is merely a general term of opprobrium.

Song Sung to a Cormorant(a) 533*

825

When a cormorant is seen near a canoe, the paddlers often sing the following song. The bird, delighted, is said to come near and dance around the craft.

Qtnāxomāks Dance,	dallopān·idax cormorant,	qtnāxomāks dance,	dalsiteowidax cormorant(b).

Nustsaik
Take the breast(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) This is the Bella Bella word for cormorant.
(c) The singer insisted on inserting this refrain after the song. It is really a lullaby and it is doubtful whether it normally accompanies the cormorant song.

[192]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Sung to a Bat(a)

*533 825 When a bat is seen flitting around in the dusk, lads often greet it as follows:

Stundabitlam	xololo
Bat,	xololo.

These two words are repeated an indefinite number of times.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 24b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

MISCELLANEOUS SONGS

*533 525 177 Gambling games have always been popular among the Bella Coola, especially the one known as lehal which may be of European origin. Contestants sing as they play, but the songs, lacking words, consist merely of a series of meaningless ejaculations. The tunes, however, are remembered, and certain ones are considered to be the proper accompaniment to certain games. When a number of men are singing in unison, they follow the directions of a leader, but at other times the "words" vary according to individual taste. The tunes alone are important, and it is often remembered from what area they first came.[4]

*533 177 A few songs have been adopted from the Carriers and are sung from sheer delight in the rhythm, since the words are unintelligible. The most popular is the following:

[4]A number of such tunes were obtained:

A Kimsquit lehal song, recorded as song VII D 30c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A gambling song said to have come from the West Coast of Vancouver Island, recorded as song VII D 19b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A Bella Coola gambling song, recorded as song VII D 16b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A Bella Coola gambling song, recorded as song VII D 20b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A Bella Coola gambling song, recorded as song VII D 23b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*
177

A Song in Mixed Carrier(a)–Bella Coola(b)

uxlexwan·i	uxlexwan·i	xonätsoldjo	senaxwan·i uxlexwan·i(c),	uxlexwan·i,	?(d)	?

äkaiäldaltco	äkaiäldaltco	äkaiäldaltco
?	?	?

nuqwna	uxlexwan·i
the very hairy pudenda	uxlexwan·i(e).

(a) It is uncertain whether this song was derived from the Carrier or the Chilkotin.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 10b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) The anthropomorphized supernatural cold wind, resident in the upper Bella Coola. The old trail from the interior passed through the valley and the word must have been familiar to the Indians of the interior. [776 821]

(d) The words marked with queries are all in Carrier (or Chilkotin).

(e) This third part of the song is called forth loudly, not sung, and always gives rise to laughter. It means: uxlexwan·i has hairy pudenda, a reference to the luxuriant growth of bushes and grass in the valley where she is localized.

A Carrier Song(a)

This song is said to have been used at some ceremonial at Ulkatcho, in the Carrier country. The rite is spoken of as a potlatch, although the Bella Coola state that it differed entirely from one of their own potlatches, and that every guest brought his own song. The words are:

atis	tcaxola
Knife,	none at all.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

The Bella Coola have no idea of the meaning of this song.

2: McIlwra..h E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER III

WARFARE[1]

General Observations — Specific Accounts

General Observations

721 PRIOR to the establishment of British rule, there was con-
648 siderable warfare among the coastal tribes of British Columbia. Long-continued struggles leading to the extermination of one or other of the participants were unknown, but there were constant raids, counter-raids, forays, and attacks. These were never as continuous as on the Plains, where martial achievements were regarded more highly than on the coast, but it appears probable that at least several villages of the Bella Coola were embroiled every few years. Nevertheless,
[796] war was secondary in importance to ceremonial rites. During the winter, peace reigned and members of hostile tribes were [556] even received as guests at some dances. At potlatches they might be subjected to insult, later to be avenged in the same manner or by active hostility, but seldom was actual violence offered either to envoys or guests. The symbol of peace and 726 friendliness was eagle down; the occupants of a canoe who 825 bore an invitation to a potlatch, or who were guests them-778 selves, used to blow this substance up into the air whenever [486] another craft approached, and it was incumbent on the latter [578] to veer over to the other side of the channel. Eagle down was [627] considered to be so sacred that when two men were quarrelling a chief could stop them by blowing some of it over their heads.
721 In winter, hostilities were prevented by ceremonies, and in summer the people were usually busy laying in supplies of food; consequently, it was only in the late spring that fighting was [575] at all common. Even then the dictates of ceremonial life were [622] not entirely forgotten; no kusiut novice went to war and

[1]Warfare having long been discontinued, the past tense is used throughout this chapter.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

seldom a chief who had given many potlatches. Successful raiders rarely slew such an one; his position placed him above the dangers to which lesser men were subject. 721 575 622

Raids appear never to have been carried out solely for the purpose of giving warriors opportunities to display their prowess, or of permitting young men to prove their mettle. Scarcity of food was the commonest cause for forays when, of course, the victims were chosen for their accumulated supplies. The Kwakiutl especially, lacking abundance of salmon, often attacked the Bella Coola. Even more dreaded were the Kitkatla, the most warlike people of the central coast, who used to raid for many miles to carry off slaves whom they sold or traded for other commodities. Trespassing, too, was a source of friction which often led to hostility. In such a case, the offenders were usually held up to ridicule at potlatches, and the irritation gradually increased until wiped out in bloodshed. Members of a tribe which had suffered from a raid prompted by any of these motives would await a suitable opportunity for retaliation; this in turn would be avenged, and a vendetta often ensued lasting for generations. As already described, a ceremonial error brought punishment from a neighbouring tribe; this was the only motive which caused fighting between different Bella Coola villages. In the last century there was a struggle of this kind between the people of Stuux and Ältqäläxl in which the former were victorious and took many slaves who were later ransomed. When ill-luck had dogged a village or a group of villages for some time, the inhabitants sometimes endeavoured to wipe out their misfortunes by attacking another tribe. 648 685 626 556 688 628 727 777

The teeming salmon at Bella Coola, Kimsquit, and Täl·io, made it unnecessary for the Bella Coola to wage aggressive war for which they were unfitted both on account of their unmilitary attitude and their lack of central authority. On the other hand, they were tempting victims for more belligerent neighbours. The narrow Bella Coola valley, however, far removed from the open sea, and densely populated, was difficult to attack. 642 648 133 161

721 to attack. It is said that the Fort Rupert people once raided 648 it, but their hair became entangled in the thorns growing near the tide-flats and they were easily slain while struggling to free themselves. Two warriors escaped and hid in the branches
[727] of a huge spruce tree. They used to slip down at night and steal food, thus supporting themselves for several weeks, but [628] were at last discovered and enslaved. On such occasions the villages of the lower and central valley usually rallied to the help of Q̓omqo·ts, the most exposed one, although there was no mechanism to enforce such assistance. The inhabitants of [776] this town attributed their protection to Ałquntäm, and used to claim that he had decreed that they should be immune [361] owing to their close association with him. Though Bella Coola itself was comparatively free from molestation, Kimsquit and [162] Täl·io, with smaller populations and less strategic positions, were subject to frequent attacks. At least one of the villages at 712 the head of South Bentinck Arm was defended with a stockade of cedar trunks, set upright in a double row and entered by a water-gate with a drop-door.[2] This water-gate protected the [648] residents on many occasions, and it is remembered that one [726] Fort Rupert raiding-party was annihilated while endeavouring to batter down the door with a huge ram. The defenders, armed with muskets, picked off the attackers as they struggled in the open.

721 All the older men were emphatic in stating that most of their raids were in revenge for such attacks. Although such statements were partisan, they were confirmed in every way [642] and were probably tolerably correct. Lack of a strong government was a serious handicap to the Bella Coola. After being [623] assailed, the members of the town would discuss retaliation, and if unanimity of opinion was reached, that course was de-[622] cided upon. Public opinion alone selected the leader, usually [701] a man who had given a number of potlatches, especially one whose position had been made stronger by previous validation

[2] It is said that such stockades surrounded other villages, but definite information on this point was unavailable.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as a warrior. Such a chief had no command over his followers. 721
If he were a man of great prestige, many would be willing to 701 serve under him, but he could not compel the services of any- 622 one except his own slaves. A few individuals often declined to [626] follow their fellows to war, although the force of public opinion [628] usually prevented a too individualistic course. Inhabitants of other towns used their own discretion whether or not to join the party. If some of their relatives had been slain in the previous attack, revenge influenced them to share in the retaliation, otherwise only the prestige of a mighty chief could attract them. No case is known in which all the Bella Coola [642] villages joined in a single expedition; there were often tem- [628] porary alliances between neighbouring settlements, but complete lack of central organization. The course of events was similar when a chief wished to raid without the motive of avenging an attack. For example, if a Bella Coola had been [648] enslaved by a foreign tribe and slain by his owner, a brother of the victim might decide on revenge. The usual course was to kill a slave belonging to the murderers, though sometimes he led a raiding party if he could gain the necessary support.

Each warrior provided his own weapons, frequently the 726 same as those used for hunting. Bows with obsidian-tipped 411 arrows were most relied upon for offence, though slings were also used from canoes. Every man carried a spear, pointed like an arrow, for hand-to-hand fighting, although there was relatively little of this, most of the combats being fought at a distance with much noise, boasting, and expletives, but few casualties. Spears were, however, useful if the attackers succeeded in surprising a village at night. Hostilities are a thing of the past, consequently it was impossible to obtain detailed information respecting offensive weapons. Armour consisted 714 of maple or birch slats reinforced with moosehide and worn 726 around the body and chest; this rendered quick movement difficult but was effective against arrows. Muskets were intro- [411] duced many years ago and armour consequently became use- [177] less. Large shields of moosehide were carried in all canoes,

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

714 and one was held up by the bow paddler as the craft neared the 726 shore to protect him and those behind from arrows and stones cast by slings. When not in use, shields were laid away in boxes with some white substance resembling flour.[9] On the [103] shore of the fiord below Bella Coola, opposite Winter Bay, there are some boulders of the same white tint; even now these are often spoken of as "The Shields of the Bella Coola." It is said that hostile raiders, seeing them, used to remark that they had reached the outposts of Bella Coola.

726 The same lack of leadership shown during preparations for a war was evident during hostilities. The so-called leader had 701 little authority over his men, who could desert and return home
703 at any time. Lack of martial ability among their own chiefs
[648] sometimes led the Bella Coola to place themselves under the authority of a Bella Bella in a way which would be impossible
[642] for a war-like people. Frequently such divided leadership led to disaster, and is the surest proof that the Bella Coola were not as aggressive or bellicose as other coastal tribes.

726 Except when attacking the Carriers, all raiding parties
[533] embarked in canoes and followed a definite order of procedure [703] handed down from the past. In the stern of each craft sat the captain, a chief, who, as the craft was leaving, began to sing his xe·tla song, keeping time to it with the beats of his paddle; the recounting of the glories of their ancestors was supposed to encourage the warriors. Instead of leaving simultaneously, a rendezvous was often chosen down the fiord, and the expedition finally moved off from there when all the canoes had arrived. While still in friendly territory, a flotilla proceeded 726 openly. A small amount of dried salmon and water was car-
789 ried by a war party and morsels of the former were eaten at intervals. The bow-man took as much food and drink as he thought could be consumed at one sitting, put a fragment of dried salmon in his mouth, chewed it four times on the same side of his mouth as he was paddling, and swallowed it. Then [9]Some undetermined substance said to have had protective or preservative qualities.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

he took a sip of water, followed by another piece of dried fish, 726 chewed it four times, and washed it down as before. This was 789 four times repeated so that the provender consumed consisted of four morsels of salmon, each chewed four times, and four sips of water; it was most important that no more should be taken into the mouth than could be swallowed at a single gulp. Having eaten, the bow-man passed the food which he had taken from the store to the paddler behind him who ate and drank in the same manner, except that he chewed with the other side of his mouth, corresponding to the fact that he paddled on the other side of the canoe from the man in the bow. So the food and drink was passed down to the captain. If possible, he was required to eat whatever was left, though if there was too much, he threw the remains over his shoulder into the water. He was also expected to swallow whatever water was passed to him, but if there was too much he would lie back, his head projecting over the stern, and pour it out over his face so that it fell into the ocean. As the food and drink were completely consumed, so it was believed the enemy would be annihilated. If the bow-man had failed to take out enough salmon and water, the captain received none of it, since no second portion could be served.

Each captain took with him a supply of dyed and undyed 726 cedar-bark which was stored in the bow of the canoe. During 714 the course of the day, the party would land and the chief decide 824 upon some decoration made by combining strands of the two colours of bark to serve as a distinguishing mark for members of the same canoe. He took out as much bark as he thought would suffice, and the bow-man was the first to don the symbol. The second paddler followed, and each in turn did the same in order of his position in the canoe. If too much had been taken, the captain had to wear collars of whatever was left over; if too little, he had to do without. Having thus arrayed them- 726 selves, the party continued until nightfall when a secluded spot 784 was chosen for camping. Wood was collected and fires laid, 722 but no light was ever struck and the warriors lay around the 726 cold sticks to sleep. Meanwhile, their wives at home were 784 required to be very careful, since a woman's heedless playing 722 would cause injury to her husband, and faithlessness, his death. These restrictions were obligatory during the absence of the expedition.

726 As the party neared the enemy's country, they would conceal the craft under projecting trees by day and travel only at night. When within striking distance, a scouting canoe was sent forward to learn the hostile dispositions, the best means of approach, and so forth. This was usually done at dusk, and when the scouts had returned, the party would steal quietly through the forest and hide behind the unsuspecting village. At dawn the leader would give the signal, and the attackers would rush forward with a fierce shout, killing all the men and [727] seizing women and children as slaves. When captives were [422] taken by slave members of the expedition, they belonged to the latter's masters. The victors would cut off the heads of [567] their victims, seize what loot they could, set fire to the village and rush home before support could arrive from neighbouring towns. At first, the slaughter was usually a somewhat unpleasant task, but as the warriors became inflamed with the heat of battle, they began to delight in killing, and even women and children frequently suffered.

727 The exulting victors sped homewards, rejoicing at their success but somewhat fearful that they might be cut off by overwhelming reinforcements. During the journey, each warrior who had taken a head removed the scalp by cutting the skin around the cranium close above the eyebrows and ears. These trophies were washed at the rock Skolsexumnsta on the fiord below Bella Coola. When within sight of home, the [583] captain stood up in the canoe and sang again his xe·tla song, a symbol of victory as the bloody scalps were held aloft. Women and children would rush forth to greet the conquerors who landed amid scenes of wild enthusiasm and rejoicing.

[422] Prisoners of war became the property of those who had [567] taken them, with the exception of those captured by slaves.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

If the war had not been of long duration in which extremely bitter feelings had been aroused, captives were often ransomed by their relatives, who came unmolested for the purpose when the heat of battle had subsided. Failing this, prisoners remained as slaves, the children especially growing up virtually as members of their owner's family as far as food and clothing were concerned, though never sharing in the prowess of his ancestral family. Torture or killing of prisoners seems to have been a rare practice. One extremely old Kimsquit woman related that in her childhood she had seen a captive stretched out on the hot rocks at the side of the ocean, fastened there, his testes crushed with stones, and allowed to die. No other similar traditions could be obtained and it seems probable that this must have been an unusual case. It is true that hostilities have long ceased, but the Bella Coola have clear recollections of other long-abandoned customs, and it is unlikely that torture was ever a common occurrence. It is, of course, one about which reticence is to be expected, but information would have been obtainable if the custom had been common or if it had been one which played an important part in the lives of the Bella Coola.

Scalps were hung on a cord and dried like salmon, then suspended as valuable trophies in the taker's house. When setting out on a war expedition, he would often cover his head with one, holding it in position by weaving its hair into his own. At a man's death, they were either inherited by his heirs or, more often, burnt with his other possessions. It is said that the Fort Rupert people used to tie scalps in bundles to their masks. When the Bella Coola went to war to retaliate for a murder, instead of scalping a victim, they sometimes brought back his whole head and impaled it on a stake over the grave of the person avenged.

At this late period it is virtually impossible to form any opinion as to the amount of bloodshed in wars waged by the Bella Coola. Several of the older people spoke in gloating terms of the slaughter accomplished by their ancestors, but all

E. McDowell E-9 (1922-1924) 1968
NEB Bellacoola NEB
Transcription NE15

B 721 these accounts seemed to be exaggerations, and the casualties were probably few. The Bella Coola did not have the same admiration for the successful warrior as for the man who gave many potlatches, while everything indicates that their raids were on a small scale, rendered singularly ineffective by lack of discipline. [559] B [705]

Shaman Accounts

B 72 Active warfare has been so long discontinued on the coast that none of the living Bella Coola can describe conditions as they existed during hostilities. It was possible to collect the following accounts of raids and adventures which, though individually of small value, illustrate tactics and strategy, and recount incidents which throw light on the frame of mind of the participants. 121 *539

B T

Kitkatla War

448 721 For many years there was animosity between the Bella Coola and the Kitkatla who, with the advantage of strong government, used to sweep down from the north for salmon and slaves. Bella Coola itself was comparatively immune from attack, but the Kimsquit people suffered severely. The attackers were not always successful; one old man related how, when his mother's mother was an infant, they were driven off with the loss of four canoes and many men. The fact that this incident had been remembered for so many years indicates that it was unusual.

B T

527 454 [727] Slaves captured in this way were traded from tribe to tribe and rarely escaped. When an elderly Bella Coola was a lad, there was considerable excitement in the community owing to the return of Hahwala, a woman who had been carried off when a girl. She had been traded to a northern tribe among whom, she said, it was customary to crush captives beneath totem-poles and house-posts. The diligence saved her from this fate, and she was passed on until she reached the far north, on the

Z.98 Growth E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Reference NEA
Tsimshian NE15

slave of a river where "the white man got money once." Then Stikwale began to go south, and was finally sold to an important chief living north of Fort Simpson. He used to beat her; in fact, she carried the scars with her to her grave. Stikwale's master had another slave, a male Bella Bella, with whom the woman was on friendly terms since she was related by blood to a Bella Bella family and could speak that language. Angered by her harsh treatment, Stikwale suggested to her companion in misfortune that they kill their master and escape. The man was at first unwilling, but she assured him that she knew the route southward. The conspirators awaited their opportunity which came when their master were halibut fishing, accompanied only by his two slaves. One evening Stikwale cooked a large meal for him which made him drowsy as he sat by the fire; then she stole behind him, picked up an axe, and killed him by hitting him over the head. The two murderers carefully scraped up all the blood, and came to the corpse, and sank it in deep water so that their master's friends would believe that he had been drowned with his slaves. Then the two, having stolen a canoe, paddled off, hiding by day, and subsisting on what shell-fish they could gather. After many perils they reached Bella Bella, whence Stikwale returned home.

She had been carried off as a mere girl, but was past the age of child-bearing when she returned and had almost forgotten her native language. The Bella Coola were keenly interested in the tale of her adventures, and especially in the way that slaves were buried in Alaska. It was assumed that some of their own captives must have been killed in that way, as a slave from the far north was crushed in revenge. It is said that this custom was common among the northern tribes from whom the Bella Coola adopted several practices, although this particular one was carried out but once.

The most famous Kitkatla chief, and the one most dreaded by the Bella Coola, was Tsibou, who is said to have had almost despotic powers over his northern warriors. The name itself was transmitted from one holder to another, but the man

2: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bimshian. NE15
Bellakula. NE6

B 648
721
T 622
648
721 celebrated Tokoa was he who held sway between 1850 and 1870, a man of almost gigantic proportions, of tremendous physical strength, and endowed with force of character and initiative as well. Pitted against him, the Kimsquit people suffered even more than before; there were few direct assaults, but Kitkatla canoes seemed always to be lurking in the vicinity, ready to kill or enslave heedless fishermen or those travelling between Kimsquit and Bella Coola or Tal'co. Friends of the victims repeatedly discussed counter-measures, but lack of leadership prevented them from coming to a decision for several years.

B
86
648
721

One winter, about the middle of the last century,* the Kimsquit determined to take the offensive in May. This plan was discussed both at Bella Coola and Tal'co, at Ximqu'a the leading chief, Nuxmit'a gave his support and many men whose relatives had been killed or enslaved promised to join the Kimsquit raiders. Among others who took part in the conference was a certain Lo-gaw'a, an influential Bella Bella chief who claimed to be visiting relatives in Ximqu'a at the time. It was decided that the rendezvous should be Bellabella, on Lebouchere Channel.

B
[70]

During the spring those who planned to take part in the expedition busied themselves with their preparations. No one knew how large would be the force, since as usual, everyone used his own discretion whether or not to join it, some did so to avenge injuries to their relatives, some merely to display martial ability, whereas others declined to repay their wrongs. As has the appointed date came round, and some fifty canoes, each containing twenty to thirty men, gathered at the appointed place.* Thence they set out and encamped for the first night at Smith River, Kitlaw, near Bella Bella. Lo-gaw'a knew the time of meeting and the route that would be followed, so sent out two lads to hunt deer at the spot, though, not wishing to circumvent some of the raiders, he did not tell them when they were likely to find. The two hunters scrambled upon the mountainsides without being observed, and hurried home to report what they had seen. Lo-gaw'a had intended to join the party, so he now set out to a small canoe with the two as paddlers, after warning them that they must not nothing to home of his movements. His war equipment consisted of a mallet and two paddle-shaped boards with small

B
86
648
[72]
B 86
[70]
[72]
[77]

*The approximate date was judged from the fact that the old man who told of the expedition in 1922 said that his father was about five years of age at the time.
*The strength of the expedition was probably exaggerated.

J; McIlwraith R.-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bella.bella NE5

B
Bb 648
Bb
[713]
[177]

dressers, each containing a loaded and measured charge; these were medicines recently obtained in trade from the white man and considered very valuable. On reaching the place where the Bella Coola canoes were drawn up, Lo-gwa-i called out four times:

"Nawait-a, are you there?"

On being answered in the affirmative, Lo-gwa-i leaps ashore, uses back his own canoe, and deliberately joined the expedition.

The Bella Bella chief gave Nawait-a one of the prized pelorus-shaped bowls, and the recipient repaid this overwhelming generosity with the gift of a marten-skin coat which he was wearing. A Kitamaat chief likewise gave Lo-gwa-i a valuable blanket-coat. As usual, the war-party was suffering from lack of leadership. Lo-gwa-i, a properly validated warrior, was a man who had given many potlatches, and though not a Bella Coola, was related to them by blood; in addition, he alone knew the route to Kitkatla, so he virtually assumed command, although many of the Bella Coola were unwilling followers. Lo-gwa-i suggested no immediate move, and gained his point owing to the fact that no one had a definite counter-suggestion. After travelling seven miles in the darkness, Lo-gwa-i warned the canoes to address his ill-disciplined and somewhat uncertain force. He pointed out that the way to Kitkatla was long and difficult and that it would be dangerous to attack their northern foe-men, but that the Wa-yal-a' men at hand would be an easy prey. The Bella Coola had no quarrel with these people, and were reluctant to attack them, especially as there had been inter-marriage between the two tribes. Lo-gwa-i spoke heavily, saying that the Wa-yal-a had insulted him in their potlatches, and that many of their women, gathering sea-weed on lonely beaches on this season, would be easy victims. His arguments were given strength by the fact that he was a noted chief and warrior; no one dared to meet against him, so it was decided to follow his wishes, though the Bella Coola stipulated that none of the Wa-yal-a were to be killed.

B Bb 648
Bb
701

The Bella contingent and in the early dawn visited a small Wa-yal-a settlement and captured several slaves. Continuing their journey, they took prisoner a number of women who were gathering sea-weed, and destroyed the supplies which had been stored up. Lo-gwa-i had joined the expedition merely in hope of getting revenge upon the Wa-yal-a; now that this end was accomplished, he was willing and eager to return home, but unaware how to leave his followers.

B
[727]

With this in view, Lo-gwa-i suggested an attack on a Chim-lim settlement, adding that he knew where some of their [women?] and in Cowichan dwelling were stored, and that the Chim-lim people were too numerous [illegible] one of the Bella Bella speaking groups.

[illegible] was stored with men to capture women [illegible]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5
Tsimshian NE15

in their ceremonies. Again the Bella Coola were unwilling, but again their unformulated and uncertain wishes were overruled by the dominant chief, and the assault was made. The frames were stored in an unguarded shelter near the cemetery, into which the raiders broke, smashed them, and threw the debris into the water. While this was taking place, a Wayel-a canoe rounded a point, and Lo-gwa-t took the opportunity to jump aboard, saying that he was escaping from a Bella Coola raiding-party. The canoe paddled away and the expedition was left leaderless. The usual discussion took place about what was to be done, but finally the raiders returned home. They had been diverted from their original objective, had been led to attack a friendly tribe, had been deserted by their leader, and the only spoils of the long-prepared expedition were a few slaves.

Among the prisoners were two daughters of a certain Olowa, who was feared because he had frequently been in partnership with Tsilxa. A few days after the return of the expedition, the father appeared to ransom his children. Some of the Bella Coola wanted to kill him, others demurred, and it was finally decided that a spear, fastened to a line, should be hurled against his canoe so that it would project outwards and lodge against an anchor stake, capsizing the craft and drowning the occupant. The spear was thrown, but clever handling prevented the intended disaster. Olowa was a validated warrior, one who never showed fear, so he calmly pulled out the missile and again paddled upstream. This time the Bella Coola fired shots close to either side of his head, but he sat unmoved and unarmed amid his boxes of presents. Finally, a Bella Coola tried to wrench off a tuft of hair from above one ear, but though he pulled with all his force, he did not succeed, and everyone on shore laughed at him. This restored good humour, and Olowa was allowed to land and ransom his daughters. When he left for home he was told to send his friends if they wished the return of their relatives. This was done and peace followed; if Olowa had waited a few days until the excitement of victory had cooled, he would have been able to land without molestation. The only other result of the expedition was that the China Hat kukwiat killed their own Cannibals for having allowed their frameworks to be exposed.

After this fiasco, the Kitkatla became even bolder and many years elapsed before another expedition was sent against them. This time, there was no Bella Bella chief to interfere with the arrangements and after the plans had been discussed for a winter, a flotilla from Bella Coola, Kimsquit and Pa-a took the water one day in May.

Nothing of importance took place until, near Kitkatla, a canoe was captured containing a man and his wife. The former's face was marked with a vertical scar, and it was remembered that, four years earlier, when Tsilxa had been attacking Kimsquit, one of the defenders had shot an

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B 726 648 T 648

arrow downwards from his station above the doorway so that its obsidian point pierced the face of one of the assailants. This was obviously the same man, so a Kimsquit chief promptly slew him as a first taste of revenge. From the captive woman it was learnt that Tsihsa himself was at Bella Bella. Here was a golden opportunity, but the Bella Coola wasted it through divided counsels. Some wanted to proceed to Bella Bella to capture Tsihsa himself, others to continue to Kitkatla and attack during the absence of their warrior-chief. Either plan might have been successful, but as usual there was no central authority and days were wasted in idle talking. At length they determined to assault the village, and cautiously drew nearer for the purpose. The same futile discussion delayed matters, but at last one night some of the attackers lurked in the woods behind the unsuspecting town, while others guarded the canoes hidden at a distance.

B T 726 648

Meanwhile Tsihsa, while at Bella Bella, had heard that a Bella Coola raiding-party had set out. He knew that its objective would be his own village, so he hurried home in a fast travelling canoe with relays of paddlers to obviate delay through camping at night. Under cover of darkness, he passed unmolested into Kitkatla at the very time that the attackers were in ambush. Though unaware of this, Tsihsa acted with promptness. He called his followers together and told them what he had learnt in Bella Bella, and that from the time which had elapsed since he heard the news, the enemy must be at hand. Drums were beaten and all the community called together in readiness. The lurking Bella Coola overheard the preparations, but could not make up their minds to attack instantly; some wanted to do so, others desired to wait for dawn, and once more lack of leadership caused an opportunity to slip by. Just at daylight the assault was launched. With a wild yell the Bella Coola fell upon the town, but the Kitkatla were on the alert, their arms beside them, and the onslaught was a failure. The first rush was driven back, so the assault degenerated into a sporadic musketry duel which continued throughout the day with advantage to the assailants although the casualties were heavy on both sides. Tsihsa owned a small brass cannon which he fired as a signal to other towns of the Kitkatla to rally to his assistance, and the Bella Coola were forced to consider the possibility of hostile reinforcements arriving at any time. Some of the attackers tried to burn the village by crawling on the roofs and setting them afire, but the wary defenders pulled them through the smoke-vents and killed them. In the afternoon several canoes came hurrying up, filled with allies summoned by the firing of the cannon. As they sped past the place where the Bella Coola canoes were concealed, they noticed one of the sentries and took a few long-range shots at him. One struck him on the wrist, and the

T [713] [202]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B/T 726 648

intense pain caused him to shriek in agony. Judging by the sound that the guards had been overcome and were being killed, the raiders were thrown into confusion. With one accord they abandoned the attack and fled to their canoes; those who first reached them pushed off at once, abandoning their less fortunate comrades to their fate.

One of Trhsa's wives was a Bella Bella who feared that a dearly loved relative, a certain Nuzmát·a, might be among the assailants. In the confusion that followed the rout she called out in her native speech:

"Nuzmát·a, are you there?"

The Bella Coola had actually been reinforced by a number of Bella Bella volunteers including Nuzmát·a, but he had made good his escape. Another Bella Bella, less fortunate, realized that this was a chance for help and called back, imitating the voice of the man addressed. The woman was deceived and told him to drag one of the Kitkatla canoes into the water and that she would bring paddles as soon as she could do so unobserved. About forty of the attackers took possession of a large canoe, but their courage failed as they waited for the woman with paddles and they shoved off, propelling the craft with their hands. Aided by an off-shore wind, they were able to steal away from the scene and had almost reached a tiny islet when they met another canoe coming to Trhsa's assistance. A fight ensued, the refugees were driven ashore to the island and their canoe carried off. Even in their perilous position, the party continued to wrangle. Some scoured the woods for yellow cedar from the bark of which the Carriers used to make canoes, an art well known, although not generally practised by the coastal tribes. Fire had swept over the island so that only two trees were found; the discoverers hastily peeled bark from these, fashioned it into rude canoes, and pushed off with their friends, leaving seven men marooned. The two craft ultimately reached Bella Coola after various adventures.

B/T [171] [501]

Among the seven abandoned were two uncles of the father of the man from whom this account was obtained, as well as the grandfather of a middle-aged Kimsquit man with whom the tale was also discussed. The two brothers were warriors, men whose bravery had been validated. One said to the other:

"You are always boasting of your valour, now is your opportunity to display it. Swim across and steal a canoe from the village we attacked."

Thus urged, the man agreed to make the attempt, first requesting the others not to kill his brother, the originator of the scheme, in case of his non-return, though this was the usual penalty for proposing a plan which led to the death of another. But the Bella Bella who had imitated Nuzmát·a's voice insisted on risking his life. He stripped, tied a knife to his head, took a board for support, and essayed the theft. He had no

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B
T 726
648

difficulty in getting near the village, but the dogs smelt his approach and their barking so dismayed him that he returned. Now it was the turn of the man to whom the scheme had first been suggested. He took the same float and pushed off into the darkness. A celebration of victory was taking place, so that he was able to land unobserved on the beach and mingle without suspicion among the many strangers who had assembled to Tsuksa's aid. These included allies among whom were slaves and others whose faces were unfamiliar to the residents of the village itself. After walking around for some time, the Bella Coola noticed a canoe of suitable size at the end of the village. He joined a group walking in that direction, but detached himself by making some excuse when near the desired point. Once out of sight behind the canoe, he waited until he was unobserved and moved the craft a few feet; again he waited, then shifted it once more, until he was ultimately able to launch it. By great good fortune, he was able to slip in unobserved, and managed to rejoin his companions although he had only his hands and a few pieces of wood with which to paddle. The seven remained on the islet for two days more, making paddles and waiting until all suspicion of the proximity of any attackers had passed.

B
727

Then they launched their craft and started homewards. Ignorant of the outside channel, they determined to follow the well-known inner route, though this course exposed them to constant danger and necessitated travelling by night only. There was so little darkness, however, that they could neither proceed fast nor replenish their stock of food. On the eighth day, when lying near Hartley Bay, they were almost starving. Tsi'kmai, one of the warriors, said to his brother Ōpmikmq:

"Do you want us to die of starvation? We cannot go on this way, let us camp for a few days and hunt, no matter what the danger."

Ōpmikmq agreed, and set off with a packer, telling his comrades not to worry even if he were absent four days since he did not know the country, and might have difficulty in finding game. Another hunter, Kmsiewaltsuta, went off with a packer in the other direction but soon returned unsuccessful and discouraged, though Tsi'kmai cheered him by saying that he was sure his brother would succeed. Before night Ōpmikmq and his packer brought back a fat buck which was divided among the starving wanderers. At first they ate the fat uncooked, but hunger at last drove them to build a small fire and toast the meat in thin strips so that the minimum of heat and flame was required. Thus strengthened, they eventually reached home.

Even those who had fled at the arrival of the first reinforcements had difficulties in reaching home owing to ignorance of the route. Some of the canoes reached Kitkata in safety, whence the occupants proceeded

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

927 overland to Kimsquit, and from there to Bella Coola. The crew of another craft lost their way among the islands and fiords and wandered around for days until their food was exhausted. They were then near China Hat where they could have landed in safety but, thinking that they were still in hostile territory, they feared to camp and hunt. At last, spurred by hunger, they determined to catch some eagles, the only living creatures in sight. A rude shelter was built on the shore, a bark tray placed before it, and one of the party gashed the fleshy part of his back until the blood ran sufficiently freely to fill the vessel and serve as bait. A companion hid himself and clubbed the eagles as they swooped down to the fresh blood. Though the food was coarse and had to be eaten raw, it enabled the refugees to continue their journey home.

927 Another canoe was surprised at the entrance to Douglas Channel by 648 a party of Kitimat who slew all the crew except a certain Y'a-k'awawa who succeeded in escaping into the woods. Thinking that the survivor would be driven down to the beach by hunger, the Kitimat patrolled the shore for days, but he eluded them by travelling overland, though his only food was uncooked plants and a single goat, killed by a stone. Y'a-k'awawa was a Kimsquit man whose wife was from Kitlobe; her relatives, hearing of his plight, watched the shore of Gardners Canal, hoping that he might be able to reach that refuge. He managed to do so, though at the last gasp, and was taken to Kitlobe whence he returned to Kimsquit. This was the first time that anyone had travelled overland from Douglas Channel to Gardner Canal.

Still another canoe actually landed at Kitimat where the crew was butchered except for five men who fled to the forest. One of them, X'auti, uncle of a man about seventy years old in 1923, had made several trading expeditions into the interior and was familiar with part of the route. He acted as guide, but soon lost his way and the five wandered for months through the trackless interior, often in dire straits for food, and becoming more and more weary. Their journey began in May, and 927 by October they were all enfeebled through hardship and lack of food.
787 X'auti himself was the first to give up the struggle, saying that he could go no further. He asked his comrades to make him as comfortable as possible, and then to leave him; regretfully they laid him on some evergreen boughs, and ventured off, expecting their own death within a few days. Soon after their departure, there was a violent thunderstorm and, at the moment of a tremendous clap, Thunder, himself, appeared to the dying wanderer. The supernatural one went to a near-by rivulet and dipped up water which he brought X'auti to drink; when he had done this four times, the man felt as if he had had a hearty meal. Thunder then told X'auti to close his eyes. He did so; then the supernatural one spit upon his own hands and rubbed them over the patient's head, his arms, his trunk, his legs, and finally his feet, as if massaging him. Xnutli's strength began to return at the first touch of Thunder's hands, and, when the treatment was finished, he felt entirely rejuvenated. Thunder told him to overtake his friends and to massage them in the same way and they would be revived. He explained that they had been travelling in circles of ever-decreasing radius which was the reason that they had neither reached their destination nor recrossed their own tracks. He added that they must think constantly of their first objective, Ulkatcho, Nuktsto in the Bella Coola language, and that at night Xnutli must sleep on the side of the five nearest that goal. 727 787

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Soon afterwards the four wanderers were surprised to see a stalwart man swinging along the trail behind them, and their amazement was intense when they realized that it was Xnutli whom they had left at the point of death. He bade three of his comrades hide, and massaged the fourth as Thunder had done to him; this restored his strength exactly as in his own case. The one so cured then concealed himself, while Xnutli treated another of his comrades, and finally the third and fourth. This was not the end of the assistance so obtained. Within a few minutes of their recovery, they found the trail they had so long been seeking and reached Ulkatcho before night, though under normal circumstances the same distance would have required four days of travel. There were several Bella Coola at the settlement who were overjoyed at the safety of those for whom all hope had long been abandoned. They rested for four days, then set out for home. Xnutli told his comrades to fix their minds upon their objective, and as a result they were able to make the journey with phenomenal rapidity. 727

Thunder had granted Xnutli the boon of [illegible]djut on this occasion, and had promised that he would come to his help whenever called upon. Xnutli was a sorcerer, a profession which had been practised for generations in his family, and he now performed more openly than ever, assured that Thunder would be able to protect him. The malefactor killed more and more people, until he became an object of universal hatred and fear. At last the principal chief of the village, confident in the power which the giving of many potlatches had bestowed upon him, ordered an expert shot to slay Xnutli. The man so deputed had himself lost several relatives and gladly watched an opportunity. This came when the sorcerer was paddling across the Bella Coola near the old Hudson's Bay Company's post; he took careful aim from ambush, fired, and the evil man fell dead. A medicine can be made from the corpse of a murdered person, which, when used by the relatives, causes the killer's death. To prevent this, the executioner called his friends and they took 754 [776] [685]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

754 the body to his own house, preparatory to burying it. It was April, but [776] as they were waiting, a violent thunderstorm blew up from the east, the only time that such had ever occurred at that season. Thunder had promised to come to Xnutli's aid, but the latter had died too suddenly to make any appeal; the supernatural one had just learnt of his pro-
B tégé's death and had come rushing to his assistance. Realizing the [789] danger, the executioner and his friends hastily buried the corpse, throwing over it a number of blood-stained cloths, and finally stamping down the earth. There was a furious hurricane; trees were uprooted, houses shook, the earth over the grave seethed as if in a whirlpool and chunks of it
B were carried up into the air. Only the potency of the blood on the [789] cloths prevented the return to life of Xnutli.[8]

This second unsuccessful attack on the Kitkatla so disheartened the B Bella Coola that they made no more raids on their northern foemen who,
T flushed with victory, became even bolder than before. As usual, the 648 Kimsquit and Tāl-io people suffered more than the inhabitants of the [721] main valley. On one of these forays, about 1855, the Kitkatla killed Qolxwelioil, a brother of Potlas, the leading chief of the Bella Coola at the [726] time. This was contrary to all the rules of warfare since he was a member [622] of one of the leading families and the donor of many potlatches, a man whose name was as well known as that of Potlas, Nukāpuxtam of Fort Rupert, or Tcukua himself. The fame of such chiefs was enough to protect them except during the actual heat of conflict, and the Bella Coola were justly angry.

B A few years later a single canoe came paddling up North Bentinck
T Arm and was beached about half a mile from the head. Scouts investi-648 gated, and returned to Qomqoits with news that the occupants were 728 Kitkatla, and that Tcukua himself was among them. At once there was heated discussion among the people of the lower valley. Many who had lost relatives in the protracted struggle wished to wipe out the party;
B others, to see what they wanted. A few daring individuals skulked
T through the forest and fired on the visitors at long range; they were [726] answered, not with bullets, but by the four times holding aloft of a moose-skin, a sign of friendly intentions. If the strangers had fired on the scouts, a fight would have ensued, but this peaceful reception disarmed suspicion.

B
[787]

[8] This tale is a curious illustration of the manner in which supernatural elements become woven into accounts which have an historical basis. It is to be assumed that the wanderers were in a suggestible state owing to privation, and readily believed that supernatural powers must have assisted them. Xnutli was feared as a sorcerer, and probably boasted of a visitation from Thunder during his wanderings. This was accepted and the interposition of impossible incidents followed in due course.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B T 648 728 B T [726] [532] B T [726]

Tsihsa remained encamped for several days, during which time he sent word to the Bella Coola that he regretted the death of Qoixwelioil and had come to make peace. He added that his followers had tried to dissuade him, saying that he would be killed, but he had answered that he was too great a man to allow fear to influence his actions.

Having waited for several days, the party came up the Bella Coola River, their canoe loaded with presents and eagle down, while Tsihsa's brother, Ne·ulo·s, wore the mask of his tutwinam as further proof of friendly intentions. It was unusual to display one except in a tsaok ceremonial, but this was an unprecedented event; he knew that he might soon be killed and he preferred to die while bearing the obvious mark of incorporation with some incident of an ancestral myth. The canoe was beached opposite the house of Potlas where the crew blew eagle down into the air to mark their peaceful mission. Men had gathered from all parts of the Bella Coola valley and several hot-heads wished to disregard the safe-conducts and slay their enemies, a course which they had recommended for several days and had tried to precipitate by overt acts against the Kitkatla. Potlas himself had not spoken, but he now appeared and advised the people not to harm Tsihsa, since everlasting hostility would result. Though his wishes did not entirely quiet the angry ones, they virtually assured the Kitkatla of a welcome. Potlas brought forward a moose-skin, and told some of his people to hold it spread so that, when Tsihsa leapt from his canoe, he would land upon it, and could be carried to the house without putting foot to the ground. Tsihsa answered proudly that there was nothing on earth strong enough to support him, since his many potlatches had made him incomparably heavy. None the less, he accepted the honour, an assistance to landing shown only to mighty chiefs, and was carried into the house where he was seated in the far right-hand corner, an honourable location. Potlas invited all the people in the vicinity, slaves as well as Bella Coola, and the inner partitions of the house had to be removed to provide space for the throng.

B T [622] [554]

Though Potlas had decided against the immediate killing of the Kitkatla, he had concocted a scheme to test their bravery and the sincerity of their desire for peace. No one knew of this except his nephew, Ne·ewukai, who was to carry it out. When all were seated, the latter appeared, his face smeared with ashes, and his hair tied up in a top-knot with weasel skins as is customary during war. Ne·ewukai moved sunwise around the house, brandishing a musket and repeatedly pointing it at Tsihsa in a threatening manner. If the Kitkatla had shown nervousness, particularly if one of them had fired his own musket, a massacre would have resulted. But they remained unmoved, confident in the prestige of their leader, while he knew that though his body might be

B [714]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B T 648 728

killed, his reputation would only be increased by the manner of his death. At length Ne-xwnkai fired into the air; not until a shower of eagle down was blown forth did anyone realize that his musket had been loaded with nothing more deadly. This marked the establishment of friendly relations.

B T [539] [431]

The Kitkatla had brought their own singers,[1] who now began to beat out time for Tcuhua to perform a xuaok dance. He was followed by several other chiefs, and then the strangers gave presents to influential Bella Coola on the most lavish scale. Patlu likewise performed a xuaok dance, and bestowed gifts on the guests to validate it; such were, of course, not returnable. A meal was then served, and after that Tcuhua made a speech of which the gist was that the Bella Coola had previously known his achievements as a warrior, they now knew his nobility and bravery in risking his life, and that the name Tcuhua could never be forgotten, irrespective of his own fate.

Tcuhua left soon afterwards. It was somewhat difficult fully to comprehend his motive in thus risking his life. Undoubtedly his main object was to display his valour and disregard of danger. Moreover, it gave him an opportunity to impress these qualities upon the Bella Coola, and thus to exhibit his prowess actually within the enemy's camp, which must have been a source of tremendous gratification to him. The alleged motive, regret at killing a chief, may have been a contributory factor.

B T 648 556 574 [721]

Although this visit was an intimation from Tcuhua that the Bella Coola need have no further fear of him, the suspicions of years could not be immediately allayed; in fact, an occasional skirmish still took place although Tcuhua himself refrained from fighting. A few years after his visit to Bella Coola, Patlu prepared to give a potlatch to which he determined to invite the northern chief. Many of the Bella Coola doubted whether the Kitkatla warriors would respect the safe-conduct usually afforded to envoys, and no one was anxious to bear the invitation. At length six chiefs volunteered for the task and set out, though with many misgivings. They stopped en route at Bella Bella where a chief of that tribe, Ompt, joined the party; he thought that he would have influence with the Kitkatla and might add protection to the Bella Coola. Fearing to be seen by any small Kitkatla bands, the delegation travelled only by night until they could actually reach Tcuhua's village. As they paddled up, they indicated their mission by singing one of Patlu's xuaok songs. On hearing this, Tcuhua asked one of his Bella Coola slaves whose song it might be, and when he answered that it was one of Patlu's, Tcuhua despatched a chief, Kwinas, to invite the guests to his house. Ompt was thankful when he saw this man approaching, since he felt that it heralded a friendly welcome. The party was conducted to Tcuhua's

[1] [i.e. to the peace negotiations - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B
T 648
556
574

dwelling in spite of the fact that a Cannibal dance was taking place there. All the messengers were kusiut in Bella Coola, while three had Bella Bella rights as well; Tsuhse allowed the latter to take part in the ceremony while the former were treated as uninitiated. They were greatly interested in the details of the Kitkatla rites, which were exceedingly strict and included the eating of a corpse. At the conclusion, the envoys received their share of the small presents which were distributed.

At this juncture one of the envoys, Xemxemálula, fell seriously ill and was cured only through the attention and care of one of Tsuhse's wives. This delayed their departure so that it was a long time before they and the invited guests finally set out, much to the envy of two Bella Coola slaves who greatly desired to return home.

Meanwhile the long absence of the messengers had filled the Bella Coola with fear that they had been massacred, and there was great rejoicing when a large flotilla was seen approaching. The guests landed on the shore at Xemqo'ts where the customary ceremonious greetings were exchanged. Many of the Bella Coola, inflamed by ancient wrongs, endeavoured to break the canoes of the guests and in other ways to threaten them, but Putlu finally succeeded in restraining them and establishing some kind of discipline. The ceremony that took place that night in the house of Putlu is said to have been the most spectacular ever witnessed in Bella Coola. One old man who, as a mere lad, had attended, grew eloquent as he spoke of the lavish display. Unfortunately, he had had no part in the rites and could remember none of the details except that his childish mind was amazed at a dance in which a masked performer, representing a whale, vomited grease on the fire to give light. Tsuhse did not return home immediately, but remained in Bella Coola until spring when the weather was more suitable for travelling.

B
T
648
921

This exchange of hospitality virtually ended all hostility, although the Bella Coola and other tribes of the central coast still regard their northern neighbours with dislike and suspicion. Between 1880 and 1890 a party of Rivers Inlet people went to Kitlope to prepare oolachon grease, for which purpose a number of Kitkatla had also camped there. Among them was Tsuhse, a descendant of the warrior chief whose exploits have been recounted, and his nephew. One day the latter was gambling with Ménse-a, a Rivers Inlet youth who had recently been initiated into the kusiut society and was consequently decorated with a cedar-bark collar. Ménse-a's luck was amazing and some of the Kitkatla's friends asked him why he continued to play with a man who was clearly in such close contact with the supernatural that he could not lose. Heedless of this advice, Tsuhse's nephew continued until finally, losing his temper, he

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B
T 648
721

seized his adversary's decorations and threw them on the ground. It is well known that anyone who does so, even if it be the wearer, will be punished. Mutaw-a was prevented from fighting by his recent initiation, but he shamed his opponent by returning his winnings. The next day the Rivers Inlet people left for home without stopping to collect grease, since Mutaw-a's father, Pasha,[8] thought that it would be dangerous to linger in the neighbourhood of Trahoa, who was angry at his nephew's defeat and the insult shown to him.

The Kitkatla remained at Kitlobe for the olachen season and then returned home. Soon afterwards Trahoa's nephew fell ill, and died in spite of the efforts of the most powerful shamans. They attributed his death to Mutaw-a, and Trahoa swore revenge on the Rivers Inlet people. The latter, hearing of this, avoided the Kitkatla as much as possible, although the establishment of British rule had made open warfare impossible.

One July, a number of years later, a party left Rivers Inlet to hunt sea-lions on Virgin Rocks. The captain of the canoe was a Newitte man who had married a Rivers Inlet woman, and with him were nine Bella Coola and several Rivers Inlet people including two female relatives of Mutaw-a. In a heavy fog they passed their destination, and when, having realized their mistake, they turned back, they found a party of Kitkatla encamped on the rocks. The northerners made protestations of friendship and lent them tents. When they had settled down, the Kitkatla suggested target shooting as a recreation, although their real motive was to exhaust the ammunition of the Rivers Inlet people. When this sport began to pall, the two parties gambled till nightfall, when they stacked their muskets together as proof of mutual trust and went to bed. A Kitkatla half-breed, who had taken the lead in making amicable overtures, now learnt that his companions planned to slay the Rivers Inlet people; he tried to dissuade them, but was told that interference from him would only cause his own death. One of the Rivers Inlet men, Ts'ekiis, suspicious of treachery, declined to sleep with his fellows and spent the night in the canoe, his musket and two shells beside him. His fears were well-founded; at dawn the Kitkatla cut down the tents of the Rivers Inlet people and clubbed them to death with axes as they were struggling under the folds. Ts'ekiis was wakened by the turmoil and fired twice, each time killing a Kitkatla, but his ammunition was then exhausted and he was shot down. The murderers dug a large hole on the beach, threw in the corpses of their victims and rolled a heavy log over the top. Unknown to the others, the half-breed wrote on this in English that something lay below. The Kitkatla made an effort to hide the [8] The relatives of the Bella Coola chief with the same name.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B
T 648
721

marks of the tragedy and then returned home, hoping that suspicion would not fall on them.

As time went on, the people in Rivers Inlet began to worry at lack of news from the hunters. A passing traveller reported having seen smoke on Virgin Rocks, and this reassured them temporarily, but when several months had passed a search-party was sent out. One of the crew was a Carrier who had married a Rivers Inlet woman and had long resided there, but had not forgotten his knowledge of all that pertained to woodcraft. On arrival at the island, they found the canoe of the missing party drawn up on the beach above high tide, although there was no trace of their friends. The Carrier went ahead to investigate, warning his comrades to remain at a distance. He found the marks of buck-shot, smoothed over as if to obliterate them, but not sufficiently effaced to hide them from his sharp eyes. This attempt at concealment indicated foul play, and the Carrier called his companions and pointed out the signs to them. None of the sea-lion hunters had carried ammunition of this kind, but it was known that some Kitkatla had been in the vicinity about the time of the disappearance and were armed therewith. As a matter of fact, the marks were actually those of the shot with which Qa'ăklis had been killed. The Carrier next found potato peelings, trodden into the earth by boots; none of the hunters had taken foot-wear with them, but it was known that such had been worn by the Kitkatla. Having made these discoveries, the search-party returned home. Foul play was suspected; everything indicated that it had not been a struggle between members of the same party, but there was too little evidence to convict the Kitkatla.

A few weeks later a Bella Bella chief happened to be in Rivers Inlet and told the people that he had met a Kitkatla canoe returning northwards with two coffins. He had asked who were dead, but though they told him, he judged that the party had been engaged in some illegal operation from their reticence concerning the cause of death. Still later, a young Bella Coola travelled to Vancouver on the steamboat with a Kitkatla who told him of the slaughter, ignorant of his confidant's tribe. Finally, the Kitkatla half-breed, who had opposed the killing, began to drop hints of what had happened. In former times this would have led to war, but the evidence was not conclusive enough for a court of justice. The Kitkatla informed their Indian Agent that they feared an attack from the Rivers Inlet and Bella Coola, and asked him to lead a peace delegation to the former's village. He did so,[19] much to the surprise of the missionary established there. The conference led to nothing; the Kitkatla denied all knowledge of the fate of the missing hunters, but the suspicions of the Rivers Inlet and Bella Coola were increased rather than [19]No attempt was made to verify this statement from official documents.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15
Kwakiutl NE10

B T 648 721

lessened. This ill-will has continued up to the present time. In 1920 word reached Bella Coola that Trihus had approached a Quatsino chief and asked him to spread the rumour that the missing party had been drowned at sea, at the same time admitting what had taken place. A year later a half-breed Kwatcino, hunting on Virgin Rocks, happened to unearth the bones buried beneath the log. There the matter rests for the moment as far as the Bella Coola are concerned, but they express the opinion that the continued ill-will may cause bloodshed at any time.

It must be remembered that the above account of this recent friction with the Kitkatla is of a partisan nature. No attempt was made to learn the Kitkatla side of the matter, so that the version here given may or may not be the truth. It has been inserted as an illustration of Bella Coola attitude, and of the manner in which, formerly, doubts, fears and suspicions led to war. This would certainly have been the case in the present instance but for the restraining influence of the white man's rule.

KWAKIUTL WAR

B K 648 721 K [622]

Only slightly less feared than the Kitkatla were the Kwakiutl-speaking peoples, especially those inhabiting Knight's Inlet, Kingcome Inlet, and Blunder Harbour, who were known collectively as Djelátsnx. As Trihus was feared among the northern raiders, so was Siwid among the southerners. Bella Coola itself was too difficult of access and too densely populated to be successfully attacked, but Tálio was subject to constant raids. Even more disconcerting was the constant danger of lurking foemen; one year it would be a hunter who was surprised and killed, the next a party of women would be carried off while picking berries.

B [712]

The raiders became so bold that the inhabitants of one of the Tálio villages decided to defend themselves by building a stockade. Everyone assisted in the task, so that the fortification was soon completed. It consisted of a fence of vertical logs with a platform running around near the top, on the inner side, on which the defenders could stand, and a water-gate through which canoes could enter at high tide. It surrounded five or six houses and was planned as a place of refuge for all the Tálio villages. One of the tree-trunks brought for the stockade was hollow, and there was considerable discussion as to whether it should be used, but finally it was set up with the others. A Kwakiutl who was visiting Tálio at the time took notice of this weakness, but no one seems to have suspected that he would inform his friends of it when he went home.

B K [726]

The summer after the stockade had been completed the Kwakiutl discussed the usual raid on Tálio; one of the principal chiefs opposed an expedition on the ground of the reputed strength of the defence, but

[a famous Tsimshian chief - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Kwakiutl NE10

he was over-ruled by the popular wish and the raiders set out. They had chosen an opportune time, since most of the people were absent hunting and fishing; in fact, three men and three children were the sole occupants of the fortified village. They saw the approaching marauders in the distance, closed all openings, and prepared to defend themselves. The Kwakiutl felled a large tree and with this as ram attempted to batter down the gate. It was too strongly built, and while struggling with it, the attackers offered excellent targets to those within. One of them, Snung, was a good shot and took heavy toll. Convinced that the gate was too strong for them, the Kwakiutl turned their attention to the hollow log; their ram failed to shatter it and they again suffered heavy casualties. Nor had the defenders escaped scatheless. One of the three was struck by an enemy bullet, another fell from the fighting-platform and accidentally shot himself, while Snung's powder began to fail. Fearing that all was lost, he told one of the little boys to open a concealed rear door* and flee into the woods with the two smaller children. The three managed to escape unobserved from the village and hid themselves under leaves. The Kwakiutl did not know how weakly the stockade was defended, and Snung disguised the fact by rushing from one part of the platform to another and calling out in various tones as if a number of people were speaking. He could fire only occasionally on account of shortage of powder, but the ruse was effective and at last the raiders withdrew, carrying their dead with them. Two of them wandered into the forest instead of accompanying their comrades; they must have died of starvation, since their corpses were found in an emaciated condition several weeks later.

B K 648 726 [721]

Not content with defeating the raiders almost single-handed, Snung embarked in a small canoe and cautiously followed the course which he knew they must have taken. His children had been slain by the Kwakiutl during a previous raid, a circumstance which had so embittered him that he regretted the escape of a single one of them, and was determined to treat even their dead with ignominy. At length he noticed a number of crows congregated on a sandy beach, and rightly judged that this indicated the spot where the vanquished had buried their slain. Snung exhumed one of the corpses and impaled it on a stake in a crouching position.

B K 648 727

Meanwhile the relatives of the raiders, expecting the usual easy success, had gathered near their leader's house. They were filled with apprehension when they heard a mourning song from the returning canoes, and anxiously called out to learn the fate of different members

K 727

*Probably a mere chink in the stockade.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Kwakiutl NE10

K 727

of the expedition. Some were able to answer for themselves, but to many queries the reply came that the one asked about had been slain.

B K 721 648

This defeat did not by any means discourage the Kwakiutl, whose forays continued as before. On one occasion, as they were returning homewards, they noticed several canoes drawn up on the west side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its junction with Burke Channel. The raiders cautiously landed and stalked the unsuspecting owners, Bella Coola who had landed to cut stakes for a salmon-weir. The Kwakiutl bore down upon them with a rush; unarmed and taken unaware, the Bella Coola could make no real resistance. One of them managed to flee into the deeper woods, but the rest were either killed or captured. Among the prisoners was a chief, Sud'lexam, who was wearing a handsome marten-skin cloak at the time. His captor promptly appropriated this, leaving the man naked.

K B 648 727

Elated at this success, the Kwakiutl continued their return journey. When near Kwatna, they encountered a fierce southeast gale which made progress impossible; at this point cliffs rise so precipitously on either side of Burke Channel that there is not even the semblance of a harbour, and the only chance to weather the storm was by anchoring. There was considerable anxiety as to whether or not the weight would hold, but it did so, and the canoe remained tied, now carried to the full extent of the mooring-rope almost against the cliffs, now to the same distance far out in mid-channel. Towards night it began to rain and the cold grew bitter. The crew, assured that the anchor would hold and weary from their exertions, went to sleep, as did most of the prisoners. Sud'lexam, without covering of any kind, was too uncomfortable to follow their example. As the canoe was towed near the cliff, he happened to notice a narrow ledge just above water, with a small cedar growing in a nearby cleft. Here was a possibility of escape and the chief became alert at once. When next the canoe was dashed near he examined the cliff more closely, and decided that it might be possible to scale it. At any rate death was better than captivity, and he determined to make the venture. As the craft came shorewards again, he plunged overboard into the rough water and succeeded in grasping the tree-root with the aid of which it was an easy matter to pull himself to the ledge. The surf was breaking over it and he was bitterly cold, but he managed to reach another root and to scramble up to a second ledge. From it he gained a wider projection where he could rest in comfort. His escape had been unobserved, and as Sud'lexam looked downward he could see the canoe towing to and fro at the end of the cable; there was a large boulder near him, and he thought of tipping this over to sink the craft, but refrained out of consideration for the prisoners. From this point the climb upwards was comparatively simple,

B 727

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Kwakiutl NE10

B 727

and Sank'lusam soon discovered a protected hollow where, having covered himself with leaves and rotten wood, he went to sleep. When he awoke in the morning the war-party had moved away.

Without clothing to protect him from thorny bushes, Sank'lusam could not pass through the forest, so he climbed above the tree-line and made his way to the west side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from the place where he had been captured. With much difficulty and many scratches, he made his way down to sea-level and paddled across the fiord on a log. Then he climbed up once more, and crossed the mountains to Bella Coola above the tree limit. The one survivor of the attack had taken the same route when bearing the evil tidings. Women were wailing and weeping when a naked man was seen coming down the mountain-side; it was Sank'lusam. They welcomed him as one returned from the dead; in earlier years he had boasted that, if ever captured, he would escape, and it was recognized that he had made good his promise.

B K 48 726

The defeat at Tâl'ie rankled in the mind of Siwid, who made another attack on the stockade a few years later. This time it was fully manned and the assailants suffered even more severely than before. As they advanced with a ram, one of the defenders fired a powerful charge and the bullet passed through the bodies of several of the raiders. This so discouraged them that they dragged away the bodies of the slain and departed, having killed only two Tâl'ie men. As they were going homewards, they chanced to pass beneath a precipitous mountain on which two young Bella Coola were hunting. The latter fired on them at long range and were fortunate enough to register several hits.

After this second failure, Siwid decided to make Bella Coola itself his next objective. With this aim in view, a party of Kwakiutl raiders set out one year. As is customary, they hid during the daytime when in hostile territory, and happened to be in a small harbour below Green Bay when a party of Kimsquit, en route to Bella Coola, landed there for water. As one of them, the uncle of a man of fifty in 1923, was drinking at a stream he was fired upon, whereat he hastily concealed himself. A skirmish ensued in which the same man was wounded in the arm. By this time he was some distance from the sea, and he tried to crawl back over the crest of a low ridge to regain the shore. Suddenly he felt a sharp pain in the back and thought he had been hit once more; he continued his flight till he found that his bark-cape had become ignited, and was the cause of the second discomfort. He threw it off and contrived to escape. Another Kimsquit man was wounded in the back but hid himself within a hollow tree.

After this trifling success, the marauders decided to return home. Early the next morning, when paddling down Burke Channel to the east

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Kwakiutl NE10

B K 648 726

of Kwatna, a woman called down to them from the upper slopes of the mountains on the south-east. She was one of a party of Kwatna people who were picking berries; their canoes were lying in a bay beneath, where the youths of the party were resting and sleeping, ready to climb up and carry down the boxes of berries as the women filled them. Bilxwalakt, the woman who had called out, had done so under the impression that those passing were Bella Coola, and though one of her companions recognized her error and bade her be silent, the intimation had been given. The raiders would have passed in mid-channel unaware that anyone was in the vicinity, but now they quickly entered the bay and slew the few lads who were with the canoes. Next they endeavoured to capture the women and started climbing up for the purpose, but as soon as they entered the woods, they lost sight of the fugitives who were on the open slopes above. One of the canoes was paddled back to mid-channel, whence there was a clear view so that the crew could call out and direct their comrades' pursuit. Two of the women had started climbing as soon as they saw the warriors turn inwards; they escaped over the mountains and reached Kwatna with word of the affray. With one exception, the others kept together and sought refuge in a narrow cave, the entrance of which they were able to defend; the attackers did not dare linger for a siege, so they too escaped. But Bilxwalakt, the cause of the whole disaster, was cut off from her companions and harried from place to place as she strove frantically to get away. When finally brought to bay, she struggled furious and refused to be taken alive, so her throat was cut and the body decapitated. She was a member of a chief's family, a woman who had been confirmed on a good seat, so the murder was entirely contrary to all coastal customs. If she had been taken prisoner, she would have been ransomed and the matter would have ended, but her death demanded revenge.

B K [727] [721]

When the two women who had fled overland reached Kwatna, a party of warriors set out immediately, but could do no more than bring back the women who had hidden in the cave. Meanwhile the Kwakiutl continued their voyage and encamped at Jacobson's Bay where they watched a Bella Bella canoe pass up the channel towards Bella Coola. They concluded that the Kimsquit people, whose canoes they had destroyed, would hail this passing craft and thus reach Bella Coola with news of raiders in the vicinity. So it transpired, while almost simultaneously came news from Kwatna of the woman's murder, but by this time the Kwakiutl had reached home waters.

B 721

Bilxwalakt's parents had been Kwatna people, her husband was a Bella Bella, and she had Bella Coola ancestry as well, so the members of these three tribes were all affronted by this killing of a chief. At Bella

Cuelo the important men of land, Tumuli, and Rigsbal are at Bonga-o and discussed the recent events. Pulu was the leading Bulu Cuelo chief at the time, but he showed no sound the meeting at which all the others were present, though he sent a man to search a storehouse owned by the murdered woman on the south side of the mouth of Bulu Cuelo River, near the Sunan Hudson's Bay Company's post. Rimunda had a large amount of ammunition stored within, and this was brought to the house of Pulu. Next morning, the chief himself appeared, but he was armed with adze and he ran out to a cap-house with a sword-dirk. This is done by anyone who has killed a man, and it was a clear intimation that Pulu had decided on war. He stood himself in the doorway of his house, a cocked musket in either hand, and intimated that he would shoot anyone who passed on the sidewalk before him. For four days he sat there, neither speaking nor eating. He was mamali, so no one disturbed his widow and the minor sons of his own house and the other tribes for agreed during that period. No other man is known of such an action, but Pulu could do so for that, and he manifested his grief and determination in this quaintly-tragic manner. On the fifth day, he ordered drums to be beaten, and the inhabitants of the adjacent villages gathered. Pulu waited no words:

"Rimunda has been murdered," he said. "He was a chief and my relative.* I am going to war. We shall use his own powder and shot."

The ammunition was distributed and the Bulu Cuelo prepared for the expedition.

Owing to the prestige of Pulu, volunteers came streaming in, not only from Bulu Cuelo itself, but from Kimapu and Tiri-o as well. No one was thoroughly acquainted with the geography of the Kaduni country except a Bora native, like the Kaduni native that, Sawa though not, however, offered to him. This man had lived among the Bulu Cuelo for so long that he was thought reliable, he readily agreed to act as guide, only asking that he old mother be spared, a request which was granted.

After the usual delays, the expedition set out and spent the first night at Kawana. Next morning, Kaduni, one of the leading warriors, had his hair into a cap-house and smeared his face with adze. He was a man whose bravery had been freely established by the distribution of valuable presents. To show his valour, he stood up on the bench within our modest range and called out:

"Throw fire at my cap-house. If you fire it and make it fall, we will we lay low our foes."

---

* It is doubtful whether she was a kinswoman, but Pulu used the term figuratively in speaking of one who, like himself, was a person of importance.

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA EXPEDITION

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]
Kansas City
Bellevue, NE

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

D.Mc.Kwakiutl Q-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NES
Kwakiutl NE10
Bellabella NES
B
Bb
K L48
726

[illegible]

[illegible] Bb L48 726 323

[illegible] B K L48 726 [726.3]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Carrier NE7

WAR WITH THE CARRIER

B
C 648
721

The only other people with whom the Bella Coola came into frequent conflict were the Carriers. Some of the latter used to spend the winter among the coastal tribes, and had even intermarried with them to a considerable extent, but their mode of life was so different that they were always viewed as foreign in thought and outlook. The Bella Coola despised them for their dirtiness, their fondness for unsavoury food, and, above all, for their ignorance of decent and sound morals. This disrespect was mutual and not infrequently led to bloodshed. Owing to the location of the Carriers, they could not be reached by canoes, and the Bella Coola had no liking for long overland journeys. The mobility and relative lack of permanent villages made it difficult to bring the Carriers to bay, so that warfare between them and the Bella Coola usually took the form of a killing followed by a raid for revenge; continued hostility was virtually unknown. The people of the lower villages were scarcely affected, but in former times there seems to have been a considerable amount of intermittent fighting between the inhabitants of the upper valley and the Carriers living east of them.

B
[184]
B [484]

B
C 648
721

The following account, claimed to be historical, describes what was said to be a typical raid, followed by a counter-attack.

On one occasion all the young people of Ismi, Pielsli, Kimsquit, and Dzaxhi went on a picnic to a large, clear area of ground up the valley, where they spent their time, playing and singing. Towards nightfall one young man, who had not come with the others, from time continually until they could call a girl who was a friend of one of the men. She slipped off quietly from her companions and passed the night with her lover and his comrade in the woods. Towards dawn a party of marauding Carrier Indians swooped down on the sleeping picnickers who, unarmed and unprepared, could make no resistance. With the exception of two pretty girls carried off as slaves, all were slain. The three who had been in the woods hurried back to the villages with the news.

The men of the four towns prepared for action. They went to the picnic ground and brought back the corpses for burial, then hastening for

Z:Mc Llewellyn E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellecorsia NEA
Carrier NET

B
C L48
T2L

the first time that two girls were missing. Then they set forth on the track of the Carriers. The natives, knowing that their scouts could not have been heard in any village, and unaware of the three young people hidden in the woods, took no precautions. The first night the pursuers reached the camp where the Carriers had built a long, narrow fire of some kind of wood which emitted no sparks, on either side of which they had placed a long resinous log on which to rest their feet as they dried their moccasins at the fires. One of the Bella Coola girls was placed near one end of the fire, the other at the other end on the opposite side. Neither could sleep, but kept awaiting silently in the hope of being able to escape. Towards dawn one of them was surprised to see a Bella Coola scout passing around a resinous log. He motioned her to keep silent and she realized to show that she understood his signal, then he went away. He told his waiting companions how the Carriers were resting with their feet over logs beside the fire, and suggested that they prepare heavy clubs. Having done this, the Bella Coola crept up behind the dozing scouts. Each selected a victim and broke his leg, or legs, with a crack of the club. No one of the victims escaped, the cripples being killed without difficulty. In some manner the scouts was made the dupe of a scout camp.

B
C L48
T2.1

The following unusual incident is probably historically correct, in outline at least, since it is said to have taken place about 1880, and two of the participants were great-uncles of the man from whom the account was obtained.

One October a number of Carriers were among at Pendelt. There dwelt was a certain Qualtum who was recently married to the people of that village, though he had long since ceased to be regarded as anything but a Carrier. The river was running full and though there were many canoes and dug-outs in it, they were difficult to catch on account of the racing current. Pendelt was, Qualtum, but had to go downstream of fall for the river, but he had engaged with urged him to go for some fresh salmon and he ventured forth. Pendelt big enough to swim, he called out to help, but before it reached him, he still engaged and he was drowned. Qualtum was a popular man and there was great grief at his untimely death.

B

As was so often the case, jealousy was rife in Pendelt, where a certain Pendelt had become wealthy. He was a good organizer, and he rather had been amassed as rewards for making horse masks, but of course such payments had been made in secret and many people wondered how he had acquired his fortune. This was enough to cause a certain amount of suspicion, and a rival determined to take advantage of it. This man approached Qualtum and said that he believed Pendelt was responsible

[E5L
T6.1]

2: McGrewith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacosta NEB
Carter NE9

B
C 648
721
B [552]
[75]

for Quinnelief's death, that he was sure the wealthy man was really a woman, and had said some evil words to cause the fisherman's drowning. Grandison was directly related to the dead man and, thus incited, determined to kill Nandi in revenge. This evening, as he was lying playing with his grandchild, the Carter chief entered his house and fired a musket against the unsuspecting man's chest. Nandi quickly touched down the muzzle so that the bullet, instead of killing him, merely passed through the fleshy part of his lips. Grandison made no attempt to run away. In such cases it rests with the relatives of the injured man whether to run to take revenge, and they usually avoid beginning a vendetta unless actually driven to it. Some of the mouth spread from the villas, and two of Nandi's relatives, Tu-kaat and Ngambing, came up to investigate. They were both men of considerable influence in the community, both validated warriors who had taken prominent parts in the unsuccessful attack on Kilbride a few years before. Realizing that their uncle was not seriously wounded, the two brothers carried him to their canoe, intending to take him home and to disregard the assault.

During the time, the evil Nangbin men had been working on Grandison's fears by telling him that Nandi was certain to kill him by magical means, until he decided that he could escape only by murdering the wounded man. His followers heard of this and tried to dissuade him, fearing the presence of the two famous warriors. As their canoe was going downstream, it was caught in an eddy and upset so that one musket and both cartridge boxes were lost. This seemed to Grandison the chance for which he had been waiting. He fired from the bank and Nandi fell dead, much to the consternation of his two followers as well as the Nangbin people.

B
C 648
721

If Tu-kaat and Ngambing had been ordinary men they would probably have fled downstream for, being fully validated men of valour, the matter never occurred to them.[1] Ngambing, who had one foot up left to his musket, consulted his brother as to their course of action.

'Nandi is dead,' his brother replied. 'It is probably time for us to do so as well. You had better shoot.'

Meanwhile Grandison had crouched on the bank, laughing at the two warriors. Ngambing ran back to his others, then fled, instantly killing his uncle's murderer. The Carter began to run to and fro on the shore, whence they could hear the two brothers calling to each other.

'Let us not think of escaping,' said one. 'We have displeased our chieftain's sister. If we are to die, let us die.'

B
[705]

[1] The man from whom this account was obtained mentioned as a matter of course that undamaged muzzle could never be easy, that questioned further, he confirmed that the public validation of bravery made it utterly impossible for him to do the little things.

Z:Mc'Dowell B-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellevue NEB
Carter NET

The other squad, as they paddled in and landed at the bottom of the village, heedless of the fact that it was full of Carters. The Warduc people seem to have remained passive, but the angry Carters came rushing forth and Ipwichway spoke proudly to them:

"You would be dead as your chief if we had not lost our weapon."

The two brothers walked slowly up the long sidewalk of the village, while the Carters skulked around, screaming threats, cursing women and shooting arrows. Some of the latter stuck in their backs, but long previously both Tetmat and Ipwichway had worn part of a corset which had rendered their bodies impervious to such wounds. Arrived at the upper end of the village, they stopped and waited, making no attempt to defend themselves, until they were killed. In intervals throughout the day the Carters vented the two bodies with spontaneous, now thrusting spears into them, now hanging them, and all the time not a single Bulla Coola dared pass to possess, as much were they filled with fear of the Carters who, when roused as they then were, fight like mad dogs. In the late afternoon one of the women found a hole into the eye of the fallen warrior. Even the mad did not cause the Warduc people themselves, but Wimu, one of their shamans, was called upon to take action. Being captured, he had been a person of importance in his own tribe and the Bulla Coola had allowed him to become a leading member of the Barter society. In the course of time he had become entirely reconciled to his lot, and was thought to a Bulla Coola which gave him the necessary assurance to address the Carters.

"Ha, ha," he said. "Are the brandy of the sky? I have never seen, nor have I even heard of such a thing as you have done today. Truly you have signal your lot as all that is sacred and powerful."

This speech for the first time brought the contents of their offence home to the Carters. The usual taking of life did not affright them, but to that extremes that had overlooked what was to Wimu the most obvious sin. They had passed and repassed on the sidewalk scarcely a hour when a Barter dance was taking place. This consisted of the danger to which they had exposed themselves, the Carters withdrew.

Now the Warduc people found the two corpses. Grandfather had been a mighty chief and, being dreadfully afraid, they would scarcely have given him an elaborate funeral, but now they saw in it hand and contents of his promise. A man who caused a powerful medicine pass even of it in the eyes of the men who had been overheard by the Carters, as the bodies began to decompose, those who had killed them began to suffer from sore troubles, and the women became tired. Believing that they the had caused this misfortune, the Carters fled home.

This all occurring in the year in the length of the universe series and in the highwater that it will fall in could keep the Carters hidden a month for.

This account was obtained from a descendant of Tsi'kmai and Qaqilkuay who emphatically vouched for its accuracy. Some of the incidents have doubtless been exaggerated, but there is probably a basis of truth, though the passivity of the Nuxalk people is difficult to explain. The killing is said to have taken place about seventy years before 1911, so tolerably accurate traditions of it are not impossible. No punishment was meted out to the Nuxalk ballast since the ritual error, the passing of unrelated outsiders through the house where a ceremony was taking place, was committed by strangers, not by inhabitants of the town itself.

A WAR BETWEEN THE PEOPLE OF BELLA COOLA AND RIVERS INLET

The tribes of the central coast, Bella Coola, Bella Bella, and Rivers Inlet, were frequently engaged with enemies to north or south, but there was seldom any bloodshed between one another. The following account, however, describes a conflict between the Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people in which the Bella Coola were not involved.

The invasion body of the Rivers Inlet people was always whose which have become self-sufficient, or wild savages, never without guests. Their neighbours, the Bella Bella, consider both these articles of dire to be disgusting, although they are fond of raw mussels which the Rivers Inlet people regard as filthy. As lately described, it was not necessary to gathering of the tribes of a minor town for the hosts to build up their guests to entertain. On one occasion the Bella Bella did so with reference to tribes they considered a objectionable food of their guests. A medial dancer, representing strangers, entered the house and the host enquired whence he came.

"Are you from Fort Rupert?" he asks.

"No."

"From Bella Bella?"

"No."

The dancer proceed to the south to do indicate the next question.

"Are you from Rivers Inlet?"

"Yes."

"What do you see there?"

Instead of answering verbally, the dancer drew from beneath his cape

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola
KwaKiutl NE10
Bellabella NE5

K
Bb
721
648

a piece of dry and dirty salmon, and a few dried-up berries. The Bella Bella laughed uproariously at the exposure of their guests' dirt.

The Rivers Inlet people, deeply insulted, said nothing at the time, but determined to repay the insult. When next they invited the Bella Bella to a potlatch, a similar performance was carried out with a masked dancer. When asked what he ate at Bella Bella, he drew forth some raw mussels and a bone crow, a bird which feeds largely on such shell-fish.

Insult was repaid with insult, and every year the abuse became more and more pointed, till the climax was reached at Rivers Inlet. A masked dancer appeared, disguised as a thin man who coughed persistently in a distressing, though amusing manner. After the usual questions, he said that he came from Bella Bella, and when asked his name, replied with that of a distinguished Bella Bella chief. The man was dying of consumption and had, therefore, been unable to attend the potlatch. This insult so angered the Bella Bella guests that they left immediately.

On returning home, a council was held and immediate war-like action was determined upon. In their extreme anger, they even decided to disregard the anti-cannibal ground to potlatch guests, and to take their enemies by surprise. Envoys were sent to invite the Rivers Inlet men to a ceremony of this kind and, hard on their heels, a war-party set out to ambush their guests. The Rivers Inlet people accepted the invitation although one man suspected treachery from the demeanour of the envoys, this was considered impossible, as he was laughed to scorn and the party set out. The Bella Bella had expected that their guests would camp for the night at Qmqmai or Schooner Pass, and it was here that they had concealed themselves. Suspecting no danger, the Rivers Inlet people landed and were pitching camp when their ambushers burst from cover and attacked. Taken unawares, they could offer no real resistance and only two or three escaped death. The spot has since been known as Slaughter Cove. The man who had suspected attack had refused to leave his canoe and so escaped the first onslaught, but he foolishly attracted attention by calling out:

"You are dogs to break a sacred law and attack those whom you have invited to a potlatch."

He was in his canoe at the time, and paddled away, dashing towards safety. Three craft were sent after him, he was overtaken and killed.

K
Bb
726
648
[554]

The above account seems to include mythical elements, and it is probable that the cause stated for the attack is of that nature. It was emphasized, however, that the actual fight took place as here set out, and was one of the last serious struggles on the coast.

K
Bb
[721]

CHAPTER IV

GAMES

517 19.1 [177] THE subject of games, lying on the border-line of social customs, was one which was not fully investigated. The Bella Coola, like all other peoples, have a number of sports and pastimes and although the old diversions are being forgotten by the younger people, many of the old men and women are familiar with those played in their youth. As isolated customs these may be of small value, but games of all kinds often preserve ancient practices and, as providing useful clues to the spread of peoples or of culture, are worthy of investigation. Unfortunately, lack of time made it impossible to give the subject the attention it deserved, and the few games here described must not be considered as exhaustive treatment of the subject.

526 [177] [628] Though less fond of competitive sports than the Indians of the Plains, the Bella Coola enjoy canoe-racing and wrestling. The former appears to have been an ancient diversion; picked crews from different villages competed amid the encouraging shouts of their fellows, and even now the younger men are anxious to display their skill in this respect. Wrestling, which used to be common during all non-social gatherings, has almost entirely disappeared since the prohibition of the potlatch.

538 [517] [125] The favourite sedentary pastime, enjoyed equally by young and old, is the telling of stories. Those of a sacred nature, especially ancestral myths, are reserved of course for ceremonial occasions, but the older men and women remember many tales describing the exploits of birds and animals which are recounted again and again to the enjoyment of the listeners, although they may have heard the same social story times. Children enjoy the companionship of some old story-teller and it is a common sight to see an old man or woman, surrounded by an eager group, explaining once more how Raven converted his cloak or was himself led into difficulties. Many of these stories are somewhat indecent; others appear brutally frank,

[967]

J. McDougall E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

but the Bella Coola do not consider this aspect and the children grow up in an atmosphere entirely lacking in restraint of speech. Some stories teach a moral lesson, but they are recounted merely for entertainment. At the present time, no one knows who invented the stories; they have been handed down from dim antiquity and alterations or embellishments are considered improper, while the composition of new tales appears to be unknown.

Another pastime is smoking. Among some Indian tribes the practice has a definite religious significance, but this appears to be lacking among the Bella Coola. Most of the men enjoy either a pipe or cigarettes, and some of the women also indulge, but few carry the habit to excess. All the older people affirmed that their ancestors had smoked for generations. Tobacco was not grown, but kinnikinnick, mila', was used, and also a plant known as lasi'. Another smoking mixture was bark of lowanik, roasted before a fire until dried and brown, and then crumbled between the hands. These materials have given place entirely to imported tobacco, and the white man's pipe has replaced the native one. The latter consisted of a gooseberry cane from which the pith had been removed; sometimes a small bowl of elderberry wood was added, but often the mixture to be smoked was simply placed within the end of the hollow cane.

Adults, especially the men, are addicted to gambling. They are fond of placing stakes on a race or other trial of strength, and enjoy all kinds of games of chance. Some of the younger men have mastered a few of the simpler games of cards on which they spend a certain amount of time and money. The favorite gambling game, however, is one found in all parts of the coast, which is played with a pack of fifty-four smoothed cottonwood sticks. The rules are complicated and so often we made to learn more than the general principles. The pieces are divided among the eight or ten contestants and concealed; then one player guesses in whose hand a certain marked stick is hidden. If he is successful, the others pay him a forfeit; if 525 he is wrong, he pays them. It is said that in former times each stick used to be painted with a special device, and that each had its own name; even now they are beautifully made and highly polished by much passing from hand to hand. The Carriers

[71] play the same game but use beaver teeth instead of sticks. Formerly it was not uncommon for a man to bet his goods, his wives and children, and even himself at this game. If he lost, [72] the persons so wagered became slaves of the victor unless redeemed by their friends. Women, too, gambled freely; in [273] fact, neophytes recently admitted into the Tsetsat society were the only ones to whom this pastime was forbidden.

524 Of actual games, the one most commonly played is Akua. As many as eight or ten contestants can take part, each providing himself with one, two, or three stones,[1] packed down to the proper shape. Each is about six inches in length, three inches wide, flat on one side, and oval on the other, and rounded at either end. Before the coming of the white man, when the Bella Coola habitually used stone, it is said that one of these could be made in a few minutes. A mark is set up, and the first player throws his missile in the air, endeavouring to make it come to rest as close as possible to the target. The game is usually played on an open space near the village, but even on comparatively smooth ground there is great chance of bouncing and the thrower must gauge this possibility as well as have correct direction and distance. The second player then throws his stone, trying to land it nearer the target, or to knock away his rival's. In so doing, the latter, lying on the ground, is often broken, which puts its owner out of the game for the time being. When all have thrown, the one who has come nearest the mark is the winner. Sometimes each contestant throws two or more stones, and sometimes when we [274] choose. Large numbers of broken gaming stones can be found near every old village site, confirming the statements of the older men and women concerning the universality of the sport in former times. Ukuta might almost be called the Bella Coola national game, although it is now (1923) seldom played.

[1] Likewise called Akua, a game and either is the derived from that of a bagger, or that the latter is derived from it.

A game with somewhat similar rules is ugubuzi, played with small wooden spears tipped with bone. When a number of men or boys decide to play, they choose two captains who in turn select their teams; any number can take part, provided that the sides are equal, but five each is usual. There is a special name for each player according to his position, and he bets against the corresponding member of the other team. A mark is set up, and one of the captains throws his spear, so that it will stick upright in the ground as near the target as possible. The rival leader endeavours to beat this, and if he fails, his second man throws, and each in succession until one comes closer to the goal than the rival captain. Then the latter's number two tries to beat the last thrower, followed by those on his own side until one succeeds in all of them throwing. The game thus ends when all of one side have thrown unsuccessfully. The winning side is, of course, the one to which belongs the player whose throw is nearest the target. Each member of the losing team pays his wager to his adversary and a second round is begun.

The game is now rarely indulged in, but in former times games used to continue all day, and valuables were lost in the gambling which was considered to be a necessary part of it. Men used to observe ceremonial chastity to increase their chances of success and the game was regarded with admiration by younger lads. The youth men of a village often used to visit other towns to compete against their representatives, and the games were contested amid frenzied excitement on the part of the supporters. This occasionally led to serious fighting.

Another game of a similar type is ordeku, a mark is set up and each competitor tries to hedge his spear as close to it as possible. This game has now entirely lost favour, the young men preferring a type of football played without strict attention to rules, but with great energy.

Bella Coola children, too, have their games and recreations, many of them of an imitative nature. Little boys enjoy rolling

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

859 better than hunting birds and small animals with miniature bows and arrows, or snaring them in nooses of grass or string. Little girls make playhouses in which they cook wonderful meals of berries, with perhaps the addition of a wooden fish. On the whole, however, the children do not enter into play as boisterously as white boys and girls, nor do they seem to derive as much pleasure from it. In former times, when clothing was [152] scanty, small lads used to delight in picking nettles and beating [241] one another with the stinging branches; this must have caused considerable pain, but it was a point of honour not to cry out, and anyone, perhaps caught unaware, who showed discomfort, [522] was laughed at as a coward. Both boys and girls are fond of swinging, and even adult women sometimes find time to enjoy themselves by swaying to and fro at the end of a rope.

Young Bella Coola do not have as many toys as white children, and none of them is complex. Some girls have crude [576] wooden dolls, though elaborate figurines are reserved for use [231] in hactat dances. Perhaps the most cherished plaything is a small puppy or, in recent years, a kitten, though the unfortunate animal is handled and mauled without consideration. A good carpenter may make for his son a wooden top or a bullroarer, to the envy of his less fortunate friends. Both types of toys are said to be used in [575] Nacmiła and at some hactat dances the masked figures carry them to play with.

521 There is one game, ełłi, which the salmon are [125] said to delight to watch, and which is accordingly played by boys as soon as the first spring salmon have been disposed of with fitting rites. Each makes for himself, or is given by his father, a wooden spear with a projecting barb, fastened as shown in the accompanying sketch (see Fig. 1). A loop of branches is made and thrown into a pool of stagnant, or slow-moving water, on each side of which stands a rival group of competitors. At a signal, all throw their spears simultaneously, with the intention of passing them through the ring, so that the barb of each will

Fig. 1.
"Fish spear."

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

become entangled in the loop when drawn back by the cord attached to the butt. A tug-of-war now takes place, those of each party who have caught the ring endeavouring to pull it to their side of the water. At last one or other is successful, and brings ashore the prize, with the dangling spears of their adversaries. Sometimes a lad with a fine weapon determines to retain possession of it at all costs and is dragged through the pool to the amusement of all. 526

TOURNAMENTS

It is doubtful whether the subject of tournaments should be considered as belonging to mythology, warfare, or games, since it has aspects pertaining to each. Several of the older men affirmed that prior to the introduction of muskets, it was not uncommon for rival villages to stage fights according to definite rules, after full intimation of the attack had been given. This usually followed a period when angry comments had been made, but when the provocation was not sufficient for war. In such a case, the challenging town would notify its rival that on such a date an expedition consisting of, for example, twenty canoes would attack them with arrows. Such an announcement could not be disregarded; the inhabitants of the two settlements prepared for action and wagered the large number of valuables essential to all such competitions. 526 628 726 [525]

Many years ago, the Kitsaqut people challenged the xsiwy to a tournament of this kind. It was first necessary to choose the contestants. Twenty of the strongest men were selected, each to stand in the bow of a canoe and hold a mouse-skin to shield the paddlers behind. To test their endurance, each took his place and the canoes were paddled towards the shore while all the other inhabitants, lined up on the beach, showered arrows on them. On this first test, six of the twenty fell because the avalanche of projectiles and were accordingly considered too feeble. Their places were taken by six others who were tested the same way the following day, and the same procedure was repeated until the twenty strongest men in all Kitsaqut had been found. A certain Sisaqal was chosen as

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NE6

526 captain. Meanwhile the atáxy people had been carrying out 628 similar tests, so that the picked men of both settlements were 726 ready on the appointed day.

A canoe was sent forward to give final notice of the approaching flotilla so that the twenty canoes from each settlement came together, fully manned and armed. First ten canoes on each side came to blows, the captain of each craft singling out a hostile one and dealing with it alone. The crews threw stones over and around their own bow-man, trying to beat down the moose-skin held up by their rival, or sometimes endeavouring to throw missiles high up into the air on to the heads of their foes. Whenever a bow-man was knocked down, his crew was defenceless and subject to serious injury if they continued the fight. If, however, they abandoned the conflict, the winners made no effort to punish them further, nor did they join in an attack on any other canoe; that each craft had one adversary only was the rule in all tournaments. In this instance, the Kimsquit people were victorious, no less than eighteen of their canoes defeating the craft opposed to them. Sivaqwi returned home in triumph, singing his war-song, and was received with as much enthusiasm as if he had led a successful raid. Indeed the casualties, consisting chiefly of broken heads, were sometimes almost as serious as on a foray, but no revenge was ever claimed in case of death or wound. Instead of throwing stones by hand, it was sometimes agreed that they were to be cast by slings which made the tournament more dangerous. The warriors never left their canoes, so that hand-to-hand fighting was impossible.

It is probable that tournaments of this nature took place many years ago, although none of the men now living had ever participated in one, and many had never heard of this type of competition. Until relatively recent years, however, heavy moose-skins were held up as protections in the bows of canoes, and men were selected for the task of being pelted with stones in the manner just described.

899 One other type of game, string figures, was studied rather extensively. These are described in Appendix B.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

CHAPTER V

STORIES

Raven Stories—Animal Stories—Young Stories—Supernatural Stories—Catastrophic Stories — Historical Stories

IN addition to myths which have definite sociological importance, such as those which explain the procedure of dances and other rituals, there are many legends which can best be described as stories.[1] These do not belong either to individuals or to families, consequently they are more widely known than allegedly historical accounts which are the personal property of social groups. In the long winter evenings it is common to see an old man or woman surrounded by young boys and girls listening attentively to some tale. An outburst of laughter always accompanies a humorous incident, no matter how many times it may have been heard. The narration is a mere pastime, an amusement which seems never to pall either on recounter or listener. Occasionally, a person of philosophical disposition will claim that a moral is taught by every story, and it is true that many of them point out some well-known experience of life, such as "The Biter Bit"; this must unconsciously strike the hearers, but any intentional didacticism is quite foreign to Bella Coola thought.

As will be seen, these stories contain a large number of fantastic episodes. The Bella Coola recognize this to be the case without doubting their truth. They describe events which took place long, long ago, when man and supernatural beings were in closer contact than at present; when man was able to understand the speech and actions of the birds, the mammals, and the fish. The people of today do not expect to have similar experiences now but, according to their point of view, there is no reason why the incidents of the stories could not have happened in the distant past. Frequently, different versions of the same legend are told by different men; each is [1] Sûmûlem, a story or, more accurately, a piece of ancient lore.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[538] certain that his account is the only accurate one, and ridicules his rival, but as no social importance is attached to the tales, an error in narration is a matter of small moment. Probably there have been instances in which an individual possessing [556] much wealth has transformed a story into a family myth, but it was impossible to obtain a concrete illustration of this; it is thought that this may have been done in former years, though of course such would be absolutely contrary to custom.

Stories can be conveniently divided into two types:

[825] I. Those in which the principal character is a mammal or bird endowed with human intelligence.

II. Those in which the principal character is a human being.

[825] Many of the first type describe the adventures and mis-[776] adventures of Raven. It must be remembered that the Bella Coola regard these stories as accurate statements of fact, and base their characterizations of many supernatural beings on their actions as recorded therein.

Raven Stories

*534

HOW RAVEN BECAME BLACK

When Raven was being prepared for his descent to earth, Ālqwāsēm told Mānāālīnuā to make him the prettiest of all the birds. When finished, he was adorned with many colours and was very handsome. But the vain Raven looked at himself and was not satisfied. First he asked that one arm might be changed, and when this was done as he desired, he asked for an alteration in one of his legs; and so on with nearly every part of his body. Finally, Ālqwāsēm became angry, and told some of his assistants to throw ashes all over him. This made Raven a uniform black, in which guise he was sent down to earth.

RAVEN AND WATER OUZEL[2]

As he was able to assume any form, Raven, once upon a time, took that of a herald and went to the home of Water Ouzel, who, having spread a fine cedar-mat for his guest, proceeded to prepare a meal. He brought

[2] For another version of this story see Boas, p. 93.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

534*

in a box, filled it with water in which he washed one of his own legs very carefully; then threw away the water, refilled the box and put in it the leg he had just cleaned. With his beak he pecked a hole in his ankle from which there spurted out a small number of salmon eggs. The host tasted these and apparently found them satisfactory, for he pecked again at his ankle and there came forth a large quantity of roe. Water Ouzel boiled these with hot stones and gave them to Raven. After eating, the guest left for his home, taking with him, as is customary, the unconsumed portion of the food in his host's box, inviting Water Ouzel to call for it on the following day.

When Water Ouzel arrived at his house the next day, Raven spread for him a fine cedar-mat and began to make preparations for a meal. Taking the box in which yesterday's food had been served, he washed one of his legs in it. After changing the water, he pecked at his ankle and a few salmon eggs came out. He tasted these, then pecked once more, but only grease came from it. Raven, both angry and humiliated, took a stick and beat not only his ankle but his whole leg, until it was bruised, skinned, and very painful; still no roe came. In a quandary, he asked his guest to wait for a moment while he went outside, but instead of returning in a short time, as he had promised, he flew away and never came back.

Water Ouzel waited for a long time, then, losing patience, took his box and went home in disgust.

RAVEN AND WATER OUZEL

(Second Version)

Once upon a time Raven went to the home of Water Ouzel.

"I have come to pay a call," he said.

Water Ouzel politely asked him to sit down for a meal, which he at once proceeded to prepare. First he brought a small dish and placed it beside his ankle, which he struck with his hands four times. Out flowed enough salmon roe to fill the receptacle. Raven was intensely interested at this novel method of obtaining food, but at the same time was angry.

"That is not enough for me," he thought, but he said nothing.

When the food was cooked Water Ouzel gave it to his guest, but though Raven ate and ate, he could not finish the small dishful. The same quantity mysteriously remained. When he had eaten as much as he could he went home, taking the dish with him, and asking Water Ouzel to come to fetch it the following day.

On the next day, when Water Ouzel arrived, Raven politely invited him to sit down for a meal. He took the same dish and repeated

*534 all that his guest had done on the preceding day, but though he provided his noble owl-a was bartered and bruised, no rice came. At length Water-Chief went home in disgust.

RAVEN AND OWL*

Raven once assumed the shape of a herald and went to the home of Trading Seal, the lowest of all owls, who received him politely and prepared a meal. First he washed out a box to place near the fire and held his fingers above it so that the grease that exuded from them should drip into the receptacle. When a little had collected he stirred it and found it satisfactory, so he continued to hold his fingers in the box until the box was filled with grease. Raven ate his fill and went home, carrying with him the meal, and inviting Trading Seal to call for it the next day.

On the morrow when his expected guest arrived, Raven politely invited him to a meal. The host washed out the same box and held his hands outspread to the fire, so that the grease from them dripped into the container. When a few drops had fallen, Raven stared them as Trading Seal had done, found them satisfactory, and again held out his palms. The heat began to grow uncomfortable. Raven turned and turned his hands, putting them so close to the flames as he dared, then drawing them back until they were blistered on both sides, but no more grease came. At length he desisted, and ran round the house as if he were looking for something to bad but. Trading Seal waited for a long time, but at length, becoming disgusted, picked up his box and went home.

RAVEN AND OWL
(Second Version)

Once upon a time Raven went to the home of a young female owl, who politely asked him to take a seat while she made ready a meal for him. Raven agreed and watched intently while she obtained and prepared the food. Holding one of her fingers before the fire, Seal allowed the grease that ran from it to collect in a pan. This she fire turned, then gave to her guest. Raven was delighted, not only with a good meal, but with learning a new method of preparing food. As is customary, he carried away the dish in which his meal had been given him.

In a few days, when Seal came to his house to collect the pan, Raven invited her to stay for a meal and she consented to do so. Imitating her procedure, Raven held one of his legs up to the fire, a little grease dripped from it into the dish. He turned this and found it pleasant to be

* For another version of this story see Boas, p. 95.

[illegible] up his legs to the fence again, but though he kept them there until [illegible] they were finally barred, no more grouse came. And waited and waited, until, becoming angry, she picked up her gun and went home in disgust.

[illegible] and [illegible] Harvest[1]

Once upon a time Raven went to the home of Fisher Thrush.

"I have come to call," he said.

Thrush, a modest, politely invited him to sit down for a meal. Then she took the fine which she used for berry picking, hung it on a projecting rafter outside the house, and began to sing. Immediately a few berries appeared in the fine. She sang four times, and when she had finished, the receptacle was full.[2] Thrush placed the food before her guest, and Raven ate heartily. When it was time to leave, he picked up the fine with which he had not concerned, and invited his hostess to come and collect in the following day.

On the morrow Thrush went to Raven's home, where he invited her to sit down for a meal. Then he made a hole in a corner of the house, placed the same food fine beneath it, and began to sing, imitating the guest's song. A few salmon berries were deserved and covered the receptacle. Again Raven sang, but this time the berries recognized the deception and the fine was filled, not with fruit, but grouse. Thrush was very angry.

"You cheat to avoid my method of gathering berries," she faced out.

Then she picked up her fine and went home, leaving Raven the [illegible].

[illegible] and [illegible]

Once upon a time, Raven went to the home of an old, large-mouthed hawk and called.

"In what month do you get fat?"

"I grow fat when they put up the sticks to dry the salmon," replied Hawk.

"That is possible," said Raven. "I get fat then too, we families must be related."

He said no more, but waited patiently for sunrise.

When the sticks were set up for salmon drying, Raven went again to Hawk's house and said.

---

[1] The earlier version of this story see Boas, p. 31.

[2] The Bella Coola say that when the food stage, Raven, berries, animals, and fish gather to listen to the melody.

[3] The earlier version of this story see Boas, p. 40.

[illegible]

[illegible]

"Can we go to the top of that mountain to-morrow?" Raven [illegible] [illegible]. "Where we can look to see a good place."

Buck agreed, as Raven led the way to a flat-topped mountain with precipitous sides, where he [illegible] to show Buck should sit on the edge of a cliff while the man-further back.

"I will begin," said Raven.

Buck [illegible] of staring at that mountain, the song [illegible] the sighing of Buck's long [illegible]. Buck grew sleepy, and when he [illegible] the song of the sighing of Raven's black, lonely [illegible]. This was what Raven had hoped would happen, for [illegible], and [illegible] Buck [illegible] the precipice, as [illegible] Raven [illegible] where the [illegible] lay [illegible].

"Sleep! Sleep! Sleep!" he [illegible].

He held a large [illegible] Buck's body, and when he [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"Why?" said Death.

"Shouldn't you [illegible] [illegible]?"

Again the three Death [illegible] "Why?"

"Oh, don't ask [illegible]," Bruno replied. "[illegible] one of the same family, but we get together and sing of our ancestors."

Death agreed, and the two sat off to a place Bruno suggested, on the edge of a precipice from [illegible] Death on his [illegible], Bruno a little further back. Bruno sang [illegible] of returning to the ancestral seat of the nightmare of Death. [illegible] Death sighed, as he sang of [illegible] right he thought Bruno to be. [illegible] Bruno [illegible] over the [illegible] of the precipice in the [illegible].

Bruno [illegible] to the [illegible], [illegible]. Death was lying with his [illegible], and Bruno began to sing in his [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible], [illegible] Bruno [illegible] to [illegible].

"Did he [illegible] [illegible] family?"

[illegible] and nothing, he did [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible].

Bruno, [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] Death [illegible]. [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] the [illegible] Death.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible]

One long [illegible] the five people [illegible] this [illegible], Bruno and Death.

"Let us go together to some [illegible] spot," he said, "where I shall sing of [illegible] and one of [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] and a [illegible]. I think I shall place on [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]."

Death [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] he [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] Bruno to [illegible] of a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] Bruno said:

"[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]."

"Why?" replied Death. "[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]?"

[illegible] Bruno began to sing: "Death is an [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]."

[illegible] Death [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Bruno [illegible] Death. [illegible] Bruno [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Bruno [illegible] [illegible], [illegible] [illegible], and began to [illegible] on the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"Grumpy!" [illegible] with, "Gee we good luck this mine."

[illegible] Grumpy kill by [illegible] completely. Sleepy, much [illegible], repeatedly begged Grumpy to move, but the latter refused to budge and continued [illegible] Snell's corpse.

[illegible] and Sleepy

[illegible] Sleepy said to Sleepy, as [illegible]:

"I think we [illegible] a great many [illegible]. [illegible] to get [illegible]."

Sleepy [illegible] said the two set off together. Presently they [illegible] where [illegible] grew abundantly.

"[illegible]!" called Sleepy.

"[illegible]," [illegible] Sleepy.

[illegible] Sleepy said [illegible] Sleepy said [illegible] the plant, and he [illegible] [illegible] they passed a third [illegible]. The [illegible] [illegible] Sleepy [illegible] and [illegible] Sleepy [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Sleepy [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"I will give my necklace of dentalium to whoever will receive my [illegible] from."[1]

From Gulf road, for he could see over under trees long enough to find it. Then, however, dived down and brought the [illegible] to [illegible]. He had it on a stick which he carried over his shoulder, and paraded the village singing merrily.[2]

[illegible] Hai-ya-ah-ay-ha	[illegible] [illegible]	[illegible] [illegible]	[illegible] Hay, ha-ah-i-i-i[3]

[illegible] Where is [illegible]	[illegible] is carrying	[illegible] [illegible][4]

[illegible] It is for ha-ha-[illegible]	[illegible] is carrying	[illegible] [illegible][5]

[illegible] He will give it to [illegible]	[illegible] he will give it to [illegible]

Then he went into the house at one end of the village and collected a large quantity of [illegible] gum with which he fastened his [illegible] to its proper place, reinforcing the junction with [illegible] strips. Then [illegible] he paraded up and down the [illegible], singing. This time his chorus was:

"[illegible]'s face is now gum."

The [illegible] he had [illegible] to the gum, and when he removed the covering, the face had [illegible] to his [illegible].[6] Flowers [illegible], but said nothing. In fact, he [illegible] any question as much as possible. However, when flowers were [illegible] [illegible] to accompany him, he [illegible] grumbling, he refused to go, saying that he was afraid.

---

[1] This was recorded in song [illegible] in the National Museum of Canada, [illegible] Bay Pattern. The same method of repeating has been used in the [illegible] songs, although the musical [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] and [illegible]

(Guest Review)

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

594*

[illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

[illegible] 334*

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible], which he lifted. Raven matched him with [illegible] and delight. Wren held a [illegible] he felt with his money, and gave a good meal in his guess. It was the first time [illegible] a [illegible] caught and Raven was overjoyed at learning the method. When the meal was over he took [illegible] the footbridge containing the remains of the food, promising to return to [illegible]. Dragging [illegible] to the hole in the [illegible] exclaiming either [illegible] or [illegible] to feel pleased to Raven was determined to get the better of Wren, so next day he [illegible] his form of a magpie and set out to accomplish his purpose. Taking the footbridge to the [illegible] he [illegible] from Wren's home. The [illegible] of the hole was like a river to this bird. Then Raven [illegible] a large fish. Then, still in his magpie form, he flew [illegible] to Wren's home.

"Good morning, chief," said Raven. Wren was [illegible] a chief but he [illegible] to Raven him. "I have brought you some good [illegible]," he continued. "I have just [illegible] and with his [illegible] and [illegible] the right of [illegible] a long time and is overjoyed at the thought of seeing his [illegible] again. He is waiting for you by the big fir which you can see across the river."

"[illegible]," answered Wren. "[illegible] if you [illegible] to [illegible]."

"[illegible]," suggested Raven. "[illegible] Wren really [illegible] to see your father. If you do something [illegible] to do it will save you [illegible] on his back."

"I [illegible]," Wren replied [illegible], and for a long time he [illegible] to his [illegible] to accompany Raven, but [illegible] to see where his [illegible] said.

"Wren [illegible]. Your father is waiting over there and he gave me [illegible] instructions to bring you to him. He will be very angry if I do not obey."

Wren [illegible] something, on the [illegible] back, and Raven flew up into the air. Presently he [illegible] slightly.

"Oh, don't do that!" cried Wren. "I am afraid!"

Raven flew straight [illegible] the [illegible] of the hole running between Wren's home and the fir. Then he [illegible] as [illegible] the passenger fell off into the water. Raven was highly pleased at the success of his ruse, quite forgetting that Wren would fall through the [illegible] on to the hard bottom, where he was [illegible]. Raven had [illegible] dead. If he had dropped his passenger on land he would have [illegible].

Raven flew back to Wren's home, while the [illegible] walked on to [illegible] the bottom of the water, because he could not swim. Arriving at the

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

he cooked and gave to his guest. Raven was delighted at this simple method of obtaining food, and when he returned home planned how to amusement the hollow father.

A few days later Raven returned to Worm's home.

"Do you know your mother?" he asked.

"No," replied Worm, "my mother is dead."

"Do you know your father?" next asked Raven.

"No," answered Worm, "I have no father."

"Oh, you are mistaken," said Raven. "I have just been talking to your father and mother, they are over yonder."

"No," again replied Worm, "I do not believe you, I have no parents. I just appear without being born."

"Nevertheless," continued Raven. "It is you who are mistaken, please give me the pleasure of introducing you to your parents. Let me carry you to them, they will be delighted to see you."

Worm was most unwilling.

"No, you must be mistaken," he said. "But be I am no worse another."

But when Raven insisted, Worm at last consented to the only fellow taking him on his back to visit his parents. Croaking happily, Raven with his passenger flew away towards the other side of the fort. When they came to mid-channel, he began to turn sideways to his flight.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" cried Worm in fear. "I will fall and be killed, I cannot swim. Oh! Oh! Oh! Please don't do that. I know I should fall like a stone."

Raven paid no attention to his appeals and Worm presently slipped from his back and fell into the water.

Raven flew back at once to Worm's house where he found the hollow log, hoisted it, and let it down through a hole in the floor so he had seen the fisherman do. Soon he hooked up a small fish which gave him little satisfaction, then he felt what seemed to be a strong line, but when he drew up his line it was only a snag. He swore heavily and threw it into a corner of the house. He did not know that this "snag" was really Worm who had slipped from Raven for the occasion. The little fellow got up quietly and, without attracting Raven's attention, shut the door and closed all apertures to the house, then round the side to run through the floor. As the water became deeper, Raven floundered about frantically trying to get out, but to vain, until as it continued to surge upwards, he was carried to the end of the house where he could do nothing but croak pitifully. Then Worm appeared.

"I nearly drowned you," he said, "because you tried to hurt me. If you try any more of your nefarious tricks I shall kill you."

#534 Raven, who was terribly frightened, promised humbly that he would be good henceforth. Worm caused the tide to fall and Raven fled away home bedraggled and discomfited.

RAVEN AND BLUE GROUSE[1]

Once upon a time Blue Grouse gave a feast to which he invited all other birds, including Raven, who left early to show his disappointment at the food provided, the tender buds of evergreen trees. Soon after, Blue Grouse went hunting and killed many mountain goats, from which he obtained a large quantity of smoked meat and many grouse. Again he sent a herald to invite all the birds to a feast, but when the message was delivered to Raven he answered rudely:

"No, I don't want to go. There will be nothing but evergreen buds."

"You are mistaken," replied the herald. "Blue Grouse has a large supply of goat meat and grouse."

Raven did not believe this and still refused to go. On the appointed day, when he saw the people gathering at Blue Grouse's house, he began to worry, wondering whether or not he was missing a real feast. At length he sent a lad to see what was going on, and then gained the news that a large supply of meat was about to be distributed. Greatly chagrined, Raven at once began to make plans to obtain a share of the delicacies. Without being seen, he went to the back of the house wherein the feast was taking place, lay down and cried out some words in a strange language.[2] The smoked goats fell, precipitously, and Raven likewise hurried home, where he lay down, telling one of his sisters to blow over him and to blowburn a cloud of ashes from the fire, so that people would think he had not moved for a long time. Several of Blue Grouse's guests said:

"Let us go and ask Raven about the strange words which we heard. He is a smart man. Perhaps he can explain their significance."

When these people reached his house, Raven sat up and shook the ashes from himself, asking what they wanted. They explained their mission and Raven then wanted to know what the voice had said. They repeated what they had heard.

"Oh! Oh! Good gracious!" cried Raven. "That means that robbers are almost upon us. Take your children and run away into the mountains."

Not suspecting his duplicity, they all obeyed. As soon as he was alone, Raven rose and went across to Blue Grouse's house, where he ate and ate and ate, croaking happily. Hearing the sound, two of the fugi-

[1] The earlier version of this story is Boas, p. 91.
[2] The content of the incident was gathered by a sophisticated informant.

A. McDermott E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA DeGarmo NEA

534*

crow began to wonder if Raven had not deceived them for his own ends. They cautiously and saw him gorging himself with the food. Without disclosing their presence, they stole away and informed their comrades. All came back and surprised Raven, who fled to his home, disconsolately.

RAVEN AND BLUE GROUSE
(Second Version)

Once upon a time Blue Grouse sent six messengers inviting all and sundry to a feast, but Raven, thinking the food would only be bark, not fit for a man, declined the invitation. As the people were gathering, however, he began to wonder whether or not he was missing a fine free meal, so he sent one of his children to walk up and down outside the house of Blue Grouse and see the preparations. The child reported that there was an ample supply of grouse, moss, and other delicacies. Raven, deeply chagrined, determined to steal the food, and presently evolved a plan. He went secretly to the rear of Blue Grouse's house and listened, instructing his successors to sound the warning for a war-party as soon as the guests had assembled. Then he went home and told one of his children to blow ashes from the fire over himself and his blankets to make it appear that he had been lying down for a long time. When he was in this condition someone entered and saw him. No sooner had the guests assembled in the other house than the successors cried out:

"Raiders! Raiders! Raiders! They will be here any moment to make us slaves. Let us escape quickly!"

The startled guests rushed down to their canoes and paddled across the river. Then Raven went to the empty house, gathered up all the food and took it home, crunching derisively. The people on the other bank, hearing his voice, said to one another:

"I wonder if Raven has deceived us, he is a smart fellow."

They sent a boy across to investigate, who found no food and no Raven. By the time the people had recrossed the river, Raven had fled.

RAVEN AND KIWI*

Once upon a time, soon after the first people came to this earth, Raven went to the home of Kiwi, a supernatural being, who lived in a fine large cave with a door. He had never been there before. Raven knocked, crying politely:

"Hello! Please let me in."

*For another version of this story see Boas, p. 55.

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

$534

Echo answered in the same words, which Raven took as an invitation to come. Though he could see no one, the house was well stocked with meat, while to his amazement he saw blankets being woven, and cedar-bark being incorporated without visible human agency. He sat down. Presently some firewood came and moved to the hearth of its own accord. The fire lit itself, stones jumped into it and a cook-box moved to a convenient place near at hand. Water emptied itself into the vessel, and when the stones were hot, the tongs picked them up and dropped them into the box. When the water was boiling, smoked goat meat came down from the ceiling, cut itself up, and went into the box. Berries and goat grease placed themselves before Raven, and when all was ready a spoon moved to him, the handle pointed towards his hand. The cooked meat dried itself and came to him. Raven ate heartily but was much puzzled, for he had never seen anything like this in his life. When he had finished the meal, he took away with him, according to custom, the box containing what was left. On reaching home he said to his four sisters:

"I have been to a house where there is a great abundance of everything, food, blankets, and so on, but no people. Tomorrow we shall go and carry off everything."

The sisters were agreeable. That night Raven was so excited he could hardly sleep, and at the first streak of dawn he roused his sisters and they set off in his canoe, Takedi, which moved without apparent means of propulsion. On arriving at Echo's house they found the same state of affairs as on the previous day, all household occupations being carried on without visible agent. Raven seized meat and grease; his sisters took goat-hair blankets and cedar-bark articles which they at once began to carry out to Takedi. When they had almost stripped the house, Raven suddenly felt the grasp of invisible hands which, in spite of his struggles, stretched him out on his back with legs apart. His sisters, who were close at the canoe, were also seized, one after another, and dragged into the house on their backs. Invisible fingers held apart their pudends, which were thrust over Raven's nose until he was almost suffocated.

"Please stop!" Raven cried out. "I didn't know there was anyone here. I am almost killed."

"Why did you steal my food?" asked Echo. "Yesterday, I provided you willingly with a meal, and this is how you repay me. If you try any more of your malicious tricks I will kill you."

The four sisters, who had almost been pulled to pieces in the fray, cried out to their brother, sobbing:

"Why do you always lead us into trouble? We have been almost murdered and it is all your fault."

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Meanwhile the lost was returning of its own accord to the house. 539*
When it was again in position, Echo released his captives, who fled disembodied.

His sisters upbraided Raven:

"Why don't you settle down at home instead of roaming around the country, getting into trouble?" they asked.

Raven, bruised and sick from the rough treatment which he had received, could not defend himself.

RAVEN AND ECHO
(Second Version)

Once upon a time, when Raven was travelling in the mountains, he stopped at the home of Echo. No one appeared to be in the house, yet various processes were going on without visible agency; blankets were being woven, with no one at the loom, and various articles travelled from one part of the house to another without apparent cause.

"I should like a meal," said Raven.

As the words re-echoed, he felt something touch his arm and guide him to a seat.

The firewood seemed to split of its own volition, piled itself in place, and flames appeared; meat came down from the rafters and cut itself up; the bucket travelled out through the door and returned filled with water which emptied itself into a box into which heated stones from the fire plunged mysteriously, as did the meat, all without apparent motive power. When the meat had boiled sufficiently it came into Raven's box and a spoon moved into his hand. As he ate his meal in silence he thought:

"This is too good a chance to miss. I must come with my sisters to carry off the riches of this house."

When Raven returned home he told his four sisters to prepare for a trip into the mountains, and the following day they set off. They reached Echo's house without difficulty and were delighted at the quantity of goods inside, apparently awaiting their pleasure. The five busied themselves tying blankets into bundles, filling boxes with meat and grease, and collecting other articles.

When almost ready to leave, the eldest sister suddenly shrieked aloud. Something had grasped her and forced her on to her back, but nothing could be seen. In succession the second, third, and fourth sister was similarly treated, and finally Raven himself. The eldest sister was lying on her back, with legs apart and genitals exposed, when her brother was dragged so that his head was thrust against her organs and his beak stuck up her anus. She asked him what he was doing, and he replied:

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#539

"I cannot help it."

In the same way he was carried to each of his other sisters and in each case his beak was thrust far up her anus. Then the five were lifted and bundled unceremoniously out of the house. As they hurried away, Raven, looking back, saw that the goods which they had packed up had returned to their original places.

RAVEN AND HIS SISTERS

Once upon a time Raven saw a large number of berries growing near his house and determined to get a good supply.

"Get ready and we shall go berry-picking," he said to his four Crow sisters,[11] Ḱ'ákàmitl, Tcwa·st, Wélx, and Ásqinkr.

The next morning they started off in Raven's self-moving canoe, Tokinkl. Berries were plentiful, the Crow sisters were industrious, and before long the craft was almost filled. There was ample for all, but Raven, greedy as ever, began to scheme how he could defraud his sisters of their share. The canoe was lying in a small inlet of the ocean, whence they would have to pass close to one of the points on their way home. Raven went to the end of this point and defecated. He had the power of giving speech to anything, so told his excrement to call out as they went by:

"Wina, wina djutxmá·nk." "Raiders, raiders are coming."

Raven returned before his sisters even noticed that he had been absent. All day the pickers toiled, and when they set out for home at dusk, the canoe was heavily loaded. As they were rounding the point, they were startled by the warning cry, at which Raven pretended to be terrified.

"There is great danger," he called out. "You had better flee while I will remain to guard the canoe."

The four women fled up the mountain slope, leaving Raven alone in the canoe. This was what he had wanted; he sat down comfortably, gorging himself with the berries, and croaking happily. One of his sisters heard this and wondered whether her brother might be deceiving them, but she was afraid to return immediately to find out. When he had eaten all that he could stuff into his stomach, Raven smeared himself with crushed juice to resemble blood, and lay down motionless in the bottom.

[11] They were non-marriageable female relatives, not his own sisters.

J. McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924) 1965
NEA Reference NEA

After some time, his sisters plucked up courage to return and saw him lying there. One of them became suspicious and began to sing:[a] 534*

[illegible][b]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Peculiar is	it is as if	[illegible]	[illegible]
		the blood	of our cousin.

A free translation of this is: "How strange is the blood with which our relative is covered!"

Raven raised himself lightly, as if in great pain, and answered:

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
You are wickedly stupid!	You are wickedly stupid!	It must be
[illegible]	[illegible]
the blood;	a war-party did it.

Then he groaned[c] feebly and became silent.

At first his sisters did not believe his protestations and repeated their doubting song, but he assured them that he was speaking the truth so they were finally convinced. Raven instructed them to carry him home very carefully. On reaching the beach, all their fellow-villagers came crowding around, and when they learnt of their chief's injury, they loudly expressed their sympathy. Raven continued his groanings, and when he had been taken to his house, one of the neighbours began to sponge away the blood. Much to his surprise, he could find no wound; then, looking more carefully, he recognized that the "blood" was only berry-juice. He proclaimed his discovery in a loud voice, and everyone laughed at Raven, thus caught deceiving his sisters.

RAVEN AND HIS SISTERS
(Second Version)

Once upon a time, Raven set out with his four sisters to gather berries. They travelled in his self-moving canoe, Tahsiki, which soon brought them to a place where fruit was plentiful. Raven, greedy as usual, wanted to eat at once the berries which his sisters brought to the craft, whereas they wished to keep them for winter use. When they insisted, Raven determined to outwit them by fair means or foul. When next the women were out of sight, Raven went ashore and arranged for a voice to cry:

[535]

[a]Recorded as song VII D 30b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The same method of recording has been used as for dance songs, although the vertical lines indicate only word groups, not phrases called out by an announcer.

[b]The singer entered into the spirit of the song, and prefaced his rendition by calling out: Wine wine djuowa ad: "Raiders, raiders are coming."

[c]This is indicated on the record by grunts, groans, and calls of anguish, as ejaculation of pain.

*539 "Raven, Raven, Raven," when he and his sisters were in the canoe.

A little later, Raven suggested that they move to another spot. As they were passing the place where he had landed earlier, the sisters were startled by a cry of:

"Raven, Raven, Raven."

Raven pretended to be greatly alarmed for his sisters' safety and told them to go ashore quickly and hide.

"I will remain to defend the canoe," he said.

As soon as the women had followed his advice, Raven began to gorge himself with berries. He ate and ate, croaking his delight, until only a few were left. Then he smeared himself with red berry-juice, which resembled blood, and lay down in the bottom of the canoe as if dead or dying. After some time the sisters plucked up courage to see whether or not their brother had been killed; they stole forward to a point of vantage from which they could see him lying stretched. His sisters were in sight, as they hurried down and began to weep over their brother. Presently one of them noticed that the blood seemed peculiar and commented on the fact, whereupon the seemingly dead Raven replied:

"That is the blood of a warrior."

Then they wept again. Soon, however, one of the sisters noticed that the berries had disappeared, and she cried out that their brother had deceived them. When they examined him more closely, they found that he was stained, not with blood, but with berry-juice. Raven then very [illegible].

RAVEN AND HIS STEP-DAUGHTER*

Once upon a time, Raven's wife died. Instead of being grieved, he was so delighted that he sang:

"How lucky it is that she died, otherwise I would have divorced her and remarried."

Soon he took another wife, a widow with a young daughter. Raven tried repeatedly to sleep with his step-child, but she was unwilling and he could not seduce her. Determined to succeed at any cost, he went into the forest to gather firewood.

"How do you burn?" he asked dead and dry Alder.

"I give great heat but no sparks," replied Alder.

Next he went to Cottonwood with the same query, and received a similar answer.

"I throw off many sparks which do not fly far," said Spruce.

*For another version of this story see Boas, p. 99.

Raven was not interested in any of these replies and put the same question to Gulls.

"I jump on women's backs," answered the gull.

Raven put his head on one side and pondered for some time, finally deciding that if nothing better was available he would return to Gulls. Then he asked Tit-Bird, who replied:

"I give off good lice. If I am pitied in prominent lice, which is the best way of using me, I make a practice of jumping on the private parts of any children."

"You are the very most! I have been seeking," said Raven.

Slightly delighted, he filed his claws with Tit-bird and went home.

Raven built a blazing fire in his house and called his wife and her daughter to come and enjoy it. As they were sitting naked, with legs apart, a great church of lice leaps out from the fire, attack the girl, and burn her pudenda severely. The mother, alarmed at her daughter's injury, asked all her neighbours whether they have a cure for such a burn, but none was able to assist her. Finally she asked her husband.

"Why, yes," Raven replied. "A cure for this has been handed down to my family. There is a small plant growing in the woods which, when inserted in the passage, heals a burn there. But to be effective, the sufferer must go alone to the forest. You can tell the right plant because it moves back and forth as if pinned on the ground."

After giving this advice, Raven went into the woods where he lay on his back and covered himself with leaves, his penis alone being exposed. There he willed his step-daughter to come in that direction. As the girl hopped painfully along she saw what she took to be the plant in question because it was bending back and forth. She was preparing to squat down on it when she saw her step-father's two beady eyes blinking at her from their leafy covering. She ran away home and told her mother.

Raven, during his wife's anger, prepared an alibi by sending a boy away, and, as a double precaution, by pretending to be very sick. He lay on his bed, groaning and passing, and told everyone that he would be dead within a day. Towards morning he seemed much worse, and gave final instructions to his wife.

"Do not marry your daughter to anyone of this town," he said. "Choose for her a Kanapit husband because food is more plentiful there, and the men are all wealthy. As for myself, I am almost at my last gasp. When I die, do not bury me in the ground, place me in a tree at some distance from the village and do not fasten the cover of my coffin too tightly."

When the sun rose, Raven appeared to be dying, and soon all signs of life ceased. After waiting a short interval, his fellow-villagers disposed

*[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

[illegible] the [illegible] [illegible], namely, a small plant growing in the mouth which could be recognized by its peculiarly [illegible] movements.

"If you place yourself so that it moves your organ, you will be cured," said Raven.

He went to the hut [illegible] this advice, he went into the house and lay down on his back, covering with leaves all but his eyes and penis. The [illegible] woman [illegible] removed the organ to and fro so that the thoughts [illegible] the plant [illegible] [illegible] upon it where she [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Raven [illegible] crawling towards.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

#534

[illegible]

[illegible] AND THE [illegible]

Long, long ago, a man named Kiskim, of mixed Bella Coola and Bella Bella lineage, lived on a small island near the head of Cascade Inlet, where he had a fish-trap. He had only one leg, but in spite of this handicap was wealthy and prosperous. Raven noticed this, and thought that with his two legs it would be an easy matter to despoil Kiskim. Accordingly, he went to the latter's house and began by humbly asking him. Once he had gained a foothold in the establishment, however, Raven began to act as director, ordering Kiskim about as if he were a servant. One day as they were taking salmon from the fish-trap, Kiskim became angry at Raven's continued orders and pushed him into the water.

Raven pretended to be insulted, and suggested a fight. The type of combat used to settle disputes of this sort resembles wrestling, since the contestants grapple, and the loser is he whose feet are first shifted from their position. Raven suggested this kind of contest, thinking that, with his two legs, he would have an easy victory. Kiskim agreed, and the two clinched. At first they swayed back and forth, to and fro, without either being able to shift the other, but gradually Kiskim began to swing Raven until he could hardly keep his foothold. When in imminent danger of losing it, he cried out that Kiskim had moved his foot; it was a false accusation, for the other had swayed on his one leg but had not shifted it. Kiskim denied having made any movement of his foot but claimed that Raven had shifted his, and finally succeeded in flinging his antagonist into the water. Raven swam ashore, wet and bedraggled; he flew away and never came back.

RAVEN AND THE DANCER

There was once a woman, Ma'cilas, who was a remarkable dancer, the most expert ever seen, so wonderful that people used to come from far and near to see her. On one occasion she prepared to give a dance at a time when Raven was completing a river canoe. He was very busy, carefully reducing the sides to the requisite thickness by burning them, and chark-

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

"Why, I will marry you, if you are such a good man. I should be afraid of any other might but my opposite as I am not quite the one."

Raven [illegible] the [illegible] in the occupation. They were married and went to live in Raven's house. Raven was now the master of food. Raven [illegible] and [illegible] to see the power to keep her plentifully supplied with Buckeye Salmon, but she declined to do so, so she by her return to gaining small fish, which he refused to share with her, so poverty [illegible]. There he was [illegible] right food to [illegible] who had gathered in his house. The first time this happened the wife [illegible] her mother with her strange husband in a [illegible] and complained profusely. Buckeye Salmon asked her friend to bring a fish into which she poured water and washed her hands, causing more Buckeye Salmon to appear. Then she took and cooked, being careful not to cut any salmon bone. On two occasions Raven's wife did this, each time inviting the people and giving them a meal during her husband's absence, but saying nothing to him about it.

One day Raven returned unexpectedly and found that Buckeye Salmon hanging in his house. He asked the other occupants where it came from, as his wife never was fishing, but the answer he received was:

"You are the only one of us who has been catching salmon, and you have been spearing just small fish, one at a time. Even then you will neither sell nor share."

Raven was not satisfied and determined to see upon what was happening in his house during his absence. One day he announced that he was going to examine his nets and went off in the proper direction, but was concealed to watch through a crack in the wall what was going on within. When he saw his wife produce and cook salmon for all the people, he burst angrily into the room:

"You have wronged me greatly," he exclaimed. "Why have you not helped your own husband in getting food?"

His wife did not reply but one guest spoke on her behalf:

"You never shared your catch with her nor with us, why should she share with you?"

Another continued:

"Give up your evil and selfish ways. Your wife has always kindly shared her salmon with us."

Raven was silent. That night as he lay in bed his wife told him to make a fish-weir at a certain point. He began the following night and worked steadily for several days until it was ready. Then Buckeye Salmon went to the beach and wiggled her toes in the water. From her feet there [illegible] Raven caught a great chinook in the net. He gave [illegible] generously, but still had enough to fill his house with drying salmon. Following his wife's instructions, he did not remove the heads from the fishes.

There were so many salmon in the house that they had to be hung in three tiers over the fire, and in the morning about Raven was often troubled by the long hair becoming entangled in their teeth. So this he never neveth, afraid lest either the salmon or his wife should hear him. One day he had become so badly troubled in his teeth of one of the salmon that he was off the head of the fish which all caused him such annoyance, thinking that his wife would have nothing about it. But when she came into the house she cried out:

"I am sick. Someone has been taking the salmon."

She asked her husband if he had done so, but he indignantly denied the charge. At last she discovered that he had been the offender, but said nothing to him about it. Nevertheless Raven was out of the house, Sockeye Salmon asked the people to help her purify the fish by making a fire on which she placed her one more darkness. Then she left the house and began to wash. As soon her dying salmon left their places on the frames and followed her from the house to the beach.

Raven, who came up at this moment, pursued his wife to the shore of the ocean, where she lifted up the sea as if it had been a mat and dived beneath, followed by her salmon. She became a fish once more and swam away. The heart-broken Raven tried to follow, but could only splash into the water, not penetrate beneath it as the woman had done. Thus he lost both wife and fish.

RAVEN AND SOCKEYE SALMON
(Second Version)

Raven and his four Crow sisters, whose names were Kakamid, Tsaa ot, Kaptsuk, and Wals, lived on the banks of the Dean River, to which they had been attracted by the abundance of trout. One day, when Raven was spearing fish, he saw in the water a beautiful Sockeye Salmon woman, with whom he immediately fell in love. When he told her of his affection she came ashore, assumed human form, and they were married.

Raven covered fresh sand on the floor of his house and did his utmost to make his supernatural bride comfortable. Knowing the wishes of the salmon, she told her husband never to pull or cut the heads from any that he caught. Raven promised to obey, and then he asked a favour of his wife. She had beautiful hair, hanging luxuriantly to her hips, of which he had long been envious. He asked his wife to make his hair grow like [illegible], which, with her supernatural power, she was able to do. She other- 534* wisely granted his request, and Raven became very proud of his splendid [illegible].

Some year, when Raven caught sockeye salmon he showed his wife's [illegible] by carefully hanging the fish up to dry without removing the heads. One day, however, his long hair became entangled with the teeth of a drying salmon, and in a fit of anger he scratched off its head, throwing it outside the door. His wife was so vexed and grieved that she cried and cried until her face was swollen and Raven became frightened at her continual lamentation. After he had left the house, Sockeye Salmon told her sisters-in-law to make a fire and put on it all her personal possessions. She said that she intended to leave that night, and that she alone would scatter her husband's salmon, but not those caught by his sisters. When it was dark she carried out her threat. She whistled, and Raven's fish came to life; then she ran to the river, raised the edge of the water as if it had been a blanket and plunged beneath, followed by them.
Raven tried in vain to pursue, but lost both his wife and his salmon.

Animal Stories

Raven is more frequently endowed with human characteristics to serve as the central figure in stories than any other bird or mammal, but the following are examples of similar tales centring around other figures.[‡] 531 525

MINK AND CAT-FISH[] 534*

Once upon a time, long, long ago, before men and animals had grown so unlike one another, Mink went to the home of a Cat-Fish woman, who politely invited him to stay for a meal. When he had finished eating he said to his hostess:

"Are you afraid of anything?"

"No," she replied.

"Are you not afraid of Grizzly Bear?"

"No," answered the woman again.

Mink repeated his question with regard to Wolf, Black Bear, Wolverine, Cougar, and all the other fierce animals, but Cat-Fish assured him that she feared none of them. At length he asked:

"Are you afraid of Owl?"[]

[]There are no true cat-fish in Bella Coola; the species so designated is probably one of the sculpins. [136]

[]He meant the western horned owl.

‡[See pp. 414-493. – ANALYST]

"Well! You's speak of him," she replied.

The owner learned her fear and Mink resolved to take advantage of what he had heard. With that aim in view he went to Owl's house and said to him:

"Please lend me your blanket."

By this he means the appearance and attributes of Owl himself. Owl was unwilling to let him have it.

"Oh no," he said. "My blanket is not strong. It may get torn if you borrow it. Besides I have only one, which is would be more inconvenient for me to lend."

"Oh, please," Mink urged. "I should take the greatest care of it."

At length the good-natured Owl yielded sufficiently to his guest's earnest appeals to allow him to put on the blanket and go outside, so that he never could judge whether or not Mink could "have" well enough not to disgrace Owl.

Mink, who was very clever, performed so satisfactorily that on his return Owl lent him his blanket, with some misgivings. As soon as he had assumed the borrowed plumage, Mink flew swiftly towards the home of Cat-Fish, hoping to be seen. While he was still at some little distance, she heard the doubtful sound and threw on the few dried salmon, which is a dainty to Owl, but powerless against Mink. As the hoaxing came nearer and nearer, Cat-Fish grew more and more troubled, until when it was close to her house she fastened the door securely. Mink broke it to pieces and rushed through to seize her. Cat-Fish thought herself fortunate in being able to escape through the wreck of her door into the water. When she passed Mink in the narrow doorway, Owl's blanket which he was wearing was torn, and the borrower was afraid, remembering how the owner had begged him to be careful of it.

The dishonest Mink concealed the rent as well as he could; then took the blanket back to Owl's house and hung it up, without mentioning the accident, so that the owner did not discover the tear until after Mink's departure, when it was too late to complain. Mink returned and took possession of the house of Cat-Fish, with its rich contents of food. The thief was undisturbed, as Cat-Fish has continued to live in the water until the present day.

THE ADVENTURES OF MINK

Once upon a time, Mink was sitting at the end of a point which projected far into the ocean. From his seat he saw a salmon jump at some little distance.

"Ah, there!" he called out. "If I were a salmon I wouldn't be so rabbit as to jump over my dam. I should always keep near the shore."

The rabbit salmon listened to the advice, and when next he jumped, it was a little closer to the shore. Mink, pleased at the success of his ruse, continued to urge the salmon to come over a little more until the stupid fish became stranded among the projecting rocks, where Mink clubbed it to death, gratified at the success of his hunting.

Mink carried away the salmon to a suitable spot for cooking, where he built a fire and roasted every morsel of it, head, tail, fins, and all. He was very greedy. As the fish cooked, it emitted an appetizing odour, and Mink took a stick and pointed to one piece after another, singing as he did so:

"I wonder who will eat this bit?" and answering himself, "Mink will eat it."

He smacked his lips in anticipation. He proceeded to become sleepy and decided to lie down for a few minutes, while the salmon was cooking. He slept soundly, with mouth open. Attracted by his snores, some mischievous boys came along, who carried off all Mink's nicely cooked salmon, and smeared some of the fat over the points of his teeth. Then before they went away, they cut off his queue, which proceeded from his body, near his rump.

When Mink awoke, his first thought was of the fine meal which should now be ready. He looked at the fire, but to his intense annoyance and grief, he did not see the salmon. Then, happening to run his tongue over his lip, he felt the smooth fat fat.

"Perhaps I ate the salmon," he said to himself, puzzled.

"No," he went on, "I couldn't have eaten it," for he realized how hungry he was.

"Yes, I must have eaten it," he said, as he again felt the smooth fat fat on his lips, and between his teeth.

"No, I couldn't have," as he felt the emptiness of his stomach.

Puzzled, uncertain, and most unhappy, Mink finally ran away.

He had not gone far when he saw a number of boys playing on a smooth piece of ground. They were rolling something to and fro, and as Mink watched from a hiding place, he saw that their toy was his scent gland. He determined to regain it. When he came into view, the boys, who did not recognize him, invited him to join their game and Mink gladly agreed. He waited until his castor was thrown to him, then he pushed it back into place and ran away as fast as he could. The boys tried to overtake him, but failed.

#534

MINK AND CLOUD

Once upon a time, Mink said to Cloud:

"What's you name, sir? I should like to remember."

"Yes," answered Cloud, "I am quite agreeable if you are brave enough. But I think you will be afraid, because I am not like you."

"I will risk that," replied Mink, "because I dare you very much."

Mink jumped up to Cloud. It happened to be a sunshine day and the clouds were lying in a thick fall around the mountain, so he was quite comfortable, and upon the night with his bride. But soon after, when a wind blew up, his nest began to disappear. Mink jumped from one patch of cloud to another, but as the wind increased they became more and more scattered and smaller, until, finding none to support him, he fell with a crash into the ocean. The fall did not kill him, but he was so badly shaken up that he swam slowly back to land and never again sought his wife.

THE CONTEST OF MINK

Once upon a time, long, long ago, a number of women left Kwaquin to go into the mountains to gather a fern, spawn, highly prized for food. An expedition of this kind was always regarded as a picnic, so that a number of young men asked to be allowed to accompany them. The girls consented, but explained that Mink was to be excluded, because of his offensive smell and objectionable habit of entering wind. Mink, deeply insulted, resolved to work mischief. When the others had set off he followed secretly. Several times different members of the party smelt an offensive odour, resembling Mink's, and mentioned it to their companions.

"No, it cannot be," the others answered. "Mink has neither the strength nor the courage to follow where he knows he is not wanted."

At dusk the young men dug a large hole near a river bank to cook the fern, which is prepared in the following manner:—A large fire is built in the pit and stones are thrown on, which gradually fall, red-hot, to the bottom. Then the remains of the fire are raked out, a layer of grass is placed over the stones, and on it is deposited the fern; this is then covered by a layer of sand and on top of that is built a huge fire, which must be kept going all night. By evening the arrangements were complete and the fire was blazing. The women and men had a pleasant time playing together and at length went to sleep.

This gave Mink the opportunity for which he had been waiting. As is well known, he has power over rain which is included in his ancestral myth. Not only does he do all his hunting and travelling when it is raining, but he has the ability to cause a downpour. He began to sing:

"[illegible]" "[illegible]"

[illegible] to sprinkle, then to rain more heavily, and [illegible] and there was a storm, the [illegible] to battle, pour the fire and [illegible] into the hole, raising the fire. The women who had been sleeping protected only by their outer bark clothes suffered considerable inconvenience and discomfort. All night it rained, and the men dug also, making further fire-gathering out of the question. After a wet, uncomfortable night, the young people were forced to return to Kimsquit without obtaining the food for which they had set out. Mink glared at himself. The women, who suspected he had caused their discomfort, asked all the people who had remained at Kimsquit whether or not Mink had been seen during their absence. As nobody had seen him, their suspicions grew almost to certainty, but there was no evidence of his having followed the party, so he escaped the punishment that would have been gladly meted out to him.

Not long afterwards a war party bound for Kimsquit passed the home of Crab, a woman, who called out to them:

"Please kill that villain, Mink."

Mink, who was hiding within ear-shot of the town, came out to meet the party had passed, and said formally to Crab:

"What do you mean by crying to have me killed?"

"I said, please take care of my dear Mink, and make him laugh and shining like the sun," she replied tidily.

"That is a lie," said he, formally.

He seized Crab by her arms and legs, pulled them from her body and tore all into small fragments which he threw into the ocean.

"Stay there and serve as food for men," said Mink.

Since then, crabs have lived in the ocean near Kimsquit and have served as food for men.

HOW MINK TOOK HIS REVENGE

An old woman who used constantly to gather clams on the seashore was much troubled by Mink. One day when a raiding party was passing she asked their destination.

"We are going to fight Mink," they replied.

"That is excellent," she responded.

A few days later when they repassed her house on the return journey the old woman asked them if they had been successful.

"Yes," they replied. "We have destroyed Mink's town and made him a slave."

A: McDowell E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA BeClaccola NEA

$534

"Cut him in pieces," she said, "as you would with salmon preparatory to smoking."

Mink was in the canoe and heard her injunction. He willed that the captain should steer a course near the shore, and when the canoe was rounding a point he jumped overboard and succeeded in reaching the land, where he sought refuge. The raiders chased him on shore so hotly that Mink was finally forced to hide in a small hole under the rocks, but on entering it he took with him some shell-fish. One of the pursuers, seeing the hole, thrust his spear down into it, but Mink answered on this the entrails of the shell-fish. When the raiders saw the gore on the spear they concluded they had killed him and went off.

As soon as his enemies had gone away, Mink sneaked out and grabbed the old woman by the back of the neck, yelling in her ear:

"What did you call out to the raiders?"

"I told them to take good care of you," she replied, "that you were like a son to me."

"Did you indeed?" said Mink, who had heard perfectly what she said.

First he bit off her legs, then chewed to pieces the rest of her body, shoulding it into scraps which he threw into the water, telling them to become crabs.

This is the origin of crabs.

THE FIRE

About three generations after the first people had come to this earth, Mink went up to Nuxmit a and asked Alpuxstw to lend him his robe, so that he might take his place as sun. The request was granted, but, once [821] given control of the sun, Mink guided the canoe-like luminary so close to earth that the rivers and oceans boiled, and it was only in the glaciers that the people were able to exist. At Kimsquit a man and his dog were turned to stone; it is said that they can still be seen in this form.[171]

Animals as well as men suffered from Mink's wickedness. Grizzly Bear's coat was singed to its present rusty colour; Weasel tried to hide himself but failed to draw in the end of his tail which was burnt black, a mark still carried by all his descendants; Clam closed his shell for protection and so was blackened only at its orifice; all the other creatures suffered in various ways.

---

[171] [171] "A similar belief is said to be shared by the Cowichan people of Vancouver Island. About 1900, a considerable amount of charred wood was found four feet beneath the surface of the ground, on the mountain west of the Nechetsconnay River. The Bella Coola consider this to be proof of the disaster.

THE FOLLY OF DEER

Once, long, long ago, Deer was standing beneath a rock, spending under which gave him complete protection from the weather. Snow began to fall in show, large flakes which came drifting down one or two at a time. Idly he began to count them. At first it was easy, but the snow began to fall faster until he could no longer carry out his self-appointed task. Heavily disappointed he cried for a long time.

DEER AND WOLVES*

Once upon a time, Deer took his son with him in his canoe to gather firewood. At their destination he went into the forest to get sticks, leaving Fawn behind. On his return with a load after a rather long absence he asked the boy whether or not anyone had passed.

"Yes," answered Fawn. "A canoe filled with people passed out long ago."

"What did they say?" asked Deer.

"They felt me all over and said what a fine meal I would make," replied the son.

"Oh, they are stupid and harmless," said Deer. "They talk only through their arrows."

Now these people were Wolves, who, as everybody knows, have wonderfully acute ears. One of them caught Deer's remark and said to his companions:

"Deer is swearing at us. Let us go back and punish him."

They all turned back. Meanwhile Deer had again gone into the forest for wood, so that when the Wolves reached the canoe, Fawn was alone in it. The Wolf who was paddling in the bow took a mouthful of Fawn, the second took another bite, and by the time the captain in the stern had had his share, nothing was left but blood. Then the Wolves went away.

When Deer came back to find only blood he began to cry.

"Do you know who killed my son?" he asked the canoe.

"No," it replied.

Deer put the same question to the paddle, the bailer, and the mooring-rope, but each responded: "No."

Deer had been weeping so much that a long drop of mucus hung from his nose, which he flipped off with his fingers and threw into the canoe. The mucus suddenly spoke up:

*For another version of this story see Boas, p. 97.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 "Your son was eaten, bite by bite, by the Wolves, the people whom you scorned."

Deer hurried on the trail of the Wolves, alternately weeping and singing:

"When the mist was half-way down the mountain and there was no wind, at that time my son was slain."

Presently he reached the Wolf village, where a dance and feast were in progress in the chief's house. Deer was invited inside, and the chief asked him if he could dance.

"Yes," said Deer. "I will show you my celebrated dance, but I must have mussel-shells tied to my legs."

When this was done, Deer began to dance, violently, and, as he went on, his hosts fell asleep, one by one, until only an old woman remained awake. Deer danced immediately in front of her until she too slumbered. Then he took off the mussel-shells and began to cut the throats of the Wolves with them. When about half-finished the old woman showed signs of waking, so Deer hastily discontinued his slaughter to dance before her, and again she slept. All except a few had been killed when the old woman woke up and saw what was happening. She roused the others with a cry:

"Wake up! Wake up! Our visitor is murdering us."

Deer fled into the woods with Wolves in pursuit. They pressed him so closely that he climbed a tree, a feat which Deer could do in those days, but Wolves could not. The pursuers returned to their house and asked the old woman what they ought to do. She told them they must learn a song, which, when sung at the foot of the tree in which Deer had taken refuge, would cause him to fall down. So they sat down and she taught them the following words:[a]

Tsamimmlpaz | ayaqlpaqaqaz | ckalilyalwip | ckalawa yaqlaz
This is said to mean:[b] Please sleep, over yonder, you big mountain goat.[c]

Ayaw cmlt	ayawa-a	ayaw cmlt	ayawa-a
Yawning,[d]	yawning,	yawning,	yawning.

[a]Recorded as song VII D 3d, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[b]This song is said to have been handed down for many years. The words are practically unintelligible and the Bella Coola do not profess to understand them. They assume that the melody was made by a supernatural being and that this fact accounts for the peculiar form.

[c]It is clear that the singers were not to address the deer by name.

[d]This sound is supposed to represent a loud yawn. The singer gaps it out as if on the point of falling into a heavy sleep.

[533]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

599*

Kashwanai	dzpitsi	tspiwa
Fall down,	one leg,	fawn.*

That is: May one leg fall down from the fawn.

The Wolves learnt this song very carefully, and hurried back towards the tree into which their quarry had climbed, repeating it at intervals to fix it in their memories; at one point a fallen tree spanned their path and as they jumped it they forgot what had been taught them. Swipmalwhaints had stolen away their thoughts. Once more they went back to the woman, who again gave them the necessary song. This time they redoubled their efforts to remember it, but as before they forgot it when they leaped over the fallen tree. A third time the woman instructed them, and a third time they lost it, as they jumped the tree. On the fourth time of asking, the old woman inquired:

"Is there a fallen tree crossing your path on the way to the murderer?"

"Yes," they replied.

"Then," said she, "do not jump it. Go round the end."

On this, the fourth time they had set out, they went round the end, and did not forget what they had learnt. Deer was still in the tree under which they sang the song. The first time they sang it, one of his hind legs fell down; the second time the other hind leg dropped; on the third singing, one of the fore legs, and on the fourth, the body with remaining forelegs tumbled into their clutches. As each part fell they ate it up.

DEER AND WOLVES

(Second Version)

Not long after the first people had reached this earth and while they were still half man, half animal, Deer with his son went in a canoe to gather firewood at Elcho Harbour. The father went into the forest, leaving Fawn alone in the canoe. Presently four men and a woman came along. They were Wolves.

"You would make a fine meal," they said to Fawn.

When Deer returned, he asked his son, "Did you see anyone when I was away?"

"Yes," replied Fawn, "four men and one woman."

"Oh," said his father. "Did they say anything to you?"

"Yes. They wanted to eat me," replied the boy.

"They are bad people," said Deer. "They whistle through their noses which are like snouts."

*It is clear that the singers were not to address the deer by name.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

$539

Though the Wolves were about two hundred yards distant by this time, the woman, whose hearing was very acute, heard what Deer said to his son, and told her companions he had been saying nasty things about them. So they took their canoe and returned to the place where Fawn was waiting for his father, who had gone off into the forest for another load of firewood. The Wolves killed and ate Fawn, leaving only a little of his fur in the canoe. When Deer came back and found that his son had been devoured, he was filled with grief and wanted to know who had committed the murder. So he blew his nose, ejecting some mucus into the canoe, and asked it who were the criminals. The mucus told him; whereupon he went home.

A short time afterwards, the Wolves came to visit Deer in his house. He was very angry when he saw them, but people were always stopping and he could not refuse hospitality, since they pretended to be casual peacefully. After Wolves had partaken of Deer's food they asked him to dance for them, as they had heard of his skill in that line. Deer was raging at this cool behaviour on the part of his son's murderers, so plotted revenge and sat down near the fire to think out the details. Finally he agreed to dance, but asked one of the spectators to bind mussel shells on his wrists. The Wolves beat time and applauded as Deer performed beautifully before them. Soon he changed his dance to one that sent them all to sleep, and he at once began to cut the throats of all his guests with the shells. He had killed three of them when the woman with the sensitive ears awoke, and cried out at what he was doing.

Deer fled and climbed a tree, which all deer were able to do at that distant time. In the house there chanced to be an old woman who taught songs to the novices at ceremonials; she repeated for the remaining Wolf one, which, she said, would cause Deer to fall down from his refuge. She added that he must not climb over a log or he would forget it. Wolf learnt the song and hurried off after Deer, but, disregarding the instructions in his eagerness, he climbed over a fallen trunk and at once forgot the song. Back he rushed to the house, re-learnt it, and returned, taking care to go round the end of the prostrate tree. This time he remembered and, as he sang, first one of Deer's legs fell down, followed in a short time by his whole body.

HOW PORCUPINE PROSPERED

Once upon a time, Porcupine was sitting on the bank of a river, singing to himself. He wished to cross, but was afraid to swim. Presently, Caribou came up the river bank, swinging along at a tremendous rate of speed with his long legs.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

"Why are you sitting there, singing to yourself?" Caribou asked Porcupine.

"I want to cross the river but I am afraid to swim," replied Porcupine.

"Would you like me to carry you over?" asked Caribou.

"Yes indeed! Thank you very much," said Porcupine.

Caribou seized him by the forelegs, swung him up on to his back and started to swim the river. But Porcupine was conspiring to murder his helper. In the middle of the stream he began to jump about, uneasily.

"Why are you doing that?" asked Caribou.

"Oh! Oh! Nobody has ever carried me by the forelegs before. I have always been carried by the hind legs."

"All right!" said Caribou, genially. "We will go back and start again."

They returned to the bank from which they had started, where the obliging Caribou lifted Porcupine down, and then swung him up on his back again by the hind legs.

"Oh, thank you so much," Porcupine said. "I will not be afraid any more."

This position was what Porcupine wanted, as it left his hands free. In mid-stream he began to pull out his quills and stick them into the nose of Caribou, who jumped at the sudden pain.

"What are you doing up there?" he asked.

"Nothing," replied Porcupine. "It is only my whiskers you feel."

Before they reached the further shore, Porcupine had plucked out most of his quills and stuffed them into his mouth. The unfortunate Caribou barely reached land before falling dead.

Porcupine, who had no knife to cut up such large game, sat down and began to sing:*

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
I have no knife	to use on my booty	[illegible]

Presently Wolverine came up the bank.

"Why are you sitting there singing?" he asked.

"It is the first time I have ever killed such a big animal," Porcupine replied, "and I have no knife fit to deal with it."

"I have a suitable knife," Wolverine eagerly made offer. "Let us share the game."

"Thank you so much," said Porcupine. "That will be fine. We can go to my house to eat it."

---

*Recorded on disc VII D 476, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pelland.
*This is said to be an ejaculation in the porcupine language.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#534

They butchered the caribou and carried the meat up to Porcupine's house in a tree not far away.

"What a fine home you have," said Wolverine.

"Yes," Porcupine replied. "It took me a long time to build it."

Porcupine suggested that they cook the grease, and while this was being done he sent his guest to gather branches to lay over the meat. In his absence the treacherous host made a cut almost through a forked branch, from the under side, where it would not be noticed. After covering up the meat, the two began their meal. Porcupine kept pressing food on his guest who politely accepted it until he was bulging out with grease and could hold no more.

"Where is your toilet?" said Wolverine.

This was what Porcupine had been hoping for. He pointed out the forked branch as the convenience, adding:

"There is a rule here that after using it anyone must shake himself up and down."

When Wolverine had finished he shook himself as he had been told to do; the branch broke so that he fell down and was killed.

WINTER WREN AND GRIZZLY BEAR

Once upon a time, Winter Wren, who lived with his grandmother, asked her to give him some dry salmon, which he left soaking in the river over night. When he went to collect it next morning, it had vanished. The following night Winter Wren put out some more salmon, but it too disappeared before morning. This happened on several nights and he became so angry that he determined to watch. Presently, Grizzly Bear came along and gulped down the fish at a mouthful.

"You're a thief!" Winter Wren burst out angrily. "It is you who have been stealing my salmon."

Grizzly Bear, more amused than angry, replied:

"You impertinent little rascal! If I so much as sniffed you would be sucked into my stomach."

Winter Wren continued to scold Grizzly Bear in such an irritating way that he sucked him up through his nostrils, but the little bird, by no means discommoded, flew out through Grizzly Bear's anus, chattering impudently:

"Where did I get out?"

Grizzly Bear plugged up his anus and again sucked in Winter Wren. This time the little fellow took two sticks which he twirled until he had made a fire within Grizzly Bear's stomach. Then he removed the plug

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

from the anus and flew away. Grizzly Bear rolled around in agony till he died. 539r

HOW MALLARD DUCK GOT HIS NAME

Mallard Duck married Merganser,[a] but soon tired of her and discarded her in favour of Red-Breasted Merganser. The incensed one began to swear at her successor, but at once Mallard Duck joined in the defence of Red-Breasted Merganser and insulted his former wife.

"Nāx! Nāx! Nāx!" he said as if he were vomiting, imitating what he claimed had been a common practice of Merganser. But the jibe was so often repeated that Mallard Duck received from it his own name, Nānnx.

THE MISFORTUNES OF JAY

Rocky Mountain Jay was a Carrier, who lived long ago, far away in the interior mountains. One summer the snow did not melt from above his house so that his only connection with the open air continued to be a small passage for smoke and breath. Summer passed and autumn came, with the ripening of the berries, but still the snow remained and Jay kept indoors, thinking it still was winter. One day a little bird brought him a sprig of ripe berries, chiding him for his lassitude and folly in staying where winter reigned, when he could come out into autumn.

"All you have to do," said the visitor, "is to get ready and force yourself through the snow."

Jay took the advice and plunged out through the drift into autumn, carrying his bow and arrows. As he looked back at his house under the snow he thought to himself how much better it was to be out in the open.

He wandered through the woods till presently he saw Black Fox asleep. He sneaked up to him, arrow poised on string ready to shoot, when he heard a voice:

"Do not shoot, Jay," it said. "Blood will spoil the fur. Build a fence round Fox with only a narrow opening in it, where you can put a snare."

The voice came from his anus. It was as if he had two minds, one located in that part of his body. Jay followed the advice and built a fence of dry branches around sleeping Fox with only a narrow opening in which he set a snare. When this was ready he built a fire to awaken Fox and frighten him into the noose; but the fence flared up so that the startled Fox was able to jump to safety over the shattered barricade. Jay was so angry that he beat his anus.

[a] The species could not be identified. The Bella Coola term is skelists.

[825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539

"But for your stupid advice," he said, "I should never have bothered with a fence. It is all your fault that I lost Fox."

Jay wandered on until he reached a lake on the surface of which were numerous water-fowl. Seeing them before he himself was observed, he sneaked back into the woods to formulate a plan of attack. He made a large bundle of moss with which he staggered into sight of the birds.

"Hi, Jay!" they called out. "What is the big bundle you are carrying?"

"It is something supernatural," he replied.

"Won't you let us see it?"

"All right!" Jay answered cunningly. "Let us make a house and then you can see it."

He marked out on the ground the plan of a house, complete even to the back-room, and as soon as he had finished, a building appeared on the place he had marked. Putting the bundle out of sight, within, he came to the doorway and called to the water-fowl who came trooping in. When Jay had built a blazing fire in the middle of the house to make it oppressively hot, he began to dance. He danced and he danced until one after another of his guests fell asleep; at last the only one awake was Grebe, an old woman sitting near the door, and even she dozed at intervals. Jay danced immediately in front of her till she slept soundly. Then he began to wring the necks of his guests, but when he had only half completed the circuit, Grebe awoke.

"Wake up! Wake up!" she cried out. "Jay is killing us!"

The survivors fled in haste. Jay's anus spoke again:

"Boil the birds with hot stones, but leave their legs projecting from the receptacle. Put a cover on and at intervals pull the feet. When they are cooked the flesh will fall away, and you will be able to draw out the bones alone."

Jay followed this advice and carefully covered the pot, leaving the legs sticking out. Then, weary with dancing, he went to sleep after telling his anus to wake him up should anyone enter the house. No sooner was Jay comfortably asleep than he was aroused by the voice:

"Jay! Jay! Get up," it said. "Someone is coming."

Jay jumped up hastily, but there was no one near. His mischievous anus had merely played a trick on him. He went to sleep again, but no sooner was he snoring peacefully than the warning was repeated. Again Jay got up, to no purpose, and again he returned to his slumber, muttering anathemas on his tormentor. When his anus woke him a third time he was so angry that he beat it for its pranks and once more went to sleep. Soon afterwards the water-fowl re-entered the house, but Jay's spiteful anus allowed him to sleep. The intruders took off the pot-cover, broke off the legs of the cooking birds, removed all the meat from the dish, and replaced it with stones. Finally they put the feet back into their original position and fastened down the lid. Before leaving, they put some morsels of meat on the teeth of Jay, who was lying with his mouth open. 539*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When the fire had died down, Jay awoke and said to his anus:

"Jay, I think the food must be ready. The fire has burnt low."

He went to the pot and grasped one leg, which came away easily; then did the same with several birds.

"Yes," he said, "the legs come away easily; the food must be ready."

But when he lifted the cover he found nothing but stones. Great was his surprise, especially since there was a taste of food in his mouth. Thoughtfully he picked his teeth.

"I must have had a meal after all," he said.

Then he felt his stomach.

"No, I can't have eaten."

Again as he picked his teeth his perplexity increased.

"I must have eaten," he muttered.

But his empty stomach drove him to the conclusion that he had not.

Deciding that his anus must have played a practical joke on him, he determined to punish it severely. He built a blazing fire, then turned his back to it and began to toast his rump. Alas! As the culprit suffered, so did Jay himself.

When he could bear the pain no longer he fled.

HERRING AND OLACHEN

Long ago, Herring had a small dorsal fin near his tail, as do olachen, trout, and salmon at the present time. At that period Olachen had no fin, but on his head a large mass of unruly hair which defied his efforts to brush it. The two agreed to trade, Olachen giving some of his grease for Herring's fin. That is why, today, Herring has no fin on his back, as Olachen has, and why the head alone of the former is greasy.

THE DEFEAT OF COLD WIND

Soon after the first people had come down to this earth, while they were still semi-human, many were killed by Cold Wind, who destroyed all the berries and green things, so that both men and animals were in dire straits for food. A meeting was held at which it was unanimously decided to attack Cold Wind, an enormous black-skinned man, living far to the north. A war-party set out but though some members of it penetrated nearly to his house, they were driven back by the severe cold. 539* 821

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922,1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 539
821

On their return they asked Halibut for his help, and he agreed to join a second expedition. This set off, many thousands strong, all the men and all the animals. Warned by previous experience, they wore heavy clothing, but in spite of it, many of them froze to death as they drew near Cold Wind's house. Those that finally reached it saw their enemy lying on his back and blowing a cold current from his anus. The young and brave men rushed in and pinioned their enemy on his back before he was aware of their approach. Halibut took up his position outside the door.

"What do you mean by killing mortals?" he said. "I am going to kill you for your evil deeds."

Cold Wind suddenly exerted his strength, threw off the puny men who were trying to hold him down, and rushed out of his house. But he did not notice Halibut, who was lying down just outside, and stepped on him, so that, slipping, he fell with a crash. This time everyone seized him so securely that he could not escape.

A general cry was raised, "Kill him quickly!"

"Please don't do that," sbid Cold Wind. "I will promise to blow for only one month in the year."

"No! No! Let us kill him immediately," cried his captors.

"I'll blow only for twenty days," offered Cold Wind.

"No! He must be killed," said the warriors. "We don't want to talk."

Cold Wind, terrified, offered in succession to blow for only ten days, four days, two days, and one day, but each proposal was greeted with howls for his instant death. At last when Cold Wind offered to blow gently in the mornings of one month, his captors agreed to release him.

That is why trinindawi, the cold wind of the early morning, blows in March.

THE DEFEAT OF COLD WIND
(Second Version)

Long, long ago there was no summer and nothing grew in the land. All living creatures suffered from the perpetual ice, so they decided to attack Cold Wind who was responsible for this state of affairs. A raiding party set out, comprising all the plants, all the mammals, all the fish, all the birds, and all the men. They travelled to the north, where the cold grew so intense that the party suffered severely from it. Near Cold Wind's house, Halibut spoke to his comrades:

"I can deal with him more easily than anyone else. When he comes out of his house, make a noise to distract his attention, while I wriggle on my back towards him, to trip him up."

This plan was agreed upon. When they reached their destination, Cold Wind came running down a ladder from his house to send more frost

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and cold to destroy the reckless creatures who had dared to oppose him. 539* 821
While he was climbing down, the attackers called out, attracting his attention, so that Halibut was able to wriggle, unobserved, to a place at the bottom of the ladder. As Cold Wind trod upon him, Halibut moved, and his antagonist fell to the ground. He was seized by his enemies before he could rise to release more cold.

"What have you against me?" he asked them. "I visit you only twelve months in the year."

"That is too often," his captors replied, as they stretched him out on the ground to kill him.

"If you spare me I will visit you for nine months only," Cold Wind made offer.

Again he was told that was too much, and he must be killed. Cold Wind, terrified, proposed coming for shorter and shorter periods, six months, four months, two months, and finally for a single month, but each offer was refused, and followed by threats of instant death. At length the captors accepted his agreement to come only in the early morning.

That is why, to this day, the cold wind comes only in the early morning.

Snuneq Stories

538
776

Of the supernatural animals which the Bella Coola believe inhabit the wild glens and mountains of British Columbia, that which figures most prominently in their mythology is the snuneq. There are four slightly different varieties of this monster. The most common is regarded as being about the size of a large grizzly bear, but with long front legs and short hind ones, on which it can run in upright position when it so desires. Its legs terminate in large talons resembling those of an eagle, with the thumb set opposite to the fingers; its pelt, long and fleecy, is of a grayish-blue colour. The monster is able to roll its eye-balls completely over, and, when the reverse side is exposed, there shoot forth dazzling beams of light which strike senseless anyone on whom they fall. It uses its eyes for hunting. The most peculiar feature of the snuneq, however, is that it carries on its back a basket provided with spikes inclined inwards and downwards at such an angle that any living creature thrust within is unable to escape. The basket

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

538 776 can be removed at will, and the Bella Coola relate how, long ago, the inhabitants of a village captured one of these. Cruelly, they placed it at the top of a lofty tree, then carefully smoothed off the bark to make climbing virtually impossible. The unfortunate snnuq tried repeatedly to scale the tree, amid the mockings of its human tormentors; at last it succeeded in doing so, whereupon it dashed off, happily, with its basket.

Less dangerous than the snnuq is the creature known as po·qwais, differing only from the true snnuq in having a band of white through its eyes. A third variety, snnuqos wa swndas, the mountain snnuq, remains perpetually above the line of vegetation. Little is known of it.

The most dangerous is a true snnuq with the genital organs of a woman on its forehead. This creature is able to reverse the course of streams, to cause light snow to fall, and even to raise up mountains when pursued. A hunter meeting one of these monsters is in deadly danger unless he calls it by its name, splix, female genitalia. So doing will cause the animal to lose its power and grovel and writhe impotently on the ground.

Like all other supernatural animals, the snnuq is believed to have only recently quitted the vicinity of Bella Coola, on account, so it is said, of the noise made by the rifles of the white man. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of the animals, though several state that they have heard them not many years ago. It is assumed that the snnuq has migrated to some less populated area, probably to the region north of Dean Channel and east of Frederick Island.

The following stories, which are among the most popular in Bella Coola, illustrate the characteristics of the snnuq.

* 539

THE GRAVE ROBBER[44]

Long, long ago, there was a large Bella Coola town[45] on the White-

[44]For another version of this story see Boas, p. 86.
[45]Other informants stated that the village was Stmx.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

water* River, a short distance above its junction with the Bella Coola. The soil in the vicinity was of clay, supporting a heavy, but not dense forest growth. At that period it was the custom of the Bella Coola to cover a corpse with skins and place it in a crouching position in a box, which was lashed with sinews and suspended from a tree. The inhabitants of this town became worried when, on the morning after a funeral, the coffin would be found on the ground with the lashings cut, and the body removed. The son of a commoner suggested to a friend, the son of a chief, that they try to solve the mystery. It was thought that a sorcerer must be robbing the coffins, so the two planned that the young commoner should be placed in one alive, and hung from a tree, with full funeral rites, while his comrade watched from ambush. This plan was carried out. The place of disposal for the dead was some distance from the town, but connected with it by a well-cleared straight trail. The son of the chief lay concealed in the bushes, and the townspeople provided themselves with resinous sticks for torches, in case their assistance should be needed in dealing with the malefactor.

The boy in the coffin kept watch, and presently he saw approaching, not a sorcerer, as expected, but a sninq. The creature leaped for the box, ripped its lashing, and pulled it to the ground, where he hauled out the supposed corpse. The sninq stuffed the boy into a basket carried on his back supported by a tump-line round his forehead; it was provided with spikes, projecting inward and downward to prevent the escape of anyone within. The boy continued to feign death, while his friend roused the town. A good trail led along the Whitewater for about twenty miles, and over this the sninq travelled at a tremendous speed, ability to move rapidly being a characteristic of these animals. Across the trail lay two windfalls which had never been cleared away because they were at such a height that a man could pass under them. The boy knew of these fallen trees and planned to grip the first in passing, hoping that the animal would be unable to turn round to get at the basket, and, therefore, would be pinioned. He did this, and hung on as long as possible against the straining of the sninq, but at last was forced to emit wind through his rectum and release his hold. The animal thought the pannier had been caught in the tree-fall till he heard the sound made by the boy and grew suspicious. He took off the basket, removed his prey, and laid his hand over his heart, but the lad held his breath long enough to deceive the sninq. The youth made another attempt to escape at the next fallen tree, but again he was forced to give up and emit wind. This time the sninq was still more suspicious, but again the boy succeeded in holding his breath for a very long time and escaped detection.

They had now reached the base of Mount Tsodx, which was ascended

*The Atnarko.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 in a diagonal direction until smmq's home was reached, an underground house entered by a hole in the roof which also served as a chimney. The boy was carried in and thrown down at the base of one of the walls, where he lay as if dead though taking stock of his surroundings through half-closed eyes. A double-ended stone knife hung near the doorway, while on the walls were numerous articles that had been placed in coffins, such as skins and tools. A female smmq and two young ones were in the house and one of them took the lad's cloak, leaving him naked. The two youngsters began to play with his testicles, and asked their parent if they might have them for earrings.

"No," the father said. "This is no ordinary corpse. I am going to make earrings for your mother from the testicles."

Meanwhile the female was cooking a meal of human flesh. Glancing about the walls, the boy saw numerous corpses, or parts of them, hanging up like salmon; they were bodies which had been taken from coffins.

After eating, the male smmq sharpened his knife and prepared to skin the boy. He seized his chin and raised his head, so that he could blow on his throat to clear the hair away for a free passage for the knife—as the Bella Coola do when skinning animals—and made a vertical incision in the neck and chest. The victim had waited for this, in order that he might have proof of his adventure when he returned home. He uttered a low hoot, such as is made by supernatural beings, and the smmq drew back in surprise. Whereupon the boy hurled a brand from the fire at the other animals, seized the hanging knife, and fled. When he reached the base of the mountain he found that the smmq was pursuing him, without the basket. The animal tried to fascinate and intimidate him by emitting flashing beams from his eyes, but without success, for the lad had now supernatural power. The smmq was gaining on him when he reached the Whitewater, but he dived, swam under water, and emerged safely on the other side. The animal lost time in searching the river bottom, but when at last he saw the boy on the other bank he plunged rapidly down the river-bed in pursuit. The lad again escaped by swimming to the other shore, and in this manner the chase continued down the valley, the youth crossing and recrossing the river whenever the smmq came close to him. Meanwhile his comrade had remained watching the trail near the village. When he saw a solitary figure approach, he sent word to the town that one of the search party, sent out after his friend, was returning. But all of them had already come back, so they knew it must be the hero himself, and all the villagers turned out to greet him. When the still pursuing smmq saw so large a number of people he returned up the valley.

The boy related his experiences, and in proof of his veracity showed the wound on his throat and chest. He suggested that it would be an easy and a profitable task to kill all four snuuq. The village chiefs decided to take action. They sent word to the other Bella Coola villages, asking for aid, and requesting that those disposed to give it should bring with them soiled clothing, cedar-bark cloths used by women in menses, and resinous sticks for torches. 539*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Several months elapsed before a sufficient number of pads was collected as these are usually destroyed, but at last the members of the expedition met at Stuie and set out under the guidance of the boy. When the base of the mountain was reached, he pointed out the smoke rising from the snuuq's house, but not one of them could see it. Half way up the slope he again indicated the spot, but again it was invisible to all except himself. The snuuq heard the approach and came to the door of his house, but the lad alone could see him. The animal flashed the power from his eyes at the party, and all but the boy fell down, senseless; after a time they recovered and continued their course, but again the snuuq stunned them with his eyes, though this time the effect lasted for a shorter period. Alternate stupefaction and advance went on until the people were close to the cave of the snuuq, who by this time could no longer affect them for the boy had transmitted to his companions his own power, before which the animal was helpless. They were now at the house, though the youth alone could see it. Under his direction, the soiled clothing and other articles were tied to resinous sticks and thrown as he indicated. The male snuuq kept tossing these back, but though the villagers saw their missiles returned, and used them again, they could not see the thrower. After a time they heard a sound of choking. It was the death agony of the young snuuq. They continued to hurl the burning weapons, and another gurgling marked the death of the female; a final choking ultimately proclaimed the death of the male. When all the noise had ceased, the boy opened the door and saw all four animals lying dead. Some of the attackers recognized objects on the walls which they themselves had placed in the coffins of friends or relatives; this loot was taken back to the village, for return to all claimants. The four snuuq were skinned and their wavy pelts long continued to be a source of pride to the village.

THE GRAVE ROBBER

(Second Version)

Once, long ago, a number of boys and girls, with a few adults, went on a picnic to a pleasant, open stretch of country, not far from Kimsquit. They played for a time, had a meal of the food which they had brought with them, and then began to tell stories about what happened to the dead. An argument arose, and a brave young man offered to settle it by pre-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 tending to die, and allowing himself to be buried, so that he could tell by personal experience the fate of a corpse. Some of the party tried to dissuade him, others encouraged him, and finally all agreed to help him. Soon afterwards he fell down, as if suddenly stricken. The men wept and the women wailed as if a real death had taken place; then they carried the "corpse" a short distance from the scene of the "death" and buried it, taking care to insert a hollow reed from his mouth to the surface of the ground, so that the young man could breathe. After weeping over the grave in a realistic manner, the people returned to Kimsquit, leaving one young man concealed up a tree to watch the place of burial.

It was in the early afternoon that all this had taken place. Nothing approached the grave until dusk, when the hidden youth saw what he took to be a black bear drew near. The animal sank into the ground without effort, as one would sink in water, and emerged as a man, clad in a bear skin and carrying the buried youth over his shoulder, slung by the legs. Then the watcher knew that the creature carrying off his friend was a snuuq. The animal trotted away towards his home with the youth who had been buried, and the latter took advantage of an over-hanging tree to clutch a branch with his hands and hang on. The snuuq tugged, but the youth held on until the animal dropped his burden. Then the young man at once relaxed his grip, as he still wished to simulate death. The snuuq concluded that a branch had caught his quarry, so picked up the boy from the ground again and started off. A second time the lad gripped a branch, but as he was straining at it he was obliged to pass wind. The snuuq heard the noise and became suspicious, but the boy held his breath, and though the animal felt his heart he was deceived into thinking him dead. A third time he seized a branch, and again was forced to emit wind, but, as before, he held his breath for a very long time and the animal was again deceived. Meanwhile, the hidden watcher, having marked the animal's course as long as possible, returned to Kimsquit and told what had happened. Some of the people did not believe his tale, and went to dig up the grave, from which they found that the "corpse" had vanished. This time they wept in earnest and then returned home.

The snuuq carried the youth to his home in the mountains, a house shaped like an ordinary one, where he lived with his wife and children. He threw the boy on the floor and the snuuq youngsters spread his legs apart and began to play with his testicles, saying to their father:

"Please give us those funny things for earrings."

The snuuq refused, and said to them:

"Stop that, you brats! I am going to give them to your mother for earrings. It is the first time that I have caught such an animal."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

After eating a meal, the sminiq prepared to skin the boy, as a hunter removes an animal's pelt. He placed him on his back on the ground and blew on the youth's chest to separate the hair and facilitate a clean incision. When his skin had been cut vertically, from throat to stomach, the youth jumped up and cried out loudly. The sminiq and family fell over as if dead; the sudden shock had expelled their spirits. The youth grabbed a spear and fled down the mountain. He had nearly reached its base when a burst of light, almost equal to that of the sun in intensit y, came from the sminiq, and stunned the youth. After a time he recovered and continued his flight; this time he got almost as far as the bank of the river in the valley, when he was again stricken by the beam of radiance. Once more recovering, the lad fled down the river's edge, with the sminiq pounding along after him. When the animal had almost captured him, he dived into the river and swam to the other bank, down which he continued his flight. After a little delay, the sminiq likewise crossed the river and took up the chase, but again his quarry swam across. Thus the pursuit was continued with crossings and re-crossings of the stream until the village was approached, when the sminiq abandoned his efforts to recapture the youth and returned home.

The boy got back to the village without further adventures. After describing his experiences, he asked the people to join him in an attack upon the sminiq, adding that the weapons which could prevail against him would be cloths stained with menstrual fluid, or with the blood which follows the delivery of a child. The people agreed to join in the expedition, and for about two months carefully saved all such stained cloths, instead of immediately hiding them. When they had collected sufficient they set out for the sminiq's house. Arriving near the spot, they built a fire, tied the cloths to long sticks and set them alight, then advanced four at a time, and cast the flaming brands into the house. The sminiq used his power to strike down the first group, but another took its place from the column of fours. Soon the first four revived and posted themselves in the rear, as did each group on recovering consciousness. Thus the assailants maintained their strength and the siege continued for a considerable period, until the interior of the house was steeped in poison, which at last killed the occupants. Then the attackers entered and carried away as spoil the goods which the sminiq had looted from coffins.

THE VANITY OF Sminiq[47]

Long, long ago a number of the young people of Kwatna went up the river to Nuliliqaltnk to get hump-back salmon which abounded there.

[47]For another version of this story see Boas, p. 83.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 The fish were so plentiful that the expedition was really in the nature of a picnic. They had built a huge fire in which they had thrown stones for boiling some of the salmon, when one of the lads, who was sitting on a log somewhat apart from the others, called the attention of his comrades to something that he saw coming down the mountain. The boy, whose name was 'O-ł', was a cripple and also had a split lip which made his speech difficult to understand. Whether his companions failed to comprehend him, or whether he saw something invisible to them, is not known. At any rate they saw nothing.

"All you see is your split lip," they said.

'O-ł' could now see a snuuq rapidly approaching, but his companions paid no heed to his frantic warnings. The dreaded creature dashed into the camp, caught one after another, until he had stuffed all of the party into his basket. There was wild wailing and weeping. 'O-ł' alone had retained sufficient presence of mind to keep the knife with which he had been splitting salmon, and with this he slit the bottom of the basket so that one captive after another could drop out without the snuuq being aware of his loss. Each one shed his or her blanket so as to slip out more easily, and these coverings in time formed a false bottom, so that a little girl who had last been caught and, therefore, was at the top of the basket, could not escape. The snuuq was very angry to find on reaching home that this one child was his only prey.

When the children returned to Kwatna and told what had happened there was grief and consternation. The little girl carried off was an only child and her parents were almost overcome by sorrow; every day the bereaved mother used to go behind her house to weep, crying until she finally sobbed herself to sleep. One day as she was crying, she happened to notice some of the mucus which she had blown from her nose on to the ground, and saw, to her utter amazement, that a head appeared to be forming in it. As she watched, the mucus gradually grew into a boy which she picked up and carried home, delighted beyond measure. The infant was a supernatural being. By the next morning it had grown miraculously, and this phenomenal growth continued for four days; by that time the child had the strength and ability of a well-grown youth; he was also very handsome.

On the fourth day the youth asked his father, as he called the husband of the woman from whose mucus he had been formed, to get him a bow and arrows, and a fish-spear. Thus armed, he set off up the river and finally sat down on a fallen log that projected at an angle over the stream. In a little while the snuuq came along and greatly desired him on account of his wonderful beauty. The youth showed no fear, but as the creature rushed at him merely used his own supernatural power to vanish, appearing again a moment later in a different position. Finally the sɛmɛq saw the youth's reflection in the water and was deceived into diving after it. When he came to the surface, after catching nothing, and again saw the reflection, the stupid monster concluded that he must have been mistaken, and that the image which he saw could be no other than his own, that he was more handsome than he dared to believe. What he especially admired was a pair of abalone-shell earrings which the youth always wore.[10] The amused youth, sitting immediately above the creature, determined to continue the game. When the sɛmɛq moved his head sideways, the boy did the same; when he moved it up and down, so did the boy; when he scratched his brow, the lad did likewise. The sɛmɛq was completely baffled. At last this became monotonous, so the youth called out to the monster. With a crash the animal's dreams of his own charms vanished and he was filled with grief and envy.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

"Oh! I wish I were as beautiful as you are," he called out. "If you know what your mother did to make you so handsome, won't you please do the same for me?"

"Are you brave enough?" asked the boy.

"Yes, yes," eagerly replied the sɛmɛq. "I would do anything to have your beauty."

"All right then," replied the youth, "but remember my parents took drastic steps to obtain me my beauty. You are sure you are brave enough?"

"Yes," said the monster, firmly.

"All right then," continued the boy. "My father placed a heavy stone on my forehead, let's go and find one."

They went up the stream together until they found a fine smooth stone about three feet long. The boy told the sɛmɛq to lie down on his back, and, when the animal had done so, he placed the stone on his forehead.

"Oh! oh!" cried sɛmɛq, "I am frightened, it is too heavy, please stop."

"I did not cry like a baby when my father put such a stone on my head to make me beautiful," said the boy. "Keep quiet!"

"All right," cried the troubled animal, who was thoroughly frightened, yet at the same time desirous of obtaining beauty. "I want to be lovely, go ahead! I'll be brave."

When the boy replaced the stone on the sɛmɛq's head the latter began to wail more loudly than before. The youth grew angry.

"If you don't lie still," he said, "you will come to harm."

In his fear the sɛmɛq had risen to a sitting position, but when he again lay down the youth decided it was time to act. Taking the stone in both [10] Why the sɛmɛq did not realize that he was not the wearer of such is a point the story does not elucidate.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

+539

hands he crashed it down on snuuq's head, crushing it to a pulp so that the brains ran out over the stones. The animal died instantly. The boy built a fire over the carcass, reducing it to ashes which he blew in all directions, saying as he did so:

"Henceforth you shall be mosquitoes."

That is why there are mosquitoes in all parts of the land today.

Thanks to his supernatural vision the youth could see snuuq's house. He went there at once to rescue the little girl, whom he restored to her mother amid great rejoicing.

The next day the supernatural youth asked the little girl to accompany him a short distance up the river. At a spot where eagles were plentiful he made a small shelter in which he placed the down of several of the birds which he killed, then, towards dusk, the two returned home. Every day they did this until a large pile of eagle down had been collected. Then the supernatural one said to the little girl:

"I must go back to my own home tomorrow. My father sent me down to your mother because he saw how disconsolate she was at your loss. Now that you are home I have done my work. You must not mourn for me, nor let your mother do so."

They returned home that night as usual and the following morning the supernatural one told his "mother" that he was going to leave that day. With the little girl he went as usual to the shelter containing the eagle down.

"Soon I shall bury myself under the down," he said to her. "Then I want you to take a stick and beat lightly on it. Keep on beating for a long time. I shall become eagle down, and presently you will see a rather large tuft work its way up to the top of the pile. That will be I. Take me and throw me up in the air. I will slowly drift upwards in circles. You can watch me until I disappear, then you must go home."

The little girl faithfully obeyed orders. It was a very long time before she saw a rather large tuft of down come to the surface, but when she threw it into the air it at once floated upwards. She watched it until it vanished, then went home weeping at the loss of her supernatural rescuer whom she had come to regard as a brother. Her parents, although themselves filled with grief, comforted her by reminding her that he had left according to his own free will.

THE WORK OF SNUUQ[*]

Above Canoe Crossing there was long ago a village at a point where two creeks enter the Bella Coola River, one from either side. The people of the place lived in underground houses facing the stream. One night a

[*] For similar stories see Boas, pp. 64 and 87.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

newly-born child was crying in one of the houses and, as the mother was feeding it, she saw by the light of her small fire a snung, with a white patch on his throat, looking into the house through the doorway-flue. There was always trouble at this place, so the people used to sleep with their weapons beside them. The woman cautiously awoke her husband, who reached for his bow, and shot an obsidian-pointed arrow into the white spot on the beast's breast. With a roar the snung vanished from the opening. The man was afraid to investigate that night, but he and his family built up a roaring fire as a protection. Next morning with his friends he made a careful search, but nothing was to be found, even the arrow had disappeared.

Near Nuxqalst, there was a large stone on the bank of the river which served as a landmark. A few days after the visit of the snung, a female of the species took up her position on this stone, where she groaned incessantly. No one had the courage to pass the place in a canoe. The son of a Stuu chief, however, wanted to investigate the animal, and he asked a fellow-villager, a young commoner, to accompany him. The latter was unwilling to do so, but he was under obligation to the chief's son, who pointed out that any evil results would fall upon himself, as leader of the expedition; so finally the commoner agreed to go.

They set off secretly in a canoe, with the chief's son as captain in the stern; when near the rock he reversed the craft so that the aft end grounded against it. The captain had confidence in his supernatural power, but for safety he seated himself on the rock with his feet in the canoe, so that if the snung made a hostile movement he would be able to push off and thus give his comrade a chance to escape. The snung continued to groan so dolorously that the boy was touched and soon he and the animal were weeping together. The snung told her sad story: how she had lost both her basket and her child, the animal shot at the entrance to the underground house. The parent was lonely and had taken up her position on the rock in order to tell her story to some brave man, but was disgusted at the cowardice of most people, who avoided her. She drew out a copper on which she had been sitting, and gave this to the boy, saying it had belonged to the dead child.

"If you go to my cave on Mount Mi'ub," she added, "you will find many more of the same which I have obtained from the coffins of the dead."

Having gained a hearing of her woes, the animal left, saying that she was going to Naas, an indefinite spot in the far east. The young man went to the animal's house, invisible to anyone else, and there took possession of many coppers. Later on, the body of the slain snung was found about six miles above the village. The corpse had brought a blight to the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 countryside; the vegetation looked as if salt had been placed on the soil, while bones lay about as if the place were an old battlefield, not of the snuneq alone but also of those of many other animals killed by eating the poisonous flesh.

The neighbourhood is still considered barren and, as recently as about 1870, no one would settle there.

THE LITTLE GIRL WHO WAS KIDNAPPED[10]

Long, long ago there was a little girl who used to cry a great deal. One night her weeping disturbed the whole household and her father sent her to bed.

"You had better keep quiet or a snuneq will get you," he said angrily.

After a time all the people in the house went to bed, leaving the girl still crying in the main room of the house. Soon she heard a voice she thought was her grandmother's.

"Come out to your grandmother, my dear," it said, "and have a feast of goat's grease."

The girl slipped outside and the voice told her to come a little farther on. When she did so she was seized by a female snuneq, for it was one of those creatures that had imitated her grandmother's voice. As the animal thrust her into her basket, the girl cried out that she was being carried off by a snuneq, and the people in the house heard her. They called to her to clutch a passing tree, which she did, but the snuneq cut it through with a single blow of her knife-edged leg. The girl was carried a long distance up the mountain and across a chasm bridged by a fallen log, at the other end of which was the snuneq's cave. The girl saw that it was full of coppers taken from coffins, as well as other kinds of goods and food that had been placed beside the dead. In one corner sat an old woman from whose body grew roots extending far down into the ground, effectively anchoring her to the spot. This woman told the girl not to eat anything the snuneq might give her, as roots would grow from her too if she did; instead she gave her a small bag in which to conceal food she must only pretend to eat.

"I am going out to get a sister for you," said the snuneq.

As soon as she had gone the old woman told the girl to put on her fingers a pair of mountain goat horns which were in the house; and when the snuneq came back to stand, opening and closing the fingers at her, as she tried to cross the bridge, saying at the same time, "sapplizpéma."[11] Soon they heard the snuneq returning. The animal gained the bridge, but was unable to advance or retire in the face of the girl, who opened and

[10] For another version of this story see Boas, p. 88.
[11] The meaning of this phrase is: "Open your eyes, mother."

Hallowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

534*

closed her fingers with the goat's horns upon them and kept repeating the word, "xaqkxqstma."

"Look out! Look out! You will hurt your grandmother," the animal cried out in fear.

But the girl continued until the xwuq fell from the log down into the chasm. Then the old woman said to her:

"Take that rope from the wall and I will lower you down to the dead xwuq. You must cut off the breasts; when you have done it, shake the rope and I will haul you up again. But be quick, for the young xwuq are out hunting and will shortly return."

The young girl was lowered down and cut off the flesh as she had been told to do. When she was drawn up again, she cooked it in grease. In a little while the young xwuq, who were wolves, came in and stared at the stranger, but the old woman explained:

"This is the new sister your mother has brought you. She has gone out again after another one."

They sat down to the food which had been prepared for them, but as soon as the eldest brother had tasted it he said:

"Taste it! Taste it! It is like our mother's breasts."

They all partook of the food and fell down dead. Following the old woman's instructions, the girl threw the carcasses down into the gorge.

Next she was told to fill a box with grease and food. She did so, making a handle of the rope with which she tied it. Then the old woman said to her:

"Give me a bundle of mountain goat fur."

This she began to roll out on her thigh into cord.

"Now," she said, "When you descend the mountain, take with you one end of this cord, or else you will never be able to find your way back. As you go on I will lengthen the cord to keep up with you."

The girl did this, and reached her home in the evening. She rubbed herself against the wall of the house, and the mother sent out her youngest child to ascertain the cause of the noise. The little one quickly returned.

"It is my sister who was carried off by the xwuq," she called out.

The mother considered this impossible and scolded the child for telling a lie. She then sent out another of her children but when this one returned with the same story, the mother rushed out and welcomed her daughter with great rejoicing. They went within and the girl asked her father to bring in the box she had been carrying. He tried to do so but could not lift it, even with the help of some of his friends.

"That is funny," said his daughter. "I carried it with one hand."

She brought it in without any trouble and took from the one box food enough to fill half the house. Having obtained the xwuq's carrying

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

#539

powers, she had not noticed the weight. A feast ensued, and next day all set out with the girl to the snung's house, following the rope as guide. They were astounded at the wealth they secured, but when they tried to release the old woman by cutting the roots, milk gushed out and she died.

THE LITTLE GIRL WHO WAS KIDNAPPED

(Second Version)

Once upon a time, not long after the people had come to this earth, a small girl, about ten years of age, cried and cried incessantly. Her mother grew tired and at length made no effort to comfort the child, but callously went about her work, at last going to bed with the other members of the household. Soon a female snung came to the outside wall of the house, applied her mouth to a knot-hole, and said to the little girl, in the voice of her father's mother:

"Come with me and I will give you some delicious mountain goat grease, and flesh from the stomach of a spring salmon."

The little girl stopped crying, and prepared to go to her grandmother's house. The snung blew on the knot-hole so that it enlarged sufficiently for the little one to pass through, and as soon as she had done so the monster seized her and thrust her into her basket.

"A snung has got me!" the terrified child shrieked.

This roused the household. The young men took brands from the fire and set out in pursuit of the kidnapper, guided by the crying of the girl in the basket. The snung travelled fast, sometimes diving under the earth in her efforts to out-distance the pursuers. For a long time the men were able to follow, but at length had to give up the chase, baffled. The mother was heart-broken, blaming herself for the child's loss, because snung have good ears and make a practice of stealing those whom from afar they hear crying.

The snung carried the little girl to her home, a cave in the precipitous wall of a canyon, approached by a single tree-trunk as bridge, put her inside and then went off hunting. As the child stood weeping bitterly, she saw in the corner an old woman who was fastened to the ground by roots which had grown from her rectum. This poor creature told the girl that the snung had captured her years before and had gained complete power over her because she had eaten some of the human flesh her captor gave her. Looking around, the child saw corpses hanging on one side of the cave, goat meat on the other. The old woman bade the girl eat some of the latter, for it was good. She would then be able to tell the snung on her return that she had eaten, and could thus escape making a meal of human flesh. She further added that the snung had forgotten her gloves, from which radiated flashing light, and would be certain to come back for them shortly. She suggested a way by which the child could kill her captor. 539*

J:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NES

"Put on the gloves," she said, "and stand in the doorway, opening and closing your hands in the snuuq's face as she returns across the chasm."

The little girl eagerly obeyed, put on the gloves and awaited the snuuq's return. Soon she saw her coming, and as she was half-way across the bridge the child began to open and close her hands, so that the flashing light struck the monster in the face. She also sang, as the old woman had bidden her:

"Sanqtsqtsma." "Open your eyes, mother!"

The snuuq grew terrified.

"Stop! Stop! I shall fall," she cried out.

But the girl continued until the brute fell from the log into the chasm and was killed. Then the old woman said to the girl:

"Take one end of this long rope and climb down the chasm, while I hold the other. Cut off the snuuq's breasts and I will haul you up again."

The girl did as she was told. She found the corpse of the snuuq and cut off the breasts; then the old woman drew her up by the rope, and said:

"The snuuq's four children, who are wolves, are away hunting at present, but they will soon return. You must hurry to cook their mother's breasts for them so that they will eat and die."

The girl had just finished cooking when the four wolves came in, laden with their spoil of mountain goat. The girl gave them the meal which she had prepared, and at the first mouthful, the eldest said to the others:

"This is queer meat. It tastes like our mother's breasts."

The others hastened to sample the food and agreed with him. They all fell dead. At the old woman's bidding the little girl threw the four corpses over the brink of the chasm.

"You had better go home now," the old woman said to her. "Be sure to keep hold of one end of this rope, made of mountain goat hair, which I will spin out as you travel, otherwise you will never be able to return. When you reach your home, tie the cord to a tree before you go into your house. Tell your friends what you have seen and done, and they can all come here, using the rope as a guide."

So the little girl set out for home, taking one end of the rope with her, while the old woman kept spinning out at the other end, singing as she did so,

"Make yourself long by your efforts, wool."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

539

It was a long journey home, perhaps twelve miles, but the little girl carefully carried one end of the rope, nor did she forget to tie it to a tree before she entered the house. When she had told of her amazing adventures, great was the delight of her parents at her escape from such a perilous predicament. She told of the old woman rooted to the ground, and gave her name, well-known as that of a woman who had mysteriously disappeared one night many years previously, whose fate had never been discovered. The girl told also of the wealth on the walls of the *snuq'*s house, valuables robbed from the coffins of the dead, and how the old woman had bade her bring her friends to carry away the loot.

Next morning the entire population of the village set out on the quest, led by the little girl, who carefully watched the rope to guide her back to her destination. After travelling about twelve miles they came to the canyon.

"We are almost there," she said. "I can see the opening into the cave."

No one else could distinguish it so the villagers went closer, but still it remained invisible to all except the girl herself. She rubbed her hands over the eyes of about a dozen men and at once they were able to see the mouth of the cave. With these men she entered and found nothing altered since the preceding day. The place was packed to the roof with all sorts of treasure, including a countless number of mountain goat skins, highly prized for their wool. The men took down the valuables and divided them equally among all who had taken part in the expedition. A more difficult task was to free the old woman. First they tried to pull her up, but the roots were as firm as if a part of the mountain itself. At her request, given the day before to the little girl, they had brought an axe and when all else failed they cut her roots. When the last was severed, however, her life went too for it extended down into them. So the party went home without her.

Two other versions of this story were collected; they resemble the accounts here given so closely that publication seems unnecessary.

538

Supernatural Stories

In this section are grouped a number of miscellaneous accounts, describing the adventures of supernaturally endowed individuals, and of those who came in contact with supernatural beings but received no special boon. These are of many kinds, some of which verge on the tales of shamans already given. Like all others in this chapter, the following stories have no social significance and can be related by anyone. 538

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE WRONGED WOMAN

539*

Long, long ago, the sister of Kina'o· married a foreign chief with whom she went home to live. Her husband used to beat her and treat her so abominably that she kept asking him to allow her to return; finally he consented, and she set off gladly with him in his canoe. About half-way to the destination, the husband landed and asked his wife to climb with him to the top of a very tall tree. This she did, nor did she become suspicious when he sharpened the extreme tip of the trunk. Suddenly, he seized her, and thrust her down on to the point which pierced into the lower part of her body, pinning her to the tree-top. The evil husband then returned home.

The captive did not die immediately. From the tree-top she could see canoes passing, and kept calling out for help, but no one heard her. At last her brother Kina'o· went by, en route to his sister's home with a present of food. Not knowing who he was, she cried out as she had done before; he recognized her voice, landed, but at first could not see her, and was filled with amazement to discover her pinned up the tree. Up he climbed to lift her off, but as he did so, she died.

Kina'o· determined to have his revenge. He clothed himself in his sister's cape, hat, and blanket, in order to resemble her; this was an easy matter as the two looked alike. Thus attired, he continued his way to his brother-in-law's village, which he entered, leaning heavily on a stick as if he had received an injury to the lower part of his body. He said nothing, but Sumtus, his sister's husband's mother, saw him and mistook him for her daughter-in-law.

"You have been beating your wife again," she said to her son. "Look how she is limping."

He did not answer, being amazed to see her alive.

Kina'o· lay down as if sick while Sumtus prepared for her a dish of putrid salmon roe and bracken roots. When this was ready, the old woman sent one of her daughters to summon the supposed daughter-in-law who sat down near the fire and ate with bent head. The daughter noticed the great size of the eater's arms and legs and commented upon this to her mother.

"Hush!" answered the latter. "Don't be rude."

When Kina'o· had finished eating he went back to bed and then the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 old woman saw that there was blood where he had been sitting. She pointed this out to her son.

"See what you have done to your wife," she said. "Look at the blood."

The husband was puzzled, but concluded that in some manner his wife had escaped so there was nothing more to be done about the matter.

Presently he went to bed and began to fondle Kina'o·, believing all the time that it was his wife.

"Don't touch me," Kina'o· said. "I am in too much pain."

He desisted and went to sleep. Then Kina'o· got up, cut off the head of his brother-in-law and fled away with it. Only the murdered man's sister saw him and cried out that she had known all evening that it was a man. Relatives of the victim followed, but Kina'o· eluded them, finally returning home with the corpse of his sister and the head of her husband.

The kinsmen of the murdered man determined on revenge. Several months later, they despatched a war-party which sacked Kina'o·'s village, killing him and all his people except one girl whom they carried off as a slave. After living in bondage for several months, she became pregnant. In due course she went alone to the woods and delivered herself without assistance; the child was a boy. The mother knew that, if his sex were known, he would be killed through fear that if allowed to grow up he would avenge his mother's wrongs;[42] so she bound up her son's penis in a curve to resemble the organs of a girl. On returning to the village, she was asked if the child were a daughter, and she replied that it was. Several women looked at the infant, but none of them noticed the deception, nor did they observe it on future occasions when they helped the mother wash her child.

The woman had determined that her son should slay those who had enslaved her. Accordingly, she used to wash him in the river at dawn.

"Be bold," she would say as she did so. "You must revenge yourself on those who have wronged your mother."

Thanks to this washing, the boy gained so much strength that, when about ten or twelve years of age, he obtained supernatural power from ssiutl. One day he found some excuse to send his mother and her friends out of the village, then used his ssiutl ability to cause a landslide from a precipitous mountain behind the town. All the houses were swept away and every inhabitant killed except those whom he had sent away. Thus did he revenge his mother.

[42] No Bella Coola had ever heard of the killing of a slave's son at birth to prevent danger to his mother's owners. It is assumed that this may have occurred in the distant past.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This story has been handed down for so many generations that the boy's own name has been forgotten. He is always spoken of as Ālko·sxp, "He of the Tied-Up Penis." 539*

THE FERN GATHERERS

One autumn, just before the fall of the snow, a number of girls, with one boy companion, went off into the woods to gather ferns, as is customary at that season of the year. They ascended a side valley and camped beside the stream which flowed through it. By nightfall they had collected a large basketful of the ferns and were ready to rest. A fire was built, on one side of which the girls sat, with the boy on the other. Presently he began to sing, beating his own accompaniment:

"Rise, rise, you stream, and carry away their ferns," was his song.

The girls asked him to stop; at last he did so, but it began to rain. It rained and it rained until the creek rose so that a branch of it swept through their camp, destroying the fern and separating them from the boy. They wished to join him as it was on his side of the now impassable torrent that the trail back to the village was situated. The lad was equal to the emergency. Seizing his penis, he pulled it out to great length, and threw one end across to act as a bridge. It was not quite long enough, but one of the girls rushed into the roaring stream and hauled the end to shore. She was a trifle embarrassed as she did so, and walked with mincing steps. All the girls crossed the stream on this bridge and so were able to return to their village. As a result, the boy received the name, Tcl'laiyu.

THE MAD WOMAN

One April, not a great many years ago, nine men, in three canoes, went to fish for steel-head salmon in the Bella Coola River, near Hagenburg. A crazy woman followed them, crying out, making objectionable remarks, and annoying them, as she had done other fishermen on previous occasions. So intent was she on chasing these men, that, when necessary, she swam the river to keep in touch with them. Finally they decided to wait for her and kill her. Choosing a place where the rapids were bad, they stopped, caught the lunatic, and threw her into the whirlpool.

As idly they watched the river, to their amazement the woman appeared in the quiet water, a long way downstream, below the rapids, and swam ashore. They heard her say to a near-by mountain:

"See what they have done to me. Come!"

In response to her command the whole snow-cap of the mountain plunged down the valley in a vast slide, blocking the river, and killing the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 mad woman, as well as eight of her attempted slayers. She must have had some evil power, but no one knows what it was. All insane people are somewhat uncanny and are interfered with no more than is necessary.

THE IMPOSTOR

ıyuyuyut (I, p. 328) had a son named Stuix. The latter's son and his grandson, the hero of this story, each took the same designation and each was a successful hunter; in fact, ability in this line seemed to accompany the name. Stuix the third had been married for some time, but, although he deeply loved his wife, he seldom slept with her, as he was observing ceremonial chastity to increase his success in hunting. They had no children. On one occasion Stuix and his wife camped in a beautiful spot a little distance up the valley of the Kimsquit River, not far from a village where lived a bad woman who was in love with Stuix. He had scorned her advances but had failed to warn his wife against her. This woman, determined to win Stuix by fair means or foul, used to watch the camp to learn of his movements, in the hope that some chance would help her. Once when he was absent, hunting, she approached and began to talk pleasantly to his wife, who, suspecting nothing, invited her to sit down and gave her some food. After the meal the bad woman began to question her hostess about Stuix.

"Tell me, my dear, does your husband exercise his marital rights?" she asked.

"No," replied the wife. "He is a hunter; therefore does not do so."

"What do you do when he first comes home?" the other went on.

"I take off his skin shoes, wash them, and hang them up to dry."

The guest expressed interest in this answer and continued:

"Do you cook for him?"

"Yes," replied the trusting wife.

The scheming woman went on with a number of questions, such as, what time Stuix went to bed, when he got up, what his wife was accustomed to say to him on his return after the day's hunting, what he liked best to eat, in fact every conceivable detail of his day's routine. Stuix's wife, rather flattered at this interest in her husband's doings, answered the queries openly. Towards the time of Stuix's return the woman departed with loud protestations of friendship, promising to return another day to sit with the lonely wife. This was quite a natural suggestion, as there was an easy trail from the village to the spot where Stuix was encamped and visitors often walked the distance.

When Stuix returned, his wife pulled off his skin shoes, washed them, squeezed them, and hung them out to dry while the food was cooking.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Then she sat down to the meal with her husband, the routine being exactly as she had described it to her visitor. After they had finished eating, Stuix's wife told him of the day's happenings, how a woman, giving her name, had visited the camp and had asked a great many questions about him, including whether or not he observed ceremonial chastity, and other personal matters. 539*

"What did you tell her?" Stuix asked his wife.

"Oh, I answered her truthfully," she replied.

"You should never have done that!" Stuix burst out in anger. "It was none of her business. Don't you know that you should never discuss a hunter's observance of ceremonial chastity? You have behaved very badly." [785 831]

Stuix had reason for his wrath, because no wife should ever discuss this matter, as in so doing she weakens or destroys her husband's power.

A few days afterward the evil woman again visited Stuix's camp, carrying concealed beneath her blanket a wooden club used for killing salmon. Stuix's wife did not see the approach of her hypocritical friend, who struck her on the head with the weapon and killed her. The murderess dragged her victim's body a short distance from the camp; with her copper knife she removed the skin and drew it over her own body, endeavouring in every way to make it fit. But the wife of Stuix had been larger than the bad woman, who tried to remedy the difference in size by tying the excess in wrinkles around her hips. The greatest difficulty was about the eyes, where the skin hung in folds which the impostor sewed neatly to make less noticeable. When all was done the murderess scraped a hole in the soft ground and buried the body of her victim.

While awaiting the return of Stuix the impostor busied herself in carrying out all the small household occupations, just as she had been told about them. Towards dusk Stuix came back. He noticed that his wife looked peculiar and uneasy, but said nothing about it; they sat down together to the meal but the woman kept her eyes lowered, lest the loose skin about them might betray her. Stuix wondered at that and also at her voice, which did not sound normal. At night the masquerader went first to bed, as a wife always does when her husband is observing ceremonial chastity. Stuix followed shortly. In a few minutes an owl hooted:

"Stuix's wife has tied up a fold of skin round her hips."

Neither man nor woman spoke. Even at that distant period it was well known that the voice of a dead person passes into an owl, though only rarely can one communicate with the living. It was, in fact, the slain wife speaking from above the spot where her body lay. The murderess feared that Stuix would put his arm around her waist, but she was saved because his observance of ceremonial chastity prevented him from doing so. [775 825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 Nevertheless, she was greatly terrified. Stuix had been puzzled at his wife's unusual actions, and this warning increased his bewilderment, but he hesitated to show his suspicions by asking what the owl meant. Both lay awake all night and towards dawn the owl hooted again. The next day Stuix set out, as if for hunting, but lay down and slept instead, which the impostor was afraid to do in case he should return and look at her, when she was unprepared. That night the owl again hooted, and as before the two lay awake without speaking. The third night it was the same, but on the fourth, though the owl continued his hooting, the woman was so much exhausted that she fell asleep. Stuix then felt cautiously across her body, found the protruding fold of skin and realized something was amiss. He rose and built up a bright fire towards which he dragged the sleeper.

"Get up, I want to talk to you," he said.

As he pulled her by the hair he felt her scalp become loose in his hands, and realized what had happened. In great anger he cried out:

"But for the owl I should have remained in ignorance. Now I know what you have done. Why did you kill my wife?"

The woman did not answer. Stuix struck her twice with a club and she died. The owl stopped calling; its work was done.

The murder had taken place about midnight, but Stuix remained seated beside the fire until dawn without touching the woman he had slain, because he wanted witnesses to see the corpse before it was disturbed. After eating some food he went to the village where lived his own relations, those of his wife, and also the mother of the bad woman. He went first to his own family.

"I am in trouble," he said. "I believe that some one has impersonated my wife. At any rate last night I killed a woman who said she was my wife, though I think she was not. I want you to come and see what she looks like."

Two lads were sent as messengers round the village and soon all gathered to hear what had happened. Stuix addressed the people:

"I don't want to say much about what took place last night; in fact I do not know much about it myself. Please come and see. I have killed a woman who looked like my wife, but I do not think it was she."

They all set off with him to his camp, where they found, apparently, the corpse of his wife. Stuix sat down.

"Please take off her clothes and feel beside her hips," he said.

When they had done so they felt the peculiar rolls of skin.

"Please lift her hair," he continued.

The people who did so found it slack in their grasp. On more careful examination they lifted the skin of the face which came up loosely into the hand, and they found the various seams. Finally they stripped off the false skin and disclosed the body of the bad woman. The whole population of the village had gathered by this time and all were witnesses to the imposture. Stuix spoke: 539*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"I had my suspicions that this was the case; this woman came to the camp and asked my wife a great many questions. I told her that she had done wrong in letting a stranger know the details of my observance of ceremonial chastity."

"Have you any idea where your wife is?" asked the chief.

"No," replied Stuix. "The only clue I have is that an owl kept calling from that tree over yonder behind the house, saying: 'Stuix's wife has tied up a fold of skin around her hips.' "

The young men began to dig under the tree and presently uncovered the skinned body which had been thrown into the earth without clothing of any kind. The people, filled with grief and horror at the deed, showed their sympathy by gifts to Stuix; a coffin with carved sides, copper knives, and other valuables to place beside the body in it. The corpse was washed and borne in state with the many presents, including a large number given by Stuix himself, to the cemetery near the village, where it was interred. The family of the murderess buried her hastily on the spot, fearing the wrath of the people at the crime she had committed.

Stuix was so heartbroken that he did not hunt all winter, but supported himself on the stores laid up in his house. Grieved though he was at his wife's loss, a greater sorrow was that she had not lived long enough to bear him a son to perpetuate his name. Some four months after her death his father-in-law approached him, suggesting that he marry one of her sisters. The dead woman had two brothers and three sisters, and the whole family sympathized with the bereaved husband. Stuix was very much pleased with the proposition and promptly married one of the sisters,[53] who took the place of the murdered woman. Once more Stuix went hunting, in which he was so successful that many youths were constantly employed carrying home his game.

Within a year his wife bore him a male child who was likewise given the name of Stuix and who received supernatural good fortune at a time of famine.

THE WAR OF THE BIRDS[54]

A day's journey from Stuix there is a lake near which there used to [53]Such a marriage is common if the dead wife's family respect the husband, though not otherwise. [587]

[54]The Bella Coola regard the following as a record of an event which occurred

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 live a race of sturdy dwarfs called Snutsälätst by the Bella Coola. They have all moved away, but the exodus could not have taken place many hundred years ago, because the ruins of the underground houses in which they lived are said to have been visible as late as about 1870. Once upon a time a youth went from Stuux to Äxyätl, a place where buffaloberries were plentiful; during the day he became thirsty and knelt to drink at a spring. At length he reached the town of the Snutsälätst people who rushed at him, asking:

"Where did you find the bear?"

"I found no bear," he replied, somewhat puzzled.

"How then did you get your knees stained with earth?"

"Why, I knelt to drink at a spring."[33]

"That's it!" cried the dwarfs.

They rushed off in all directions to prepare sharp sticks for digging. When these were ready they insisted that the now thoroughly mystified youth should guide them to the spring from which he had drunk. Unwilling to anger his hosts, the lad consented, but his curiosity was not lessened when at the spring the dwarfs proceeded to dig a number of holes in a rough circle around it.

Soon one of the diggers called out, "Here is a [bear] leg!"

The lad looked into the hole and saw that it was the leg of a mätsqus.

The Snutsälätst people redoubled their efforts until they had uncovered the animal which they killed, much to the fear of the Bella Coola youth. He accompanied them back to their town where the mätsqus was cut up, amid the rejoicing of the Snutsälätst, who then proceeded to eat it. The lad watched with horror, and refused to take part in the feast.

Afterwards the dwarfs began to strengthen their houses by placing additional planks over the cracks, and stuffing the smaller crannies with moss and mud. In answer to their visitor's inquiries, they replied:

"You will see our danger soon enough. Every year we are attacked by migrating birds, especially hummingbirds, which penetrate everywhere. We have had a feud with the birds for years. They attack us every spring, but this year we are specially terrified, because the early migrants have not yet come and we are afraid that all the birds are gathering to assault us in a body. We kill many of them every year, but it seems to make no difference in their numbers or their ferocity."

The lad had noticed that many of the dwarfs were blind, and that not many years ago. In time the historical setting will unquestionably be forgotten and the account will be considered purely as a tale.

---

[33]Another version states that the dwarfs had, in some mysterious way, realized that he had power to locate the winter sleeping-places of bears.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

nearly all had lost one eye; but he had not thought of attributing this to attacks from birds. 539*

Soon the sky became black with all kinds of them—geese, ducks, plovers, sandpipers, hawks, owls, eagles, crows, woodpeckers, as well as many varieties of insectivorous birds. They swooped down on the village, flying fearlessly into the faces of the dwarfs who seemed unable to cope with them; in fact, they were as frightened of the birds as the Bella Coola had been of the mätsqus, which had occasioned the Snutsälätst no fear. The lad enjoyed the onslaught and killed a great many wild-fowl, especially geese and swans; it was wonderful hunting. He alone was not afraid of the hummingbirds which penetrated into the houses through minute cracks and flew into the faces of the dwarfs. The birds ceased their attack only after they had carried off one of the Snutsälätst as a slave.

The Bella Coola youth plucked his booty and cooked a fine meal for himself, while the dwarfs held their noses in horror, just as he had done when they were eating the mätsqus. He continued to live in the village of the dwarfs for some time, but this last attack, culminating in the loss of one of their young men, had so disheartened the inhabitants that they abandoned their settlement and moved away. Then the youth returned to Bella Coola, where he learnt the fate of the Snutsälätst carried off as a slave.

The birds, flying in a dense flock, had been carrying him down the Bella Coola valley, when the inhabitants of Nuqäxmäts saw the swarm and clapped their hands, noisily. The birds became frightened, separated, and down fell the dwarf near the village. He was made a slave by the Bella Coola, and was greatly valued on account of his strength. It was said that he could make a salmon-weir unaided, a feat which none other could accomplish.

THE ADVENTURES OF Ällsiäx

One day Ällsiäx, a man of Stuix, went out hunting, leaving his old father, Skimutcitl, at home. The hunter shot an arrow at a mountain goat, but succeeded only in wounding the animal, which fled with the missile sticking in its shoulder, Ällsiäx in pursuit. He followed his quarry for a long time until the goat came to a stream in a canyon of which the farther bank rose precipitously. Hunter and hunted reached the bank at the exact spot where a waterfall plunged down; the animal leapt across fearlessly and vanished against the sheer cliff. It was really Mountain Goat's home, but Ällsiäx was ignorant of this. The disappearance was a mystery to him. Weary and disappointed he sat down and cried.

Meanwhile there was consternation within Mountain Goat's home.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 He was in great pain from the wound, but none of the supernatural shamans could even diagnose the trouble, the arrow being invisible to them as their weapons are invisible to mortals. The most powerful supernatural doctors, Grizzly Bear, Black Bear, and Snnuq, were called in, but none could help Mountain Goat. Ällsiäx, sitting down outside the house, could hear the beating of sticks as if curative measures were being taken somewhere, but he could see nothing. Presently one of the animals, who had left the house to fetch water, saw a man sitting by the stream. On his return he suggested that they might consult the mortal.

So they called in Ällsiäx.

"Please, mortal," said Mountain Goat's father, "if you are able to effect cures, help my son."

"All right," replied Ällsiäx, "I have some ability that way, I will try."

This was a lie, Ällsiäx was no shaman, but he could see the arrow projecting from Mountain Goat and he knew that he would be able to cure the injury. So he asked that Mountain Goat be covered with a large cloak, under which he too hid himself, to lend an atmosphere of mystery to the operation. Ällsiäx then cut the arrow and forced its head through the flesh, thus expelling it. Mountain Goat cried out in pain that he felt as if some object were being drawn from his body, but he could see nothing. Then Ällsiäx danced a shaman's dance while the animal singers beat time, using, instead of sticks, bones from mountain goat legs. In the course of his gyrations, the man threw the broken arrow out of the door.

Mountain Goat's father in his gratitude gave Ällsiäx supernatural hunting ability.

"When you want to hunt goats," he said, "smear as many daubs of red paint on your face as you desire carcasses. Then think of goats, and use the song which we sang when you danced after curing my son, and the goats you want will fall dead outside your door. One thing you must never forget, always hang the leg-bones of your victims on the walls of your house, never throw them away."

Ällsiäx then returned to his Stuux home.

In the village there was another hunter, Äxä, whose success was dependent on a pair of shoes he had received from Twalällit, by means of which the roughest mountain goat trails became easy paths. As Ällsiäx began to have extraordinary fortune, jealousy arose between the two as to which was the greater hunter, until at last they decided to put the matter to a test. Setting out together they camped at a suitable spot above Stuux where goats were plentiful. When Ällsiäx put a single daub of red paint on his face there appeared a solitary goat on the mountain not far away, but in such a position that it seemed impossible for a human being to reach the animal.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

"I will go and get that one," said Äxä confidently.

Owing to his supernatural power he scaled the precipitous cliffs without trouble, but as soon as he was out of sight Ällsiäx rubbed the paint from his face, causing the goat to vanish. Äxä returned, unsuccessful and puzzled, and that night they camped without food.

Early in the morning Ällsiäx went to the river where he washed himself four times. Then he put his hands down at his side, as if without reason, but when he brought them up there was a beaver held in either palm. These he carried back to the camp where he woke the people, telling them to come and eat, an invitation which they gladly accepted.

That day the hunters divided into three parties, Ällsiäx and Äxä each formed one, while the other hunters went together as a third group. When Ällsiäx reached the base of a precipitous mountain not far from the camp he painted his face with a large number of red daubs, then, as he began to beat time and sing the song which the animals had used, goat after goat fell dead before him. He thus killed a great many, but when Äxä returned at night Ällsiäx found that his rival had been equally successful. They hunted no more, but instead dried the meat and then went back to Stuux where each gave a potlatch.

Ällsiäx carefully hung the leg-bones of his victims around the walls of his house. After he had hunted several times, always using the paint and the song, his house was full and he prepared to give a shaman's dance, as had been directed by the father of the mountain goat he had cured. But old Skimutcitl, fearing that this would mean that his son would no longer go hunting to keep his household plentifully supplied with fresh meat, refused permission. This was more than Ällsiäx could endure. For four days he lay down on a raised platform behind the fire, deliberating on his next move, then decided to assume the form of a mountain goat. That very night he did so, leaping down from his resting-place with a goat-skin loosely wrapped round him, shaking himself once to place it firmly in position, then bounding out through the door. An old woman, who happened to be sitting awake near the exit as he dashed past her, threw some red paint at him, leaving a daub on his flank.

Skimutcitl was filled with consternation and grief. In a frenzy of despair he rolled on the ground so near the fire that most of the hair of his head was singed off.

"I have exiled my son, I have destroyed my own food,"[28] he wailed.

Ällsiäx never returned. For generations hunters from Stuux saw on the mountains a large male goat which they recognized as the lost man by the red stain on his flank. Perhaps he became immortal, perhaps he [28] He used a term meaning, "I have cut my meat," having the double significance of driving away his son, and as such taking away much of his meat supply.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 was so wily that no one could kill him, perhaps no one was reckless enough to try. Who knows?

THE ADVENTURES OF Ällsiäx
(Second Version)

Long ago there were two men who had supernatural ability for killing mountain goats. Ällsiäx, who lived at Stuux, had a miraculous chequer-work mat of cedar-bark which he used to spread on the ground near the base of a mountain when he went hunting; as soon as it was in position, numerous flies would come floating down from the upper slopes to settle on it. Though they appeared as insects, each was really the spirit of a mountain goat so that, when Ällsiäx squashed a fly, the goat of which it was a supernatural element would fall down dead not far from the place. Nusqwaxlän·i, of Täl·io, was the owner of a pair of miraculous shoes which made the mountain trails so easy for him that he could follow the goats to their resting places. The reputation of each as a hunter spread far and wide.

In course of time they decided to compete to find out who was the better. Such a competition between rivals was not uncommon and was termed a wina, the same as a war expedition. With this aim in view Nusqwaxlän·i went to Stuux, whence the two hunters went out together into the mountains, each taking a number of friends to carry back the meat. They camped for the night and it was decided that Nusqwaxlän·i should go out alone the first day. As he set out he could see, having miraculous eye-sight, very many goats on the mountains so that he expected a successful day's hunting. But, as soon as his rival had left, Ällsiäx painted with charcoal on his own face representations of mountain goat tracks; instantly all that Nusqwaxlän·i on the mountain could see were tracks of the animals, not one in the flesh. Though he hunted diligently all day, he succeeded in killing only one small goat. Much ashamed, he skinned this animal, cut up the flesh, toasted it, and gave it to Ällsiäx, who meanwhile had washed his face.

"I don't know what is the matter," said Nusqwaxlän·i, "this is the first time that I have ever failed so miserably. I can give you only one goat."

Ällsiäx thanked his rival profusely, and said that the flesh was very fine, as sweet as salmon. It was, in fact, a tasty kid.

"Please don't go out hunting tomorrow," said Ällsiäx to Nusqwaxlän·i, "let me try my fortune, and you try again the following day."

So Ällsiäx set out alone early in the morning, telling his packers to meet him about noon. He spread his mat on which flies soon settled, and as he squashed them, dead goats fell from the mountain slopes above. 539* His packers worked very hard and managed to carry all the carcasses to camp, where Ällsiäx toasted the meat. He gave everything, meat, grease, and hides to Nuxqwaxlän-i, saying that it was in return for the latter's present of a single kid the preceding day. Nuxqwaxlän-i was thus shamed and went back to Täl io the next day, defeated.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ällsiäx, with his father, Skimutcitl, and some friends, remained in camp to prepare smoked goat meat and hides for the winter, taking full advantage of the excellent hunting. One evening they heard the hooting of an owl. There was something peculiar about the sound and Ällsiäx said to his father:

"That is no owl, it is a person."

Ignoring Skimutcitl's disbelief, Ällsiäx set out to investigate. There was deep snow on the ground so that he had to use snow-shoes, the crunch of which apparently betrayed him, because the hooting ceased. Presently it began again. Ällsiäx, having bound a goat-skin over his snow-shoes to deaden the noise, crept forth and this time he was able to locate the source of the sound, a tall blasted tree on the top of which he could see a man seated. He was wearing a large abalone-shell nose-ring and Ällsiäx determined to shoot an arrow through the ornament.[17] His aim was faulty, it pierced the man's neck and he fell down dead. Examining the corpse, Ällsiäx realized that he must have been a scout of the people known to the Bella Coola as Xät, a branch of the Carriers whose home was in the south but who were accustomed to range far afield, always ready for a quarrel. He cut off the head and carried it back to camp, where Skimutcitl was sitting with his limbs spread out to get the full benefit of the fire.

Ällsiäx crashed the bloody head down on his father's naked body, saying as he did so:

"There's your owl."

Skimutcitl collapsed with terror.

"I am old," he wailed, "and cannot run away. Anyway it does not matter what happens to me, just cover me up in a corner."

This seemed the best plan, so Ällsiäx lifted the planks from one corner of the floor of the shelter, and his father crawled down to cower under a skin. Then the boards were replaced and ashes were strewed over all. No one would have suspected that a man was hidden beneath. When this was done Ällsiäx and the other young men abandoned the camp.

The Bella Coola realized that the Xät people were so superior in numbers that they would have no chance in an open fight, but Ällsiäx

[17]The story does not give the reason for this.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 knew of a natural hiding-place, capable of defence, to which he led the way. It was a large cave, opening in a precipice, only to be reached by climbing a tree which grew close to the cliff, and from its upper branches crossing on some kind of ladder brought up from below. The fugitives felled a sapling on which they reached the cave in safety, drawing their bridge in behind them. The people of Xāt trailed them to their lair and without more ado began the attack. Recklessly they climbed the tree so that it was an easy matter for Ālsiāy, from within the cave, to pick off one after the other with his arrows. At each shot he killed one of the attackers, but his supply of arrows was exhausted when only about a quarter of the Xāt warriors had fallen, and the others continued to press the assault. Fortunately, there were many stones in the cave and by accurate throwing the Bella Coola were able to keep the attackers at bay. In fact, before the stones were finished they managed to kill about as many of their foes as Ālsiāy had done with his arrows. Meanwhile the Xāt people in some way[55] had succeeded in felling the tree so that it leaned against the entrance to the cavern, where they fastened it with ropes, thus having a comparatively easy means of access to the very mouth of the shelter. It was a critical moment. Ālsiāy rushed forward and cut the ropes. Then, heedless of the blows that were rained on him, he used the sapling as a lever against the tree, causing it to sway to and fro until all the climbers—and they were all the attackers still alive—had been shaken off. Some were killed instantly by their fall, others were maimed. Ālsiāy swarmed down the tree-trunk and quickly dispatched all who were still breathing. The Bella Coola scalped their slain enemies and with their bloody trophies returned to camp.

One of the Xāt men, instead of taking part in the attack, had gone to the Bella Coola camp where he had remained stuffing himself on the meat. Even when the victors drew near he did not try to run away, lacking the necessary energy. Ālsiāy asked the Xāt which scalp was that of the chief and, when the prisoner had pointed it out to him, he placed it firmly on the head of the cowardly captive and bade him dance. Amid the derisive hoots of his captors he was forced to perform while so ornamented, and meanwhile the conquerors heaped every other possible ignominy on him. It was Ālsiāy's wish that this man should be spared to carry the word to his home that it was the Bella Coola who had slain the Xāt warriors. This was done, the victors giving their prisoner enough meat to enable him to reach his journey's end; then they too set off for home, carrying with them abundant stores of smoked goat meat.

Now occurred what the Bella Coola regard as very strange. Ālsiāy [55] The account is vague.

Z:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

had become a shaman from Mountain Goat and as he was proceeding homewards the goat meat spoke to him. 539 W "In the future," it said, "you needn't bother chasing us to the mountains. Just sing and we will come to you and fall dead. But never break our leg-bones. Keep them until you have two boxes full, then perform a kuxiut dance, using for it the power which you have received from us."

When he returned to Stuxe, Ällxiäy placed a large box on each side of the door of his house. Whenever he sang, goats came trooping down from the mountains and fell dead; his success as a hunter was truly phenomenal. Before long he had filled both boxes with the leg-bones of the goats which he had killed.

Then Ällxiäy said to Skimuxcid, "I want to initiate a kuxiut dance, as the goat meat told me to do."

Skimuxcid was angry, knowing that if his son did so he would be forced to remain secluded for long periods and be unable to continue hunting.

"If you start a kuxiut rite," Skimuxcid answered, "you will spend all your time lying down. Now you are having success as a hunter, what more do you want?"

"I cannot help that," Ällxiäy replied. "Unless I perform this rite the goats will carry me away."

Ällxiäy felt very bitter at his father's lack of sympathy. For four days and four nights he lay, without sleeping or eating, on a raised platform behind the fire. Then, to the amazement of the people of the village, a number of goats came walking up to his house. A herald reported this to Ällxiäy.

"All right," he replied. "Do not disturb them. Do whatever they want."

The goats, including old ones and young ones, male and female, entered the house, led by an old he-goat. When they had circled the fire four times, the leader shook himself, and a spare hide jumped from his body. This the animal tossed to the raised platform, where Ällxiäy put it over his shoulders and wriggled. Forthwith he became a goat, jumped down, and followed the others as they ran from the house. As he dashed out the doorway an old woman struck at him with her hand smeared with red paint; it left a dash on his flank. Many times afterwards hunters have seen the red-marked goat on the mountains.

Skimuxcid was heart-broken.

"Oh, I have lost my son," he wailed. "I have lost my never-ending supply of good food."

In his grief he rolled on the ground until his head went into the fire and all his hair was singed off.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#539

THE MAN WHO TRIED TO RECAPTURE HIS DEAD CHILD[59]

Once, long ago, when a husband was absent sealing, his wife gave birth to a child. The woman's mother was in attendance, but though she did her best, her daughter died. Using her own discretion, the assistant killed the infant, the usual practice under such circumstances. The father of the dead woman was so grieved at the loss of his daughter and grandchild that he determined to leave the spot, a decision concurred in by the rest of the community. They stripped the planks from all the walls, and piled them on canoes, leaving the posts and beams of the houses alone in position. Their last act was to bury the woman and her baby within the framework of her home, perhaps with some vague idea of giving strength to it. Then they moved away.

The next night the husband returned, accompanied by a lad who had been sealing with him. He was, of course, all unaware of the calamity that had struck his household, in fact he had not expected his wife to be delivered during his absence. When still on the beach he heard a woman's voice.

"Ăbtulka," it said, "please bring me my basket."

It seemed as if the speaker were gathering clams, but the returning husband was much puzzled because Ăbtulka had long been dead. He went up to the village where the inky darkness prevented him from seeing that the houses were mere skeletons. On entering his own, he saw a fire in one corner with his wife sitting by it, running her fingers through her hair which had fallen loose over her forehead, and rocking an infant in a cradle suspended from a horizontal stick. As the delighted parent drew near he saw that the cradle was upside down, with apparently nothing to prevent the child from falling to the floor. He rushed up to remedy what he assumed to be his wife's carelessness, but when he touched the cradle there was a whistle—instantly fire, wife, cradle, infant, all vanished. Then the husband realized that they must have been ghosts, and in grief and horror rushed from the house into the darkness.

The man succeeded in locating his parents-in-law, who told him that his wife had died three days previously, and, almost mad with grief, he determined to attempt a rescue. He knew that on the fourth night after death the dead dance to welcome a newcomer, making him or her an official member of their community. Once admitted, there is no possible chance of returning to this world, so the husband resolved to try to catch his wife at the dance itself. He enlisted the aid of a number of friends with whose help he collected a number of full chamber-vessels, which he placed on the rafters of his now deserted house. Towards dusk he and [59] A story probably of Bella Bella origin.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

589 X

his friends concealed themselves on the rafters, each with a vessel within arm's reach.

For a long time nothing happened; then was heard a sound as if some wooden objects had been thrown carelessly to the floor. Soon a small fire appeared. Presumably firewood had been dropped. Then the dead came in, one or two at a time, as mortals do when assembling for a dance. They took their places to "cure" the dead woman by a frenzied beating of sticks as hahamsut do when a dancer returns from the upper regions and must be called back to sanity. The leaders of the supernatural pounders are Grizzly Bear, Snang, Wolverine, and one other. When all were in attendance, Wolverine smelt the hiding men.

"Take care," he called out, "I smell mortals."

His companions rushed out to investigate, but though they searched around the house they failed to discover the men hiding above them. Numerous pretty girls came in, decorated with cedar-bark, both dyed and undyed, and eagle down, all ready for the dance. After the frenzied beating of sticks, led by Wolverine, the dead woman began to dance while the choir sang. The husband could contain himself no longer. As he leapt down, his companions showered the whole house with the contents of their vessels, but with a whistle the dead vanished, leaving only scattered bones. The husband had failed.

THE BOYS WHO DRIFTED TO SEA

Long ago, when supernatural beings were so closely in contact with mortals that extraordinary experiences were more common than at present, a number of lads were bathing at Ar da, on the south side of North Bentinck Arm, about half a mile from the head. As four of them lay across a huge drifting log to dry themselves, they fell into a heavy sleep so that they were not awakened when, at high tide, their float began to drift away from the shore. It was near dusk before one of them awoke to find that only the peaks of the mountains were in sight. He quickly roused his companions, but they had no means of propelling the raft towards the distant shore. For a long time they wept bitterly at their fate, but at last one of them began to investigate and found some consolation in the fact that their log was hollow. The four crawled inside, smoothed away the rough edges of wood as much as possible, curled up together for warmth, and at last cried themselves to sleep.

In the early morning one of the boys awoke. Looking up through a crack, he saw the daylight momentarily obscured by a bird waddling across. Cautiously investigating, he found that a flock of white geese (swans!) had settled on the log, where they were walking to and fro in

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*539 fancied security. He silently wakened his companions. Each stationed himself at the crevice until at a given signal each grasped the legs of two of the birds, thus pinioning eight in all. Unable to drag the geese through the narrow crack, one of the lads moved his birds along so that his neighbour could hold them with his own, and then went on top where he quickly wrung the necks of all. They skinned their booty, ate the flesh raw, and covered themselves with the plumage. The day passed without further incident, the log continuing to drift along though no land was in sight.

As on the preceding night the four slept inside the hollow log. At dawn they saw that there were more birds, this time Canada geese, resting on the trunk above their heads. The boys caught a number in the manner already described; as before, they dined on the flesh, and clothed themselves with the plumage of their quarry. The following morning they seized a number of gulls, and the next day some mallard ducks. By this time they had provided themselves with comfortable cloaks made from the skins of the birds.

Like its predecessors the fourth day wore away without incident, but that night the four boys were wakened by their log pounding against something. Looking out, they saw that it was crashing repeatedly against a rocky shore formed of small crags of some dark substance resembling coal; there was no beach in sight. The youngest of the four rashly jumped immediately for the land, but, though his brothers saw him, apparently, reach one of the rocks, he vanished as if the earth had swallowed him. The three survivors dared not follow, but instead remained shivering and crying inside their shelter. The log, constantly rebounding from the precipitous shore, slowly drifted along until caught in, what seemed to the voyagers, a whirlpool. Round and round it spun like a twig, now one end in the air, now the other; the three lads were dizzy and feared their last hour had come.

Though the boys did not know it, their log had been caught in the salmon-weir of Nuxkiapsk, the supernatural lord of the land of ashes. When a fire consumes wood, mortals see only ashes remaining. This is because Nuxkiapsk swallows the substance of the wood and takes it to his domain, which is called S'pa't or Spawl. But there is no strength left in that portion of the wood which he devours, hence when the youngest of the four brothers jumped on to it he passed right through; it was nothing more than the form of a crag. Nuxkiapsk has a huge salmon-weir in which he catches the corpses of those drowned either in the rivers or the ocean; they serve him as food, in fact, they are his salmon. How much of this information was known to the three boys, or how much of it was learnt only from their adventures is a point that this tale does not explain. 539

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In the morning, when Nuxkiapsh's servant Tlas'kwa went down to the weir, he was much surprised to see the enormous log in it. He ran back to tell Nuxkiapsh, who asked him why he had not brought it to land. Tlas'kwa then returned to the salmon-weir and towed the trunk ashore, a feat that his remarkable strength made easy. As it struck the ground, the log split, exposing the three boys cowering within; back ran the surprised Tlas'kwa to tell his master what he had seen, and Nuxkiapsh told his servant to bring them home. When Tlas'kwa had delivered the message, the three followed him to the house where the first thing that met their horror-stricken eyes was their brother, dead, hanging spitted through the mouth amid a row of salmon. Seals were playing about as if they had been dogs; otherwise it resembled an ordinary house, always excepting the ghastly hanging corpse. An old woman sitting in one corner, though they did not know it, had long been a prisoner of Nuxkiapsh, whom she determined to thwart by aiding the three boys.

"You will be seated," she whispered, "with a fire on each side of you. As the heat increases, your captors will examine you to see if your noses are sweating; if they are, they will say, 'What fine salmon,' and will kill and eat you. We are salmon to them. But take this piece of greenstone and conceal it under your arm-pit. When the heat increases so that you begin to perspire, just draw it out a little and it will become cooler where you are sitting."

With this advice the old woman gave the eldest of the three brothers a fine, smooth piece of jadeite, such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Towards evening Nuxkiapsh's companions gathered in the house. They seated the three boys between two fires and offered them what they said was a kind of cranberry, but the lads had watched their hosts take the food from a large provision box and saw that it was really the eyes of dead people. The three declined the meal in horror; in so doing they were fortunate, because if they had eaten the eyes they would never have been able to return to the land of mortals. Nuxkiapsh then killed one of the young seals which was playing around in the house and on this the three boys made their supper. Before long it began to get very hot, but the eldest lad pulled forth the stone so that he and his brothers did not feel the heat. Their hosts kept handling them and remarking what fine salmon they were, but the stone had done its work and their noses did not sweat.

When Nuxkiapsh realized that he had no power over his guests he became friendly. At their request he restored to life the youngest brother

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 whom, moreover, he made a shaman. The boys were able to make some return present to Nuxkiaqk, whose wife had eyed the skin cloak covetously; this they presented to her. In the course of a few days the boys expressed a desire to go home.

"That is easy," said Nuxkiaqk. "Your land is not far away, just a mâ'lqi"[88]

Nuxkiaqk showed them their home, and indeed it appeared to them as if it were less than an inch away. When he sent them off he warned them not to open their eyes, otherwise the journey would be a long one, but that if they kept their eyes closed they would reach their destination almost immediately. The boys did not know what kind of canoe they were in, and it was not till later that they found they were with Nuxkqnum, the bringer of the salmon. The wanderers sensed the proximity of their own land, and opened their eyes to find themselves in front of their own village. They had been absent a whole year.

THE BOYS WHO DRIFTED TO SEA
(Second Version)

Once upon a time, long, long ago, when a number of lads were bathing on the tide-flats at the head of North Bentinck Arm, one of them, a boy of fifteen or sixteen years, swam out to a huge log which was floating a short distance from the shore. He clambered on to it and, finding it comfortable, called out to his companions to join him. Three younger boys did so. It was early in the afternoon of a warm sunny day and the four soon fell asleep, stretched on their stomachs, and lulled by the gentle movement of the water. Late in the afternoon the other bathers went home, without disturbing the four sleepers. The sun had set before the eldest of the boys awoke to find that the log had drifted so far out to sea that not even the peaks of the mountains were in sight. Dismayed, he roused his sleeping companions, who, realizing their plight, cowered together in fear. It began to grow cold. One of the boys discovered that their craft was hollow, with an entrance at the end from which roots had grown. The four crawled inside, where it was warmer, and spent an uncomfortable night with their craft pitching and tossing on the waves of the open sea.

The next morning when the eldest boy, who was the first to awaken, crawled to the entrance of the log he saw, projecting down from above, the tail of a bird which must have been perching on the very end of the shell. With a quick motion he seized the tail, by which he dragged a [88] A mâ'lqi is a measure of distance equal to the width of the thumb and one finger.

[804]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

swan into the log and wrung its neck. To his surprise another tail at once appeared in the aperture, and he was able to treat the second bird in the same manner. A third and a fourth followed in close succession. Four swans must have been roosting on the log, and each had unsuspiciously moved up to take the position at the end when it was vacated. The boys ate the flesh raw, and the eldest sewed the four skins together with swan sinew to make a rude cloak for himself. 539*

That day and the following night passed without incident, the log drifting along out of sight of land. The next morning they caught four more swans, in the same manner as on the preceding day, and with these the eldest boy made a cloak for one of his companions. On the third and fourth mornings four more swans appeared, providing clothing for the remaining two boys.

That day they were roused by the crashing of their log against a rocky shore. As they peered cautiously forth they saw that their craft was bumping against a beach consisting of lumps of lava-like rock, ill-shaped boulders, and small crags. At the same time they heard a sound as if countless small particles were falling from a height, so the eldest boy concluded that they must have reached the Land of Ashes, S'qus'i. Even at that distant time it was well-known that the substance of wood burnt in a fire is carried far across the ocean to S'qus'i, where it appears as rocks having the original shape of the wood, but without its solidity. If this were not the case, Bella Coola would soon be buried beneath the mass of consumed firewood, whereas only a few ashes remain after a fire. The eldest boy further knew that in this land lived an evil chief, Nuskiagsk, who devoured the corpses of human beings drowned in the ocean. Accordingly he warned his companions not to venture ashore, but one of them, over-anxious to leave the log, jumped out, only to vanish from sight as if he had passed through the rock to which he had leapt. This was indeed the case, it having merely the shape of a crag with the consistency of ashes.

The three survivors, even more terrified than before, continued to cower within their log as it drifted down the coast and finally entered a river where, during the night, it was caught in the salmon-weir of Nuskiagsk. When the latter visited his trap in the morning he was amazed at the huge tree-trunk caught in it; it was so big that it had almost burst the weir, and was far too heavy for him to lift. He went to his house and sent his slave, one of the prodigiously strong dwarfs who formerly lived in the mountains to the east of Bella Coola, to attend to it. He tossed the log ashore and it split, revealing the three boys. Back ran the slave to his master to tell what had happened.

"Bring them here," said Nuskiagsk.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 The three boys followed the dwarf to Nuskiaẓek's house, which they found to be similar to their own, except that seals were running around on the floor instead of dogs; these are, in fact, dogs to the people of the Land of Ashes. On looking around, they saw to their consternation their missing companion, dead, and hanging spitted through the mouth like a salmon. They further saw that their hosts were eating human heads; they fish for human beings as mortals fish for salmon. The boys cried out in horror at sight of their dead comrade and, when Nuskiaẓek asked them the reason of their exclamations, they told him their story. He said nothing, merely invited them to sit down, and brought them a human head to eat. When they declined this with expressions of disgust he killed one of the seals, on which they made a hearty meal. After his guests had eaten, Nuskiaẓek removed the corpse of their friend from the spit, placed in the ears some stale urine, and rolled the body in a mat with only the head exposed. He gently massaged the body, spitting on it and on his hands as he did so, until, when he had rolled back the mat, the three youths saw their comrade restored to life. The joy of the four at thus being reunited was past expression.

They asked Nuskiaẓek whether they might return home.

"Yes," he replied. "Noākẓnum leaves shortly taking the berries and salmon to Bella Coola. I will find out the exact time of his departure and you can return with him."

Noākẓnum left the next day, taking with him the four boys who had spent the intervening night in Nuskiaẓek's house. The journey home was uneventful. When their supernatural conductor had moored his craft at the submerged pile near the mouth of the Bella Coola River the wanderers found a canoe in which they returned home. Their friends welcomed them as returned from the dead, having abandoned hope of their safety during their year's absence.

THE SALMON-BOY[81]

One spring morning, soon after the first people had reached this earth, and when it was still sparsely populated, some women were cutting and cleaning salmon on the beach. As one of them, whose name was Maqwānts, sliced open a fish, she saw inside of it a diminutive baby boy. At her cry of wonder, all her companions rushed up; there was much talking and excitement. Nearly all advised her to kill the infant because it was unusual and, therefore, to be dreaded, but one wise, thoughtful man told her to tend the child carefully; after some deliberation Maqwānts decided to

[81]For another version of this story see Boas, p. 73.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

follow his advice. She took the baby home, where she sponged him with soft cedar-bark and looked after him as if he had been her own.

Within a few days he began to sit up and take an intelligent interest in what was going on around him. This phenomenal growth continued, so that when the salmon-child was only a year old, he had the stature and intelligence of a boy of fifteen or sixteen. The foundling had a great affection for Maqwänts's own son, a boy of fifteen, and the two became boon companions. One day the salmon-boy asked Maqwänts's husband to build for him a house on the shore of the river opposite the town, choosing a spot which was on the course taken by the mergansers in flying upstream. He further asked for, and received, some double-pointed, bone-tipped arrows, such as are used for fowling. When the house was completed, the salmon-boy invited his foster-brother to accompany him to it. Once inside he showed his comrade some mysterious food, a gift from Älquntäm, which he carried in his mouth on all occasions. Then he said:

"I want always to enter this house first, and must sleep on a raised platform-bed behind the fire on all occasions. When you come to the house, always knock; otherwise I shall fall dead."

After these instructions were given, the two boys crossed the river to their home. Early next morning, Maqwänts's own son heard his comrade, whose name in the salmon language was Skalpts, meaning chief of the spring salmon, leave the mother's house. Obedient to the injunction, he said nothing, nor did he follow to the new shelter until the first sign of dawn. He knocked at the door and was told to enter by the salmon-boy. Mergansers were flying past within a few feet. Skalpts made his preparations by fastening to one of his arrows a cord, which he had plaited from woman's hair, so that he could draw back the missile after discharging it. With this contrivance he shot a single merganser, which the two boys carried back to the village. Maqwänts and her husband, as well as the man who had advised rearing the salmon-boy, were delighted at his skill, the child being only a year old. It was the first time that such a method of hunting mergansers had ever been employed.

The next morning before dawn the salmon-boy again stole away to the new house, followed, as before, by his foster-brother at day-break. This time he killed two mergansers, which he bore home in triumph. The third morning he slew three birds, four on the fourth, and ten on the fifth. That evening Maqwänts's husband gave a feast to all the chiefs with the mergansers the salmon-boy had brought in, and the company was greatly pleased at his phenomenal success. On the sixth day he brought back a river canoe filled with the birds, which he distributed to each household, amid great rejoicing.

*539 About this time Skalpts gave the following instructions to Maqwänts's son:

"If I should die, feel in my mouth behind my right molars and draw from there my food. Put this into your own mouth, and, like me, you will never be hungry for it is my good fortune,[62] the source of my power. If you take it you will have the same. Then have built for me a house on the beach in which you must lay my body on a bed. Do not enclose it in a coffin. Watch near the house on the fourth night after my death."

One day the foster-brother forgot to knock before entering the hunting lodge, and forthwith the salmon-boy fell dead, to the terrible grief and horror of the offender. Furthermore, he was greatly alarmed at the thought of his parents' anger when they should learn the cause of their adopted son's death. But he remembered his comrade's instructions, felt in the mouth of the corpse and drew from it an object that was cold, hard, and round, like a bird's egg. When he had put this into his own mouth he felt no further need for food. He recrossed the river to the village where he explained the death of the salmon-boy, through his own error. On hearing the news, all the villagers bitterly lamented the loss of such a fine young man, who had proved himself a public benefactor. Sorrowfully, they brought back his corpse on a platform between two lashed canoes. Maqwänts's son told his father of the salmon-boy's wish to have a house built on the beach for his body, and everyone gladly helped in this task. Inside, they made a bed whereon they laid the body, obedient to the instructions of the deceased, not enclosing it in a coffin.

On the fourth night Maqwänts's boy stole away from his friends to watch near the house in which lay his dead comrade. Presently he heard a canoe approaching, and voices in it speaking his own language, but he could see nothing. The craft was a salmon canoe, and the people in it salmon people, but the watcher was ignorant of this. They were discussing where the house ought to be, and when they saw it they landed. One of them, as the concealed lad judged from the sounds, went to the door and knocked.

"Please get up!" he said.

This he repeated four times; Skalpts obeyed the fourth summons, emerged from the house, and went with the strangers to their canoe. Seeing his comrade about to embark, Maqwänts's son called out:

"Please wait. I want to go too."

"You are sure you want to come?" asked his foster-brother.

"Yes," responded Maqwänts's son.

"Wait a minute," said the salmon-boy to the occupants of the canoe.

---

[62] Siya.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

Maqwānts's son came running up and jumped into the canoe, which he was able to see, and also the salmon-boy, but not the latter's companions. The canoe moved away rapidly to the west, beneath the surface of the ocean, without visible means of propulsion. Presently, the salmon-boy rubbed his hands over his comrade's eyes, enabling him to see the crew, who were salmon people, but in human form.

Onward the canoe sped until it entered a belt of air reeking with the foul smell of countless sardines, which drifted out as the party passed by the shore of the Land of Sardines. This country the travellers reached first, because that fish is first to reach the rivers in the spring. The village, the people, the sun, were all the same as upon the earth, but the land was beneath the surface of the sea. Beyond the sardine country they reached that of the herring, the second fish to come to British Columbia rivers in the spring, then came to the olachen land, and finally to that of the salmon, Qolohmxao wa simlkets.[42] Here was a series of adjoining towns, the first populated by the spring salmon people, the second by the dog salmon, and so in succession came the settlements of all varieties. In front of these towns extended a beautiful, wide, long, grassy beach. The canoe landed at the first town, where Maqwānts's son found himself among countless spring salmon men. In the next, that of the dog salmon, he noticed that the people laughed so much that their teeth projected. On the beach were numerous women digging white roots. Maqwānts's son said to Skaipts:

"I want to go for a stroll along the beach."

"All right," replied the salmon-boy, "but do not stay too long, as I want to take you to my father's house in the middle of the town. Its front is painted to represent the jaws of an animal, the doorway being the mouth. It opens when anyone wishes to enter; jump quickly inside and all will be well. If a visitor passes slowly through the doorway, the jaws close and crush him."

Maqwānts's son promised to be absent for a short time only.

As he walked along the beach he saw that all the women whom he had previously noticed were either Canada geese or mallard ducks, and that all were blind. One woman smelt him and called out to her companions:

"Maqwānts's son is here."

"No. It is impossible," they answered, laughing. "He is thousands of miles away."

Maqwānts's son chewed up some of the white roots they had been gathering and spat in the eye of the woman who had smelt him. Thus she gained the sight in that eye.

"Yes, it is Maqwānts's son," she cried out. "I can see him."

[42] Also termed, Nu'yen-ixim because it is taboo for salmon to lay eggs there.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 No one believed her. Then he spat in the eye of one of the other women, and she gained the sight of that eye, so was able to confirm the fact that the son of Maqwänts was among them. But the others, still disbelieving, asked how he could possibly have reached their country. When he told them the story of his travels they did believe, because many of them knew about the salmon-boy who had gone to live among men. All the women begged to be granted their sight, so he spat in the eyes of everyone and each received vision; if he had not done so, using the power he had received from Älquntäm, all geese and mallards would still be blind. The first woman to whom he had given sight showed gratitude by her anxiety for his safety. She told him not to venture among the women who were swimming in a neighbouring river, but instead to go at once to the home of the salmon-boy's father.

Maqwänts's son followed the woman's advice and without difficulty found the house, which resembled a Haida one, with elaborately carved front and totem-pole. In the latter was the jaw-like door, which the visitor passed through safely, to find, within, all the chiefs gathered to meet him, as comrade of Skatpts, beside whom he sat down. Food was passed around and accepted by all except Maqwänts's son; he did not like salmon fare, but felt no hunger, thanks to the miraculous food which he carried in his mouth. Towards dusk he suggested to Skatpts that they go for a walk to see the town and its inhabitants, and they set out together. The land of the salmon and geese was warm and pleasant so they had an agreeable stroll as far as the last house of the village, where the occupants politely offered them food. The salmon-boy declined it, saying:

"We are just out for a walk, to see the people."

Presently, as they strolled further, Maqwänts's son saw in one of the houses a beautiful merganser woman with whom he fell in love.

"I want to marry that woman," he said to Skatpts.

"Don't do that," replied his comrade. "Take any other woman you choose, but she comes of a bad family. She has been married several times, and on each occasion her father has murdered his son-in-law. I should be afraid of Maqwänts, if you were killed."

Maqwänts's son persisted, and against the advice and wishes of his comrade he was married forthwith, and spent the night with his bride.

Next morning, as soon as Maqwänts's son had risen, his new father-in-law asked him to go salmon-fishing with him and he agreed. The two embarked on the river in a canoe, Maqwänts's son in the bow. When they reached mid-stream, the merganser man tilted the craft so that his son-in-law was thrown into the river. His father-in-law expected him to be drowned, because no salmon can swim in its own river, but Maqwänts's

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539

son, being human, easily reached the far shore. The salmon-boy and his father, who had watched the attempted murder from the other bank, took a canoe and fetched the lad back to their side of the river. All the salmon people wanted to kill the evil merganser man, but Maqwānts's son said:

"No. I will settle him myself, tomorrow."

That night he slept again with his wife, who felt that she was pregnant, and the next morning the merganser man and his son-in-law again went out to fish, but this time the latter insisted on taking his place in the stern. In mid-stream he tilted the canoe so that his father-in-law fell out and was drowned. He did so partly in revenge for the attempt upon his own life, partly at the request of his wife, who said that her father was always killing her husbands and destroying her marriages. Next day the wife of the murdered man gave birth to a male child, and on the following day the wife of Maqwānts's son bore twins, a boy and a girl. This was possible because mergansers breed quickly. The twins were somewhat different from the usual merganser or salmon children. Not long afterwards Maqwānts's son said to his comrade's father:

"I want to go home. Neither my father nor my mother knows where I am. They must be grief-stricken."

In fact both Maqwānts and her husband were almost prostrated at the loss of their son. The spring salmon chief told everybody to get ready for a journey and in four days the preparations were complete. All the fish accompanied Maqwānts's son, in the van the sardines, then the herring, the olachen and the rest, in the order of their arrival on the British Columbia coast in the spring. The host travelled slowly, camping at night, when they sang and danced, as if on a picnic, but never leaving the land beneath the ocean. When near the mouth of the river the spring salmon chief asked Maqwānts's son to go ahead to tell his father of the coming of the fish people who wanted presents in the shape of mountain goat grease, eagle feathers, and soft cedar-bark, to use as sponges for their babies. So Maqwānts's son with his wife and two children went ahead, in the shape of salmon, and entered his father's fish-weir. The old man was lying on the framework of the dam, weeping over the loss of his son, when he felt four successive jars, indicating that four salmon had entered his trap, but he was too listless to raise it. His son and the latter's family threw off their salmon form and became human.

"Please lift your trap," Maqwānts's son called out to his father. "My children will catch cold."

Recognizing his son's voice, the father joyfully raised the trap, and his delight was unbounded when he saw his son again, with a beautiful wife and two handsome children. Maqwānts's son asked his father to strew the house with clean sand and to summon the neighbours. That

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 night when they had assembled, the wanderer told about his adventures and the desires of his friends, the fish, who were waiting in the river. Maqwänts and her kinsfolk were delighted with the lovely wife her son had brought home. Next morning the people threw into the river large quantities of mountain goat grease, eagle feathers, and cedar-bark, which the salmon gladly received.

Maqwänts's son told his father that if anyone made his children cry his merganser wife would leave him and never return. On this being explained to the villagers, they all promised never to strike either of the children on any account. Unluckily, the twins were mischievous, always making other little boys and girls cry, but for three years no one raised a finger against them. Then one day a bad boy struck one of the children who ran home sobbing to his mother. She too wept when he came in; when she told her husband that she must leave him, he also began to cry. She took her two children, went to the river side, lifted the edge of the water as if it had been a mat and plunged beneath it. They all swam away as salmon. Maqwänts's son tried to follow, but failed because he had lost his power of changing into a fish.

Since that time no salmon have lived among men.

FURTHER ADVENTURES OF THE SALMON-BOY

One day Maqwänts's son was playing on the beach with a sling, a toy that used to be very popular. As he shot stone after stone out over the water, he thought to himself how happy he should be if he happened to hit and kill a salmon. Then he chanced to see a dead one lying on the beach. It was nothing but skin and bones, but he said to it idly:

"I wish you were alive; then you would be of some use."

To the intense surprise of Maqwänts's son the salmon answered:

"Take me to the river and see what happens then."

The lad picked up the salmon, carried it to the river and threw it in. The fish swam around, jumped clear of the water four times and became strong and well. It swam back to the shore and politely invited Maqwänts's son to go for a ride on his back. The boy agreed. Lifting his cedar-bark cape over his head he lay down on the salmon and sank his face close against its back, so that his nose was in a kind of pocket, protected by the cape. Before long the rider feared he might suffocate, and began to squirm, upon which the salmon hastily bore him to the shore to breathe. He asked what was the trouble and the son of Maqwänts replied that he could not breathe under the water. The fish told him to bury his head in the back fin and he would be all right. The rider obeyed and suffered no further inconvenience.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 *

In a little while they came to some rapids where they saw, still beneath the water, a canoe in which they embarked, Maqwänts's son taking the bow, the salmon, who had become a man, the stern. On and on they went till they smelt countless tiny salmon and were soon in the midst of an innumerable shoal of small fry which crowded the water so that the canoe was in danger of being sunk beneath their weight. Maqwänts's son baled out the fish with his cedar-bark cape, and thus avoided the impending disaster. After passing through these small salmon the journey was continued without incident until a very foul smell arose, indicating an approach to a multitude of herring. Soon the canoe was in the midst of a vast shoal of these fish and again was in grave danger of sinking beneath the weight, but Maqwänts's son cleared it out with his hands.

This danger past, the two went on till they came to a place where a couple of old men were seated on either side of the river leaving only a narrow passage for the canoe. These were halibut, who had taken up this position to intercept all canoes. Maqwänts's son and the salmon bravely drove their craft through the narrow gap, though it was scratched in the process. Soon afterwards the salmon said:

"In a little while we shall see a place where some women bathe in the river, helped by an old man. We shall be able to have a good time with them."

Soon the salmon pointed out the house where the women lived, and the quiet stretch of water in which they bathed. Maqwänts's son went ashore and hid himself. Soon he saw approaching a vile and ugly old man in dirty clothing who sat down on the shore.

"What is your job?" asked Maqwänts's son.

"Oh!" replied the old man. "I sit here and when the women have finished swimming I help them to wash."

After a moment's thought Maqwänts's son said:

"Please exchange clothing with me and then go and hide."

"All right!" answered the old man.

After the two had exchanged clothes, the old man hid himself while Maqwänts's son sat on the beach clad in the other's rags, with his hat pulled down over his eyes to conceal his identity. Presently, four beautiful young girls came along, stripped off their clothing and dived into the water. Maqwänts's son felt very much pleased with himself. When the first girl had finished swimming and came out on to the bank, he washed her by rubbing his hands all over her body, handling her with undue familiarity. She said nothing, merely went to a sunny spot and stood there drying herself. The young man repeated his actions with the second maiden who appeared, and also with the third. Neither said

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 anything even when he ran his fingers up between their legs. But when he had finished with the fourth, she turned upon him, indignantly.

"You bad old man!" she burst out. "That is the first time you have ever done such a thing to me."

Maqwänts's son was silent.

"What did he do?" enquired the other three young women.

"He handled me familiarly," said the girl.

"He did the same to me," said the first damsel.

"And to me!" "And to me!" affirmed the second and third.

The fourth girl cursed him fluently, making full use of the wide range of Bella Coola execrations. Instead of answering, Maqwänts's son threw off the old man's rags and stood forth in his true form. At once the four maidens fell in love with him and besought him to marry them. He declined to do so, but when they urged him to stay and be their temporary partner, at least, he agreed. He remained for two days exercising full marital rights.

After that he returned to the canoe and continued his journey with the salmon. When they had gone some distance the latter remarked that they would see more women on the shore; soon they came to a wide beach where they beheld a great number of blind women, who were in reality birds, digging roots. Maqwänts's son watched them eagerly. When they had collected enough, they went into their house and began to cook the roots; silently, he crept in after them.

"I smell Maqwänts's son," said one woman.

The others laughed at her but she persisted in her belief that he was among them. When the food was ready, the cook poured it out on a dish, whereupon the youth took it and concealed it under his cape. Each woman accused her neighbour of the theft; harsh words followed by blows ensued and pandemonium resulted. Maqwänts's son spat in the eye of one of the women, enabling her to see. At this she cried out loudly:

"I have the power of sight in one eye. I see a very handsome young man in the house with us."

He spat in one eye of each, restoring its sight. The women all fell in love with him and wished to marry him but he replied:

"No. I am returning home in a very few days, but if you like I will stay with you for a time."

His hostesses, delighted, thanked him profusely. He, then, spat in the blind eye of each, thus giving her full vision. For several days he lived with the women, bestowing his favour impartially, but in no case did conception follow. Finally he returned to his salmon-canoe which took him home.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

If Maqwänts's son had not visited the land of birds the latter would be blind unto the present day. 539*

THE BOY WHO HAD POWER OVER SALMON

A considerable period, perhaps seven hundred years, after the first people had come to this earth, the wife of Änukkälsnam, a Kimsquit man, dreamt that she became a salmon and in this form went up the river and caught a small fish. The following morning, when the woman remembered her dream, she realized that it meant she was about to have a male child. Presently she felt that she was pregnant, and long before the usual time had elapsed, she gave birth to a boy. The infant grew with such extraordinary rapidity that, when only three months old, he was able to sit up in his crib, a three-sided box fitted with a cross-bar, behind which he rested, with his legs projecting. This was the parents' first child, and the father, delighted with the infant's precociousness, gave him his own name, Änukkälsnam.

When young Änukkälsnam was one year old he had the appearance and ability of a boy of ten, and always accompanied his father on his expeditions, rather to his mother's dread. One day, when the first salmon of the season were running, his father took the lad to the mouth of the river, where he startled his parent by talking in a strange language.

"Father," he said when he had finished, "I have just had a conversation with the river people, who have asked a number of questions about us."

"What people?" the startled father asked.

"The salmon," answered his son. Then the father, remembering the story of Maqwänts's son (II, p. 472) knew that his own son must be partly salmon and partly human, and that the language he had been speaking was that of the former.

He did not reply to his son's remark, and the two continued their journey to the edge of the ocean. When they passed the same spot on the return trip, the boy once more carried on an animated conversation with the salmon, from which, judging by his frequent laughter, he derived much pleasure.

When they reached home, the salmon-boy bade his father invite the people to his house, as he desired to transmit to them the wishes of his friends. As soon as all had assembled, the father told of his son's conversation in a strange tongue, from which he suspected that he must be in part a salmon. This the people readily believed, remembering the phenomenal speed with which he had grown. Acting as spokesman for his son, the father went on to say that the salmon wanted beaten cedar-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 bark, both dyed and undyed, roots, and other articles which they could not obtain in their own land. Next day the people, willing to oblige the salmon, gave Ănukkălsnam large quantities of the provisions named, which he cast into the river to the grateful fish.

When twelve years old, Ănukkălsnam, strong as a man, began to build a salmon-weir, to the great gratification of his neighbours. Wishing to obtain good cedar logs from Suxwlk, on Dean Channel, he set off in his canoe at dawn, before anyone was stirring. He travelled a little distance down the fiord to a bend where many salmon were lying, and at that point he sank his craft beneath the surface of the water, though he continued in human form, nor did the canoe change as it passed amongst the salmon. Their chief recognized Ănukkălsnam, whom he greeted by name, and informed him that he was sending four salmon youths to assist him in his task. With their aid the craft sped on, without visible means of propulsion, at a tremendous rate of speed, and soon reached Suxwlk, eighteen miles down the fiord, where the four salmon, previously invisible, took on human form and helped the salmon-boy drag the heavy logs to his canoe. Swiftly they went back towards Kimsquit, and at the same point where he had gone beneath the surface, Ănukkălsnam brought his canoe from below, and paddled home, normally.

The people of the village, who were just getting up, were amazed at the celerity with which he had accomplished his task, but Ănukkălsnam explained that it was due to help which he had received from his salmon friends, and counting on that he had not desired any human aid. But he gladly accepted assistance from everyone in the construction of his fish-weir, so that it was soon finished. In it he caught many salmon, as his knowledge of their habits enabled him to set his trap in a suitable place. The youth repeated to his friends what he had learnt from the fish: that they should have respect for their prey, should never catch more than they could use, and especially should never throw any away.

One December a party of Kimsquit people, among them Ănukkălsnam, journeyed to Bella Coola for some ceremony. Returning, they encountered a gale from the northwest in Labouchere Channel which detained them for a whole month. At the end of that time their food was almost exhausted and they were at the point of starvation, having left but one dried dog salmon. One of the party, a man named Lăklăkls, whose children were starving, begged Ănukkălsnam to help them, promising him a canoe, if he stopped the wind. The salmon-boy agreed to do so, and asked for the single dog salmon left. It had been slit along the backbone and opened for drying, but he spread it out carefully, and placed within it two small stones. Then he bent up the edges of the fish, as they had been in life, and tied them in this position, so that the whole roughly resembled a salmon. He carried this effigy to the beach, where, holding it in his arms, he plunged into the water, coming to the surface a little distance from the shore; again he dived, to reappear farther out. When he had done this four times the salmon came to life. Immediately, the wind ceased, as it does in August, when the dog salmon breed. 539*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

According to the Bella Coola, the wind does not blow in August lest it incommode the dog salmon, hence, when one of these fish came to life, the wind obligingly ceased.

The travellers returned to Kimsquit, where the story of Ănukkălsnam's exploit was told with wonder and awe, combined with great thankfulness. He was regarded as having received special power from Ălqunăm himself, so that people used to beg him to intercede on their behalf with the supreme deity. As accounts of his prowess spread up and down the coast, the Fort Rupert people became jealous and determined to kill him. They sent a war-party for this particular purpose which lurked in hiding where it could watch his movements, and when an opportunity presented itself they slew the salmon-boy, and fled.

THE MURDER OF Twalălit[84]

Once long ago a lad who had gone hunting in the mountains came to the house of Twalălit, the supernatural hunter of mountain goats, where his wife, Ălmınmınăm, was removing the fat from a bear-skin. The animal had just been killed and as she scraped she often ate small tid-bits. She had fastened her blanket with a rope around her stomach so that it would not hamper her movements while working; this is the usual practice, but she had tied the blanket so high that whenever she bent down the lower part of her body became visible. The lad watched unobserved for some time until he became infatuated with the woman. He approached Ălmınmınăm and told her of his passion, at which she was not displeased; so the two entered the house where they spent the day lying together, both very happy. Towards dusk Ălmınmınăm said:

"Twalălit, my husband, will soon return. Don't let him know that we have been together, sit over there," pointing to a place on the other side of the fire.

The lad did so. Before long Twalălit came in.

"Hello, Ălmınmınăm," he said at once. "I see you have a guest. Has he just come?"

"Why do you always question me whenever you find a stranger here?" Ălmınmınăm retorted angrily. "You are too suspicious."

This only increased Twalălit's doubts.

[84]Boas, p. 57, records a somewhat similar story.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 "I suppose you have been misbehaving with the lad," he continued. "That is the meaning of your anger."

"Yes," replied his wife. "What are you going to do about it?"

Twalälhit said no more, nor did he show any resentment; instead he hospitably prepared a comfortable bed for the youth.

"Don't go to sleep," Älmnmnäm whispered to him. "If he gets a chance, Twalälhit always kills my lovers, and unless you keep awake he will murder you. When he yawns, you do the same."

As darkness settled down Twalälhit yawned noisily, saying:

"When I have been out on the mountains all day it makes me yawn, but I cannot go to sleep."

"It affects me the same way," answered the young man, as he too yawned noisily.

This continued for hours, whenever Twalälhit yawned the youth imitated him, and neither went to sleep.

It was dawn before Twalälhit fell asleep and began to snore. Älmnmnäm had warned the lad what to do if this happened, so he rose silently, took Twalälhit's stick,[48] which was planted upright beside the sleeper, and pointed it at him. Twalälhit died instantly, as this was the weapon with which he was wont to kill mountain goats by merely pointing.

Up to this time Twalälhit had always slain his wife's lovers by causing the planks beneath the bed to turn over so that the occupant was precipitated down a chasm, at the bottom of which there was a pile of bones of those he had murdered in this way. It was because Älmnmnäm loved the lad that she not only saved him but showed him how to kill her husband.

The young man did not return to his home, but continued to live with Älmnmnäm, who made him immortal. He assumed the name and occupation of Twalälhit and it is he who has been seen by fortunate hunters even within recent years. If the evil old Twalälhit had not been destroyed there would still be many casualties, but his successor, himself once a hunter, is of a kindly disposition and often gives aid to mortals in their pursuit of game. The old people used to say that unless Twalälhit helped a hunter he would be unable to kill mountain goats at all.

THE MURDER OF Twalälhit
(Second Version)

Long ago hunters venturing into the mountains in pursuit of goats

[481 224] [48] A straight stick about seven feet long such as is carried by all hunters when they go into the mountains to assist them in climbing. Twalälhit always carries one.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539

often failed to return, though no one knew what became of them. The fate of four brothers was typical of all. Twaltlîr, the supernatural hunter, met them and invited them to his house where he gave them a meal, but all the time he was plotting their destruction. He instructed his dog, Ilaipâl, to bite off their heads, which the animal did while the brothers were sleeping. Twaltlîr slew hunters in this way on many occasions.

Once a youth, hunting with a small dog, met Twaltlîr, who invited him into his house as usual. The host gave the unsuspecting mortal a meal and then went out hunting, himself. Heretofore Twaltlîr's wife, Âlmumudm, had made no effort to help her husband's victims, but she felt a great affection for this lad, which, he in turn, reciprocated; after misconducting herself, she determined to save him.

"When Twaltlîr returns," she warned him, "he will ask you the name of your dog. You must answer Ilaipâl, which is the name of his own dog. This will surprise him. He will then ask you if it has another name and you must say, 'Yes! He Who Can Hold Ten Goats in His Mouth at One Time.' Each time he asks you the dog's name, increase the number by ten, 'He Who Can Hold Twenty Goats in His Mouth at One Time,' 'He Who Can Hold Thirty Goats in His Mouth at One Time,' and so on. My husband will be powerless. Above all, do not go to sleep. When Twaltlîr yawns noisily, do so yourself, but do not sleep."

Presently the hunter entered the house.

"What is your dog's name?" he immediately asked.

"Ilaipâl," replied the youth.

Twaltlîr repeated the question.

"He Who Can Hold Ten Goats in His Mouth at One Time," answered the lad.

He replied in like fashion, repeatedly, as Âlmumudm had instructed him, until at last Twaltlîr, much puzzled, admitted that the two dogs had identical names.

As darkness fell they went to bed. Twaltlîr yawned loudly and the youth imitated him, but neither slept. This continued throughout the night, but towards dawn Twaltlîr could keep awake no longer. Through his knowledge of the names of his host's dog, the mortal lad had gained power over it, and he now bade it slay his master, exactly as the latter had ordered it to kill the guest. Ilaipâl was prepared to obey the one who remained awake, so he forthwith devoured Twaltlîr's head.

Instead of returning home the fortunate young man became immortal and assumed Twaltlîr's position. It is he who has since been seen, without fatal results, by hunters.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#539

THE BRAIN SUCKER

Perhaps a hundred years after the first people came down to earth, there remained in Nuxmálc a a woman, called Snalqalqáls. She was old; so old that the skin on her face hung in great folds, while her breasts and body consisted of a mass of leather-like wrinkles of extreme ugliness. She was so old that she appeared hardly human, more like a witch than a woman. Áiqanúm, by his supernatural power, had kept her alive long after her normal span of life had been completed. One day she said to him:

"I want to go down to earth to pay a visit to my friends there."

Áiqanúm agreed, and caused an easy road to appear which led her to the bank of the Kimsquit River, opposite a village. She called out and four brothers who heard her brought her across in their canoe to the settlement, where they admitted her to their house. Then they sent word to all their friends to come and see the scarcely human hag whom they had found, this being the first time that the people had ever seen anybody of the kind.

Presently the four brothers went off to hunt mountain goats, leaving at home their sister, an adolescent girl, in seclusion. Some twenty or thirty people were living in the house, as was customary in the old days, and Snalqalqáls was given a place near the door. That evening a baby girl cried incessantly; the mother could not pacify her.

"Please give her to me," said Snalqalqáls, "I will put her to sleep."

The old woman took the fretting child in her arms and crooned into her ear:

"Kulamalikta ólas, ni nainta i nis, hwle, hwle, hwle, hwll."
"Hush! Hush! Little girl, hwle, hwle, hwle, hwll."*

[533]

This is the kind of lullaby which mothers sing to their children so no one considered it surprising when the hag bent close to the infant's head. When no one was watching, she inserted her mouth into its ear, sucked out its brains, and thus killed the little one. Then she gave it back to its mother.

"Put it to bed," she said. "The baby is asleep."

The mother obeyed, not knowing what the treacherous old hag had done.

When night came all in the house went to sleep, except the young girl who lay awake, but silent in her corner. Presently she saw the flabby cheeks and lips of the old woman contract into a long, snout-like tube

*This was recorded as song VII D 46b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

extending from her mouth, which she inserted into the ear of one sleeper after another. The watcher was saved by her ceremonial uncleanness, that ever-potent protection against supernatural beings. No one stirred. Then the old woman went out. For four days the girl remained in her corner, and during that time no human being entered the house, from which she concluded that Swalqulpāli had murdered everyone in the village. The old woman herself returned at intervals but the girl said nothing to her.

On the fourth day the girl's brothers returned home, while the old woman happened to be absent. Their sister told them they had made a great mistake in bringing Swalqulpāli into the house, for she had killed all its occupants, and probably other households as well. One of the brothers stayed with his sister while the other three went to investigate. It was as the girl had feared; there were only corpses in the houses. She told her brothers that the old woman usually returned at dusk, so before that time the four lay down, feigning sleep, but fully determined to remain awake. Only the eldest, a shaman, carried out his resolve, the other three were soon snoring. When the old woman came in, the eldest youth had drawn his marmot-skin blanket over his face, but through a hole in it he watched the hag's snout materialize and stretch across towards the ear of one of his brothers. He jumped up with a shout, and severed the protruding proboscis with his knife. The four determined to slay the murderess. All night two of them guarded her, and at the first sign of dawn they cut off her head, her arms, and her legs, to cast them with her body into a hole made in the glowing ashes of their fire. Then the five fled up the river valley.

On the fourth day they saw Swalqulpāli pursuing them; she had come to life in spite of their efforts to destroy her. Hurriedly they crossed the river, and the eldest brother waited to watch for their enemy. When she was in mid-stream he reversed his marmot-skin coat, and immediately ice formed on the river which surrounded the old woman. They heard her calling after them, asking them to cut away the ice from about her face; they paid no heed, but continued their flight until night overtook them. The four brothers climbed a tree to be safe from Swalqulpāli, while their sister, protected by her uncleanness, remained below. At daybreak they continued their flight, kept going all day, and again climbed a tree to pass the night. All this time they thought they were upon their own well-travelled, well-known road, but instead it was the trail to Sengʷ they were following, and soon they saw a magnificent house with a man inside of it. The house was Nuxmāʿa and the man Ālqnxtēm, but they did not know this.

He invited them to enter. The five wanderers told him of their mis-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*539 fortunes, how all their people had been murdered by an old woman who had sucked out their brains through their ears, and how she was even now pursuing them.

"I know about her," their host answered.

This was the first inkling he had received of the crimes she had committed on earth.

Shortly afterwards Sculpulpilt came along, panting and tottering on two walking-sticks.

"I am tired," she said, but Alpuntsw said sternly:

"I know now about all the evil you have wrought on earth."

He took a whip and beat her unmercifully. When he had finished he opened his door, and tore her to tiny shreds which he threw outside, saying:

"Henceforth you shall be mosquitoes."

[525] The fragments floated down to Kimsquit, where ever since there have

"Don't be down-hearted about the loss of your friends. I will help you. Spend the night with me, but tomorrow, when I send you home, I will give you something to restore the dead."

Next morning after breakfast he gave the eldest youth a small quantity of what looked like water, a drop of which he told him to put into each ear, each nostril, and the mouth of every dead one, for restoration. They were then told to return to earth on the road by which they had come, which would be made easy for them. It was as he had said; thanks to Alpuntsw's care, they reached earth in two days and one night. As soon as they came to their village the eldest boy first restored his parents, afterwards all the other people; to them it seemed as if they had only been asleep; none of them realized he had been dead. The eldest boy became wealthy through presents given to him in gratitude by those he had restored.

THE WOMAN WHO MARRIED WOLF

Once upon a time there was a young girl who was secluded in the corner of her house following puberty. Growing weary of her imprisonment, she one day slipped out through the hole in the floor to pick berries in the forest. Here she met a handsome young man who made love to her; at first she spurned him but at length gave in, and, immediately afterwards, the youth suggested that she return with him to his home, saying she could go back when she so desired; to this she agreed. They soon reached his house within which was his father, Wolf, who wore a wolf blanket and had a wolf's tail; only his face was human. As the old man moved around the house his tail almost went into the fire.

J:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacosia NEA

5394

"Take care!" the girl cried out, "you will burn your tail."

Much to her terror the old man became furiously angry and showered to him her.

Her lover had been absent when this was taking place but on his return she complained to him.

"What did you say that so angered father?" he asked.

"I told him his tail had almost caught fire," she replied.

"You must never do that," he answered, "it annoys him. Speak of his tail as his quiver, his arrows are inside."

The girl promised to remember, but she was badly frightened and wanted to go home, fearing lest her lover's father should devour her. They would not consent to her return; so it was like being in a prison.

One day as she was walking on a level crest of beach near the house the girl saw a huge mouth gaping before her from the sand. It was probably a shark, lying motionless to wait for its prey. Bravely she cut a stick, inserted it in the monster's jaws to wedge them open, then went back to her lover's house and told him that she had seen a strange sight, a yawning mouth like a house. "[illegible]" [illegible] the girl following. They plunged boldly down inside the mouth, whereupon she kicked away the stick, thus preventing their egress. The monster slowly shook himself, waddled to the sea and swam away with his victims.

The girl returned to Wolf's house where her lover's father had been left alone. She built a large fire in which she put a number of his stones, then suddenly showed the old man into it and held him down until he was burnt to death.

There was now nothing to prevent her return to her own home, so she set out. She arrived without further adventures and was welcomed in one back from the dead, a year having elapsed since she had disappeared. Remembering the stores of smoked deer and mountain goat meat in Wolf's house, she guided her relatives to this and they brought back large quantities of the food.

STUMP AND HIS WIFE*

Once upon a time, there was a little girl secluded in a corner of her house for the year following puberty. She frequently put on one side the food which her parents brought her, planning to wait until she needed it, but her elder brother used to steal this for himself, thus adding hunger to the discomfort of her confinement.

"What do you mean by stealing my food?" she asked him one day.

*For another version of this story, see Boas, p. 100.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

S 539

"It is because you are so greedy that no woman will have intercourse with you."

"Rot!" he replied. "I could sleep with you if I wanted."

That night as the girl was sleeping, her brother came and seduced her. She awoke just as he was leaving, too late to discover who her seducer had been. Thinking that whoever it was might return, she determined to remain awake the next night. For hours she lay feigning sleep, but towards dawn could keep awake no longer. Then her evil brother came again, as before fleeing as she awoke. She was much puzzled, unable to think who her lover might be. The third night she mixed some paint with gum and grease, warmed the mixture by the fire and went to sleep with it beside her. Once again her brother held intercourse, but this time, though he fled when she awoke and she was unable to see his face, she had been quick enough to throw out her arms, smeared with the sticky paint, and felt them come in contact with the man's body.

All the next day the girl kept peering out through the cracks in the wall of the house hoping to see a lad stained with paint. In the distance she could see the village boys playing, and noticed that one had stains on his body, but she was not close enough to recognize who it was. So she called one of her younger sisters.

"Go and see," she said, "who that is with paint stains on his back."

The younger child returned quickly.

"What's the matter?" she asked. "Can't you see? It is our oldest brother."

The girl was covered with shame and mortification. For four days she ate nothing, then gathered her few possessions—comb, paint, and so forth—into a small bundle, and set out, not caring where she went. Her younger sister saw her slip out through the hole in the floor.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"Oh, I am just going to get some spruce gum to chew," she answered. "You run home."

The little girl did not want to go home, but turned back when her elder sister spoke sharply to her. Still intent on following, she hid in some bushes hoping that her sister would not notice, but the latter had become suspicious and watched. When she saw what the younger one had done, she turned back, caught the little girl, and, disregarding her struggles, tied her to a tree so that she could not come after her.

The elder sister now set out on her lonely journey, following a dried-up water-course which she ascended. Though she did not know it, this was the dry river-bed leading from Alquentin's house to this world, a track which often figures in Bella Coola mythology. To anyone else the stony river-bed would have been difficult of access, to her it was like a fine road.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

After a considerable period she heard the sound of axe strokes and, continuing her course, found that this was made by a middle-aged man with a huge head who was working at a salmon-weir. He was Tmiax, the water-scoured tree-stump with branching white roots such as is found in all rivers, but the girl did not know this. Stump saw her.

"Will you be my wife?" he asked.

"All right," she answered.

"Then come home with me."

The girl fearlessly accompanied Stump to his house, within which she saw sitting in a corner an old, old woman who had lost the use of her legs. As Stump was building a fire the old woman whispered to the newcomer:

"Don't eat any food that he gives you, or you will become helpless like me. I was once his wife. When he offers you food, accept it, but slip it down under your blanket into this pouch, and chew the sinew that fastens your blanket as if you were masticating."

As she said this the old woman handed the girl a small skin pouch.

Meanwhile Stump had prepared a meal. He gave his new wife, as a delicacy, some smoked meat of spring salmon which had spawned. She pretended to eat, but in reality slipped it down into her pouch as the old woman had directed.

Then Stump said, "The lice in my hair must be numerous as I am itching and uncomfortable. I want to scratch all the time. Please delouse me."

"All right," said the girl. "You lead the way to a suitable place for the operation and I will follow."

Stump went outside.

As his wife was following, the crone whispered to her:

"Take my bone knife." The girl took it and the old woman continued: "What he calls lice are really toads which infest his hair. Use the knife to pierce them, then throw each far away, and as you do so close your teeth noisily as if you had bitten it."

Stump was waiting near the door. His wife carried out the old woman's instructions; she pierced toad after toad, and as she threw each away she clacked her teeth. Once he became suspicious that she was not eating his "lice" and asked:

"What is that noise?"

"Oh, that is just squirrels dropping cones from the tree-tops," she answered, though of course it was made by the bodies of the toads striking the ground.

When the operation was completed, Stump, saying he must work at his salmon-weir, gathered up his tools and went off. This seemed to the girl a chance to escape and she rushed off again up the river-bed.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 But as soon as she had left the house the chamber-vessel called out: "Stump! Stump! Stump! Come quickly, your wife has run away."

Stump dashed off and soon caught the girl whom he dragged back to his house.

"Don't be such a fool as to try to run away," he said. "I can get you wherever you go."

The girl pretended that she was resigned to her fate so Stump went back to work. Then the old woman called to her.

"His chamber-vessel always spies for him," she said, "but if you bore holes around the rim it will become helpless."

The girl perforated the vessel. Whereupon the old woman gave her four presents, a whetstone, a comb, a mountain goat bladder filled with oil, and a bone needle.

"Take these," she said, "and when your husband pursues you throw one after the other behind you; they will delay him."

Thus provided for, the girl fled again. The chamber-vessel, seeing her leave, tried to warn his master but could do no more than cry, "xwo-la! xwo-la! xwo-la! xwo-lo-!" for the power of speaking had been taken from it. For a long time Stump paid no attention to this senseless calling, but at last, urged by curiosity, he returned to find the vessel perforated and his wife gone. At once he set off in pursuit up the river-bed. He could travel more rapidly than the girl, who soon realized that she was being followed. Before long he had almost overtaken her, so she threw behind her the bladder filled with oil; it became a large lake. Stump had to go around this, and by the time he had done so, his wife was far in advance. He grimly pressed after her, again gaining rapidly, until once more she was almost within his clutches. This time she dropped the comb which grew into a thick forest of small, spiky trees. Stump plunged into this but his large head was constantly becoming entangled.

"Which way did you go?" he called to his wife.

"Straight through the middle, come along," she answered him mockingly.

After considerable delay Stump succeeded in penetrating the forest and once more set off after the fugitive. He followed her trail relentlessly until again he was but a short distance behind when she cast the bone needle on the ground. Instantly there arose between husband and wife a multitude of small, sharp needles, which pierced Stump's feet so that he could only advance slowly, picking his steps with caution. Again he asked the girl how she had traversed this patch, and as before she said she had come through the middle. At last Stump reached the end of this area and again took up the trail of his wife. Once again he gained on her, until, when she was just before him, she threw down the whetstone; it became a massive stone rampart entirely hiding her. 539*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

She continued her journey and presently came to a house, through a crack in the wall of which she saw a man. It was Älquntäm, but she was not aware of this. He sensed her presence and greeted the girl:

"I have known for some time that you would come, for you have fled from your home in trouble. I have been waiting for you, you shall be my wife. Don't be afraid; come in."

The girl slowly entered though almost driven back by the great heat. Älquntäm rubbed his hands over her face and at once she ceased to feel it. The two sat down and had supper together very happily. Presently Stump appeared.

"Have you seen my wife?" he roared through the doorway.

"Perhaps this is she," replied Älquntäm. "Come in and see."

Stump's head was so big that he could not get through the door, but, by craning his neck, he could see that it was his lost wife inside, and he called out that she was there. Älquntäm wrapped his blankets around himself and went to the door, then suddenly threw them open, whereupon the heat was so great that Stump's branching head caught fire. He was consumed entirely, not even ashes were left.

The girl lived happily with Älquntäm, soon giving birth to a son. The infant grew with such remarkable speed that when he was the size and had the appearance of a child of three, he had the intelligence of a man. Realizing that his mother was lonely and sometimes wished to see her parents, he told his father of this; Älquntäm was grateful for the suggestion.

"Don't fret," he said to his wife. "Your mother is not far away."

The woman looked down and saw her home as if it were just beneath her feet.

"If you want to visit your mother," continued her husband, "you can do so on my eye-lashes."

By "eye-lashes" he meant the beams of the sun on which the thoughts of mortals penetrate to Älquntäm. [821]

Next morning the woman took her child, descended on Älquntäm's eye-lashes and soon landed at the door of her father's house. Her mother was weeping, as indeed she had done incessantly since the loss of her daughter. The girl did not enter at once, but rapped with a stick on the wall near where her mother was sitting. The woman thought that someone was being mischievous and sent a little girl of six to investigate.

"It is my sister, with a baby," she called out as she came running back.

"Don't lie to me," the mother answered. "It is impossible, your sister has been dead for more than a year."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 The woman sent another messenger, a child of about ten, who likewise reported that it was indeed the missing girl; then the mother rushed out, and was overjoyed to see her long-lost daughter. Equally great was the latter's delight at sight of her mother. Ăłquntăm's wife told her relatives to spread sand on the floor of the house, and when this was done she entered through a hole in the roof, being careful not to use the door.

The mother and her child stayed for some time on earth. The little boy used to play with the other children who often made fun of him because his eyes were feeble. Sometimes they even said:

"Your father cannot be Ăłquntăm, if he were, your eyes would be all right."

This so angered the child that at last he returned to his father's house above. No one knows whether or not his mother accompanied him.

STUMP AND HIS WIFE
(Second Version)

Stump once appeared in the guise of a handsome man to a woman whom he invited to his home. She agreed to go, ignorant of his true form, and followed him to his house, where the two sat down together to a meal. Afterwards, Stump asked her to remove and eat the lice which infested his hair. They went outside and when he moved his head so that the sun fell on it the woman saw, to her horror, that it was covered with toads. Instead of eating them as her husband had directed, she merely bit them and spat them from her mouth. On returning to Stump's house she sat down; presently when she tried to rise she found she could not—roots had grown from her body fastening her to the ground. She had become a Nusqıłbutsăx, the term applied to a person thus fastened to one spot.

This version then describes how in course of time Stump caught another girl, the heroine of the first tale, and how the Nusqıłbutsăx kept warning her every day that when her husband asked her to remove his lice she must stab them with a needle and throw them away. On warm days the vermin worried Stump; it was on one of these that he asked his girl wife to cleanse his head, which she did in the manner already described. Nusqıłbutsăx told the girl how she would be able to escape with the assistance of four presents, a whetstone, a comb, a goat bladder filled with goat grease, and a cloud.

The girl fled away, but Stump, warned of her flight by his chamber-vessel's cry of "xwo·la! xwo·la! xwo·la! xwo·lo··!," sped after her. He had almost caught her when she threw behind her the cloud; instantly Stump was enveloped in a dense fog which so delayed him that his wife was able to get far ahead of him. When it melted away he continued the pursuit and had almost caught his wife when she dropped the bladder which became a lake around the edge of which her pursuer had to make his way. Again he almost overtook her, but she eluded him by throwing the whetstone, which grew to a precipitous mountain without trees. For a long time Stump was unable to scale this, but at last he succeeded. A fourth time he drew near his wife, but she hurled down the comb which became a forest consisting of sparse, large trees with dense undergrowth between. Stump's hair became entangled in the branches so that he could make little progress. 539*

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This version briefly describes how the woman reached Ăłquntăm's home, though unaware that she had been climbing, how he made her his wife, and how he set fire to the pursuing Stump.

THE GIRLS WHO VISITED Nusmăt·a

Not long after the earth was first populated, there was living in Kimsquit a man who had four daughters, the eldest about sixteen years old. Some four years before the story opens, this girl had reached puberty, when, according to custom, she was secluded in a corner of the house for one year. Whether on account of poverty, or for some other reason, when this period had elapsed the father did not make the necessary arrangements for her marriage, but continued to keep her in confinement. As the second and third daughter in turn reached adolescence, each was shut up with the eldest, who had been virtually a prisoner for four years. Whenever they left the house their harsh mother went with them to see that they spoke to no one; they were most unhappy. At length they decided to flee from home, not caring whither they went. On confiding their intention to the youngest sister, who had not yet reached womanhood, she insisted on joining them.

The four watched for an opportunity to slip away from the village unobserved. Not heeding where they were going, they followed a track up the river bank; it led to Sonx^{w}', though they knew it not. At length they came to a house, and, peering within, saw a man who invited them to enter, saying that he knew about them. They went in and sat down, realizing for the first time that the house was rather peculiar, bigger than any they had ever seen, and that the people, too, were different. It was Nusmăt·a, and the man was Ăłquntăm himself; he had willed the little girls to come that way, though they were unaware of it at the time. Their host's slave brought them a meal consisting of four bearberries which he served on a tiny thimble-like dish. The hungry little girls thought there would not be enough for all, but, though they said nothing, Ăłquntăm's wife knew their thoughts and told them that they would be unable to

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 consume the food. This proved to be the case; though they ate their fill, the four berries were always miraculously replaced. Evening had come by the time the meal was over, and Ăłquntăm's wife prepared a bed on which the sisters slept comfortably for the night.

In the morning the two youngest sisters were crying bitterly. Ăłquntăm asked the eldest what was the matter.

"They are afraid that they will never be able to return home," she replied.

To convince them that there was no such danger, he took down the wall of Nusmăt·a, then rubbed their eyes, enabling them to see their own country spread out beneath, as if it were indeed only a little distance away, as he said it was. Their vision travelled on Ăłquntăm's eye-lashes, the rays of the sun such as are visible when its light is breaking through the clouds, or when there is much dust in the atmosphere. This is the route by which the prayers of mortals ascend to the supreme being. The girls were comforted by the thought that their home was so near. In readiness for their departure, their host's wife gave the eldest girl a whetstone, a comb, some eagle down, and a basket so closely woven that it would hold water. Ăłquntăm indicated the place where she would arrive on earth, from which two roads led to Kimsquit, and told her that on one of these, which he also pointed out, there dwelt an evil monster, so the other must be taken. Then he called the four sisters to him.

"I am going to put you all into this basket," he said, "and lower you to your home. As you descend keep your eyes closed, or great harm will befall you. When you reach the earth you will know it by the bump of the basket on the ground; then, and not until then, you may open your eyes. Get out and shake the rope, so that I will know you are all right. When you are on earth, should the monster chase you, use the presents which my wife has given you: As he follows, set the whetstone upright behind you to serve as a barrier. If he surmounts that, place the comb behind you, and if both of these fail, shake out the eagle down to blind the enemy."

Ăłquntăm packed the girls into the basket and tied them carefully. He put the eldest on top, as if she were a brooding bird, entirely covering her younger sisters, so that they could not peek out, even if they had been tempted to disregard his instructions.

The supreme being lowered the basket carefully until the sisters felt a gentle bump and knew they had reached earth. Then the eldest girl opened her eyes, lifted out her younger sisters, shook the rope, and watched the basket as it was hauled aloft. The four started off and soon reached the point where there were two diverging trails to Kimsquit, one of which led past the home of the monster whose name was *Ostăłkoy*ʷ,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Lake-Swallower."[48] Though Ăłqunŭm had given most explicit directions not to follow this road, the youngest girl had set her heart on taking it and would not listen to the entreaties of the others. At length the wilful one set out on the forbidden path, and her sisters, unwilling to have her go alone, decided to accompany her, though the eldest was very much frightened. 539*

Soon they came to Lake-Swallower's house, near a pond. Inside the door was an old woman, paralysed from her knees down, who told them they had made a great mistake in coming by that road; she too had erred in her youth, with the result that the monster had captured her and she was unable to leave his house, though he had never actually hurt her. The eldest sister explained that it was all due to the folly of the youngest that they had ventured on the wrong trail. Whereupon the little girl began to cry bitterly. The old woman continued:

"Lake-Swallower will return shortly. He always eats a meal of dry mountain goat bones, then he goes to the pool for a drink. Your only chance of escape is while he is drinking, since, once started, he cannot stop until the water is exhausted."

Presently in came Lake-Swallower, a giant, ten feet tall and of massive proportions; from his belt dangled two mountain goats which he carried as easily as a human hunter would have carried two grouse. He gulped down the two animals for his meal, like a wolf, devouring skin, bones, and meat. When he had finished, he called to him the four little girls, whom he was delighted to see in his house, and bade them go with him to the lake, where he proposed to drink. He told them to lift his head by the top-knot when he had swallowed enough, because, unless helped, he was unable to stop until the lake was dry.

The girls went with him, but as soon as he began to drink they fled back to the fork in the road where they had so foolishly disobeyed Ăłqunŭm's instructions. Lake-Swallower could not stop, but with each gulp he took in so large a quantity of water that soon he had drained the pool. Then he set off in pursuit of the fleeing girls.

He gained on them rapidly and had almost overtaken them when the eldest, who was in the rear, set the whetstone upright behind her; it became a steep mountain which Lake-Swallower could not surmount. He hurried round the obstacle, however, and again found the trail of his quarry. Once more he was on the point of catching the girls when the eldest placed the comb in his track; instantly, there sprang up a forest of tangled undergrowth, which delayed the monster for a considerable period. At length he forced his way through, and again he had almost captured the four when the eldest threw out the eagle down. This turned

[48] Literally, "He Who Has a Lake in His Head."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 into a mist which so utterly blinded and confused Lake-Swallower that he was forced to abandon the pursuit. Without further difficulty the four sisters reached home, where they were received with great rejoicing, especially when their friends heard of the dangers through which they had passed.

THE SUN'S CAPTOR

*539 821 Long, long ago, a woman was sitting on the ground with her back to the sun, who noticed her. He came down and rubbed his hand over her back, causing her to become pregnant, then went back to his station above. The child grew so rapidly that the woman bore a son before the usual period had elapsed. This little boy grew with phenomenal rapidity. One day he asked his mother if he might go up to see his father, and when she consented, he built a long ladder up which he climbed until he reached the land above. When the sun drew near, his son spoke to him, saying that his mother had allowed him to come up to see him, and suggesting that he bring her on a later visit. The father agreed and the boy descended to his mother on earth.

A few days later, when the lad and his mother climbed above, the sun disregarded them entirely, and continued his course without seeming to be aware of their presence. Angry at his father's callousness, the lad asked his mother to give him a pubic hair with which to make a noose to catch the sun.

"Don't be silly," she answered. "The great heat will burn it."

Her son persisted until she finally gave him a single hair from between her legs. This he rolled into a rope with a noose at the end, and hung it from a stick in the course of his father. When the sun came along he was fairly caught in the noose. Thus restrained, he could no longer shine on the earth; the people were filled with wonder, though they were rather thankful, as heretofore there had been perpetual summer.

"It is your son who has caught you," said the boy to his captive father. "You thought yourself too strong. The people down below do not want you to shine all the time; if I release you, you must hide yourself at regular intervals."

The sun agreed to do this. Then the lad untied the noose and the captive went off in his wonted path. To regulate his father's movements, [823] and to ensure his remaining at a safe distance during the winter, the lad raised high mountains at Kimsquit, Ulkatcho, and Leguc, which still limit the sun's course.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*
821

THE SUN'S CHILD

Very long ago there lived at Stuux a chief whose daughter, Copper, was a source of perpetual worry to him. The girl was restless and disobedient, always wandering off by herself and being on too friendly terms with men. At last the father, losing his patience, told Copper to go her own way, that he would have nothing more to do with her. She wandered about, aimlessly, from place to place until she came to a road leading up to a large house within which was a man; it was the dwelling of the supreme deity, but the girl did not know this. Älquntäm asked her to come in, surprised her by calling her by name, and talked to her about the trouble she had had with her father. In this way Copper discovered the identity of her host. She stayed with him that night, and in the morning he told her to go home.

"How?" she asked.

"On the power of my eye," replied Älquntäm.

With that he opened a hole in the side of his house and sent her sliding down to her father's upon one of his eye-lashes, a sunbeam. Though Copper had spent but a single night with Älquntäm, it was equivalent to a year upon the earth and in that time she had conceived, passed through the period of pregnancy and given birth to a male child of whom Älquntäm was the father. Copper carried the infant with her on returning to her own home, outside of which she waited until a younger sister chanced to see her. The little girl rushed to her mother saying:

"Copper has come back!"

The old woman did not believe her and was angry. When another of Copper's sisters had confirmed the news, the mother believed it and was glad. Copper told them to spread clean sand on the floor for herself and her child, then, removing a board from the roof, she entered the house from above.

As time went on Copper's son throve and grew big enough to play with other little boys. But he had inherited from his father some of the heat-giving power of the sun so that he burnt his playmates who were naturally angry and showed their resentment by calling him a bastard. Mortified at this insult, the child told his mother, who instructed him to prepare a bow and a large number of arrows. When he had done so, she told him to shoot upwards. His first arrow went so high it stuck in the floor of *Sonx*ʷ itself. He sent up arrow after arrow and each lodged at the base of its predecessor, until a ladder was formed to the land above. Up this the boy climbed, each arrow falling to the ground as soon as he had transferred his weight to the one immediately above. On reaching the upper regions, the lad proceeded to the house of his father and told

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 him how unhappy he was, because people on earth called him a bastard.
821 "Never mind, my son," said Ăłquntăm. "Presently, I will let you do my work and then you will be more powerful than anyone on earth."

Next morning the father sent the lad off to act as sun, giving him the usual supply of heat. But the boy was so angry with the people on earth that he increased this supply, hoping to burn up the whole of them. Seeing some children at play, he swooped down to slay them; it became so hot that water boiled in the lakes and rivers and the whole race of mankind was roasted to death. Most of the animals escaped by hiding in bur-[825] rows, but not the black bear, who at that time had a white coat. It was burnt black and has remained that colour ever since, while the grizzly was scorched to his present rustiness. The deer and the weasel failed to hide their tails, both of which were burnt; that is why each has a black tip to this day.

Ăłquntăm, angry at his son for killing everybody, restored all to life, [825] and broke the malicious child into countless pieces which he threw down to earth in the form of mosquitoes.

Catastrophic Stories

538 Disasters which occurred in the distant past provide themes for stories of a non-ceremonial nature.

THE FAMINE

*539 Kā'lăn·a was a Kimsquit man who made a practice of watching the sun; from its movements he was able to foretell the solstices and other coming events. One winter, long ago, the sun, instead of stopping at its usual place, continued far beyond its proper course. Kā'lăn·a was much worried and prophesied strange changes, with famine; he called on the young men to weep, but instead they merely laughed at him. Next summer, when there was plenty of fish, berries, and other foods, the people jeered at the prophet. For four years there was the same plentiful hunting and collecting, but in the fifth came a great change. It failed to become warm in April; the berries flowered, but the constant cold wind prevented their fruit from ripening. Few fish entered the river, and even they could not be caught because the water remained so clear. The same conditions prevailed for four years until the people were starving; their only food was porcupine and mountain goat, with a few trout caught on hook and line. About this time a Kimsquit man, Ťsaixlid, went goat-hunting behind his village, and one night after setting his snares, lay down in a cave. He could not sleep, and presently heard the goats talking in his own language and laughing together at his poor workmanship in setting the traps. The following day he found that he had caught nothing, but, heeding what he had heard the animals say, he changed his nooses, and discovered next morning that he had secured a large number. Thus he virtually became a shaman. 539*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The people were in dire straits for food. Among other expedients they tried to dip up salmon from the ocean, and when they failed, boiled and drank instead the water where the fish had jumped, as it was thought to be slightly flavoured. Even the clams and mussels were dead, so that fern-roots and trout were the only dependable foods.

At this time there was living at Nuxwdst an unmarried woman with a child, who like everyone else, was starving. She used to support herself by hunting eels on the beach. One morning she saw a number of gulls feeding on something, and, driving them off, she found that it was a stranded porpoise. The woman returned for her basket and knife, cut up the food and took it home to hide. A young orphan boy frequently helped her to gather firewood, an onerous task because at this distant period there were no trees, only stunted, grass-like bushes. One day the lad came to her, starving, and she gave him food secretly. He returned several times, and the people wondered where he derived his strength, but no one was able to find out because she opened her store only at night and hid it before morning.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE FAMINE

One year long ago there was famine. The warm weather did not come to ripen the berries, and the rivers stayed so clear that no fish could be caught, because they saw the net or fisherman. The people were starving and went everywhere in search of food; many men wandered off to hunt in unknown regions and no one knew how they died. Hunger drove many persons to boil and drink water from the river where they had seen salmon jumping in the hope that some savour of the fish might be left in it. At Stuix there lived a certain Qwaiutsamlaix, who had two children and a very strong slave. Instead of ranging far afield, this man used to go a short distance down the river below his house and spear trout to keep himself alive. He usually fished at night, making torches of cedar-roots which he had straightened for the purpose. Qwaiutsamlaix was tolerably successful, more so than his neighbours, among whom was a woman whose husband had starved to death; in her extremity she used to boil the blood, scales, and refuse of the trout which she gleaned from his canoe.

One day Qwaiutsamlaix and his slave were near Tsimotl, making a fish-dam. The workman was so strong that he had made two for his

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 master, who was the only person ever known to have more than one. On this occasion Qwaiutsamlaix saw a movement in the water near his canoe and speared at it, thinking it to be a salmon; he felt the impact of a successful throw, but when he pulled in the rope, he found that it had been cut. The slave suggested that it must have been a beaver. The following afternoon when they were returning to Stuix, and were only a short distance below that village, they saw something move on the bank and, going ashore, Qwaiutsamlaix found that it was a wolverine devouring a beaver in the back of which was embedded his detachable harpoon-head. The wolverine, startled by the man's sudden appearance, fled up a single tall tree. Qwaiutsamlaix called his slave and the two felled it so that it crashed into the water and drowned the animal. By the time they had finished, it was too late to return to Stuix so they camped for the night at the edge of a pool of water formed by the river overflowing its banks. There was a thin coating of ice over the pond, but during the night Qwaiutsamlaix heard, or perhaps sensed, that there were trout in the pool. Next morning he broke the ice and caught a great number of the fish, on which they breakfasted heartily. The fisherman realized that here was a valuable source of food, and accordingly, with the aid of his slave, he made a stockade to prevent the fish from escaping back to the main river. This occupied a large part of the day. When the enclosure was finished, Qwaiutsamlaix returned to Stuix and told the woman that she would have no further need to exist on the refuse of trout since he had obtained a great abundance of food. She returned with him to the place where the fish were imprisoned; the two, with the slave, subsisted on them for the period of the famine, about one and a half years. They lived in tolerable comfort though many people starved to death.

THE FLOOD[49]

Once, long ago, it began to rain steadily. The mountain creeks became swollen, then the rivers, and the valleys became flooded. The people were forced to make canoes, and the improvident were in trouble when the waters continued to rise; some were taken aboard by their relatives, others were drowned. The valleys were filled; at first a number of mountain tops were left exposed, but finally the bare peak of Nusqalst, the highest in the Bella Coola valley, alone rose above the raging torrent. The Bella Coola were driven to this spot where a large camp was formed. The gales were so strong there, that on two occasions the mooring-rope of a canoe broke; one was carried away towards the Skeena and another towards China Hat. The occupants settled in these two localities and [49]For another account of the flood see Boas, p. 96.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

have since, in their songs, told of Bella Coola, but have not been able to return. A canoe from the lower Fraser, with its occupants, landed on Mount Nuxqalst. The flood lasted until food was almost gone, but at last the waters subsided. Many people had been drowned, others had died from starvation, so that there were fewer Bella Coola villages after the deluge than before. 539*

Many years afterwards, two men at different times climbed to the summit of Nuxqalst and found a number of relics proving the existence of a large camp, and thus confirming the tradition of the flood. Hundreds of years later, Xoqotlis, a man from Nuxqalst village, scaled the peak, but a gale prevented any search for remains. Xoqotlis determined that he would succeed on some future occasion, and for twelve months observed continence. On the same day of the next year he again climbed the mountain. Owing to the care with which he had purified himself it was a fine day; there was neither wind nor clouds, only brilliant sunshine. After finding spoons and other relics of the camp, all turned to stone, he took up a position on the very summit, and looked to the east where he saw the tide-flats of the upper world. Then he looked southwards, where he saw a huge column of smoke rising vertically; it rose from a beautiful seashore where no house was visible, so he judged it was from the abode of Kāmai-ts. Looking west, he saw a pleasant country, but when he looked north all was dark and ominous. When he had completed the circle, moving in the same direction as the sun, he started to descend. His fellow-villagers, knowing of his effort, were awaiting his return and went to meet him when, on the third day, they saw him approaching. He summoned them all to his own house, and, standing on a box, told them what he had seen. When the story was finished, a sudden gust of wind blew open the door, although it had been a calm day. Ashes were blown over Xoqotlis and he fell dead, without a mark on his body. The people were grieved, not only on account of the loss of their companion, but because they wished to hear more of what he had seen.

As further evidence of the flood it is said that a white man has seen a white man's anchor above the timber-line on Mount Kwatna, forty miles to the west of Bella Coola. The presence of clams in the upper Bella Coola valley is also accepted as proof of the flood, though the shell-fish are really fresh-water mussels.

According to another version, the climber, on his first trip, saw fragments of mooring ropes and hooks used for raising salmon-traps, all reduced to the consistency of burnt paper. A gale then forced him back. After a year's continence, he again scaled the mountain choosing a windless day for the attempt, and not only regained the point he had reached on the previous occasion, but scaled to a pleasant land which he thought was the home of Kāmai-ts. He returned in safety and lived to a great age.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 Another account of the flood states that while many persons fled to Mount Nusqalst, others took refuge on the summit of the mountain opposite to it, on the north side of the Bella Coola River. The waters continued to rise until this latter peak was on the point of being submerged, when it requested Nusqalst to give it some of itself. Nusqalst complied, and gave to the other the small knob that projects from its summit. This was not inundated.

Kimsquit too was flooded at the same time. The Kimsquit River rose until the people were driven to the slopes of the mountain now known as Sulukst, to the west of the river. Here they were forced to camp for several months, and it is from this event that the river received its name, which means "Many Houses." The Dean River people were driven to Mount Swaky, where, in later years, indications of their sojourn were to be found, such as mooring loops for canoes, hooks for lifting fish-traps, and various utensils. One man tried to remove some of these relics, but they crumbled in his hands as if they had been burnt paper.

According to Bella Coola belief, the flood was not limited to any one locality. As evidence of its occurrence in Fort Rupert the following myth was related by a man who had heard it from his father's father, a Fort Rupert Indian.

One of the latter's ancestors, having dreamt that a flood would cover the earth, prepared a great quantity of gum with which he pitched his house both inside and out. Presently it began to rain, and the deluge continued until the whole land was covered, but this man dwelt secure in his rain-proof house. When at last he heard the sound of drops on the roof, he knew that the flood must have diminished so he dared open his door. When he and his family went outside they found on the shore two susiutl, the supernatural double-headed salmon that cause land-slides. From this event the man took the designation, Nukao·sa. When the present owner of the name performs his ceremonial, the beating-boards are in the shape of a susiutl, and there appears a masked figure of a man who always shields his face with his arm. This appears to be an allusion to the man protecting himself from the waters.[70]

It is said that the time of the great heat[71] occurred soon after the flood.

Historical Stories

538 173 Although the Bella Coola regard all the stories included in this chapter as chronicles of events, yet they realize that all the preceding possess elements of the supernatural which are [70] It was impossible to learn the type of ceremonial of which this story serves as origin myth; it has accordingly been included in this miscellaneous section.

[71] Various accounts of this have already been given; see vol. II, p. 424 and p. 500.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

not likely to occur at the present time; in fact, they belong to the golden age of the distant past. In addition, a few tales are popularly told, not for their wealth of interesting detail, but as historical incidents. Some of these contain exaggerations that verge on mythology, whereas others, especially those dealing with certain individuals not long deceased, have clearly a foundation of truth. The themes include tales of travel, hunting exploits, the experiences of criminals, and varied subjects.

538
179

THE WIFE WHO WAS SOLD AS A SLAVE

539*

This story describes the adventures of a Bella Coola woman, daughter of a chief named Tankwum, who was married to a Bella Bella chief. The latter's father sold her as a slave to Tsuhsa, a Kitkatla chief and ancestor of the chief with the same name who was so feared by the Bella Coola. This was, of course, contrary to all established custom. Tsuhsa carried the woman away to Kitkatla, whence there seemed little hope for her return.

Tsuhsa owned a number of crabapple trees at Kitlobe which he visited every autumn to collect and preserve the fruit. The woman had been with him for some time when he went as usual for the ripe apples. Members of different tribes can be distinguished by their different physique and a Kitlobe, recognizing that the woman was a Bella Coola, asked her how she came to be with Tsuhsa. She told him how she had been sold, disgracefully, and he promised to help her return home. Telling her to conceal her plans, he bade her to be ready to flee early the following morning. At the appointed time he appeared, bringing dried olachen, grease, moccasins, and other equipment, wrapped in a seal's stomach. He sketched on the ground the overland route to Kimsquit, telling her how many affluents of the Kitlobe River she must pass before following one to the south, thence across the divide, and down the Kimsquit River.

[144]

The woman started out, but after several days of travel realized that she had passed the place where she should turn south, and was lost. In point of fact, she was at this time near Ootsa Lake. She headed back in the hope of recovering her trail, but snow fell and she could go no farther; to make matters worse she had consumed all her olachen, and most of the grease. The unfortunate woman sought shelter under a big tree, where in time she was completely covered with snow. Every day she ate a small

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 portion of the grease until it was exhausted; then she ate the container, and when it was finished she was entirely without food. She was very weak, but not unconscious, and the careful husbanding of her provisions had kept her alive into February. It so happened that four Kimsquit men, brothers, were trapping beaver in this particular hunting ground. Followed by his four dogs, one of the brothers went to inspect a shack, which they had previously built at some distance from the place where they were encamped. One of the dogs began to dig in the snow, and soon the other three joined in. The hunter thought it strange that they did not bark as usual when digging for game, and asked the dogs what they were after. To his amazement a voice spoke from below, using the Bella Coola language:

"You will be rewarded if you save me. I am the daughter of Tsaiscwum," it said.

All Kimsquit knew of her fate, so the hunter quickly grasped what had happened. He burrowed a passage down through the snow to the woman, who told him of her effort to return home by the overland route to Kimsquit. The rescuer cut her some firewood and admonished her to be brave, while he dashed off for help. He hurried back to his brothers, told them the news, and then rushed back with a little food, telling them to follow his tracks to where the woman lay and bring with them stone dishes for cooking. By the time the three brothers arrived, the forerunner had replenished the fire, and the woman was sitting up. One of the three was a shaman; he felt her heart and said that she would recover. For one day they camped with the woman, feeding her first with warmed grease of goat and olachen, then with a little food. This revived her sufficiently so that the brothers could carry her on a litter to their camp. For twenty days she was so very weak that one of them had constantly to remain in camp to feed her with bear soup and other nourishing foods, but she gradually regained her strength.

On her account the brothers decided to return home in April, instead of waiting until June as usual. They planned their arrival at Kimsquit to take place at night, and hid the woman in their house, telling only the members of their own family about her. It was June before she had fully recovered from her painful experience. Then she left the home of her rescuers, clad in new clothes which they had given her, and the account of her adventures was made public. A canoe was sent to Bella Coola informing her father of his daughter's safety, and inviting him to fetch her. This he refused to do, but said if her rescuer brought her home he might marry her with his full approval. This was agreeable to her saviour, and a large party of his Kimsquit friends accompanied him to Bella Coola where presents were exchanged and the couple married. As an

[425]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bella bella NE5

B 539*
425

especial mark of gratitude, the father gave a piece of Bella Coola land to the Kimsquit man. This is one of the few instances known of outright bestowal of land at marriage.

THE ADVENTURES OF A BELLA BELLA CREW

Bb
539
B 539*

One April, a few years after the establishment of white settlements on the coast, a party of Bella Bella set out in a single canoe to hunt sea-otters. Planning to be absent for several months, they carried with them considerable supplies of food and water, while their mat sail lessened the work of the paddlers. They reached their first destination, Goose Island, without difficulty, and then continued in a north-westerly direction towards a barren islet of hard sand where sea-otters were usually to be found. All went well until they were in sight of this, when they encountered Xai-ai, the steady north wind, against which they could make no headway. In spite of the efforts of the paddlers, the canoe was driven southward and westward, out of sight of land. Steady winds prevailed for months, preventing the crew from heading their craft east towards the shore; fortunately, they had ample supplies, though these finally began to run low. Rain kept them supplied with fresh water, and they were able to eke out their food with fish, which had to be eaten raw. It was the end of September before they saw land, a small, isolated island with moderately high hills and, more important, running water. They beached the canoe and tried to leap ashore, but long sitting in narrow quarters had so cramped them that they could only crawl. After they had rested and regained the use of their legs, the captain climbed to the top of a hill from which he could see the other side of the island where smoke was rising. The mariners paddled around, and found themselves near a settlement of people whose language was unknown to them. They resembled Indians, though their mouths were exceedingly small, and the wanderers could see that they were eating raw worms picked out from rotten salmon. The Bella Bella feared to land among these strangers, but some of the latter swam out and passed their hands in wonder along the sides of the foreign canoe. Their own craft were smaller and narrower than any used on the coast, and all were tied together in pairs to prevent tipping.

As the party was leaving the island, a strong west wind sprang up before which they made such headway that three days later they reached the mainland. None of the crew knew where they were, but they realized that their home must be far to the north, so they cautiously proceeded in that direction. The wind changed to the south, again assisting them, and they sailed on for four or five days until they were suddenly pursued by hostile canoes as they neared the point of what seemed to be a large

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bella bella NE5

Bb 539 B 539 Bb [415]

island. Ignorant of their whereabouts, they paddled blindly, succeeded in out-distancing their enemies, and soon after found themselves at Victoria of which they had heard. A few schooners were in the harbour and on the beach they saw a single white man. The latter noticed them and recognized that they were strangers from the shape and decorations of their canoe, and the type of boxes they were carrying, each with a hole in the corner, as is typical of those made by the Bella Bella. The man mentioned this peculiarity to his wife, who was herself a Bella Bella, and she came rushing out of the house to welcome those whom she knew at once must be her fellow-tribesmen. The weary mariners landed and were provided with food and water by the white man's wife.

They rested for several days at Victoria, rejoicing in their safety, then began to think of returning home. The white husband of the woman who had befriended them urged the travellers to stay and work for him, promising that he would later guide them north himself, but when he realized that they were unwilling, he gave them what assistance he could. None of them was familiar with the inner route, and they feared to return and go around the outside of the island owing to the hostile reception they had had at the southern end. So the kindly white man drew a rough map on the sand, giving them information about the tides, hostile Indians, good hiding-places, and other lore which he thought would be of value. Then they set forth and reached the north end of Vancouver Island without being seen. Thenceforth they were among friendly tribes and could travel openly.

Meanwhile the Bella Bella had despaired of the safety of the long-absent hunters. The father of the chief had invited neighbouring tribes to a memorial potlatch in honour of his son when, on the morning of the day when the rites were to commence, a large canoe was seen approaching the beach. It contained so much European clothing and utensils that those on shore could not recognize the occupants until they were close at hand; but when it was seen that they were the long-lost hunters, they were welcomed with great rejoicing. The only disappointed man was the one who had arranged to marry the wife of the absent chief; she had insisted on waiting for a year before re-marrying, although the wives of the crew had all taken new partners believing their husbands dead.[7]

[7]It is difficult to explain a story such as the above. It seems impossible that a canoe-load actually reached an island off the coast of California, and yet there is no place off the Oregon or Washington shore to which it could refer. Probably the time that elapsed and the directions taken by the canoe have become confused in the years that have passed since the voyage, though it is highly probable that it rests on a basis of truth in the adventures of a crew driven from their course by adverse winds. Naturally enough, the Bella Coola do not claim to be familiar

B [177]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Bellabella NES

A MURDERER AND HIS PUNISHMENT

B 539* 682

For many generations, the name Sekakmte-a has been transmitted among the Chilkotin. It seems to embody an inheritable tendency to lawlessness and killing, for almost all who have been so designated have been murderers. About 1860 or 1870, a certain Sekakmte-a married a Bella Coola woman, which brought his activities to the attention of her relatives. He used to do considerable trading at the Hudson's Bay Company's post, although his manner of obtaining furs was extremely pernicious. He had a wide knowledge of the interior and of the routes by which hunters were likely to bring pelts to Bella Coola. If he could learn that a stranger was likely to be travelling along a trail, it was Sekakmte-a's custom to set out, unarmed, to meet him. He would explain to the hunter that he had come to buy furs and the latter would always make him welcome. The price was argued in a friendly manner and the two would prepare to camp together for the night. Then Sekakmte-a would say:

"Perhaps you do not know what a dangerous place Bella Coola is! Even now I am running away. I do not think I will be pursued, though I wish I had a musket to lay beside me as I sleep."

An unsuspicious hunter would usually offer to lend his to Sekakmte-a who, protesting his gratitude, would load it and go to sleep with it beside him. Early in the morning he would rise, shoot his sleeping companion, steal his furs and sell them at the trading post. Sometimes he would murder two or even three hunters on a single trip; thus in course of time he had amassed great riches, but had also murdered men over a wide area. Whenever it became too dangerous for him in the interior he would retreat to Bella Coola and live with his wife's relatives. People sometimes asked him why he continued his nefarious work, but he always answered that it was involuntary, his parents having smeared him with ashes from a wasp's nest when an infant.

On one occasion, Sekakmte-a set out for Salmon House, on the Dean River, where there was always an encampment of Carriers. He travelled up the valley of the Nechestacoonay and had just reached the open lands above the timber-line when he met two Carriers, bound for Bella Coola with furs. At once he began scheming to kill them and steal the pelts. Sekakmte-a greeted the two by saying:

---

with the details, though the old man from whom the account was obtained discussed it with his wife and with several of his friends who were confident that it was related in the same form as it had been told to them by a Bella Bella many years before. Since it is not the type of theme to be invented as a story, it must be left as an unexplained incident, half-buried in the mists of tradition.

Bb 539 B 539* 177

B:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*539
682

"I was on my way to visit you, but that will be unnecessary now that I have been fortunate enough to meet you."

The two hunters, ignorant of Sakalmate-a's reputation, were willing to do business without having to journey to Bella Coola, and suggested that he turn back to a favourite camping-place within the timbered area. He agreed, and they soon reached a spot which he had quitted half an hour previously. Sakalmate-a at once went off to gather firewood, and soon returned with a load; this was not sufficient, but he told one of the Carriers that more was available in the direction he indicated, and that he would remain to help the other build a fire. The remaining Carrier lit some of the wood which had been broken up, but carelessly threw on too much so that the fire was choked. As he knelt to blow it up, Sakalmate-a was given the opportunity for which he had been looking, and slew his companion with a single blow of his axe on the back of the head. Without waiting to conceal the body, the murderer hurried off to meet the other Carrier. He was returning without any fuel and inquired:

"Where did you get the wood? I could not find the place."

Sakalmate-a guided him to the spot and suggested that they use long poles which they could carry between them. This they did, but as the Carrier bent to lift his end of the burden, he too was killed with a blow. Sakalmate-a dragged the corpse under a fallen tree and covered it with bark, then returned to the fire and heaped stones over the body of his first victim. Having thus achieved his purpose, he camped for one night on the spot and then returned to Bella Coola with the stolen furs. It was plain to all that these must have been obtained illegally since sufficient time had not elapsed for him to take a trip to Salmon House. Moreover, he had blackened his face and tied his hair into a top-knot as is done by all warriors after killing people.

Two days after the unfortunate hunters left Salmon House, another party left for Bella Coola by the same route. They reached the usual camping-ground at dusk and looked for some of their friends, but, to their surprise, found the remains of one bad only. A few minutes later one of the women happened to stumble on the corpse hidden beneath the tree. Torches were prepared and a careful investigation made, leading to the discovery of the other body. Taking into account the fact that the two had been carrying rich loads of furs, the Carriers suspected that it must have been Sakalmate-a who had slain their friends.

Meanwhile Sakalmate-a was at Kemp-a where a Cannibal dance was taking place. During this, he fired upon and mortally wounded a young Bella Coola, Nawalem, who was employed at the Hudson's Bay Company's post. The murder was committed in the presence of the factor[9] who handed his gun to an elderly Bella Coola and told him to chase the murderer. The man, a crack shot, took careful aim at Sokalmate a's temple, but the murderer had a faster trajectory than he expected, so the bullet, instead of dropping and killing the man, flew straight and nearly cut down the tuft on top of his head. Sokalmate a ran off to the village and Nacmelm was carried to the house of one of his relatives on the north bank of the river.

E. McDougall E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Conflicting reasons are given for this assault. Some state that Sokalmate a's uncontrollable temper led him to fire; others that he did so on the orders of Pudic, who was offended because Nacmelm had disobeyed an order to carry food home to his wife. It is whispered that on several occasions Pudic had used Sokalmate a to get rid of those who had displeased him.

If the assault had been committed during the summer, revenge would have been an affair of the injured youth's relatives, but it occurred during the Sacrier season so all members of the society were affected. A party was organized to arrest the offender with the aid of an American who happened to be at the Hudson's Bay Company's post at the time. Sokalmate a was in the rear part of one of the houses at Bymaqo to whom his enemies secretly and quiet hastening at the door. As he faced them, an old man, related to Nacmelm, crept behind and leaps on him, wrapping his arms and legs around him. The murderer drew a knife and struggled furiously before he was overcome, bound and carried to Bqaldal where his victim lived. Sokalmate a pleaded that he had murdered Nacmelm for one of his Chilkoots relatives, but when no attention was paid to this, he said that he had acted under orders from Pudic. This was likewise disregarded, nor was there any suggestion of revenge on the alleged instigator since he, being a chief, could do as he liked. It is said that Pudic endeavoured to help his henchman by sending a message to some Chilkoots who were camped in the vicinity and inviting them to rescue their kinsman.

Meanwhile it was obvious that Nacmelm was actually wounded. His relatives said that if he lived, they would be willing to accept compensation for the assault, so Sokalmate a was kept, bound hand and foot, in a house where a Sacrier dance was taking place. During the night he almost succeeded in freeing himself from his bonds, but this was discovered and he was again tied up; it is possible that an accomplice assisted him in the attempt to escape. Towards dawn Nacmelm died and it was decided that his murderer should be killed at once.

The Sacrier all helped to take him outside and make preparations for shooting him, but no one desired the task of executioner. Meanwhile the Chilkoots were gathering; a fight seemed imminent and the excite-mass was secure. One of the chiefs told two boys who were excellent shots to fire, but another interrupted, saying:

539 682

"This is too weighty a matter for mere kids."

He himself covered Sokalmate-a and made ready to press the trigger. The murderer, seeing his fellow-criminals in the vicinity, tried to stall for time.

"Please do not shoot me," he called out. "I have always been terrified to die that way, please use a knife."

"Some of those you slew were probably terrified of muskets too," the self-appointed executioner grimly replied.

"Wait just a moment," Sokalmate-a pleaded. "I want to speak to my kinsmen."

"So probably did several of those you shot," came the terse answer.

Then the chief fired and Sokalmate-a fell dead. The Chilkotin were armed and seemed on the point of rushing forward to revenge their relative, but the chief took another musket, brandished it in their direction, and said:

"All right. The dogs will eat you too."

A Chilkotin chief pointed out that the Bella Coola were armed and in overwhelming numbers, so advised his angry followers to withdraw. Thus the incident closed without further bloodshed. Some state that Sokalmate-a's corpse was given to his relatives, others that it was buried by the Sokaulur clans in a large grave, beneath the body of Nacodzin.

A DOUBTFUL HOST

539 224

One September, between 1840 and 1850, a certain Sinacoodzate was preparing for a potlatch. Taking twenty men with him as packers, he set out for mountain goats up the valley of the Sinlaomen, which flows into the main Bella Coola from the north, nearly opposite Mount Nuxalk. They camped at a suitable spot, and for several days Sinacoodzate hunted with his servants. On one occasion, when out with his son, he happened to notice a number of female goats on a narrow point of rock, beneath which there was a sheer drop to a jagged pile of boulders. Quickly realizing that there was only one approach to the point where the animals were crowding, Sinacoodzate told his son to remain below while he climbed up to scale his quarry. With extreme caution, he succeeded in getting between the goats and the only line of escape; then he knew they were his, and stood up boldly. He shot two or three, and stampeded the rest into plunging over the precipice where they were crushed to death on the rocks far beneath. The successful hunter climbed down to where his son had remained and the two carried one of the carcasses out to the trail where the packers were to meet them. They were not due to arrive for several hours, so Sémamtsamt cooked the goat and had a plentiful meal ready for his followers. They asked whether he had had any luck, and he answered casually that his son had killed one, but when they expressed regret at his lack of fortune, Sémamtsamt pointed to the pile of dead goats, visible in the distance, and said: 539* 224

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

"See what my son killed."

Never before had there been such a slaughter of goats at one time, and it was obvious that no time could be lost if the meat was to be smoked before winter. Fortunately, there was a large cave in the vicinity where they established their headquarters. The packers were divided into two parties; some brought in the carcasses, while others kept a fire smouldering, tended the drying meat, and boiled out the grease. It was a slow process and there was a heavy snowfall before it was finished. The snow drifted into the narrow valley to such a depth that it was impossible to think of leaving. The beleaguered hunters were well provided with food; melted snow gave them water, and the cave was sufficient shelter, so their confinement was more irksome than dangerous. Nor did it prove profitless. The smell of food attracted two martens which were so unafraid that they were killed with sticks. All the hunters began to make traps which soon provided them with enough skins to make several of the much-prized blankets. 539* [251] [257]

So the winter dragged away. The wife of one of the packers had a reputation for faithlessness and her husband's companions used to tease him by saying that his wife would have remarried before he got home. This were on his nerves until he determined to try to reach the village in spite of the snow. He constructed a pair of snow-shoes and set out, carrying with him enough marten-skins for four blankets, packed in a sack made from the stomach of one of the goats. The journey was less difficult than he had feared; he camped for one night, and reached his own village soon after dusk of the next day. Looking through the doorway, he saw his father throwing food into the fire and realized that someone must have died. He called out cheerfully, but his parents, who had long since abandoned hope for his son's safety, could not believe that his voice was real, and was not convinced until he actually stood before him. The long-absent one asked for whom the food was being thrown on the fire, and his father replied: [481]

"For you. We thought you must be dead and have burnt almost all your personal possessions."

"That does not matter," replied the son. "We have plenty of meat, grease, and furs."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 [237] As soon as the weather moderated, the rest of the party returned, each carrying enough marten skins for at least one blanket. Some had so many that three or four cloaks could be made, in addition to the large supplies of smoked goat meat and grease.

THE SUCCESS OF A LAZY HUNTER

*539 224 [177] [411] [434] In the early days, when the visit of a trading vessel to Bella Coola was a rare event, it is remembered that an Ăsăn·ăn·i chief bought a musket from the captain of the Beaver. He paid for it a pile of beaver-skins which, when stacked up, was equal in height to the length of the weapon. This was one of the first muskets owned by a Bella Coola and the chief took great care of it, never treating it roughly, and hanging it with ropes from the roof of his house whenever he was not actually using it. One day a certain Snăkelt asked the owner to lend him the musket to hunt goats. This was no slight request, and it was surprising, since Snăkelt was not a hunter, but merely packed in meat killed by others. At first the chief was unwilling to allow his prized weapon out of his sight, but at last consented when Snăkelt promised to give him half the goats that he might kill.

Snăkelt probably thought that even temporary possession of the mysterious musket would make it possible for him to kill goats, but when he had climbed up into the mountains, and stalked for hours, he had not succeeded even in approaching one. He knew that if he returned home, unsuccessful and without some plausible excuse, he would be laughed to scorn, so he determined to cover his failure. First he beat the musket on a boulder until it was bent and battered, then he took a sharp rock and pounded himself until he was covered with blood from head to foot, as if he had been caught in a land-slide. When near the village, he lay down on the ground and called faintly for help; at first the people could not locate the sound, but after a short search someone found the would-be hunter, apparently in the last stages of exhaustion. Help was called, and Snăkelt carried home, moaning feebly and saying that he would die. He could just whisper that he had been caught in a slide on the other side of the mountain, this explanation being necessary since no one had heard one in the near vicinity. As the apparent sufferer was lying in his house, one man noticed that the patient's wounds were from gashes, not from bruises, and loudly protested that Snăkelt must have mutilated himself to conceal his lack of success. Everyone came crowding around and proved that this must be the case; Snăkelt finally admitted the deception and congratulated his discoverer on his powers of observation. After a few days, he was as well as ever, but the chief had lost his precious musket.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*
224

Next spring Snäkelt declined to accompany most of the able-bodied men of his village to the ocean to gather herring, but lazily stayed at home with the old people. One day, when passing from one village to another, he saw a herd of caribou close at hand; for months he had been held up to ridicule as a hunter, and he felt that here might be an opportunity to vindicate himself. He was armed only with a small knife but, after creeping as near as possible, he suddenly sprang up with a yell which was enough to stampede the herd into a dense thicket. Snäkelt was in close pursuit and soon overtook a buck which had become caught by its horns in a thorny bush. Without hesitation, the hunter leapt on to the animal's back, preparatory to cutting its throat. But the sudden burden so terrified the caribou that it reared and jumped, redoubling its efforts to escape, and finally freed itself before its rider had been able to do more than cling precariously to its back. Blind with fear and utterly confused, the animal plunged into another bush where its antlers were caught more firmly than before, and Snäkelt, after several efforts, was able to cut its wind-pipe. The caribou fell to the ground and the jubilant hunter despatched it.

Snäkelt alone could not carry back all the meat, so he hurried home for assistance, taking with him only one antler as proof of his kill. When he told the inmates of his own house what he had done, and invited them to carry home the meat, they jeered at him for telling such a preposterous tale. Snäkelt warned them that if they declined to help he would go elsewhere, and they would lose their share of the meat, but they only laughed the more. True to his word, he went next door, and when his fellows heard him repeating the same story, they began to wonder whether, after all, it might have been the truth. One man picked up the antler which Snäkelt had thrown down in disgust at their suspicions and found fresh blood on its base. So they hastily went next door and offered to accompany him. Finally, the occupants of the two houses went together and packed home the meat of the caribou. In this way Snäkelt redeemed his reputation to a certain extent.

AN ANCIENT HUNTING STORY

One November, not many years after the settlement of the earth, a Nuxalxt chief, Sänuxmäxuts, set out with four companions to hunt mountain goats. It was the rutting season, and the five were fortunate enough to come upon a number of the animals on a narrow ledge. Each singled out a female goat and shot an arrow; the sudden pain caused the victims to jump wildly, and fall from the narrow ledge. The males blindly leape after them to be pounded to death on the rocks below. There was

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 a large cave in the vicinity where the hunters smoked the meat and boiled
[224] down the grease and marrow, but they had killed so many that it was January before their task was completed. Meanwhile the smell of flesh had attracted a number of martens which were caught in snares; in fact, they captured enough for two blanket-robes. When ready to leave for home, they prepared snow-shoes and on these safely negotiated the deep drifts and reached the village where all hope of their safety had long been abandoned. Sānuxmāxots arrived at dusk and heard his parents weeping and wailing; he asked who had died and found that they were mourning for him. His safe return turned their lamentations into rejoicings and a herald was sent out to call in the villagers to share the good news. When finally packed in, there was enough goat meat for an elaborate potlatch."

[226] A year or two later, four men prepared to set out one afternoon to fish for trout. As they were leaving, Sānuxmāxots's young son begged to be taken along and cried so piteously that they at last consented. So they wrapped him carefully in a goat-skin blanket, and placed him in the bottom of the canoe which they paddled about six miles upstream. They landed on the bank, cooked a meal, and dried black spruce branches over [226] the fire to serve as torches to lure the fish within range of their spears. When night had fallen, they began to drift downstream, one man holding aloft a brand while the others speared. They had fair success, but nothing noteworthy occurred until, as they neared Nuxālst, they saw white on the water, and paddled slowly forward, thinking it must be a huge flock of swans. As they drew nearer they saw that it was snow; a huge slide had swept over the village and blocked the channel of the river. The water, no longer able to flow westward, was swirling back to the east, and the fishermen drifted with it until they found a place to camp for the night with their young companion.

As soon as it was light, they returned to the scene of the disaster and found a deep bed of snow over the site of the village. They landed to investigate, and called repeatedly, hoping that some at least had escaped. At last they heard an answer and began to dig, imagining that it must be Sānuxmāxots himself. After excavating a deep hole, they unburied the sole survivor, a slave who had escaped by covering with a copper the

---

"It will be noticed that there are many points of similarity between this story [538] and the one in vol. II, p. 512. It is possible that they are versions of the same account, but it seems more likely that they refer to different incidents of which the principal [551] character of one has been forgotten. In such cases the Bella Coola, believing that individuals with the same name often have the same characteristics, frequently give to the hero of an earlier incident the name of a person who has figured in a similar one within recent years.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 13

142
291
302
342
516

Photograph by the author

Mrs. Joshua Moody (left) and Mrs. Willie Mack, two Bella Coola women

[p 516 (A)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 14

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mrs. Jim Pollard, a Kitsequit woman

[p 516 (B)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 15

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mrs. Jim Pollard, profile

[p 51L(c)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

142
291
302
342

PLATE 16

Photograph by the author

Reuben Schooner, a Bella Coola man, and his children

[p 516 (D)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 17

142
291
302
342

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Lame Charlie, a Bella Coola man

[p 516 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 18

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Captain Myers, an aged Bella Coola man

[p 516 (F)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 19

142
291
302

Photograph by [illegible], National Museum of Canada

Skookum Mary, a Kitsegukla woman

[p 516 (G)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 20

142
291
302

Photograph by the author

Alec Davis, a full-blooded Bella Coola

[p 516 (H)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*

smoke-vent of the house in which he had been alone at the time. In their grief at the loss of the chief, the four debated what to do with the slave; one wanted to kill him in their disappointment, but the others persuaded him that it would be better to allow him to live to look after the child. After a further fruitless search, the four paddled off to another village with the slave and the little boy.

Sāwunmāxati's son grew up among strangers, but constantly under the protection of the four fishermen. Moreover, the slave turned out to be a devoted guardian, watching over his young charge with devotion, faithfulness, and skill. As the boy grew older, his protector continued to concern himself with his welfare, and in later years it was he who arranged a suitable marriage for the boy.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VI

THE MAN HIMSELF

Physique — Character

Physique

142 144 IN central British Columbia there are two types of Indian; one represented by the Carriers and Chilkotin of the interior, the other, by the coastal peoples. The first are relatively slight of build with graceful carriage, and thin, rather delicate-featured faces. The younger people, particularly, are lithe and handsome, resembling bronze statues. On the other hand, individuals of the second type are characterized by stocky, heavy physique, with thick-set, powerful bodies, muscular arms and legs; their faces have wide mouths and prominent cheek-bones and noses (see Plate 13). Undoubtedly the Bella Coola belong with these latter.[1] No measurements were taken to substantiate this statement, but the general affinities of the tribe are obvious. Stature, build, physiognomy, and especially that intangible impression of heaviness, unite to demonstrate even to one with slight knowledge of British Columbia Indians that he is dealing with a people who are predominantly of the coastal type. Of course there are individuals of the interior type, but they are decidedly in the minority (see Plates 14 and 15). The Bella Coola claim that they can [829] distinguish a coastal man from one of the interior people, and that every coastal tribe has its own peculiarities sufficiently marked to be recognizable on sight. Probably no white observer can make this fine distinction, though the difference between the two main types is clearly apparent.

142 145 Judged by white standards the Bella Coola are far from prepossessing in appearance. Even the children are plain and stolid, with little if any of the grace and appeal of childhood.

[1] Cf. Boas, p. 38.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As they grow older the plainness of feature is more pronounced, accompanied by increasing heaviness of body (see Plate 16). Many of the adults are corpulent and move with slow, awkward gait. As a rule the men have great strength and are capable of prolonged and arduous exertion, particularly in paddling; in fact, constant use of canoes may have developed this powerful, ungainly build. Few are good walkers or packers; such, if they are found, usually belong to the lighter interior type. Among the grown people the face, though unbeautiful, often has a kindly expression, even becoming attractive in laughter or when a friendly grin spreads from ear to ear. With advancing age the prominent nose seems to grow larger, frequently becoming almost aquiline (see Plate 17). Many of the older people assert that this was even more common in former times. In time the face becomes lined with wrinkles and the body appears to shrink (see Plate 18). The teeth are in many cases worn down to the gums; this seems to cause no discomfort though an old person cannot utter the glottal stops and velar sounds with which the language abounds without emitting a fine spray of saliva. They are absolutely unable to pronounce several of the Bella Coola words, while the constant spitting is a disagreeable feature of their conversation, particularly to an investigator striving, often vainly, to record sounds accurately. The deep wrinkles of old women give them a benign "grandmotherly" expression, which makes them more attractive in extreme age than in youth (see Plate 19). Senile decay is so frequent that the return to infancy in mind as well as in physical powers is regarded as normal.

Among the coastal tribes hair on the face is not uncommon, but in this characteristic the Bella Coola are pre-eminent. Nearly all the men have sparse moustaches, at least; many have a heavy growth, and several are full-bearded. That this was due to white mixture was assumed at first, but no evidence could be found to support this view. There are a number of half-bloods in the community but they are no more hirsute than the full-blooded Indians. Razors are now almost univer-

142 sally used but the older people state that beards were by no
144 means rare in former times. Careful inquiries were made [302] concerning the ancestry of a man, about seventy years of age in 1922, whose curly beard suggests that he must be a half-breed, as indeed he is assumed to be by the white settlers of the valley. His father was Potlas, the most influential chief of recent years, his mother was herself the daughter of an important chief. None of the older men had ever heard the slightest rumour of faithlessness on her part. There were white [648] traders on the coast at the time of his birth, and intercourse with [567] slave women and others of low family was not uncommon, but [622] it would have been difficult for a chief's wife to misconduct herself, and still more difficult for her to conceal all knowledge of it in view of the open life which prevailed at that period. Moreover, it is said that Potlas himself had a similar beard, as did also the parents of several men who in 1922 were fifty or sixty years of age.

142 Although the possibility of white mixture cannot be over-144 looked in the case of this one individual, one must not dis-
896 regard the opinion of the people themselves on hairiness in [302] general. They are proud of it and regard beards and moustaches as marks of virility given to them by Alqantlm; baldness and lack of facial hair are considered a sign of weakness. They aver that their fathers and grandfathers were even more hirsute than they. Furthermore, they point out with pride [186] that this is a difference between themselves and the tribes of the interior, who are, as they say in scorn, "hairless like Chinamen." Finally, it is noteworthy that the hair on the head of many Bella Coola is wavy, or even curly (see Plate 20), instead of straight as among the majority of Indian tribes.[9]

Character

181 It is an almost impossible task to describe briefly the characteristics of a people. Those of the Bella Coola have [9]This characteristic has led the writer to wonder if it could possibly have been caused by Aino mixture.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

been displayed in their customs and beliefs, their habits, practices, and folk-lore, their outlook both towards the supernatural world and towards their fellows. 181

The following additional observations are the result of personal knowledge, and recorded after considerable thought.

When a white man begins to understand the Bella Coola, he cannot fail to be impressed by their deep belief in the supernatural. To them religion is no mental abstraction, but a living reality. They feel the presence of strange creatures around them, and they recognize non-human powers in every manifestation of their own minds; in fact, every incident, good or bad, is attributed to supernatural intervention. This does not mean that they regard life with stoic indifference, content to murmur Kismet at whatever fate befalls them. They realize that supernatural powers have endowed them with brains, with physical strength, and with the ability to win favour and gain help from active superhuman beings, and consequently they strive in a world teeming with potent forces. The individual toils as does a white man in the struggle of life, but he attributes his fortune, not to luck or to his unaided exertions, but to the assistance of non-human agents. If he is fortunate, it is because his spirit has been active; if unfortunate, because it has been too inert to protect him. 181 771

Contact with white men, particularly with missionaries, has raised tremendous problems for the Bella Coola. The older people have been but little affected; they may state that they are Christians, believing in the white man's god, but this often means only the knowledge of one more supernatural being whom they add to the already rich pantheon. It is quite otherwise with the younger people, particularly with those who have been away at school. Some adopt the new faith with fervour, continuing to see the same visions and to experience the same mental exaltations, but attributing them to Christianity. To others, however, loss of belief in their own faith has caused a general scepticism; though they may accept the new religion, it does not become the vital force which the old was to their 177 771 [181]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

177 fathers. Inherited beliefs are too deep-rooted to pass away 771 entirely within a few generations. Even those who claim to have adopted the new faith remain convinced of the potency [181] of magic, and of the existence of those supernatural creatures which do not actively conflict with the white man's creed.
Such lack of consistency is a world-wide trait, particularly intelligible among the Bella Coola whose philosophy abounds in contradictions, dependent upon statements handed down in the origin myths of different families.

626 The Bella Coola are constrained not only by the omnipresence of supernatural beings; they are constantly subjected [181] to the influence of their fellows. They are far less individualistic than white people. A chief may boast that he can do as [622] he pleases, that he can disregard the restrictions of lesser men; he often does so, but only because public opinion recognizes that he has reached a position of eminence by giving many potlatches. The duly validated warrior is brave because he [703] feels that everyone is aware of his valour. The man who performs some ceremony in accordance with an ancestral myth [769] incorporates himself with his forbears, and is strengthened by the conviction that he has gained their support and approbation. In every phase of life, a person is profoundly affected 177 by the approval or disapproval of his neighbours. At present 626 the construction of small houses, each occupied by a single 542 family, makes it possible for a man to hide himself, or to do work unknown to the rest of the community. This lessens the force of public opinion, although it is even now more potent than conscience in checking anti-social acts. Formerly, in communal houses, every action was fully known, making individual freedom of thought and act virtually impossible. A man [602] is chiefly influenced by his relatives who take a great share in what the white man would consider purely family affairs. The effect of the group upon the individual must not be overlooked, nor can it be over-stressed in a study of these people.

177 The education and conversion of the younger men have 626 enormously lessened their reliance upon their fellows. In former times, older relations were revered, not only as senior members of the ancestral family, but as those most familiar with myths and other cherished possessions. With the spread of new ideas, the young people no longer respect the love of their elders, and consequently do not heed their admonitions and advice. Theoretically, such self-reliance would seem desirable, but in practice it has led to unfortunate results. A young man, considering himself superior to the older people, glories in acting on his own initiative, but too often he lacks the requisite strength of character to guide his own life. If he wishes to drink, he does so; if he desires to marry, he chooses his mate without considering the transmission of ancestral rights which traditional unions in former times; if he tires of his wife, he deserts her for another; if he chases or steals, he is no longer restrained by relatives who fear disgrace. The elders, incapable of stemming the tide, watch sadly and not seriously whether the coming of the white man has brought compensation for the loss it has caused. It is deplorable that the emancipation of the younger men and women has taken place before the development of the sense of individual responsibility and conscience which public opinion formerly rendered less necessary. Christianity provides a moral code for those who are fully convinced, but for the many in the transition stage, the break-down of the old system of family influence has been tragic.
182
561

Profound religious beliefs and lack of individual initiative are shared by all Bulu Ceels with the exception, perhaps, of a few of the younger people who, having been educated at white man's schools, have adopted the new outlook unconditionally. In most characteristics they display as wide variability as any other people. In truthfulness, for example, they range from one extreme to the other. As the writer became familiar with the elder men, he found it possible to recognize without difficulty the strength of some and the weakness of others. There are liars, but they can be easily detected owing to their lack of finesse. It is a pleasure to record the reliability of the author's friends and informants. Their veracity was checked repeat-[illegible] ally and complete confidence was established, simplifying work in the field to an enormous extent. Equal trust could be placed on these men in other respects; articles of value were repeatedly left in their houses with the absolute certainty that they would be guarded with care. Some few individuals there were, however, who were neither honest nor trustworthy. Bella Coola religion is not concerned with ethics, but public opinion demands honesty in dealing with relatives or friends. In former times, for example, debts incurred by an individual were considered a liability by his relatives. If a man died after buying goods on credit for a potlatch, his family were disgraced if they failed to pay his bills; now, unfortunately, nothing concerns the younger people, many of whom try to avoid meeting even their own debts, much less those of dead relatives. Individual conscience has not replaced the tribal and, more specifically, family influence. Dishonesty in small matters is not uncommon, particularly in dealing with white people who, according to the Bella Coola, were the first to transgress. The older people loudly bemoan the lack of morality of the younger and even, probably with entire justification, that they would have been prevented by the open life which prevailed when several families shared a single house. On the whole, however, the average Bella Coola is probably no less honest than the average white man.

Individuals vary enormously in mental ability. In making this investigation, it was necessary to interview all the older people of the tribe. Disregarding those unwilling to provide information, it was found that some absolutely lacked the ability to explain matters with which they were familiar; some did not have sufficient patience to be good teachers; some were so forgetful that they would omit necessary points in a story or account; some were downright stupid, whereas others displayed mental ability of no mean order. In reading ethnological literature, one is apt to think of the troubles experienced by the author, and to overlook the fact that natives have as great difficulties in explaining their customs, as the white man has in understanding them.

The writer was impressed by the brilliance shown by several of the natives. Joshua Moody, for example, is essentially the philosopher. More individualistic than most of his schoolmates, he was one of the first to adopt Christianity and has been a faithful follower of the new creed. Deeply interested in religious questions, he has stored up what has been told him of the Bible and pondered deeply on all problems of life. Not particularly practical, subject to fits of anger or moroseness, but with a meditative temperament which delights in seeking biblical parallels and synonyms for Bella Coola practices, he is the kind of mind which, in other walks of life, would have produced the professor of philosophy. Jim Pollard is quite another type. Essentially practical, he has devoted his energies to keeping abreast of changing conditions. He is the best singer and composer in Bella Coola, the best canoeman for miles, he has learnt to handle a motor-boat engine, to set prospectors for minerals, and has succeeded in amassing and saving a considerable amount of money. Jim recalled all other schoolmates in closeness and logical presentation of his explanations, though he showed a slight nervousness, intelligible enough, in glossing over aspects which he knew would be considered unpleasant. If Jim had been a white man, he would undoubtedly have made his mark in the world of business. The late Captain Schooner differed from sixteen of the preceding. Quite dour, and uncouth, he, perhaps, came nearest to the original, unsophisticated Bella Coola type. Heavy in build, coarse in humour and expression, he had a heart of gold and was a fine example of a native gentleman. He was glad to assist anthropologists in recording ancient lore, being intensely proud of the traditions of his ancestors. A friendship developed from this which is one of the writer's happiest memories. Often in the evenings life in general was discussed, the war, the rush of progress to big cities, the quest for wealth, the spread of white civilization, and the problems raised by the contact of peoples.

Schooner lacked the natural acumen of Joshua and Jim, but he revealed himself as a tribal patriarch, proud of his family's history and eager to assist his grandchildren and great-grandchildren, but feeling himself lost and helpless in the struggle before them. With sadness, but without bitterness, he used to speak of the approaching end of Bella Coola culture, and his words brought home the tragedy which the spread of civilization brings to so many, and the responsibility resting upon the white people as a whole.

Until an intelligence test is devised to correlate the mental ability of the white man with that of the native, it is impossible to compare the two scientifically. None the less, the writer deliberately expresses the opinion that Joshua Moody and Jim Pollard are two of the most brilliant men he has met in any walk of life. They are undoubtedly the most able of the Bella Coola, others have only slightly less ability, while the mass of the population compares favorably with an average white community. Their ability, however, is definitely conditioned by their conservatism. Absolute trust in the traditions of their ancestors has checked speculation, so the established explanation is never questioned; new inventions, contributed by natives, have been regarded as almost sacrilegious; the force of public opinion, while valuable as a deterrent to anti-social practices, has effectively restrained innovations. The Bella Coola are a good example of a community where development has been accepted by extreme conservatism fostered by religious beliefs.

Taking into account the material obstacles, the achievements of these people have not been insignificant. In former times, providing only with tools of stone and implements of copper, they built graceful canoes, made watertight boxes, bowed planks from mighty cedars, and erected large houses which called for considerable engineering skill. Judged by native standards, their carving and painting lacked artistic delicacy, but is required no more ability to portray your designs to them than their own standards. Passing from the purely mechanical on the esthetic, their skill in dancing and dramatics is noteworthy. No one who has witnessed a native dance can fail to have been impressed by the performance of the participants and the sage-craft of the carpenters. The fact that no system of writing had ever been devised has prevented the establishment of native literature, but the practice of passing down as treasure folklore by word of mouth shows their narrative powers as well as their faculty for remembering details. At present it is difficult to appreciate what must have been their energy in earlier times when they faced the struggle for existence, armed with stone tools. Abundant salmon gave them abundance, but only when weirs had been built with great labour. Though game was plentiful, the hunter was equipped with a weapon more formidable than a bow and arrow. The simplest task required patience and skill undreamed of by the average white man. If the reader will allow his imagination to carry in backwards two hundred years, he will realize that the mere provision of food and clothing necessitated constant effort and tireless exertion.

Hallwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Beside a hand with many admirable characteristics, the Bella Coola display others which strike the white man as unpromising. A first impression is the untidiness of their houses. Exteriorly, they are often fairly neat, but confusion reigns within. Clothing, instead of being hung up, is left lying on the floor; bed-coverings are piled carelessly; dirty dishes cover the tables; dogs and children swarm over the floor; flies abound; it is dirty and slovenly. The house itself may be unpainted; a window lacks glass and has been boarded up; the roof sags, or the steps are falling down. Nor are the surroundings more attractive. There is one struggling flower-bed in the village, but elsewhere the houses are surrounded by waste of mud where horses and cattle wander, dogs prowl, and children play. In the distance the mountain peaks rise in splendour, but near at hand all is squalid and unkempt.

They are only slightly more particular about their personal appearance. Dirt does not distress them. They wash occa-

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind 246 of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into 388 water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most 785 cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was 177 a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the 391 sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [194] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of cleanness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

956 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food 231 from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels [152] down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the comfort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are 331 often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands [577] generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

group. The moral code is not concerned with animals. The life of the Bella Coola would be unbearable to most white people, yet they find it far from unpleasant. They sigh at present conditions, but there is much to amuse them notwithstanding. If several people are talking together, one is sure to hear bursts of laughter every few minutes. It takes little to interest them; a story they have heard a hundred times, the troubles of a neighbour with his wife, the eccentricity of a white man, the stupidity of the investigator, any of these is enough to cause a hearty laugh. When collecting information, it was constantly necessary to joke with them; the most feeble witticism was enough, but they lost interest in the work unless kept smiling. Their sense of humour is not refined; jests about sexual matters are common and are enjoyed alike by men, women, and children. It is not that their tastes are perverted, but rather that they have no reticence in discussing this topic, so they find it easy to see the ludicrous aspects of a subject which is ever near the surface in their minds. They have no hesitation in poking fun at their friends; a successful practical joke, such as hiding the writer's tobacco, is enough to fill them with amusement. If the victim shows temporary resentment, the glee of his friends is complete, and shrieks of laughter usually terminate the trick.

Unless the white man who comes to live among the Bella Coola is unusually broad-minded, he is at first repelled by the dirt and squalidness prevailing everywhere; even the people themselves seem unnatural. He finds it difficult to realize the sincerity of their religious beliefs, and the manner in which these influence their daily lives is hard to grasp. The potlatch system appears so grotesque that it seems to reflect a psychology diametrically opposed to his own. The force of public opinion on personal conduct is almost incomprehensible. Gradually, however, he begins to understand the reasons underlying Bella Coola life. The potlatch becomes intelligible when regarded as a means of achieving fame; constant attention to supernatural beings is natural considering the firm conviction

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

105 of their omnipresence; the guiding force of public opinion is 182 seen as a check on individual licence, fostered or inculcated by [122] the ties which hold together ancestral families and make it impossible for a man to lead an isolated life where others will not be affected by his actions. If the white man is willing to receive new ideas, he will learn much from the comments of the Bella Coola on his own customs. Many have been to [551] Victoria or Vancouver, and they feel that the contrasts of wealth observable in such big cities are atrocious; they ask [602] how this is compatible with Christianity. They feel that it is unnatural for a man not to receive support from his cousins of [552] all degrees; that the hoarding of wealth for the mere gratification of personal desires is selfish; that the selling of land is extraordinary; and that failure to ascribe every incident to supernatural causes is sacrilegious. These differences of viewpoint go so many matters explain the first impression of strangeness. A careful investigator comes to realize that he is among a people who fundamentally differ but slightly from his compatriots, though outwardly they have little in common. With respect to love, ambition, parental affection, sense of honour, pride, intelligence, even humour and vanity, the Bella Coola are essentially similar to ourselves. Unfortunately, these characteristics are expressed in ways unintelligible and often repellent to the casual observer. If he will only look beneath the surface, he will find a people who are neither saints nor sinners, but essentially human, with the faults and follies as well as the elements of strength and wisdom which comprise, as Kipling puts it, "Men in a world of men."

[77] The coming of the white civilization has been retrogressive [96] to the Bella Coola. Within two generations they have been [96] reduced to a more lowlife; instead of living in scattered villages, roaming the mountains for game and fishing at will, they now dwell in a single settlement and the taking of animals and fish is subject to law; the introduction of metal tools and mechanical appliances has revolutionized their mode of life; new foods, new clothing, new furniture has altered their living conditions; fermented drink has promoted a factor unknown

2:34:Hewitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948 to their forefathers. Profound as these material changes have been, those of a psychological nature have been even more important. New worlds have been thrown open to them, stimulating ideas have been brought to their attention, and they have realized for the first time that the world is infinitely larger than they had imagined. Hand in hand with this extension of knowledge has gone disbelief in their own ancient lore. The white man, whose superiority and mechanical skill they admit, positively denies the accuracy of their mythology, and laughs at the dramatic performances which were wont to fill the winter with engrossing interest. Such sins can flourish only in an attitude of profound belief; this has been so shaken that the dances continue listlessly, a mere shadow of a once living art. The young people were the first to endorse a scepticism that has rapidly grown into disbelief of the faith of their ancestors, and a half-concealed scorn for their elders, the upholders of the old customs. Worse of all, prohibition of the potlatch has made it impossible for a man to reach a position of social eminence. Moreover, since the holding of any sort of ceremonial requires a distribution of gifts, formal gatherings of all kinds have become virtually impossible; even marriages have no longer the social support that formerly made them so lasting.
NEA Bellacoola NEA

These cumulative blows would be enough to shake any civilization, and that of the Bella Coola has been entirely unable to adjust itself to the new conditions. The young people, having lost respect for their elders, are deprived of the advice and support essential to the continuity of culture. They see the white man's dress, they want his mechanical devices, but have failed to assimilate them. For example, a gramophone in a Bella Coola house is an anachronism, while several similar articles spoil the old picture but do not provide a new one. Seeking to copy the new ways thrown open to them, they have achieved the outward show but not the substance, and in so doing have destroyed their own culture. In the old days they were ambitious to hold potlatches and willing to work steadily towards that goal; now, new desires have not kept pace with their carving ability and a man can satisfy his wants by working for a few months each summer. The decline of ceremonials has left a blank in their lives, too easily filled, alas, with drinking, idleness, and vice. It is inevitable that the old rites and old customs should pass, but the prohibition of these before new ones had taken their place, has been disastrous. The Bella Coola have lost their pride, a calamity as fatal to a people as to an individual.

8: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They have shown undoubted ability in developing such of their own talents as fit the needs and requirements of the white man. Expert carpenters for generations, they have readily learned the use of new tools and now build houses and boats of considerable constructional skill. They have proved themselves valuable employees of the canneries which rely to a large extent upon Indian labour. Under instruction from a white teacher, a number of the younger men have formed a band which gives creditable performances with wind and percussion instruments. One can only deplore the fact that the skill of the Bella Coola in carving, painting, acting, singing, composing, and story-telling could not have been guided into channels where it would have developed and added lustre to the new world in which they find themselves.

The white man's civilization presses forward as an overwhelming flood, lifting out the cultures of lesser peoples in all parts of the world. This is inevitable, probably it is well that it should be so, but it offers little consolation to a tribe like the Bella Coola. Their life has been destroyed; and, wonderingly, half-pensively, half-plaintively, the survivors watch the downfall of all that their ancestors cherished. Too often the white man fails to understand this; too often he fails to realize that progress, as he sees it, is wiping out valuable elements of civilizations other than his own instead of seeking the good in them and preserving it for the benefit of himself and the native alike. The Bella Coola culture is dying, and with it will pass forever something created by a Canadian people, not great perhaps, but indelibly stamped with their personality.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133
137
501

PLATE 21

Photograph by the author

River canoe

[p 532 (A)]

2: McDowalds E-5 (1922-1924) 1948

NEA Bulletin NEA

137
501

PLATE 22

Photograph by G. C. Smith, looking down on crater

Quick opening

[φ 532 (B)]

2:McDowell, E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA DeGarmo NEA

[p 533]
[p 534 is blank]

APPENDICES

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

No attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All ceremonial and religious features connected therewith have already been described.

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

The run of olachen, eulachon, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, [illegible], are taken from the house where they have been stored during the winter and repaired. If necessary, new nets must be manufactured. By selling nettle (Urtica) fibre had been by the women for this purpose. ide of this the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine. For strong great are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of and at the ocean. The nets are constructed by the men. The nets employed, greatest time, which is said not to differ from that formerly water and consists of a pole-like stick, cord is cross-woven, upon an The cord and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. eight feet, length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about and at the closed end about three feet. A net not in dispute a mixture of boiled hemlock bark or dogbane is, and then boiled in tobacco or willow bark to prevent the leaves from slipping.

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, as care is there are agree to work in partners. In the present instances these people eighty are not supported and each group selects a suitable spot. The hour been rock is where the water is about three feet deep and runs pidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom, such a place is called a slide. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the persons paddle out to set their nets, taking with them four stakes, each about an foot in length. The weight of a full net is considerable, so the poles are to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of the men, stands, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, subpoena, fastened on the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steadily, the third man begins to pound down the poles, road mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was done with an unhafted stone maul, hammer. The fisherman adjusts another conveniently until the top of the pole has been driven down as within

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

226 about a foot of the surface. In the same slow manner a second stake is driven in, about ten feet from the first, and in such a position that the main force of the current would strike at right angles a line drawn between the two. Then two more stakes are placed in position, slightly below the first pair, and nearer together, as shown in the diagram (Figure 2). The posts are often driven below the main run of the fish, and the fixing of the net delayed until that time. It is fastened to the four stakes, with its open end, which faces upstream, forming a rough oval, ten feet wide, of which the lower side rests on the bottom and the upper is at the surface. The outer stakes hold the upper edge, the inner ones secure the lower brim. The shelves are slow-swimming fish which work their way upstream with the rising tide, and, when it turns, drift back into the net. Once within the opening, they lack strength to drive forward against current and tide, and are forced into the closed bottom, floating downstream, in thousands. At the peak of the season, a net is often extended to its full dimensions with a solid mass of fish, throwing a tremendous strain on supports and mesh-work alike. During the day, the mouth is closed with a cross-piece, ostensibly, to prevent floating objects from drifting within and damaging it, and opened during the night or whatever hour the tide turns.

FIG. 2. Diagram showing position of the stakes supporting an shelves net.

Early in the morning begins the landing of the fish. The partners paddle out to the bottom of their net and, with considerable exertion, lift it into the canoe. A cord is tied around the bulged mass, cutting off a section, and the end is opened so that the fish from it fall into the bottom of the craft. Another part is dealt with in the same manner, then a third, and so in succession until the gleaming shelves are piled so deeply that no more can be landed with safety. Sometimes two or three loads, each of many thousands, are taken from a single net. The partners slowly pole to shore where, at the present time, their wives and children wait to unload the canoe. The fish are packed into baskets, carried on the back with the aid of a tump-line, and taken to pits which have been prepared ~~[112]~~ 226 251 ~~[113]~~ ~~[114]~~ ~~[115]~~ ~~[116]~~ ~~[117]~~ ~~[118]~~ ~~[119]~~ ~~[120]~~ ~~[121]~~ ~~[122]~~ ~~[123]~~ ~~[124]~~ ~~[125]~~ ~~[126]~~ ~~[127]~~ ~~[128]~~ ~~[129]~~ ~~[130]~~ ~~[131]~~ ~~[132]~~ ~~[133]~~ ~~[134]~~ ~~[135]~~ ~~[136]~~ ~~[137]~~ ~~[138]~~ ~~[139]~~ ~~[140]~~ ~~[141]~~ ~~[142]~~ ~~[143]~~ ~~[144]~~ ~~[145]~~ ~~[146]~~ ~~[147]~~ ~~[148]~~ ~~[149]~~ ~~[150]~~ ~~[151]~~ ~~[152]~~ for treatment in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods:

Z:Mc:Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellecoola NEA

(A) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid stem and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of eulachon, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so stored they keep almost indefinitely.

(B) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another eulachon is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish are subsequently cooled five if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their eulachon before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried eulachon provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, ulel, which is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be wasteful and prefer to wait until the eulachon have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case nothing is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the owner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fired at the inner end with an old sacrapipe to provide draught for the minimum furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the putrid fish, which they boile in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a freshest stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recep-

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

258 [415] [171] [415] [431] [262] 258 496 cache; metal coal-oil cans are found convenient for this purpose and have almost replaced wooden boxes. After repeated storage and skimmings, all that remains is a mass of putrid flesh, bearing no resemblance whatever to the fish from which it came. The Kitlahs are said to compress this into cakes for eating, but the Bella Coola throw it away. Some cooks boil out the drops by hand, but many of the box-bottles have a bung-hole at the bottom which, when opened, allows the semi-liquid remains to flow out into a rough trough leading to the river. As soon as one batch of slachen has thus been disposed of, another is boiled and refined in the same way. The grease keeps indefinitely and is a useful article of barter with the Carrier as well as a staple of Bella Coola diet. Although the preparation removes much of its offensive odour, slachen grease has an unpleasant taste to the white man.

During the boiling, all other activities are suspended and the people spend practically all their time on the river bank. If the fish are allowed to rot too long, much of the grease is lost, so men, women, and children are pressed into service to make the most of the short period. The men rise at dawn to scan the foam on the bank, the women and children follow with food, and for several days the whole village camps, as if on a picnic, amid an indescribably foul smell that almost sickens anyone passing within hundreds of yards. There are tasks for everyone; the fish must be carried from the pits to the furnaces, wood must be brought, the fires stoked, the bottles stirred, the grease carried away, the foaming repeated, food cooked, and a hundred other chores. It is a scene of great activity, carried on with good humour and merriment, for the Bella Coola realize that they are storing up luxuries for the following winter. Even the dogs seem to share the general enthusiasm, and do not disdain to eat the drops from the bottles, which, when emptied into the river, attract numerous crows and gulls, to the joy of small boys with burning desires.

BELLA COOLA CANOES

501 [505] 502 Although travel and transport by water is still as vital to the Bella Coola as it was to their fathers, the motor boat is fast replacing the canoe, and the science of manufacturing their own craft is being lost. In former times several types were constructed, but only one of these is still employed—the spoon canoe, ai-ka, used on rivers (see Plate 21). These vary from twenty to thirty feet or more in length, and are about four feet wide; they are without keels, and there is no difference between the bow and stern. Although one man can handle such a craft in smooth water, at least two are required for a journey of any length, and four in the usual crew. The captain, who is either the best waterman or the one most familiar with the route, stands in the stern, the second is concerned in

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

the bow. The crew take their places at equal intervals between, each 502 ready to work on the opposite side from the man in front. Each is provided with a ten-foot pole and also a paddle for use in spots where the river is too deep for poling. The rivers of central British Columbia are shallow, but swift, and their navigation requires considerable skill. Going upstream, the captain constantly seeks the smoothest water, where he knows the current will be least strong, and uses his pole to keep the craft headed in the right direction. Should it be caught in a violent eddy, he exerts his full strength, and it is his voice that rallies the crew for a final exertion to shove the canoe through. Coming downstream is more dangerous though less wearying. The water is so cold and the current so swift that a capsizing usually causes the drowning of one or more of the occupants, and the captain must never relax. Spoon canoes are very [501] stable, and cannot be upset by a faulty distribution of weight. This is essential in view of the rapids, but they are heavy and cumbersome, unsuited to carrying large loads.

When a carpenter wishes to make a canoe, he fells a cedar of suitable 396 size and trims off bark and branches to leave the central stem available. [412]
Slowly and laboriously he chips with his adze until he has hollowed out the trunk to the proper shape, and at the same time has smoothed away the outer surface. Sometimes a small fire is built on the trunk so that it will char the wood beneath and make it easier to remove, but the carpenter must be careful that the flames do not spread too far. Finally, as his work reaches completion, he becomes ever more painstaking than before. The sides and bottom are whittled to a thickness of no more than three inches, and at this stage a faulty stroke may pierce the shell and ruin the toil of weeks. When completed, it is necessary to widen and harden the canoe. A fire is built beside it and stones thrown into the flames to heat; these lifted out and dropped into the water with which the craft has been partly filled. Steam rises, and the carpenter confines it by covering the canoe with matting, at the same time endeavouring to pull and force the sides apart. Sometimes he can do so by mere muscular effort, more often it is necessary to lay transverse thwarts within and, by pounding them downwards, extend the sides. No great extension is possible, nor is it required, but the steaming process is considered to harden the wood as well as widen the canoe.

Until five or ten years ago, the Bella Coola made another type of 501 canoe, ilpin, for use on the ocean. A few examples of this style are still in existence (see Plate 22). Though approximately the same length as river canoes, they are proportionately much deeper and narrower, and an extension downwards near the stern serves in place of a keel. These craft are sufficiently sea-worthy to weather any ordinary storm. Several

2:-McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

501 of the older people remember seeing in their youth another type, lakan, with a high raised prow; this may have been identical with the mdka which others describe as having an elevated bow and a low stern. An entirely different craft was the tamkwl'i, named from one of the geese, [525] probably the white-fronted goose. A strip of maple fastened along each side caught the water in moving, with a sound like that of the peculiar rustling flight of the bird. The bow was often carved in the form of a [532] bird's head and the stern in that of a tail to further the resemblance. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of these canoes, though some had heard of them from their grandparents. The large, open type of canoe made by the Haida was known to the Bella Coola, but not constructed by them. Sails were used on all ocean-going canoes; they were usually of matting, though skins sewn together were occasionally employed.

501 Canoes are occasionally lashed together. In several kusiut dances a wide platform for dancing is required, and the need is met by lashing 535 planks crosswise over two canoes, near the bow and stern, thus fastening them together. Planking is laid on the two supports and a platform so constructed. Careful inquiries showed that this fastening was merely a temporary arrangement; the booms were not bound in any particular manner, nor was there any fixed distance between the craft. Sometimes 501 the same expedient was used for transport when the load was too heavy [171] for two canoes separately, a device which is said to have been used more commonly by the tribes of the outer coast than the Bella Coola. Canoes lashed together are termed ds-awanāy.

Rafts, sutskwl'a, consisting of rough logs fastened together with cross-pieces, were commonly used on the lakes of the interior, and occasionally for river work when canoes were unavailable and there was no time to make them. Another expedient in similar emergencies was to [177] make bark canoes, such as are still constructed by the Carriers. The Bella Coola regard the construction of these as definite copying, and do not profess to have as much skill as their teachers whose canoes, it is said, can be folded for portaging. There is a tradition that, many generations ago, a few clever Bella Coola knew how to make skin canoes.

THE PREPARATION OF CEDAR-BARK

314 Early spring is the time to suxukuls, that is, to gather the inner bark [22] of the cedar. Men occasionally assist in the task, though this is really [462] woman's work. The worker selects a small cedar, choosing one about six inches in diameter, with smooth trunk and relatively free from knots. With a knife she makes a horizontal incision in the bark, two or three feet [412] from the ground, sometimes girdling the sapling. Then she inserts her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NES

lute, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, uses 314 the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes [412] another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long streamer which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large one by means of many vertical incisions.

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, ḳapi, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making [285] baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width.

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, 287 is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as tweezers, ḱipla, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand.
Two beating sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower beater, ḳpaq, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper beater, ẋpiksa, in her right hand, she strikes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragment of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper beater falls.
This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but its tensile strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with shavings to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ẋw'.

ẋw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and 287 is then termed mal'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with 286 pieces of the wood attached, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder [224]

287 [illegible] in, and her [illegible] lifted in to have the mixture. Even at the 316 present time dye is never made on a cove, so it is thought that the gradual heating by means of stones is essential. As it becomes warm, the woman thoroughly rubs the ingredients with her hands, then, when it boils, some of the bark is lifted out and more added. This process is continued until the brew is deep red in colour. It is allowed to stand for a few minutes before the pounded cedar-bark is placed in it. The operator gently works it around until it is saturated, then lifts it out and hangs it up to dry. Several pieces of bark can be dyed in one solution, though it is necessary to add more cedar-bark and more stones to maintain the proper strength and heat.

[285] Although red cedar-bark is the kind most commonly used, the Bella [177] Coola sometimes use the yellow cedar for mats and blankets, as we learn from the Bella Bella.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAINT

316 Paint, such as was used both for decorating the body and for pen-[302] [illegible] designs on wood, was obtained from a kind of rock found near [339] the head of a creek, covering the Bella Coola from the south near Sand [317] Fragments of the red stone were broken off, thrown into a vessel containing water, and brought to a boil by the insertion of hot stones. Under the action of heat the rock became soft so that the manufacturer was able to pulverize it and run off the semi-liquid mixture into a small box. He would then place cedar-bark and salmon roe, and spit into the paint, thoroughly mixing his saliva with it. When dry, the mixture was ready for use, and could be kept indefinitely.

[539] Anyone could paint who had the artistic skill, and it was chiefly artists [177] who used to make this kind of paint. Since the introduction of the white man's brilliant colours, there has been no demand for the duller native shade, and the making of paint has been discontinued.

APPENDIX 4

STRING FIGURES

THE only form of practice which it was practical to investigate in any detail was the construction of string figures. These seem to have no ceremonial or religious significance, they are made for recreation only, and it was found easy to learn a number while paying the way for other kinds of research. In fact, interest in them was one of the ways in which the writer became friends with a number of Bella Coola. As is to be expected, some individuals are more proficient in constructing complicated string figures than others, the old women being particularly adept. Having the long labour which occur in all the dances is a common right; so we so old women teaching a group of young girls the figures which she herself learns when young. Some men remember a number from their youth, but the making of designs with string is regarded as more fitting for girls and women. Songs accompany many of the figures, and the singing of these is considered an essential part of the construction. It was noticed that many more figures were known long ago; in fact, several of those here recorded were only obtained after repeated efforts on the part of an old woman to reconstruct those which she had been shown when a child. No attempt was made to learn all the Bella Coola figures, a larger number could doubtless have been collected, but those here described are the ones most commonly made.

The nomenclature used is that described by Miss Haddon,[1] to itself following the method used by Rivers and Haddon. It will be observed that the number is familiar with this, including the meaning of the terms, "Opening A," "Position 1," and "Shoulder." A string about four feet long will be found most convenient for making the Bella Coola figures.

1. A WOODEN RING

Double the loop, two strands now take the place of the usual one, but these will be referred to as a single string or loop. The figure can be made equally well with a string one-half the usual length.

Place string as a single loop over left thumb and index finger and the right hand.

With right index finger hook down the string passing directly across left thumb and index finger and draw out to right, allowing right hand loop to slip over this hooked-down string.

---

[1] A. Haddon, Cat's Cradle from Many Lands (London, 1911).

[String Figures]

[illegible] THE WHALE CHILD (illegible)

[illegible] Insert right hand from dorsal side into the loop formed down by right index finger, releasing this finger in the process.

With tips of right thumb and index finger grasp left radial radial string and left ulnar thumb string, taking care that the grasping fingers pass to the dorsal side of the (straight) left ulnar radial thumb string.

Fig. 6. "V-Ribbon Trap"

Draw these two strings out to the right, allowing the original right hand loop to slip over them.

This completed figure represents a ribbon trap. The opening pointing towards the left (Figure 6).

Fig. 7. Spring [illegible]

Opening 2 with middle fingers.

Bring middle fingers together, tip to tip, transfer right middle finger loop to left middle finger, and left middle finger loop to right middle finger, passing 1 over the loop just transferred.

Extend.

Insert left thumb into left middle finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to the thumb, keeping 1 dorsal to the loop already held.

Insert left thumb into left little finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to the thumb, keeping 1 dorsal to the two loops already held.

Insert left little finger into left thumb loops from proximal side, passing to radial side of the two proximal ulnar thumb strings, and to ulnar side of dorsal ulnar thumb string, hook this string down with little finger through thumb loops.

Insert left index finger into left thumb loops from dorsal side, passing to ulnar side of the two dorsal radial thumb strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb strings, turn index finger up away from manipulator, taking up this string on the dorsal aspect of the tip of the index finger.

Release left thumb.

Release right thumb and little finger.

Extend.

This completed figure (Figure 7) shows the final easily to draw to extend.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] 4

Fig. 1. "A Knot Hook"

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] 4 [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Fig. 2. "Hook Knot Opening"

[illegible]

[illegible] Grip index fingers together, tip to tip, and transfer right index finger loop to left index finger, and left index finger loop to right index finger [illegible] just transferred.

Spread middle fingers.

[illegible] middle fingers into index finger loops from proximal side.

[illegible] middle and index fingers towards the manipulator, passing index fingers to distal side of radial thumb string, and middle fingers to proximal side [illegible] radial thumb string, grasping this string between tips of these fingers.

[illegible] through index finger loop, allowing this loop to slip off. The string [illegible] firmly held between tips of fingers is now wrapped around tips of [illegible] fingers.

Spread thumbs.

[illegible] represents the warps resting on a framework. (Figure 7).

Fig. 7. "A Cradle."

Pass thumbs away from manipulator into the lower section of the central triangle.

Release ring and little fingers.

Gently extend, and the figure becomes two warps.

IV. THE WARP

Now loop over thumbs, which should be about four inches apart, and straight string between their radial sides, and the long pendent strings hanging down from other sides of thumbs on palmar aspects of hands.

Lift index fingers take up radial thumb strings from proximal side.

Lift left thumb take up right radial thumb string from proximal side.

Spread right thumb.

Lift right thumb into left thumb loops from proximal side and take up [illegible] loops.

Extend figure.

Lift thumbs proximally to other side of index finger loops, and take up [illegible] index finger string on their backs.

Spread index fingers.

Now we now have loops on the thumbs which should be loops in their original order.

Lift index fingers through the three thumb loops from proximal side, [illegible] and then down and away from manipulator to other side of distal and middle elbow thumb strings, and to the proximal side of the proximal elbow thumb string, by twisting the index fingers back this string down, with the index fingers, through thumb loops.

With little fingers hook down the strings hooked down by index fingers.

Release index fingers.

Release the two straight radial thumb strings.

Extend figure.

This completed figure shows two lays, the loops passing from radial thumb string to elbow little finger string, playing a game which resembles hide-and-seek (Figure 6).

Fig. 6. "Two Boys."

The left hand lay hides: hook down the lay with left index finger.

The right hand lay runs to try to find him: insert left thumb into right thumb loop from proximal side, release right thumb, and extend. This shows the right hand lay over the left hand, but he cannot see the left hand lay, who is concealed.

Sing: "Jack" (4). "Where is he?"

The right hand lay returns to his station.

Insert right thumb into left distal thumb loop from proximal side and lift off this loop.

Extend.

The left hand lay emerges from his hiding place.

Release left index finger.

Sing: "Jamieson go'ln. Here he is."

The process of hiding and running to find can be repeated indefinitely, and with either lay.

6. A [illegible]

Bolla Coola opening.

Insert middle, ring, and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side, and hook down radial index finger strings.

Bend index and middle fingers towards manipulator, to distal side of elbow thumb string, passing index fingers to distal side of radial thumb string, and middle fingers to proximal side of radial thumb string, holding this string between tips of fingers.

Bend index and middle fingers up and away from manipulator, thus 524 wrapping radial thumb string around tips of index fingers, and allowing original index finger loops to slip off.

Release thumbs.

There is now a St. Andrew's Cross in the centre of the figure. With each thumb take up the upper arm of the cross nearest to it from the proximal side.

Release index fingers.

Transfer loop hooked down by ring and little fingers of each hand to little fingers of each hand, without altering direction of loop.

Fig. 9. "A Bubble."

Insert index fingers into little finger loops from distal side, hand them towards one, equidistant to proximal side of radial little finger strings, of one thumb strings, and radial thumb strings, then hand them up and away from one, equidistant to distal side of radial thumb string, and to proximal side of the straight string which crosses the figure forming a loop between thumb string and radial little finger string of each hand. Hook this string on index fingers and return, taking it up on the distal aspect of index fingers.

Release thumbs.

[205] The loops just released encircle the ears of the rabbit. With thumbs press the ears through little finger loops and thence with middle fingers, thereby making the figure appear more like this (Figure 9).

61. THE LONG FOOD OF BUTTER

524 Bella Coola opening.

631 Insert middle, ring and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

With thumbs take up radial index finger strings from proximal side and return through thumb loops, allowing original thumb loops to slip off.

Insert middle fingers into thumb loops from proximal side and take up on the backs of middle fingers the strings passing across the palmar aspect of thumbs, returning thumbs to normal position.

With back of left middle finger grip right middle finger loop and release right middle finger.

With hook of right middle finger grip left middle finger loop and lift this loop from left middle finger.

Release thumbs and extend.

Pass thumbs to proximal side of index finger loops into hooked down middle finger loops from distal side and pick up radial middle finger strings.

Release index fingers but do not extend.

The long position loops represent the gnats. Lift the figure and hold the hand so that both loops can be taken into the mouth, where they can be represented as that they will hang close together.

Gently squeeze the soft (ie. fingers which are hook up down loops), this causes the gnats to become crazy (Figure 10). It is difficult to prevent the loops from falling apart, as they always do unless well maintained.

Fig. 10. "The Long Pole of Gnats"

The two lozenges which appear in the central face of the figure represent Raven's mandible.

This figure is also called, more simply, the gnats.

[illegible]

Position 1:

With thumbs side up allow both finger strings from distal side.

With middle fingers side up position strings as in figure 9.

Pass thumbs to proximal side of index finger loops and side up radial both finger strings from proximal side.

With both fingers hook down about middle finger strings, allowing original both finger string to slip off.

Pass both of ring fingers into loops/hooked down by both fingers from proximal side.

With ring fingers hook down proximal about thumb strings, removing through loops/hooked down by both fingers.

Release both fingers.

With both fingers hook down the loop/hooked down by the ring fingers.

Release ring fingers.

Release middle fingers.

Pass index fingers into thumb loops from distal side, then level up, towards, towards manipulator to radial side of proximal radial thumb string and to other side of distal radial thumb string, then level down and towards away from manipulator, and hooking to distal side of both sides.

Fig. (1). "A Butterfly."

thumb strings, then taking up the left radial thumb string on the backs of index fingers.

Release thumbs.

This shows the butterfly with wings extended, the hand being the complicated network of strings in the upper centre of the figure (Figure 11).

To untangle the strings, to make the butterfly vanish, with thumbs hook down pulleys strings and release index and little fingers.

[illegible] THE [illegible] [illegible]

Hold Cords spanning.

Insert middle, ring and little fingers of each hand into index finger loops and hook down radial index finger strings.

Place index fingers to thumb side of radial thumb strings, and middle fingers to proximal side of radial thumb strings, checking this string between tips of these fingers.

Remove thumbs through index finger loops, allowing these loops to slip off.

Release thumbs.

With thumbs take up these index finger strings from proximal side.

Release index fingers.

Bring thumbs together, tip to tip, and transfer right thumb loop to left thumb.

Bring ring and little fingers of each hand together, tip to tip, to radial side of left thumb loops, and transfer loop hooked down by left ring and little fingers to back of right ring and little fingers.

With left index, middle, ring and little fingers hook down left ulnar thumb strings.

Release left thumb.

Insert right index and middle fingers from proximal side into loops hooked down on right ring and little fingers, thus widening this loop.

Turn palms of hands towards manipulator, with hands pointing upwards, thus by so doing the fingers would point upwards if they were not here now to hook down strings.

Remove right hand contact-thumbnail, and left hand thumbnail through ulnar fingers, causing a triangle to appear in the centre of the figure (Figure 12).

This triangle represents the gamut in which Dragon-fish, "The Fire-Sucker," applies for spinning uniform. Another person should take the part of Dragon-fish by inserting a finger through the central triangle. The following dialogue takes place:

524

Fire Dance. "What do you want?"

Dragon-fish. "I must seek visitors, please, my fire has gone out."

C.(A). "All right. Go and bring whatever you usually use for carrying coals."

Dragon-fish is shown fire in a long iron rod ending with five fingers and mouth open at wide gesture. The measure should link the finger to food embers in the figure.

Fig. 12. "The Fire-Seeker."

Fire Dance. "Why have you been so long?"

Dragon-fish. "I was given only food by the people in that house over there."

C.(A). "What did you say?"

C. "I am hungry, genius."

C.(A). "What did you see in that?"

C. "A pair of black embers."

C.(A). "What kind of fish was it served in?"

C. "A shell."

C.(A). "What did you see in a white shell?"

C. "A pair white fish, a crisp in a saffin."

C.(A). "What did you see in Cassavania?"

C. "A set of fish golden from a coupon."

C.(A). "Right. Give fish venison."

Reverse the movements marked * and the triangle comments in the corner of the figure, touching thumb and 5 fingers.

The word use is gain, "[illegible]," the Sulu Code equivalent for "Silk shirt." "Shell." "[illegible] on land." or any other mark equivalents, and use all numbers giving the thumb embers.

This strong figure illustrates 10 numbers that could place long ago.

10. A TWO-ARM FIGURE WITH A FINGER.

Place strong two-hollow, middle and ring fingers.

With both fingers side up, initial index finger strong and other ring finger strong from processed side.

With right middle finger side up left palmer strong from processed side, and with left middle finger side up right palmer strong, as in Opening 8.

Place thumbs in thumb side of initial index finger strong, and in processed side of all other strongs, strong in processed other little finger strong, which gives strong the thumb square of the hand, from processed side.

Left and thumb strong are in the palmer square of the hand.

Thumb strong, middle pulling right.

Two loops now pass around about little finger string, radial little finger string, and about middle finger string of each hand, with the "upper" of each loop on the angle formed by the crossing of radial middle finger string and about thumb string. In each case the upper aspect of the loop is parallel to the palmar aspect of the hand. With the mouth, or the help of an assistant, insert a thin stick, about six inches in length, between the right middle and ring fingers from the dorsal aspect of the hand, through the loop around the right hand, then through the other loop, and out between the middle and ring fingers of the left hand. The stick should project an equal distance behind the dorsal aspect of each hand.

Fig. 12. "A Signal Fire with a Stick."

Release middle fingers.

Gently unwind.

The two loops tighten on the stick (Figure 12), and as the hands are separated the two "bars," that is, the loops extending from the radial thumb string to about little finger string, are seen hugging at the stick. Continue separating the hands, and the stick can drawn the stick from his opponent's grasp and return it away either to the right or to the left.

9. A Star and a Wheel

From the string tie a double loop, so that each string or loop normally single is now double, such a string or loop will be described as single throughout. The figure can be done equally well with a string of half the ordinary length.

Bella Coola opening.

Secure middle, ring, and little fingers over index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

Pass left index finger to ulnar side of right ulnar index finger string and hook down right ulnar index finger string.

Release right index finger, but do not draw right.

Pass right index finger to ulnar side of left ulnar index finger strings and hook down the two left ulnar index finger strings, but do not draw right.

Each index finger is now hooking down two strings.

Pass index fingers to palmar side of ulnar thumb string, and by hooking index fingers outwards, take up this string on the dorsal aspect of each, allowing the two strings hooked down by index fingers to slip off.

APPENDIX B

[illegible]

Formal

Insert middle fingers into index finger loops from proximal side.

Pass middle fingers to proximal side of radial thumb strings, and index fingers to distal side of radial thumb strings, holding this string between the tips of these fingers, bend index and middle fingers up and away from manipulators, taking up radial thumb strings on dorsal aspect of the tips of index fingers, and allowing the original loops to slip off.

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

This shows a man and a woman standing up, facing one another (Figure 10). By pressing radial ring finger strings, with thumbs, away from manipulators, the figures can be made to come together to an embrace.

Fig. 10. "A Man and a Woman."

11. Kiowa yucca[1]

Bella Coola opening.

Pass thumbs proximal to index finger loops and take up alien index finger string on their backs.

Release index fingers.

Hook down distal alien thumb strings with middle, ring, and little fingers.

Pass index fingers into thumb loops from distal side, to radial side of distal alien thumb string, and to the alien side of proximal alien thumb string, thence to distal side of proximal radial thumb string; bend index fingers down and up, away from manipulators, taking up this string on their distal aspects.

Release thumbs.

Pass thumbs into the loop hooked down by middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand from the distal side, and consider this loop as the thumb.[1]

Extend with backs of hands towards manipulators.

Fig. 11. "Kiowa yucca."

[1] This is a robust Bella Coola, the meaning of which has been forgotten.

326 This shows one usage of Fleet-pole (Figure 10).

(1)Place thumbs pointed to index finger loops and take up about index finger strings on their backs.

Release index fingers.

With middle, ring, and little fingers hook down thumb about thumb strings.

Insert index fingers into thumb loops from thumb side and take up proximal about thumb string from thumb side.

Release thumbs.

Place thumbs into loops hooked down by middle, ring, and little fingers from the thumb side, and transfer this loop to the thumbs.(2)

This shows the figure in the same form as previously obtained. The movements from (1) to (2) can be repeated indefinitely, and should be done a number of times while the manipulator says, "Fleet-pole, Fleet-pole." With a little practice the movements from (1) to (2) can be made almost as fast as the word can be said.

Another form of Fleet-pole is usually made from this point by re-passing from 4 to 3.

This figure, the second form of Fleet-pole, cannot be repeated.

(3). Mikkwaila, or rock weasel

Hold Cradle spacing.

Pass the middle, ring, and little fingers into index finger loops from the proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

Bend index and middle fingers towards manipulator, passing index fingers to thumb side of radial thumb string, and middle fingers to proximal side of radial thumb string, holding the string between tips of fingers.

Bend index and middle fingers up away from manipulator, taking up radial thumb string on thumb aspect of the tips of index fingers, and allowing the original loop to slip off index fingers.

Release thumbs.

Take up with each the straight radial index finger string in the course of the figure.

Release ring and little fingers.

Open upon the hands, causing the network of strings in the course of the figure to work up to the middle.

Grip this series of transversal strings with the lips.

Bring right index finger, tip to tip, with left little finger, and complete index finger loop to little finger.

APPENDIX B

[illegible]

Place right middle finger down in the mouth between left index finger loop and left little finger loop.

Release fan, the right middle finger preventing the seven drawings you released from moving towards the left hand.

FIG. 1b. "[illegible] in the [illegible]"

Grip mouth using with tips of right thumb and index finger, and release mouth.

Return to normal position.

Quickly release right middle finger, so the away from extending the loop held between tips of right thumb and index finger, for inserting in this loop all the fingers of the right hand. Re-quickly partnap the hands, the figure in the middle, which represents the left hand, can be made to travel towards the left hand. This movement is sometimes improved by extending the left index finger loop for inserting in it the left thumb, and separating these two digits (Figure 1d). As the figure is moving, the conversation runs:

"I cannot wait	and left hand"
"Where are you going	left hand"

The "left hand" replies:

"[illegible]	[illegible]
I am going to wait left hand	in the human hand."

The interrogator continues:

"Left hand	"[illegible]	"[illegible]
Be careful	Are you left hand (to you go)	towards Green Mist?"

Release left little finger and the "left hand" falls.

FIG. 2 TRICK

Bella Costa opening.

Place middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand into index finger loops from proximal side and hold down the radial index finger string.

Reproduced in [illegible] FIG. 2 (b), Pictorial Magazine of Conjuring Magic, Jan. February [illegible]. This issue further demonstrates.

This issue is in the usual volume of the [illegible] although when I was handed in the photographs by Magic Institute as going to make difference, Mind you was doing it.

[illegible]	[illegible] left hand	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

With middle fingers take up slack thumb string from proximal side and secure through index finger loops.

Insert ring fingers into middle finger loops from proximal side.

Hold middle and ring fingers towards manipulator. Hold side of index finger loops, passing middle fingers to distal side of radial thumb string, and ring fingers to proximal side of radial thumbstring. Grasp radial thumb string between tips of these fingers and secure through middle finger loops, thus wrapping the string in sprayed round the tips of middle fingers.

Release index fingers.

Release left fingers.

Bring thumbs together, tip to tip, and transfer right thumb loop to left thumb.

Insert right index finger into right middle finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop, releasing middle finger.

Bring right hand clockwise through 180 degrees, & draw the loop towards palm on index finger & now hold on back of middlefinger, but low and from towards.

With right middle finger hook down, anchoring, the string which passes from ulnar side of right index finger to radial side of left middle finger.

With right ring finger hook down left radial middle finger string.

Release left middle finger.

Draw left index, ring, and middle fingers into left thumb loops from proximal side and hook down these loops.

Release left thumb.

You show the "Fish" string cradle, hook hanging left, ready to pass (Figure 11).

Fig. 11. "A Fish"

Pass left thumb and ring hooked down by left index, ring and middle fingers from ulnar side.

The left thumb represents a stick.

The manipulator then carries on the following dialogue with thumb:

"Underneath?" "Where is you going?"

Underneath is the reply.

"O shucks, I am going to get some hamburgers."

"Underneath cradle's ahead?" "But how will you a ride to reach up to them?"

"Underneath, I am hungry."

"Why bothers the shucks, Dick Allen?"

As the manipulator says "Go ahead!" release right index and ring fingers and with a swinging motion the "road" can be made to jump towards the left, over the left thumb. 524 [225]

a. Vaud

(Second method of construction)

Bella Coola opening.

Insert middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

With middle fingers take up ulnar thumb strings from proximal side.

With middle fingers hook down ulnar index finger strings, allowing loops just taken up to slip off. The strings formerly hooked down by middle, ring, and little fingers are now held down by ring and little fingers.

Release index fingers.

Each ulnar thumb string is held down by a loop. With index fingers take up ulnar thumb strings from proximal side between loop and centre of figure.

With index fingers take up radial thumb strings from distal side and return, allowing original index finger loops to slip off.

Release middle, ring, and little fingers.

Take up with mouth the straight radial index finger string in centre of figure.

Bring thumbs together, tip to tip, and transfer right thumb loop to left thumb, releasing right thumb.

Transfer right index finger loop to hook of right index by twisting finger without removing string, which throws original radial string on to ulnar side.

With right middle finger hook down string passing from mouth to left index finger between the mouth and the point where other strings cross.

Release mouth.

With right ring finger hook down left radial index finger string which runs straight across to right hand.

Release left index finger.

Insert left index, middle, and ring fingers into hooked down loop of left thumb.

Release left thumb.

Gently extend the figure by spreading the loop held on backs of left fingers, at the same time manipulating it so that the loops held by right index, middle, and ring fingers are of approximately the same length. It is sometimes difficult to get a satisfactory figure.

The completed figure (Figure 11) represents a road spanning pass [225] necessary to jumping. Release right index and ring fingers, and by means of a swinging movement with both hands the cord can be made to jump to the left, over the left thumb, which should be inserted into hooked down loops of left index, middle, and ring fingers from distal side.

[p. 24 [p. 25]]

201. CROSSING A RIVER

Place string as a simple loop over thumbs and index fingers.

With middle, ring, and little fingers hook down radial thumb string and show index finger string.

With right index finger take up string passing directly across left thumb and index finger from proximal side.

With left index finger take up string passing directly across right thumb and index finger from distal side.

Extend, at the same time releasing middle, ring, and little fingers.

Pass left middle, ring, and little fingers proximal to left proximal index finger loop, and hook down left distal radial index finger string.

Pass right middle, ring, and little fingers proximal to both right index finger loops and hook down right ulnar thumb string—which is the same string as just hooked down by left middle, ring, and little fingers.

Pass left middle finger into left index finger loops from proximal side and hook down proximal radial index finger string.

Pass right middle finger into right index finger loops from proximal side and hook down both radial index finger strings.

Bend towards manipulator middle and index fingers of each hand, passing middle fingers to proximal side of the straight radial thumb string, and index fingers to distal side of same string. Grip this straight string between tips of middle and index fingers.

Turn middle and index fingers down and up away from manipulator, taking up radial thumb string on distal aspect of index fingers, and allowing original strings to slip off.

Release thumbs.

Extend gently.

* A loop now crosses the canon of the figure from the angle formed by the junction of left ulnar index finger string with left radial little finger string, to the right palmar string. With right thumb take up the radial string of this loop from distal side.

Insert left thumb into right thumb loop from proximal side and extend this loop on both thumbs.

With thumbs take up radial index finger strings from proximal side.

Spread thumbs.

Release index fingers. ****

J. McDowell E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellevue NEA

524

Insert index fingers into thumb loops from proximal side and transfer these loops to index fingers.

Repeat from * to * with the double loop which now crosses the figure in the same position as the single loop previously described.

This completed figure (Figure 18) shows a woman, the closely paired strings running horizontal, by in the centre of the figure, who wishes to cross a river.

FIG. 18. "Crossing a River."

The manipulator sings, as if the woman were speaking.

Rescuer	crossing
Come to look on	across the river.

One of those who have fur from the village on the opposite shore answers;

Turnabout	sit	Observer
Go higher up	to	to place where there are projecting stones that make a causeway.

The woman does so. Release right index finger and she raises her clothing above her knees. By separating hands she can be made to move to the left across the river.

Another explanation of this figure is that it represents a man with a short leg who wishes to cross a river. As he hesitates, fearing lest he be swept away, his associates make fun of his deformity; he lengthens his leg, presumably by magical means, and confounds them by crossing with ease.

97. A PORCUPINE

Opening A with middle fingers.

Bring middle fingers together, tip to tip, and transfer right middle finger loop to left middle finger, and left middle finger loop to right middle finger, over the loop just transferred.

Insert left thumb into left middle finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to thumb, keeping it distal to loop already held, and releasing left middle finger.

Insert left thumb into left little finger loop from proximal side, and transfer this loop to thumb, keeping it distal to the two loops already held, and releasing left little finger.

Insert left little finger into left thumb loops from proximal side, passing to radial side of the two proximal sheer thumb strings, and to

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

524 silver side of distal silver thumb string; hook down this string through thumb loops.

Insert left index finger into left thumb loops from distal side, passing to silver side of the two distal radial index finger strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb string; hand index finger upwards and away from manipulator, taking up this proximal radial thumb string on dorsal aspect of index finger.

Release left thumb and extend.

There is now a diamond-shaped figure of two strands near the left hand; pass left thumb into this diamond away from manipulator and take up on its back the two strings forming the right lower side of the diamond.

Insert left index finger, with its loop, into left thumb loops from proximal side.

FIG. 19. "A Porcupine."

With tips of right thumb and index finger lift loop from left index finger, drawing this loop through left thumb loops.

Release left thumb and index finger.

Replace loop held between tips of right thumb and index finger on left thumb, without twisting.

Release right thumb and little finger.

Extend right middle finger loop by passing into it, from proximal side, all the digits of the right hand.

Extend and the porcupine appears (Figure 19). Its head is here downwards near the left hand, and its tail is the loop around the right radial thumb string.

[525] The manipulator sings:[1]

Ayuwikinu-ina	nuyuwikuiu'	ushuumun-ina	ulwuhy-ina
Don't hurry away,	go easily,[2]	when you go	to your home,

Ukilhukilum
O porcupine!

XVI. AN EAGLE'S NEST

Opening A with middle fingers.

Insert thumbs into middle finger loops from proximal side and transfer these loops to thumbs, keeping them distal, and at the same time releasing middle fingers.

[526] [527]

1. Recorded on song VII D 105, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
2. Some indicating address to a feminine creature.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Insert thumbs into little finger loops from proximal side and transfer these loops to thumbs, keeping the three loops in their proper order, and at the same time releasing little fingers. 524

Insert little fingers into thumb loops from proximal side, passing to radial side of proximal and middle ulnar thumb strings, and to ulnar side of distal ulnar thumb string, and hook down this string through thumb loops.

Insert index fingers into thumb loops from the distal side, passing to ulnar side of distal and middle proximal thumb strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb string; turn fingers up away from manipulator, taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

Release thumbs.

Each index finger loop is now crossed by two strings; one of these passes as a simple loop around the ulnar index finger string, whereas the other is wrapped around the same string; with the backs of thumbs take up the former string from the proximal side.

With right thumb take up left radial thumb string from proximal side.

Release left thumb.

With left thumb take up both right radial thumb strings from proximal side.

Pass thumbs into index finger loops from proximal side.

Navaho both thumb strings.

Release index fingers.

Insert index fingers into thumb loops from proximal side, taking up these loops.

Release thumbs.

The figure now consists of two straight lines with two triangles between them, the base of each triangle (consisting of two strings) being vertical and parallel to the other; pass thumbs into their respective triangles, away from manipulator, and take up the bases on the backs of thumbs.

Bring thumbs together, tip to tip, and transfer right thumb loop to left thumb, and left thumb loop to right thumb, over the loop just transferred.

FIG. 20. "An Eagle's Nest."

[825]

With the tips of right thumb and middle finger grasp the left double thumb loop, remove from left thumb, rotate through 180 degrees anti-clockwise, and replace on left thumb.

Repeat for right double thumb loop.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEB

524 Pass thumbs into index finger loops from proximal side.
Navaho both proximal thumb strings.
Release index fingers.
[525] Extend, and the Eagle's Nest appears (Figure 20).

XVII. THE CRIPPLE

Opening A with middle fingers.

Pass thumbs proximal to middle finger loops and take up radial little finger strings from proximal side.

With little fingers hook down ulnar middle finger strings, allowing original little finger loops to slip off.

Release middle fingers.

Extend loop hooked down on little fingers by passing into each the hooks of the ring and middle fingers.

With middle fingers hook down proximal ulnar thumb string, allowing the loop hooked down on middle, ring, and little fingers to slip off.

Transfer loop hooked down by middle fingers to hooks of little fingers, without twisting.

Insert index and middle fingers into both thumb loops from the distal side and grasp the proximal radial thumb string between the tips of these fingers; bend upwards and away from manipulator taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

A straight string now passes on the ulnar side of the central figure from one palmar string to the other; with thumbs take up this string from proximal side near each palmar string.

FIG. 21. "The Cripple."

With middle fingers hook down index finger loops, without releasing index fingers.

Place thumbs, tip to tip, with index fingers, and transfer each thumb loop to its respective index finger, passing over the loop originally on the index fingers, that is, so that each original thumb loop is now a proximal index finger loop.

With thumbs take up distal radial index finger string from proximal side.

Release middle fingers.

Release index fingers.

Extend hooked down loop of left little finger by passing into it the hooks of left index, middle, and ring fingers.

[illegible] (1902-1904) 1968
NEN Reflecords NEN

With left index, middle, ring, and little fingers hook down from proximal side the right ulnar little finger string. 524

Release right little finger.

With right little finger hook down right ulnar thumb string.

Release right thumb.

With right index finger hook down left radial thumb string.

Release left thumb.

By extending gently the figure appears. The crooked figure near the left hand represents the cripple, the upright figure near the right hand with projecting nerve represents a man with umbilical hernia (Figure 21).

The following dialogue is sung accompanying this figure:*

The man with hernia sings:

Ewi, ewi, ewi,	ahkhuwa	ahwahkhuwa!
Hi! Hi! Hi!	Hurry up,	you cripple.

The cripple answers:

Ahwaiyaahwa	ahwahkhuwa!	ewi, ewi, ewi
Don't say that	you man with umbilical hernia.	Hi! Hi! Hi!

XVIII. THE Ewing

Belle Coola opening.

Pass middle, ring, and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side, and hook down radial index finger string.

With thumbs take up radial index finger string from proximal side, keeping this string distal.

Bring hands together; insert left thumb into right distal thumb and index finger loop from proximal side; lift this loop from thumb, but not from the index finger, without extending.

Insert right thumb into left middle thumb and index finger loop from proximal side and lift this loop from left thumb, but not from index finger.

Extend.

There are now two loops on each thumb and one on each index finger.

Pass middle fingers into loops hooked down by ring and little fingers from proximal side.

Each loop hooked down by the middle, ring, and little fingers is crossed by the proximal ulnar thumb string; with backs of middle fingers take up this string where it crosses the hooked down loop.

Pass middle fingers, still carrying on their backs the string just picked up, through index finger loops from proximal side, and into both thumb loops from distal side.

---

*Recorded as song VII D 4a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. [126]
The form indicates that a nonmale cripple is indicated. [193]

524

Release index fingers, the index finger loop is now held on the backs of the middle fingers.

Lift distal thumb loop from thumbs, this loop is now held on backs of middle fingers.

Pass index fingers into the three loops hooked down on middle fingers from proximal side.

Pass index fingers distal to radial thumb string, and middle fingers proximal to radial thumb string, clutching this string between tips of fingers, hand fingers upwards and away from manipulator, taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

Gently extend.

Fig. 22. "The Swing."

This shows the swing, with thumbs gently depress the two pendant loops in the centre and the eyes become evident (Figure 22).

The manipulator sings:[1]

Pitipitik-kamy	cockatoo!	mysterious relatives.
Between your eyeballs,[2]	it is too dangerous,	O, dreaded and powerful one!

Pass thumbs from distal side over the loops hooked down on ring and little fingers.

Bend index fingers downwards and away from manipulator, and upwards towards manipulator through the loop hooked down on ring and little fingers, and tip to tip with thumbs, releasing thumbs when complete.

Pass thumbs into distal index finger loops from proximal side and transfer each loop to its respective thumb.

Release index fingers.

This shows the swing with eyeballs removed, appearing as a hammer (Figure 23).[3]

Fig. 23. "Raven's Hammer."

As the figure appears the manipulator sings:

Suppose	Raven	she was struck.
The hammer of	Raven	long, long ago.

[1] The song accompanying the whole figure was recorded on song VII D 18, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[2] This refers to the belief that the swing projects death darting rays from its eyes.

[3] No explanation is offered for the association between a swing and Raven's hammer.

[126]
[992]

There is now a diamond in the centre of the figure, divided into two triangles by a double horizontal string.

Place index fingers towards manipulator through the upper diamond and hook down the double string that crosses the thumb loop, keeping these two strings to silver side of thumb loop.

Place index fingers to thumb side of thumb loops, hook down, then upwards and away from manipulator, taking up the radial thumb string on the tips of the index fingers, and allowing the two strings previously held to slip off.

Fig. 34. "Raven's Visaged"

Release thumbs.

This shows (Figure 34) the ventriloquist of Raven, long, long ago. The song which accompanies this figure is in ordinary Bella Coola and the meaning of the word ventriloquist is not now known. One informant furnished the opinion that it might be connected with a similar word meaning visaged.

Song:

Ventriloquist	Raven	who was seen
The ? of	Raven	long, long ago.

The string passing from the silver side of the index fingers to the radial side of the little fingers is crossed by two strings, each of which forms a loop around it; with thumbs hook down this string between the two loops.

Release index fingers.

Transfer loops from backs of thumbs to backs of thumbs by weaving.

This shows the whoziness of Raven, long, long ago (Figure 35).

Song:

Adzelo	Raven	who was seen
The whoziness of	Raven	long, long ago.

Place index and middle fingers tip to tip with thumbs, and transfer thumb loops to index and middle fingers.

Place right index and middle fingers tip to tip with left index and middle fingers and transfer loop from the former to the latter.

Place little fingers together tip to tip and transfer right little finger loop to left little finger.

Fig. 35. "Raven's Whoziness."

524 With right index, middle, ring, and little fingers hook down little left elbow index finger strings.

Release left index and middle fingers.

Fig. 32. "Raven's Five-Bringer."

Weave left little finger hooked down loop for passing into it from proximal side left index, middle, and ring fingers.

This shows the Five-Bringer (one who brings embers to light a fire) of Raven, long, long ago (Figure 32).

Sing:

Proportion	Raven	who one-interval
The five-bringer of	Raven,	long, long ago.

Release index fingers.

Pass thumbs and index fingers from below between the two radial middle finger strings, taking up one string on the backs of the thumbs and one on the backs of the index fingers, thus widening the preceding figure.

This shows the loss of Raven, long, long ago.

Sing:

Ordinal	Raven	who one-interval
The loss (or embers used of)	Raven	long, long ago.

Release thumbs, allowing the loop just dropped to be caught on backs of index fingers, the figure has now returned to the Five-Bringer of Raven.

There is now a two-stringed triangle in the centre of the figure; pass left middle finger through this triangle towards manipulator and hook down the double strings forming the base of the triangle.

Release left index, ring, and little fingers.

Pass backs of left index, ring, and little fingers into loop hooked down on left middle finger, thus widening this loop.

This shows the upright house-pass of Raven, long, long ago (Figure 33).

Sing:

Palpation	Raven	who one-interval
The house-pass of	Raven,	long, long ago.

Release index fingers.

Pass thumbs and index fingers from below between the two radial middle finger strings, and take up one string on the backs of the thumbs and one on the backs of the index fingers, thus widening the preceding figure.

Fig. 33. "Raven's House-Pass."

This shows the ridiki[1] of Raven, long, long ago.
Sing:

Nyawanuhiw	Ipuw	ulla ma-ma-ni
The ridiki of	Raven,	long, long ago.

Release middle, ring, and little fingers.
With little fingers hook down radial thumb strings.
Release thumbs.
Pass left middle finger through left index finger loop from proximal side.

Fig. 38. "Raven's Horse."

Place right index finger tip to tip with left middle finger and transfer right index finger loop to left middle finger.
Place right index finger tip to tip with left index finger and transfer left index finger loop to right index finger.
Pass left index finger into left middle finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop.
This shows the horse of Raven, long, long ago (Figure 38).
Sing:

Ingunin	Ipuw	ulla ma-ma-ni
The horse of	Raven,	long, long ago.

Release right index finger.
This shows the dog of Raven, long, long ago.
Sing:

Wawuw	Ipuw	ulla ma-ma-ni
The dog [an archaic word] of	Raven	long, long ago.

String Tricks

1. A Cutting

Place string over left little finger as a simple loop, holding it with right hand at a distance of about six inches from left hand; this distance should be maintained throughout the movements by allowing more string to pass through right hand.

Pass left ring finger distal to radial little finger string and take up ulnar little finger string from proximal side.

[1] The aperture in the horizontal staging in front of the houses which serves as a toilet.

594 Pass left middle finger distal to radial ring finger string and take up radial little finger string from proximal side.

Pass left index finger distal to radial middle finger string and take up radial ring finger string from proximal side.

With left thumb take up radial index finger string and radial middle finger string from proximal side, keeping the former distal.

With left index finger take up distal radial thumb string from proximal side.

Pass left middle finger distal to distal ulnar index finger string and take up proximal radial thumb string from proximal side.

Pass left ring finger distal to distal ulnar middle finger string and take up distal ulnar index finger string from proximal side.

Pass left little finger distal to distal ulnar ring finger string and take up distal ulnar middle finger string from proximal side.

Release thumb, at the same time pulling with the right hand and the figure disappears. There appears to be no story attached to this figure.

[illegible]. THE [illegible] OF [illegible]'S [illegible]*

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb with long, pendent loops hanging down on palmar aspect of left hand.

Pass right thumb and index finger from distal side into left thumb loop, at the same time hooking down the two pendent strings with right middle, ring, and little fingers.

Separate right thumb and index finger; turn right hand upwards, and clockwise, without releasing strings hooked down by right fingers. The left radial thumb string should now run straight across to ulnar side of right thumb, and thence across its distal aspect to radial side of thumb, from where it is hooked down by the three fingers of the right hand. The left ulnar thumb string should run straight across to ulnar side of right index finger, from where it is hooked down by the three fingers of the right hand. The distance between the hands should be about three inches; this must be maintained throughout the figure by allowing more string to pass through the hooked-down fingers of the right hand, as required.

[773] [125] *We already described, in the beginning of time story of the first canoes to earth floated down from above as crows. It is assumed that the plumage of these birds must have been attached to the weavers in some way, the "fastenings" illustrated in this figure. On reaching earth, these coverings were taken off without difficulty, an action represented in this design by the facile loosening of the complicated cat's-cradle work of strings. This figure was collected from a man whose first ancestor came to earth as a crow; his descendants consequently stated that the pattern represented the specific fastenings of his own forefather's plumage.

With left little finger take up right silver thumb string from distal side.

Reverse right hand anti-clockwise through 180 degrees, with left index finger take up right radial index finger string from distal side.

Reverse right hand clockwise through 180 degrees, with left ring finger take up right silver thumb string from distal side.

Reverse right hand anti-clockwise through 180 degrees, with left middle finger take up right radial index finger string from distal side.

Reverse right hand clockwise through 180 degrees, with left ring finger take up right silver thumb string from proximal side.

Reverse right hand anti-clockwise through 180 degrees, with left index finger take up right radial index finger string from proximal side.

Fig. 20. "The Footstep of Rover's Passage."

Reverse right hand clockwise through 180 degrees, with left little finger take up right silver thumb string from proximal side.

Reverse right hand anti-clockwise through 180 degrees, with left thumb take up right radial index finger string from proximal side.

Release right hand.

This shows the footsteps of Rover's passage (Figure 20).

Let loop from left middle finger, pull the pendant strings and the figure disappears.

APPENDIX A

GLOSSARY OF FLORA AND FAUNA

This glossary does not give the scientific names of all the flora and fauna known in the Bella Coola, as some of all mentioned in the monograph, but only those of which the local designations are unknown. In cases of the common mammals, no scientific terminology has been attempted, since the multiplicity of subspecies makes identification almost impossible, and the popular name is sufficient for general purposes. In regard to plants, a difficulty lies in the fact that Bella Coola nomenclature is not always strictly accurate botanically. Two or more distinct forms, for example, may be grouped together on account of their similar use as food, and one name applied to them indiscriminately. Conversely, different terms are sometimes given to various parts of the same tree, the roots, the bark, the leaves, and so on. These factors combine to complicate the study of other ethnobotanic or ethnozoologic, and necessitate the collection of a large number of specimens. The late W. H. I. Smith has done so, and this glossary could not have been compiled without his assistance, though the writer is responsible for any errors in it.

Alder	Alnus rubra Bong.
Aspen, American	Populus tremuloides Michx.
Bearberry, Red	Arctostaphylos Uva-ursi (L.) Spreng.
Bilberry, Dwarf	Vaccinium myrtillus Michx.
Bilberry, Tall	Vaccinium ovalifolium Smith.
Bilberry, Thin-leaved	Vaccinium membranaceum Dougl.
Birch	Betula sp.
Blackberry	Rubus spectabilis Pursh.
Blackfish—the Killer Whale.
Blueberry	Vaccinium parvifolium Smith.
Bracken	Pteris aquilina (L.) var. lanuginosa Bong.
Buffaloberry, Canadian	Shepherdia canadensis Nutt.
Bunchberry	Cornus canadensis, L.
Cedar, Red	Thuja gigantea Nutt.
Cedar, Yellow	Chamaecyparis nootkatensis (Lamb.) Spach.
Clover, Perennial	Trifolium fimbriatum Lindl.
Cod, Black	Anoplopoma fimbria Pallas.
Cod, Red Rock	Sebastodes ruberrimus Cramer.
Cottonwood	Fimbrystylis sp.
Cottonwood, Black	Populus trichocarpa T. and G.
Cow Parsnip	Heracleum lanatum Michx.
Crabapple	Pyrus diversifolia Bong.
Cranberry	Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.

[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]	Pinus cembra Dougl.
[illegible]	Pinus [illegible]
[illegible]	Lonicera [illegible] Prunus [illegible]
[illegible]	Rubus leucodermis Dougl.
[illegible]	Rubus strigosus Michx.
[illegible]	Carex [illegible]
[illegible]	Plantago [illegible]
[illegible]	Pinus ponderosa Pursh.
[illegible]	Gaultheria Shallon Pursh.
[illegible]	Oxycoccus macrocarpus Wallman
[illegible]	Oxycoccus lens Wallman
[illegible]	Oxycoccus gaultheria Wallman
[illegible]	Oxycoccus vitis Wallman
[illegible]	Oxycoccus vulnerarius Wallman
[illegible]	Salix pentandra Richardson
[illegible]	Rubus parviflorus Nutt.
[illegible]	Sambucus racemosa
[illegible]	Lycopodium lucidulum (L.) Schum.
[illegible]	Aralia nudicaulis
[illegible]	Symphoricarpos racemosus Michx.
[illegible]	Pinus ponderosa (Doug.) Laws.
[illegible]	Pinus monticola (Mill.) B.S.P.
[illegible]	Fragaria sp.
[illegible]	Salix sphenophylla Hook.
[illegible]	Alnus sp.
[illegible]	Lonicera ciliosa
[illegible]	Rubus lacinatus
[illegible]	Symphoricarpos polycarpus (Engelm.) Greene
[illegible]	Circaea alpina
[illegible]	Salix sp.
[illegible]	Ribes lacustre parviflorum

APPENDIX B

BELLA COOLA-ENGLISH VOCABULARY

DURING the period in the field, the writer's attention was devoted entirely to archæological and religious investigation, and no attempt was made either to analyze the intricacies of the Bella Coola language or to record texts. This part of the monograph consists only of words which were collected furtuitously, and no effort was made to compile an adequate list, or even a representative one. This explains the preponderance of proper names, and the large number of nouns connected with rituals of all kinds, some of which are rapidly disappearing from common usage. Many of these were used by the writer continually in gathering technical data, and their incorporation is unquestionably correct. A few words, however, were not rechecked on different occasions, or from different informants, so that some errors may have crept in, either in translation or in recording. No terms have been employed of which the writer has any real doubt, but the same accuracy is not claimed for this vocabulary as for the monograph as a whole. Lack of knowledge of Bella Coola grammar made it impracticable to utilize the words recorded in the songs, since many of them include affixes and other grammatical elements that affect the root.

128
1927
[114]
[145]

In listing the words alphabetically, the following arbitrary system of letter order has been followed and all symbols have been disregarded, for example, a and ā are not separated.

- a follows a.
- ā follows a.
- ä follows a.
- ł follows l.
- l̄ follows l.
- ł follows a.

A

a'alk: 1—Loosely organized society of which the members can perform four types of dances.
2—Member of the society.
Ababbis: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Abalkim: Chief of sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Abesh, ecesim, abesnk: Resident.

192*
[575]

*[illegible]
[illegible]

alnaxbim: Name of women adopted over that previously received as an honorary present.
Anaxbidim: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Ainalem: 1—Supernatural beings who dress as the sun moves.
2—Name of the supernatural women, footwear of the sun is occasionally applied to the being herself. The sound is produced by the footwear whistles.
Anaxbidim: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Ainalem: "The Coming of Foul Weather," in the language of supernatural beings. The phenomenon is semi-anthropomorphized.
Ainaxx: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
2—Ancient chief from whom the village is supposedly named.
Aipaxxnaxbim: Earlier name of a Bella Coola dance, the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[821] Aipaxxxi: Supernatural beings who blacken the face of the moon or eclipses.
Ainaxbim: 1—One of the first women to settle on Tsi'a in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of an enemy chief mentioned in an ancient story.
Aiaxbi: 1—One of the designations of Kanaxin, the mysterious supernatural woman.
2—Exercise, awe-inspiring, adorable.
[326] ainaxxx: Being consisting of two long rights with cross-ears.
[324] ainaxbidim: Seven horses.
Ainaxxi: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
ainaxxxm: Label.
Ainalem: 1—One of the fugitives to settle on Calvert Island in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwalc in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Ainaxx in the beginning of time.
ainlaxbim: Snake supporting shelters not.
[796] ainaxbimem: Ritual repeated at intervals between the allotment of tasks for a potlatch, and the coming of a supernatural being to the first sound initiate.
ai'i, plural, aaiii'ium: Herald.
Ainlaxxm: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
[599] aiac: Third part of song.
aiac: Pleasure expedition of boys and girls to the forest.
[517] Ai'ac: Name of an industrial site.
[821] Aipaxbim: Supernatural man-eater, patron of Cannibals.
Aipaxxim: Stick decorated with abalone shell used by one of the settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
Aipaxxim: Supernatural female ferry-picker resident in the land of the dead.
ainin: Appearance.
Ainlaxbim: Bay of the Thousand Islands near Namu.
Ainlaxxi: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
ainalin: Cannibal.
[377] ainaxbim: Marriage with sister of a deceased wife; the word is undoubtedly connected with the verb, to separate.
Ainlaxi: Supernatural creature similar to a human being.
Aiala: Supernatural woman, wife of Cold Wind and mother of Ice.
Ainlaxi: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
ainlaxm: The transference of a name, during the period of engagement, from the father of the future bridegroom to the father of the future bride.
[425]
[553]
[584]

Ahkaiskiwin: Supernatural being sent by Creator to meet Nishiyuna.
ahkoi: "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a crash whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to participate in the path to social importance, though he has not yet done so. Such a tot is served commensurately to other tots.
Ahkoiyi: Medicine chief covered with sand by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
Ahkoiyi-nahkoi: One of the first women to settle at Tsi'ii in the beginning of time.
ahtsoli: Word of unknown meaning often supplied to footmen as complimentary term for the first night of a dance dance.
ahtsokwan: "A Dragging Arrow" (as one dragging with a heavy leg). The name applied to the remembrance of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being superfeasted.
ahtsu: Tanned hide of any kind.
Ahtsumatsu: Ancestral name of a Ness man.
ainy: Performed, adjusted.
aitsumsum: Those who perform to assist marriage dances.
Ajumkwakim: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
Ai-nahkoi: One of the first men to settle at Tsi'ii in the beginning of time.
aiqinkin, "Weapons of War": The term applied to the property distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and her prior to entering her house.
aiqualus: Gifts given in secret, soon after betrothal, by the father of the future groom to the father of the future bride.
aiqualus: Wrapped.
Aiqumsa: Ancestral supernatural woman, synonym for Sisemiaak.
Aiumsumsum: One of the men who came to earth at Mount Tsimsi in the beginning of time.
Ai-kinai: Totem pole erected by the first settlers at Ness in the beginning of time.
akinai: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower.
akla: Sound sung in fast time.
ala: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it.
Ala-yaiwa: Daughter of the first settlers at Sulia in the beginning of time.
alaskin: Secret dances whose dogma becomes apparent through an accident.
alaskin: Synonym for paamdjat, one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased.
alaskin: 1—Night time.
2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.
ala: Come, imperative singular.
Alawa: 1—One of Sawan's sons in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first women to settle at Hawaiki in the beginning of time.
alid-kiin: Control seat behind the fire.
alidjiskin: Hammer with handle for pounding stakes for fish-weir.
Alikamlaka: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola valle.
alikalaus: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun.
Alka-yaawan, "The Devourer of Meat Killed by Another": Term used by hunters to Wolf.

#182

Ala: enemy village.

Alaxcalk, "Site of the Fishing Point": Name given to a hill where are was disposed to labours.

[436] Alaxcumalis: Refusal to lend to an member a family genealogy, such as the employment of marriage dances.

[379] Alaqalaxcum: Shed erected when a chief's fellow villagers are called to prepare to an announcement of his coming potlatch.

Alaxcuqum: Name of a Kwakiutl dancer.

Alaxa, "The Opening of the Sky":

1.—One of the five men in myth at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

2.—One of the five men in myth at Dean in the beginning of time.

3.—Name of a Snake-dancer.

Alaxalaxkum: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.

Alaxcumalaxa: One of the five men in myth at Alaxcal in the beginning of time.

[375] Alaxcumum: Guest having the ability to enter the back-room and meet mistress concealed there. The function probably considers the employment of his ability.

Alqlaxa: Children, supernatural beings who restore supernatural Cannibals.

[329] Alqumum: Unusual hearing of myths.

Alaxumum: Wife of Paxalalla, the supernatural hunter.

Alaxa-Kalaxa: Supernatural calendrical experts.

Alaqalaxla: Husband of Kal'Ulmalaxa, he is known only in Kimsquit.

[372] alaxcumalk: Earlier dance of mystery.

alaxcumaxum: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning ceremony.

[374] alaxcumaxumqa: Call used by heralds when announcing to a mourning ceremony.

[425] alaxcumlalx: The "Dragging Across" of a name, crest, or other intangible property, requires from wife or husband either an marriage or force or a repurchasing of the wife.

[584] alaxcum: To drag a heavy burden.

[462] alaxcha-ex: Cloudiness mixed with shadow grown.

alaxcum: Visit to be repaid by a faster return.

[821] Alaxcalkum, "Facing Both Ways": Second name when the crests relation.

alaqlaxcum, "The Attention Time": Shaded assemblage of the Bellacoolas after departure of a Cannibal.

[547] alqalalaxa: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter.

Alqalalaxla: 1.—Supernatural being who revives mortals.

2.—Name received by a shaman from this being.

alla: Food.

[425] alqlaxum, "Food Supplies": The term applied to the giving of the use of land or marriage.

Alqalaxl, "Stockaded": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

[756] alqalla: Shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in alternate strands.

[882] alqaxl: Guardial, term applied to a girl secluded at adolescence.

[825] Alqaxalqaxa: Supernatural name of shadows, applied to those brought by the first people in the beginning of time.

Alqaxl'Qlal, "A Gloom Downwards": Name given to an Alqalaxl man in the beginning of time.

[illegible] (P)

 192

[illegible]: Something long sought for on account of its reported desirability, such as undiscovered wood.

[illegible] [illegible]: Chiefs whose parents were long engaged and who is accordingly regarded as being well prepared for [554]

[illegible]: Death which occurred within the dark moon.

[illegible]: One of the first men to settle in Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Queen of a potlatch.

[illegible]: "The Sickness". Name assumed by Qwanos in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: "What Has Been Shaken Off". Name applied to property distributed when a woman has been carried through the roof. The implication is that they are then shaken from the fingers of the deceased. [431] [764]

[illegible]: 1—The supreme god.
2—One of the first men to settle on the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
4—Fish of a three repository.

[illegible]: 1—Mountain on the north side of the lower Bella Coola.
2—Name assumed by one of the first settlers on Dean in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Old people, especially parents, this is a polite term for direct address. [601]

[illegible]: Supernatural artisans who made mankind in the beginning of time. [576]

[illegible]: Preserve given to validate the initiation of a doctor. [331]

[illegible]: Assumed name of a Bella Coola woman. [463]

[illegible]: Professional mourner.

[illegible]: Professional dancer on marriages.

[illegible]: Professional hunter.

[illegible]: Professional warrior.

[illegible]: Kimsquit fisherman living in the last century.

[illegible]: Chieftain son.

[illegible]: Celebrated hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

[illegible]: Second oldest sibling. [601]

[illegible]: Repository of a Kimsquit Cannibal whose crimes are effaced.

[illegible]: Professional warrior. [463]

[illegible]: Professional river guard.

[illegible]: Mountain near mouth of the Kimsquit River.

[illegible]: Shaman.

[illegible]: 1—Meeting of those who have given potlatches. [753]
2—Undetermined disease said to attack only chiefs.

[illegible]: Marriage association, i.e. those who, not being relatives, wish to associate themselves with the bride's family in the financial transactions of a marriage.

[illegible]: Name applied to the supernatural artisans with reference to their construction of everything used by mankind.

[illegible], "Cloud-Covered": Name applied to the supernatural being Nutlpum with reference to his frequent invisibility.

[illegible], "The Highest of All Chiefs' Sons." Name of Qwanos's son in the beginning of time.

[illegible], "Falling Star-Fish": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.

[illegible], "The Roof-Maker": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.

[illegible]: One who has received a commission for carpentry work in preparation for a potlatch. [465]

Z: 96: Dawson E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Reference NEA

Skimsim-a, "Left Foot": Since repository named from part of a supernatural creature.

Skymlaks: Kitamaat human living in the last century.

[825] skyuwat: Dentalium shell.

slaxsi'ax, "Not Finished": Said concerning a hamat who has between initiation and his first complete dance.

[298] [881] slawum: Small cup of grass and dentalium shells worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.

slewala: Guest, especially from afar, to a hamat dance.

Slexulaxum: 1—Supernatural herald.

2—Assemblage of the people for possession of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and gambling competitions in connection with the Mystery dance.

3—Kitamaat name for the first night of a hamat dance.

slexqlaix, "A Surpassing": Said of cases where a wife's relatives have given more presents to the husband's than they have received in return.

[576] smax: Place of concealment of a Mystery dancer's power.

[601] s'mamlayk: Old people, especially parents; this is a polite term for indirect address.

smatax: Rightful location, especially the validated position of a chief in a house.

[415] smiqay: Dishes carved with ceremonial crest.

smilgk: 1—Moose.

2—Daughter of the first settlers at Bella.

[825] smi: Spring salmon.

smlu: Spring salmon house.

Smlulkk: Professional name of a hamat marshal.

Smnkkk: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of the Bella Coola River.

smlimlum: 1—The allotment of work to hamat in the manufacture of masks and other requirements.

2—Hence, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a hamat dance.

Smlmlulmmlaix, "The Resident Maker": Name given to the daughter of the first settlers at Bella.

[575] smnwala or sinwala: That which serves as pattern, picture, or model for a hamat ritual.

snaxlpat: Second night of a potlatch.

[226] snawmlat: Artificial, pier-like structure built into a river for use in hand-net fishing.

Snilaxsis, "Where People Go": A reflecting pool created by Raven at Kimsquit.

Snotolwials: Cave near Dean Channel.

Snqaqmdimat, "The Dancer Whose Only Noise-Making Instrument Is His Body": One of Thlexpliite-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Sno'klwulsis: Supernatural woman who guards repositories.

Snutkkkmat: 1—"The Open-Mouthed" (in the sense of open to suck forth sickness): One of Thlexpliite-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

[756] [823] 2—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.

snuxum: Swift running water.

snlhmqsnum: 1—Ranks of ordinary individuals; this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the nusk society.

2—Something supernatural seen when awake.

Smithsonian K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

Anakhimis: Kwakiutl name of a Kimsquit woman.
anakhitlmut, "This Is to Make Straight Your Road": Said when a call is answered, or food thrown upon a fire for the dead.
Anakwalo, "Place of Big Stones in the River": Village at Kwatna.
Anakhlakim: Women immolated in a repository and hence become supernatural.
anakhlil': Rainbow-coloured rose-ring worn by Death.
Anakpakmis: Supernatural name of Hawk.
anakiut': Sheet used by which the tongue is held during the kusiut dance.
Anakhimun: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anakhmuis, "The One that Fills the Rivers": Supernatural name of hump-back salmon.
anakhnut: Nose-ring.
anakhnut: Mourning song composed for a chief and, apparently, the singing of one.
Anakmun: Place on the north-west side of Dean Channel, about nine miles from its head, where curative power is petrified.
Anamatkum: Supernatural beings who remind the supreme god of his kusiut duties.
Anamkukmun: Supernatural being who restores those killed by the receipt of too much power from Tlenxpilitsa.
anamqum: Meeting of chiefs, anhum.
anamui: Person who catches early eulachon in a hand-net.
anapelkum: Buoyant stones such as are found in a lake near the headwaters of the Bella Coola.
Anapamkilt: Supernatural being who regulates the height of tides in rivers.
anapatmun: To await, especially a supernatural being.
Anapmalsis: Son of the first settlers at Satlis.
Anapkinis, "What Fills People": Name created by Smanu in the beginning of time with reference to his stores of salmon.
anapnunum: Silent waiting in darkness before a kusiutum dance.
Anapuntilkum: Supernatural being who gives inspiration.
Anaselsielsielsis: 1—Supernatural name of nulaut.
2—Method of killing practised by nulaut.
Anaselsielsielsis: Name of a Bella Coola shaman.
Ana-shaxtlum: Name of a Kimsquit woman.
anaula'alsiatmu: The rare prerogative of changing from kusiut to nuaut rites on alternate nights.
Anaskiatum, "The Saviour": One of Tlenxpilitsa's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anaskmatlum: One of the first men to settle at Tal is in the beginning of time.
anaskamnay: Peculiar cry uttered by a kusiut scratcher.
Anaspanu-sis: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Anasq: Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.
anaspelsiatsis, "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts: Identical with selsenat, q.v.
Anaxyalsis: One of the first women to settle at Slskiut in the beginning of time.
Anatsklmulmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
anatsu: 1—Excavated house furnished with stepped platforms for guests.
2—Village at Kwatna.

[825]
[301]
[593]
[778]
[226]
[523]
[424]
[198]
[342]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Anuhlo: Village near mouth of the Dean River.
Anulaktem: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anutqmo-ent, "Lobrotted": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Anuwulaic: Name obtained by an Alpalind man in the beginning of time.
Anuqulumut, "Quivering To and Fro": One of Thinqhlaw-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anuximlic: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.
Anuximu-a: 1—Kwiat name of a Bella Coola woman.
2—"Left Hand": Stuac repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
[431] [426] anuqqp': Term applied to the giving of a copper, indicating that 100 per cent interest is expected in return.
Anuslumukmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[463] anuwinhlw-aic: Kwiat prologium, at Kimsquit only, of throwing masks on the fire.
Anuwulaktmah, "The Moving House": One of the names of the supreme god's dwelling.
anuyus: 1—Owner of a puppet-person.
2—Synonym for alqwdmmimum, q.v.
Anuyukhulaic: Supernatural being who rules Ankaciut of their thoughts at the Mystery dance.
Ao-ai: 1—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alpalind in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Bella chief.
aju: Excreta.
Ajuul-a, "The Privy One": Name taken by a chief for himself in virtue of the remarks made about his habits.
[825] Ajulaic: Kwak name of a Kimsquit man.
[824] ajum: Herring eggs.
ajumuqly: Cormorant.
ajus: Type of sea-going canoe.
[825] ajus: Harlequin duck.
Ajulaiyatmamum, "The Constant Eater": Term used by hunters to Eagle.
Ajus-ai, "Canoe Town": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
ajusuuqly: Canoes lashed together.
Ajus: Locality on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head, including the area beneath the surface of the water.
[601] ajusiut: 1—Second oldest sibling.
2—Second part of song.
[775] ajustmum: 1—"They Who Have Become Supernatural": Title preferred by ghosts.
2—Women living in the moon.
Ajusumuqy: Inhabitants of the village of Ajus.
[424] ajusumulus: Person with good memory commissioned to remember family prerogatives.
Ajus, "At the Head": Village southwest of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
akaiaiu: Totem-pole, literally, "Outside Post." [752] akaulum: Shaman with power derived from ghosts.
akhalum: Ceremonial bathing at dawn.
[519] Akhalulaic: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola woman.
Akhulik: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX D

192*

Ayhhu: Village at Salmon House, on the upper Dean River.
ayhma: Position between two fires.
ayiut: 1—Raised bed behind the fire used by a person seeking power, or by one who has been in contact with the supernatural.
2—Waterfall.[1] [829]
ayumiss: To teach.
ayumiustut: Hereditary has handed down secretly in a family. [424] Ayumuks: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
ayumu: Sacred song in show time. [588] ayukha: 1—Box, archaic; house, seat.
2—One of the nights of a potlatch, probably that on which a representation of the deceased appears.
ayus: Rocky Mountain jay. [825]
ayuwat: Carved house post.
Ababwist: Wife of Sandy; both were changed to stone in the beginning of time.
acatcoat: That part of a house between fire and doorway.
Acatcinaiuts: Expedition of the supernatural being Wawiwa against herons and fish.
Ac gamas: Sumaat's fish-dam in the beginning of time; the name has since been used by his descendants.
acquatsis: Only sister in a family of several brothers. [601] acq": Seals.
acumalum: Steaming in medicinal smoke as a curative measure. [825]
adaqwis: Fir. [755] Ahatsistak: Evil male supernatural being.
a-kma: 1—Death, not anthropomorphized. [824]
2—Dead.
akwat": Kingfisher. [825]
ala: Fish-hook. [227]
Alakam, "They of the Huge Jaws": Supernatural beings resident in the land shown.
alchmas: Kaetsa spy.
analqal: plural, analqalal, neutro plural, analqaual:
1—Person who has not given a potlatch, a commoner.
2—Ancestral name of a Kitsaquit woman.
Ahlak: canoe village.
Apa: Sisaa man mentioned in an ancient story.
apa-hanqlat, "He Urinates Over Himself." The implication is that this is an indication of misfortune, hence the word really means snow. It is the Kitsaquit variant of a-ssaqlat. [787] a-ssaqlat: Omen of death.
Apa'i, "Occupied Mound": 1—Village at Kwatsa.
2—Artificial mound at Falls.
3—Village on the Kitsaquit River.
4—Island near Ocean Falls.
Apa'i-ma Wamalaxis, "Place of Dogs": Locality near Ocean Falls where the dogs came to earth in the beginning of time.
apaum-i: Varied thrush. [825]

---

[1] The latter is a favourite place for obtaining power, the probable reason for the identity of the two terms.

Ayaat: Locality near Staas where berries are plentiful.
A'yaaq: Chief living at Tal'o in the beginning of time.

A

ax'ki'a: One of the a'ki'i dances.
axu: I, first person singular.
[262] 'ax: Herring eggs when brought into house ready for preparation as food.

B

Ankaal': Supernatural animal.
*Ankit: One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
ba'pka: To guess, as done by the uninitiated at a Mystery dance.
Baskuqwaxna or Baskuqwanlaxna: Kwakiutl supernatural being.
[225] bilil': Lamprey.
Bilbaa: Kwiat name of a Salia man.
bilxwa'i: Abalone shell.
Bilxwakla: Influential Kwatna woman who died about 1870.
[282] bilpal: Ball-capped hat worn by chiefs.
[622] Bis'gaaa: A Kimsquit component.
Bis'xatem: Staas man mentioned in an ancient story.
bujo: Supernatural, man-like creature.

D

[821] [772] *da xaay/*da xa xaay: The sky, regarded as the lower side of a land inhabited by supernatural beings.
Dakdak alaxs: 1—"The Comet," synonym for Nankynem.
2—The kwiat prerogative of seeing Nankynem.
Dakdakxa, "The Eyes-Comet": Synonym for Nankynem.
Dakdakxwaxna: Supernatural being who owns Nankynem.
Dakdakxwaxs: Supernatural dog salmon resident in the land above.
[601] di kaamaxs di xwaxs: Nuxa's husband.
di kaamaxs tsi aakxem: Aunt's husband.
Dapem'xaal: One of the first men to settle at Alpaklaal in the beginning of time.
daxsa: Archaic term for kwiat Breaker?
[824] daxlil: Frayed cedar-wood, as used for tinder.
[372] djaxlaki, plural, djaljaklaxw: Son; term used in direct address for an adult.
[601] Djaxka: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Dji kwaxsil, "The Slave Owner": Designation of the supernatural woman Kwaxsis.
[101] Djuklaxw: Collective term applied to the Kwakiutl-speaking peoples of the mainland.
Djuqlja xa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
*Dukwaq: Chief of abalone shell people on the lower Fraser in the beginning of time.
*Dukwaq: One of the first men to settle at Staas in the beginning of time.
Dukwpaa: One of the first women to settle at Tal'o in the beginning of time.

*This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.
*This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

E

mayu or mayuli: Medicine; generic term for all remedies of a magical or medicinal nature. [278] e'ne: Cotton, term in common usage.
emis: Nephew or niece. [601]

A

ellemlis: Ancestral name of a Snulli'ed man.
'ealalaw'a: Daughter of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
ealalatelsis: Moon, semi-anthropomorphized.

M

Ani ehkiile: 1—Bella Bella term, commonly used in Bella Coola, for ecsmk official 2—Kacisi name of a Bella Coola man.
Anisisi: Type of sea-going canoe used by the Haida; the word may be a corruption from English.
Ani k-hale: Man who descended to the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
Ana'a: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Anokas: Mythical, supernatural bird. [825]
Ahamsa: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nacmsis in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
Ash: Pitch.
Ach: Call used by members of the Acisi society to strengthen their fellow-members.

I

Ibe': Pounded cedar-bark, soaked. [824]
Ibiis: Zigzag course up or down a mountain slope.
Ikiyai: Twalshi's dog.
Ilhwai'a: One of the first women land down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
Ikhetsi the cots: Bandage of soaked cedar-bark placed around an infant's head to produce cranial deformation. [856]
Ikhcsis, Bandage: Term applied to preserve distributed as 'ridicule' for the bringing of a will-Cancihal. [451] Ik: One of the Ivielleria.
Imahmalkyaskas: Abbreviated rite of Nankyaw dance.
Imsim: Nun.
I'mistikis: Acmsk name of a Kwagulit man.
Imimkhaiis, "The Mouse": Male supernatural child who famous Nankyaw's uncle.
Ipsmq, "Hold Him Down": Cry used in Cancihal dances.
Ipsmlkel, "Assign": Bird to spring salmon during the ritual connected with the first taking of these fish. [226]
Ikhsmisem: Alleged singing of a sound initiate's song by the supernatural being, Mokkilis.
Ik'ik'yem: Reduction of the value of an inconsequent present by immediate return of part of it. [426]
i-ple: Man. [824]
imahsmmkhlin: Polyandry.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192 istutmap, "Come and eat": Invitation to the kukusiut to assemble in a performer's house.
iutia: House beams.
iut·sta: Messenger bearing invitation to a potlatch.
[152] iuliktas: Massage.
[585] iskhlemsk: 1—Presents, regarded as clothing, etc., given by the groom's relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter visit his house on the wedding day.
[431] 2—Other presents given by the husband's relatives to the wife's kinsmen prior to her repurchase.
[583] iswandjut, "The Throwing Off of a Heavy Burden from the Shoulders": Said of the repayment by a wife's relatives of presents received from her husband's kinsmen.
itswalsta: 1—Battering-ram.
2—The destruction of the house of a chief who is about to give a potlatch.
Iximlatam: One of the names of the supreme god.
[201] iyahmastam: Notification, by pressure on the foot, to a chief to go to the meeting-place.
[533] iuleanm: The employment of frenzied stick-beating.
Iuje-mam: Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm.
iuxtéxpémus, "The Hearing": Synonym for nlatmam, q.v.; this is a Kimsquit term only.
i-ytimut: Kusiutem rite in which the performer appears to be burnt to death.
i-yualmam: The casting of kusiut masks on the fire.
Iyumk, "Far from the River": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
[547] iswail: Abortion.
i-swsila, "Disappointed": said of the supernatural beings called by a wi·á dancer who arrive too late for the potlatch.

ilhas: Slave from the lower Fraser owned in Kimsquit during the last century.
[101] ilpulanmp: Bella Coola term for the Bella Bella.
[601] ilpulatulatamas: Half-brother or half-sister.
imilt: 1—Man.
2—Son; term used by old person in direct address to adult.
3—Husband.
[614] imilhasta: Male relative of same ancestral family.
imilhiwa: Woman who performs man's work.
[601] imiltpasta: Single brother in a family with several sisters.
[431] imimlhi, plural, imimlhaksi: Small boy, especially son; term used in indirect address.
[584] iplatit, "Working Clothes": Presents given by the relatives of the future bride to the kinsmen of the future bridegroom at the first announcement of the engagement. The implication is that they will have to labour industriously to obtain the wealth necessary for the marriage.
[821] iniinawul: Cold wind of the mornings, semi-anthropomorphized.
iniaiy: Bella Bella term for the iniamp.
[563] iniamp: Bella Coola term for the people of mixed Bella Bella-Kimsquit stock who inhabited the shores of Dean Channel.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

xxxiał, "The Time for Kusiut Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] xyyyxyut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Alpałtał in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Suaał name of a Kimsquit man.
xłałałk: One of the supernatural carpenters.
xłstmmmmm: The repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] xnsiek': Synonym for xpundjut, a present for which a return is not expected. [431] xnzmadjut: Hereditary tendency.
xpm: Kusiut name of a Stuax man. [827] xrłay: Red rock cod. The difference between this and łłałwił is problematical. [825] xnłpłam: One of the first men to settle at Xomp-ts in the beginning of time.
xpałłmstrm'xismut-al-ał: The entrusting of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to rebuy her as expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations entered into at marriage. [583] xpw-ałałmadjałłaix: Sterile supernatural visitation.
xrłałaix: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up. [787]
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position. [556] xsłałmłq, "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
xskwaw-i: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
xsłłwnladjut: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
xsłpstlamsymandjinas: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tał-ia in the beginning of time.
xrwłwnłaix, "The Track of the Sun": A'all name obtained in the beginning of time.
xrwnłłxmłaix: Supernatural name of xsiuł.
xspustm, "Commander": 1—Said to be the word from which Alpustm is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
xsłłłmosaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smoaax in the beginning of time.
xrwapłłstadjut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
xrwał-a: Kusiut name of a Stuax man.
xrwimstała: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
xr-wnnaias: 1—One of the first men to settle at Xomp-ts in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
xrpłpstaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smoaax in the beginning of time.
xspełam, "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Snałł and Tał-ia.

K

kai: 1—Snow. [821]
2—Unidentified berry. [824]
Kaiaałłix: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Kakwnił: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
łakix: Crow. [825]
Kakałka: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

*192

[824] kā'nēk: Tree, probably birch.
Kaiszkā': One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
Kalāka: One of the first men to settle at Snaiali in the beginning of time.
Kalkum: Bella Bella woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Kalul: Kimsquit man.
[222] Kālpum: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[262] kalpum: The gathering of fern root for food.
Kalymōlmm: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Snuz in the beginning of time.
Ka'lsn-a: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
[585] kalmālāmsis: Public oration, previous to marriage, of the bride's ancestral myths in order to cause children to be born.
[842] kālpum: Ritual on the day before a marriage, including the oration of myths by the bride's relatives, the choosing of assistants, and the singing of songs of all kinds.
[576] Kāmai-ōs: 1—Mysterious supernatural woman.
2—"Please," or "Thank You," a word implying benison.
Kāmalsmy':* 1—One of the first men to settle at Nulmas in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxalst in the beginning of time.
3—Name of the first sky that fell in the beginning of time.
Kāmalsīlt: Lazy supernatural beings who accompanied Nuxlymm.
Kāmalymm: Man mentioned in an origin myth of Alpalind.
Kāmatsluks: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Kāmatsmy':* House brought to earth by first settlers at Nuxalst in the beginning of time.
[824] kamā': Kelp.
[227] kāmala: Cod hook.
kāmat: Termination.
[824] kāmā-i: 1—Shelf fungus.
2—Kusiut dance in which a shelf fungus is used.
Kāmilka: One of the first women to settle at Snuz in the beginning of time.
kāmimat: Ceremonial error.
Kāmsis: Herald of a Tāl'is chief in the beginning of time.
kānka: Trap.
Kāmslalkim: 1—Daughter of the first settlers at Sāilis in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of Qāymai, one of the first settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[264] kanlikts: Assemblage of the people for a meal of any kind.
Kāsnpāklmm: One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
Kāswīkdjīn-a: Supernatural berry-picker resident in the land of ghosts.
[825] kāpai: 1—Hump-back salmon.
2—Convex transverse beam near front and rear of house.
3—Mountain on the Dean River.
Kapsis: Sisaak name of a Kimsquit man.
Kāsīna: Man mentioned in an ancient story of Raven.
[756] kāsiut: The seeking for shaman's power by a lad.
[825] kāsmis: Golden eagle.
kātkm: Top, toy.
[524]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

hatsen: Tail.
hatskit: Ants.
hte: Black hawthorn.
Kalsw-i: Kuxiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Kamilkm: Ancestral name of the wife of Tsuky who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
hauli: Region.
Kapuskjut: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
hauly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day.
Kawdsw-i: Kuxiut name of a Kimsquit woman.[1]
hdai: Bark bucket for holding liquids.
hdamskjut: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
hdamskuxum: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
hdaste: Back-room in which xusut initiates and others are concealed.
hdzu: Woman during catamenia.
hdzlu, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
hemapste: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones.
hdzlmkjut ale hemstpste: Kuxiuxw rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
hel aie or hel aig, "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the hxuiut society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a hxuiuxw or a Mystery dance.
hdulu, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Kaldzap: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
hastuxw: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
hipa, mentw, hipase: Grandmother.
hlkstumsw-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'inistat: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Stase in the beginning of time.
Kiladzumsuxs, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Kimilkm: One of the first women to settle at Alpistat in the beginning of time.
Kim'o-i: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kimsuxw: 1—Crab.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Kipulu: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
kipl: Red elderberry.
kiple: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark.
kis: Unidentified plant.
kistm: To toast dried salmon.
kistsumsulu: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kistpuat: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Tsawalk.
Kitsu: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[1] This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalsw-i.

#192 Kulmuxmow: The chasm that keeps a foolish man from success as a chief; the concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
kúnte: First ceremonial discharge.
Kulóc: enemy village.
kulsta: Supernatural creature dwelling in the ocean.
[956] Kulyokkmat: Shaman who received power from ghosts.
Kumlemalcoxtin: Bella Coola hunter.
[108] Kumpéut, "Canyon": Bella Bella designation for the Dean River, whence the anglicized Kimsquit has been derived.
Kundcat: Nass River.
Kunlhcal: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
[825] kutc: 1—Whale.
2—Ancestral name of a Tal'ée woman; this is said to be an exclusively feminine designation.
Kúl'cmat: 1—Name acquired by a Bella Bella man in the beginning of time.
2—Influential Kemgaio chief, who died about 1910.
[825] l'lac': Muskrat.
[824] lá: White fir (?).
lmaw-c: Herring.
lmmdjat: Prerogative of biting oneself.
lmum: Dried salmon.
lmumdjat: Synonym for ánalla: one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of masked representations of the deceased. The word is derived from lmum.
[825] lnhalkhm: Porpoise.
Lnhcolcum: Supernatural being who behaves in an erotic manner.
[845] ln'la: Twin whose birth is attributed to salmon.
[824] Ln'lainate: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
lnlahcc: Unidentified berry (strawberry?).
Lulcta: Supernatural female shaman who guided Wawina.
Lul'ucyulmp: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola Cannibal. lulw'kmp, "Earthy Ones": Ghosts.
[533] lulukmp: Land, region, earth.
lulule: First part of song.
Lutcl': Treeless mountain about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.
[825] Lpuyutcucailain, "The One Who Makes Us Fat": Supernatural name of coho salmon.
[765] lpuxtum: Goods distributed to validate songs used at a mourning ceremony when no representation of the deceased has been employed.
[578] lpuxtm: Insult offered to foreigners at potlatches concerning their manners or food.
[609] lrumbaxain or lrúmbaxnám: Synonym for lnlumbaxnám, investment present.[1]
[426] Lumaxmulmat: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] lulpi, mentlu, lulpai: Grandfather.
lulsaimt: Kwiat ceremonial at which foreigners are present.
luln: The construction of salmon-weirs.

---

[1] This was the pronunciation of the word by the individual with an idiosyncratic r sound.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

halkwaut: Generic term for presents given to a future bridegroom by the father of the future bride. [431]

Kakhkhwaijut: Supernatural being whose stomach is cut in the land above. [584]

hamai: Good-bye. [576]

Kanhanilkuts, "What Brings Our Food": Synonym for the supernatural being Winwin.

hasiam: Designation for a series of difficult and spectacular kusiut dances.

hasiu-nas: Said to be identical with sulubwaits, the visible object obtained by a shaman from his supernatural benefactor. [756] hasiut: plural, hakasiut; meaning, hasiut; meaning plural, kukusiaot:

1—Society comprising those entitled to perform dramatic dances during the winter ceremonial season. [575]

2—Member of the society.

3—"The Learned One": Designation occasionally applied to a supernatural being, especially a petrified one, or to a person having power to cure the sick. [756]

Kasiut: Kitamaat female shaman living in the last century.

hasiu: Beloved one, especially a child; this is the vocative form of the word.

hasiyum: Orphan.

Kaus'kila'yakas: Woman dwelling at Port Rupert in the beginning of time.

Kawayla: Smith Inlet.

Kaukaut'la: Supernatural name of Cormorant.

kas-kasa: Mosquito. [825]

Kastamaldi: Mosquito name acquired by the first settlers at Stuxx.

kaskas: Unidentified bird of which the note is an omen of death. [763]

Kaslain: Kasiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Kaslilmas: Kasiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Kaslo-ximut: Kasiut name of a male Green Bay Cannibal.

kasl-ta-i: Smooth greenstones, "jadeite," such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands. [823]

kaslil: Evergreen bough. [824]

Kaslilmi: Famous Bella Coola warrior.

kasyuai: One of the sculpins.

Kasaiu: Kasiut name of a Kitamaat man.

Kast-ma'a, "The Big One": Lustful male supernatural being.

Kastwalin: Man who came to earth near Ilaco in the beginning of time.

Kas-tsas: Kitamaat woman.

Kasiuis: Kitamaat man mentioned in an ancient story.

Kasiuas: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.

Kasiuas: Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Kasiuskain, "One Who Sins without Right": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Kapala: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nuxalk chief; the word is a synonym for Wiwas-ala.

Kaldlas Nuxkempa: One of the nine supernatural siblings. [533] kakwakilas-ais: Lullaby.

kasi yais: Archaic expression used in a string figure.

kalis: 1—Pen or trap in the creek for salmon. [226]

2—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its head.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

L

[825] Lāklakla: Kimsquit man mentioned in ancient story.
lā·kts: Squirrel.
Laqwomais: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ḳemqo·ts in the beginning of time.
2—Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
[463] Laxaiyao·k': Name of a professional warrior; the word is said to have originated in Kitkatla but has remained for many generations in Kimsquit.
La'qlx: Atnarko River, northern fork of the Bella Coola.
Lalāmik: Susook name of a Kimsquit man.
Lalaimkila, "The Brusher Off [of Goats]": Professional name of one of the first settlers at Snuloli in the beginning of time. This may be the same word as Lalemkila.
Lalemkila: Another name for Twalaiłit, the supernatural hunter. This may be the same word as Lalaimkila.
[825] Lilirwumlaix: 1—"The Beautifier": Supernatural name of Otter.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
[886] lipdjuditls: Return in old age to the thoughts and actions of infancy, senile decay.
[426] lisdjut: To repay indebtedness of any kind, especially presents received at potlatches.
[583] lisliwadjut, "A Paying": An arrangement by which a man's sons-in-law give him as "wife" an infant female relative by way of repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters.
listmax: Wrestling or shoving.
lilstem: Abbreviated Cannibal rite.
Le·qwe·t: 1—Famous Bella Bella chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
lulusta: Mask.
lute: Tool for making vertical incisions in the bark of cedar trees.

Ł

Łakwakila: Tsawat man living in the beginning of time.
Łalaiuks: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[823] łalia: 1—Copper.
2—Unidentified town on the outer coast, mentioned in a story of the beginning of time.
3—Chief of this town.
łaliaaiuts: Daughter of chief of the town of Copper.
łaliaalail: Copper canoe acquired by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
łaliaks: Man's name, created by the first settlers at Sātlia, in the beginning of time.
łaliakdja: Name taken for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
łaliaks: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
łaliamg: Susook name assumed by one of the first settlers at Ālqałaxl in the beginning of time.
łaliāxas, "The Copper One": One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

ɬáhaxsa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
ɬahamł: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Staus story of the beginning of time.
ɬáłłáliamdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Snaidi in the beginning of time.
ɬáłxmán·a: Smaaxa's son in the beginning of time.
łáłx·i: Small portable canoe.
łáłtam: Desertion of a spouse. [586] ɬáxsmai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.
łahmomakywas: Imitation potlatch carried out by nusaxkamy.
łaknus: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.
łiliwunimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Smaaxa for his son in the beginning of time.
łima: To loot.
łistłakikka: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.
łixwnimut: Person of placid disposition.
łółła: Bull-roarer.
łót: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, łm, is supposedly derived from this. [556] łm: Potlatch.
łmkmitł: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.
łmolim: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821] łmolit di Nusaxkamy, "The Potlatch of the nusaxkamy": Second moon after winter solstice. [805] łkamkila, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nuxłit in the beginning of time.
łółwadjut: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756] łkumkksta: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.
łmanłmm: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556] łmanzimtim: The turning over of a mountain.
łu'ya: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
łqomkksta: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Quiyai in the beginning of time. [765] łqia: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [302]
'łxmdimut: Cannibal kusiut name used by the first settlers at Satlia in the beginning of time.
łziqłam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola male Scratcher. łuklai: Aversion. łuxwala: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsimatł man.
2—Shamanistic power.
łulłulmut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787] łulqwa·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.
łulukwalnmm, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Tłitsaplilaxa, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Łułłmut: Kuziut name of a Nuxalk man.
Łułł'nmut: Kuziut name of a Bella Coola man.
[824] łuqul: Inner bark of cedar.
łuzałmsk, "A Stripping Off": The giving, on demand, by a marriage dancer of his clothing to a herald.
'Łuxwaqałeis: Supernatural name of Raven.
[828] łwusis, "Frenzied": Term applied to Cannibals and other destructive łukuziut when in a state of madness.
łqwam: Occasional exclusion of all but the singers from a house where a shaman is performing.
Łxwuxwuxłais: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
Łxwuxtuam: Kuziut name, probably of Kwakiutl origin.

M

Ma'cilsa: Female dancer mentioned in a Raven story.
Małziut: Kuziut name of a Xumpo'is man.
[601] mama, mamie, mamqa: Mother, term used by children.
Mamaiya: Celebrated Xuais hunter.
[825] mam-aiya: Butterfly.
mam-ałka: Measuring worm.
[824] mam-u: Fly, insect.
ma'mnxa: Swamp gooseberry.
[601] mau: 1—Father, common term in indirect address.
2—Occasional designation for the supreme deity.
[614] maudimut: Stepfather.
maumauuk: Elderly male relatives of same ancestral family.
Mazuy'': 1—One of the first men to settle at Nułłmx in the beginning of time.
2—Form of the name Dudzuy'' when used by a male child.
Mazuy''an-a: Form of the name Dudzuy'' when used by a female child.
Małłsłłiuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[804] Małłsperuuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[825] ma-łqi: Measure of distance equal to the breadth of one thumb plus one finger.
ma-tsq': Toad.
małqus: Supernatural giant toad.
malsa: Salmon eggs.
ma-uqa: Old male sea-lion.
[825] ma-uułkła: Water ouzel.
Maqauuts: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] Mazaxilian, "Long Neck": One of the supernatural names of Great Blue Heron.
mazai'i: Co-husband in a polyandrous household.
[824] ma'zual-i: One of the paralays.
mełul: Berry, black in colour.
Mazmałłsma: Generic term for the four supernatural Carpenters.
mazmułqa: Spruce.
Miał'sila: One of the first men to settle at Sałła in the beginning of time.
Miłhama: Land of salmon.
[224] Mi'ula: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mił-a: Stick carried by hunters when penetrating into the mountains.
[824] miłła'': Red bearberry.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

mimisqulp: Leaf of salalberry.
mis-mulyat: 1—Omen of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence, [824]
2—Smallpox. [787]
mika: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mna, mentin, mnan: Child. [601]
Mnaklai: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mnl': Excreta.
mnmnts, mentin, mnmnsin-i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to ahidow when used by an old person. [614]
mnshtmnsts: The commemoration of a chief's potlatches and other major ceremonies by means of plain posts erected near his grave. [211] Mnslats-mum, Tide-Measurer: A supernatural being.
Mnsdu: Man mentioned in a song. [764] Mslkhila: Supernatural being who gives potency to nsaat rites.
mshtsts: Grandiloquent expression used by the kukuxtat with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives. [776]* mshkhum: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living. [775] 2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
mul': Pounded, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
mulwuk: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by kuxtat initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mqslu: Lice.
mqsnila: Adolescent youth. [825]
mqsmsk': Blue grouse.
mqsmsnlkhlnda: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion. [301] mu: Hand net for catching eulachon. [227] mulcmkhsts: Yellow cedar staves decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
mustmus: Wrestling.
Mstsw-a: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nais'ahwa: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Ni'mu: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Namu.
nsw: Grizzly bear.
Nsnsstis: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time. [825] Nsnsit: Kuxlat name of a Nuxalkt man.
Nsnskhui: One of the first men to settle at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
Nsnskhuit: One of the names of Mount Nuxalkt as chief.
nsw-lmut: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling. [827]
Nsss: Indeterminate locality in the distant east. [152]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[192] ne'ple: Miniature copper ornament worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
[301] Ne ne: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
neem: To dance.
[825] nemenda: Those who dance at marriages.
nemes: Mallard duck.
[824] nemenemem: Night of potlatch on which masked imitators appear for a short dance.
nemh: Berries of Canadian buffalo berry.
[415] nehcatn: Thimble-like wooden dish.
'nemlcohain: Ceremonial seating of chiefs according to their validated places in a house.
Nemutim: Name acquired by a Rivers Inlet man from sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Nemulim: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
'Nee-nee-e: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Scratcher; the designation was derived from Rivers Inlet.
Ne-ule-e: Celebrated Kitkatla chief.
Ne-ewnkie: Influential Bella Coola chief.
[776] [784] Nehudikaio, "The Resident": Supernatural being dwelling under rivers who punishes infractions of taboos concerning them.
nehemem: 1—Fourth day of a kusiut dance, on the evening of which masked figures appear.
2—Something exposed to view.
Nepepe: Old woman resident in Sea-lion's house in the beginning of time.
nenel, "Little Dance": Term of grandiose humility.
nenenem: Gathering of the people for a non-sacred dance after the kusiut season.
Nenee-mehcatn: 1—"The Dancer Near the Fire": One of Thtcaplilan-a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nenenelmelem: Kusiut name of a Nuxalk man.
nienlemem: One who has preserved a marriage song.
nienmelmel: The intangible strengthening that comes to a bridegroom as a result of the owning of his ancestral myths and the giving of presents to the bride's relatives when they first come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] [431] Nindhelm: Daughter of the first people who came down to Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.
[524] nisly'cutl: Wooden ring used in a game.
Nikeeh: Place on Dean Channel, about three miles from the head, where the deer formed a colony soon after the beginning of time.
[825] nikpaps: Otter.
Nimlkeh: Name of a certain spot where mountain goats are wont to congregate for mating.
Nimtumlem: 1—"The Restorer": One of Thtcaplilan-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[552] nimun, "Brought to Life": Term applied to a copper brought back from a cemetery and renamed.
Nimmelmel: Shaman's name derived from Thtcaplilan-a. nintemlem: "I have saved you."

192*

nixobàxta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract. [424]

Nixpi: Expert supernatural dancer; to his associates he is a yearling mountain goat.

nmlq or nmlpàmut: First complete dance given by a kusiut initiate. [825] mmmk: Mammal, any kind.

Nnixwanaix: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

Noàkila: 1—One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuisli in the beginning of time.

Noàkynm: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Noamtaxeik: Name given to his grandson by one of the first settlers at Siskiut in the beginning of time.

nolcista: Kusiut prerogative as a Breaker; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.

nolpàkta: Sloping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kimsquit, kusiut masks are hung.

nomnuk: The making and use of hand nets for olachen.

Nonodjanostem: 1—"The Adviser": One of the names of the supreme god. [622]
2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; virtually, "The Sages."

no'enàtlm: 1—Ceremony at which sisook names are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers. [553]
2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed. [796] no'endjut: Assemblage of the kukusiut to practise difficult rites.

No-fuma, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Tlaiyàkam name given to a deserting wife.

Nowàkila: One of the names of Raven as chief.

nowlxibàtum: Sentence of death passed by the kukusiut on one of their fellows as punishment for an error. [688]

nuaiyoo: A loan, especially of an ancestral right. [426]

Nuàhulmm: Synonym for Noàkynm, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Nu'eas, "Inhospitable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nuàpsulta: Toilet-hole.

nuasko: Birth. [821]

Nuàkàqas: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind. [769] nudak-an: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead.

nudak-an du lhmsta: 1—High tide. [823]
2—Long life.

nudjiqasta: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold olachen-net post steady while being driven.

Nu'gmàj, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Nuk^w: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.
2—River flowing into head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.

Nuakmàtsaix: Synonym for Sximsximuk, an immoral supernatural woman.

nukàl: The achievement of success against supernatural odds; the term is used with reference to the solutions of the riddles of the Mystery dance.

nukàmlmàxum: Any non-sacred dance held at the conclusion of the kusiut season. [535]

Nukaw-aa: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nuáqnáam: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

Nuásta: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.

nujaxem: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a kasiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.

nukómsk': Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.

[825] Nukiadji: Ancestral name of a Stax chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.

[778] nukila sta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where cures are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.

Nukis, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nukokwisodjas, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[552] Nulíqumutl di mak', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.

Nulalumuth: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Nuskymm's departure to warn kukasiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.

[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.

Nulalulaks, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[431] nulaym: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.

Nulilqalank, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.

Nulisyumanka: One of the first women to settle at Tál-is in the beginning of time.

nulmómankás: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.

Nulkitl: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.

nulmatkás: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nulmómankás.

[428] nulmastmas: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.

nulostmit-sta, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a nusak head-drum.

nulj: Landslide, such as is caused by Tsulálit or sciut.

Nulqanlais: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nuqwalt in the beginning of time.

nulqnis, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.

nulqstas: House-posts nearest to front door.

nulnikts: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[426] [556] nulsmómmum, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a dancer who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fasten up his clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.

nulsudjim: Cry uttered by a nusak official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of nusak novices.

[342] nulsinqailais: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a nusak novice.

nulsmálkals: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.

numálkals: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.

Numómus, "Place of Flag": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nxmas, nxcatix, nxmastas: Member of same sex and same ancestral family as speaker. [601]

Nxmáslam: Supernatural being who comes with Nxáxymm to bring a call to the latter's protégé. [614]

Nxmlskmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

nxmil: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract. [826]
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.

nxmnxnxlts: Toilet-hole.

nxmlstxm: Recompense, virtually pay, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a mourning ceremony. [465] nxmslomxmas: Exchange marriage. [583] nxmpáltlxm: Passenger.

Nx'mts: Place near Nuliax.

Nxmxmlaix: Kwiat name created by uyuyuyut at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

nxmxsi di mának: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker. [601] nxmxsi ti stánas: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.

Nxnxsa'ts, "The Inhospitable One": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Nxnxtmunk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nxnxdjipxm: Supernatural being who created repositories in the beginning of time.

Nxnxlxunk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nxnxlpxnm: House occupied by the first settlers at Nuitpmult in the beginning of time.

nxnx'l'xtimut: The use of potent medicines after seeing a giant toad.

nxnxlxwxtxtmm or nxnxlxwxtxtimut: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dyed cedar-bark to Thixplitx-a. [782]
2—The making of offerings to ghosts by the casting of food on a fire. [775]

Nxpxmx-ak: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nxpxmxlxhdimut: Male supernatural being who travels with Nxáxymm, takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes dances happily.

Nxnxxha: Mother Nature.

nxnxpp: Fisherman with inherited right to use of a salmon-weir or of a place for catching olachen. [424] nxnxpmxxmdy, "A Calling Back", or "A Seizing": Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural artisans having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation. [226] [761]

Nxnxjxmdi, "Where Water Entered": House of one of the first groups of settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Nxnxpmlxlxts: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

Nxnxpxhlxlxipxx-a: Professional name of a female dancer.

Nxnxpxlxtxmm: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Carpenters.

Nxnxlxmut: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

Nxnxxmunk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nxnxxmxlxk: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Nxnxlkhxntxm, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers": Supernatural name of sockeye salmon. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

Nanatsypmax: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ana'Skwalaix and serving as patron (?) to a hamatsa dancer.

[789] nanalitsi: Omen of death.

Nanatsumalaxm, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tlitsqilitsa's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nanaxwalaix: 1—Man dwelling in Sumaqma's house.
2—Kwakiutl name of a Kimsquit woman.

nanaqim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nanaxwaq: Kwakiutl name assumed by a Dzaxe woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nanayamax: Kwakiutl with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qalaxam is obscure.

Na'aramhamnaix, "The Widower": One of Raven's names as chief.

[535] naqlaxcilal-ax: Synonym for ksnatam: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Naqhanbilan, "Hardfeably Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] naqlaw-ccala: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

naqlalaw-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Naqlymalx, "Place of Much Naymalx": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Naqnqalmix: Nuxalk name of a Kimsquit man.

Naqilaqalaw-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[305] naqlaxcaw-ii-ax xaxy"ala: One year.

[528] naqam: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

naqlaxil, "Empty House": House in which a hamatsa dance is taking place.

naqlalqax: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Naqlaly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] naqalitsa: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

naqwaxaxi: Howl-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for hamatsa and other important hamatsa rites.

[777] naq"xaxcilim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Naqwilhamlaix: Xaxli name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Naqwalax: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Naqwhlaly: The upper heaven.

naqlaxa: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Naqwaxalaqlaw-i: A Dzaxe ceremony.

Naxlqaxamaix, "Where Alqaxaw Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] naxlaqaxa-aqy: Cottonwood bark.

Naxlqaxaxi'ax, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Dzaxe in the beginning of time.

naxlaqay: Canoe-maker.

Naxlaxa: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Naqlalx.

naxlalaqay: Children's dance which serves as training for hamatsa rites and to provide entertainment.

[535]
[869]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nuxla: The visit to every house in the village by a Mystery dancer on receipt of his call.

nuxiwal, plural, nuxuxiwal: Singer.

nuxlwalas: Quiver for carrying arrows. [415]

Nuxmuxu: Mountain near Ałáw-da-i.

nuxtatl or nuxtatlap: Second day of a hamat dance.

Nuxtilaiaiahm: Synonym for Tutmal-ox: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.

nuxhiuxtin: Repository.

nuxhali: Any unusual occurrence, regarded as an omen of death. [763] Nuxlalamuta, "Whence Things Came Down": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

nuxlulutin: Wash-basin, especially the supernatural one that remains in the land above.

Nuxlaqal: 1—Supernatural being presiding over the Land of Ashes.
2—Locality on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, not far from the head.

Nuxlamin: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tunisi in the beginning of time.

Nuxlmidjuxin: Axe carried in the beginning of time by the man who was later turned to stone as Mount Nuxlalit.

Nuxlmuxal: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tunisi in the beginning of time.

Nuxlulukmap: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

nuxlqin: Wasps' nest. [825]

Nuxlwalukwala: One of the first women to settle at Sqalali in the beginning of time.

nuxlwuxtin: House in which a memorial potlatch is being held.

Nuxlzum: Mountain on south side of lower Bella Coola.

Nuxlzumuxulum, "The Cherished One": Designation applied to one of the sons of Alqunim.

nuxlumin: House in which a potlatch is taking place.

nuxlmp: One who has gone to give potlatches in a new sphere; this rhetorical expression is commonly used when referring to a dead chief. [195]

nuxlhlum: Wash-basin used by a shaman when curing. [756]

Nuxlhlumidjat, "He Whose Wash-Basin Is in His Own Body": One of Tlinqa-lilm-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

nuxlumuxulin: Enclosure behind fire in which hamat dancers are secluded. [764] nuxlpmin: Cleansing rites in connection with death.

Nuxlwalimp: Tlaiyahum name acquired by a Kimsquit man as a result of a supernatural experience.

Nuxmlxmal: 1—Eagle that perched on a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time.
2—Name, derived from that of the eagle, of one of the first men to settle at Ałaxa in the beginning of time.

Nuxmit-a: 1—"Place of Storm": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxlalit in the beginning of time.

Nuxmit-aiw-a, "Woman of Nuxmit-a": Probably wife of Alqunim.

Nuxmilsin: Mountain on north side of lower Bella Coola.

Nuxmilimulu: Subterranean chamber in which rivers were confined in the beginning of time. [772]

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

*197 Nusnánnqk: Area around a spring near Nuliten.
[198] nusmísta: Chamber-vessel in the language of supernatural beings.
Nusnísta: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nusqíkunsta, "Place of Meeting": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nusqusta Smaisíkila, "The Peace-Giving Smaisíkila": Designation of the supreme god with reference to the function of peace.
Nusqápa: Skeena River.
Nusqéqlet, "Place of Many Spring Salmon": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
Nusqalst-a: 1—Chamber-vessel.
2—Nickname of a Kimsquit child.
Nusqalst, "Place of Sqalst": 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Mountain, the loftiest in the Bella Coola valley, near the village.
Nusqatl: ustmy village.
nusqédjot: Kusiutm rite in which the performer pretends to have his stomach cut.
nusqilbutsax: Person fastened to the ground with roots.
[826] nusqo: Person suffering from umbilical hernia.
nusqodjunmsta: Appurtenances for washing given by the dancer of a potlatch to his guests.
[431] Nusqulwaista: House of the supreme god during the winter dances of the supernatural beings.
nusqual: 1—One of the s'alt dances.
[825] 2—Yearling mountain goat.
3—Man dwelling in Qamoqua's house.
nusqualsi: The alleged attraction of the spirit of an uninitiated person to a performer in the house where a kusiut dance is taking place.
Nusqualwaista: Variant of Nusqulwaista.
Nusqualwalmit Nostkymm: Supernatural dancer who comes in Nostkymm's canoe.
[198] Nusqualsis, "Kingfisher," in the language of supernatural beings: Ancestral name of a herald who came down to the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Nusqualnaista, "The Making Place" (with reference to qualnasta): One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nusqualtu-i: 1—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Green Bay.
2—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Stuax.
Nusqu"los: Supernatural merry-maker or clown.
[825] nusquelsit: The annual scattering of birds by the supreme god in the land above.
Nusqut: Locality near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.
[583] nusqutsnmsta, "Washing Appurtenances": Term applied to presents given to a husband by his wife's relatives when rebuying her.
[431] Nusshlsta: Locality near Stuxp.
nushsnshla, "Ground Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate nsaak initiates with regard to the ground over which they will dance, or [556] chiefs to the ground over which they will tread.
[431] nushsmdsta, "Seat Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate the seat of a chief or of a nsaak dancer.
Nusltlup: Herald of Smaaux in the beginning of time.
Nusltmontnmsta, "Place Where People Were Made": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nuslshmgs: Carpenter. nuslqumsta-a: Smear of red paint.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Nuxate ewp, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kitamaat man long ago. [192*] nuxwinum: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [578] Nuxu: 1—Bamon district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nuxpalyip: Tal'ia bird hunter.
Nuxpmda: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tal'ia in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alpalist in the beginning of time.
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun. [772]
Nuxpmxiite-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Alpalist in the beginning of time.
Nuxup: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Borrowers": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nuxt'ghate: Repository, archaic term.
nuxtwa-it nutxum: The assumption of a name upon earth. [431] nuxwalmpsha, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage. [585] nuxwp-ghe: Wooden dish used for washing an infant.
nuxwilomtem: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [415] [785]
nuxlelim: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [756]
Nuxnakaw: Name of a celebrated shaman.
Nulem: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Nuld, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
nulnaqum: Alteration of a dance from nuxnk to hamat. [825] nulbalcite: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck.
nulalalamum, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [516]
nulalalnum: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431] Nulina, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Nulaqhl: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nuqhlit in the beginning of time.
nulhwnk: Parents of twins. [845]
nulnqmu: Wall. [825]
Nulnlimsis: Mythical house in the sky.
Nulnymalt: One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nulnlelem: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Tlenqiliu-a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nulnlem. [756] nulnlqnum: A creation of new hamat names, such as is necessitated by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nulnnalem: Kwakiutl rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
nulnlnum: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person uplooked in Otter dance. [431] 2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
nulqnu, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who points upon the head-ages used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Nulqwalt, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kitamaat village.
Nulsimla: Kwakiutl name of a Tsimsit man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEG Bellacoola NEG

#192 nuhuinuis: Synonym for qumo'o, the large cone-shaped sound whistle.
[534] Nalya-ed: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nalya-ked: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nalqytchwa-c, "Nearest River": River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Nuletscomoy.
[103]
[823] na'nqulnis: Stone supernaturally born from another at sea level.
Nemsist-o: xtimy village.
Nemulnk, "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
Nuyalk: Bella Coola valley.
[101] Nuyalkmy: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
Nuyem: Kwiet name of a Sisaa man.
Nuyem: Name of a female composer.
Nuyumulnis, "The Light Giver": One of the names of the supreme god.
nuyu: Light.
Nuzim: Kwiet name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Nuzimulkis: Ts'ape name of a Kimsquit man.
Nuymulnuzo-a, "Stick-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[825] nuzzuzzed: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
nuzzuzzed, "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of kukwiat after departure of a Cannibal.
[227] nzimnzim: Cross-piece which holds open mouth of stacken net.
Nzumulc: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[585] nzzwulcknum: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for resultant children. This is combined with an oration of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the granting of this is automatic.
[425]
[828] Nzpa: Mountain near Sisaa.
nzpahlkhmut: Person who wanders away from home in desperadoey.
Nzpal-ainis: One of the first women to settle at Tal-is in the beginning of time.
Nu'yuz-tsim: Land of salmon.

O

o'alqum: Kimsquit term for o'kik, orchis.
O-i: Kwatsa lad mentioned in an ancient story.
[824] okal: Grass with edible roots growing on tide-flats.
[262] Olqumuy: Valley pre-emptied by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Olqulmut: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
oly: 1—The kwiet perceptive of scratching.
2—Red, adjective.
Olzw-i: Kwiet name of a Sisaa man.
Omlyaiya, "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[825] Omlukkmut, "The One that Changes Itself": Supernatural name of spring salmon.
[264] 'omtsulil': Assemblage of the people for food of any kind.

Smithsonian E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

[192*]

ownhalaio: Goods obtained by a man's own exertions and forming the nucleus of his wealth for a potlatch. [556] ownhalo, plural, ownhalas: Kwiat patron.
O'mitat: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
O'mitlka: One of the first women to settle at Ztuna in the beginning of time.
O'mitlmai: Son of Raven in the beginning of time.
Omqumkikka: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sisikiut in the beginning of time
3—One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Tsimsit woman who died about 1915.
'Ooilum: enemy village.
Oopt: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola kwiatem dancer.
Ooskut: 1—Ancestral name of a Snaloh man.
2—Celebrated Kimsquit hunter.
'ooitmat: Any non-sacred rite, especially an o'alt dance held subsequent to the kwiat season.
Ooiromhtsa: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit kwiatem dancer.
Oopmuk: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
ooxstlpamm: The taking of food to another tribe for ceremonious bestowal.
Ootsiowa: Supernatural being who sleeps perpetually, literally, "The Sleepy One."
Opwikamp: 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.
o'pal: Skunk cabbage. [824] Opulkin: Supernatural being, herald of Alpuntsw.
ospk: The steeping of nsaad novices in smoke, this being the final rite of initiation.
Ojemai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuxalat in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sisikiut in the beginning of time. [226]
ospa: Temporary fish-dam of interlocked branches.
Ojnaw i: Small mountain on south side of the Bella Coola valley behind Xmqo-ti.
O-pai: Place near Ztuna.
'Opmkkkmat: One of the first men to settle at Xwiyal in the beginning of time.
opmkkmal': The leading screen of a bride to a groom during a wedding. [585] ostkuiem: Hereditary tendency.
ostkkin: One made sick by salmon, especially a woman who suffers from this cause through disregard of adolescence taboos. [827] ostpan: Variety of dog salmon found at Bella Bella. [784]
o xmstlpamain: Conferring of ancestral names at a potlatch. [825] oxstmamain: The performance of a kwiat dance with supernatural dog salmon as patron.
Oxsqkpamy, "Treeless Place": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
oxpkim: Distribution of strips of mountain goat skin at marriage. [585] oxtamuuk: "Where are you going?"
Oxtalkay", "Lake-Swallower": A mythical monster.
ozhmilaio: First night of a potlatch. [601]
ohik: Third oldest brother or sister.
Olkaya: Name of Mink as chief.
O-kwi di Sxkmap: One of the names of the supreme god.
Olowa: Celebrated W'uyal-a warrior.

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

182

stsalu: Promontory on hunting ground extending into ocean.
Ostsow'i: Kimsquit fisherman.
Ostsi: Calvert Island.
Ostsowm: Synonym for Xemsemkstis, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

[415] ptsi'i: Small wooden dish.
Pskuti: Legion messenger of the dead.
Pu'i: Place on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
[585] pstsutsum: Synonym for nuptsxibi'um: Payments made by the wife's relatives to [431] those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day.
They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.
Pstsitsu: Ancestral name of a Nuxalk man.
[412] pstsulu: Bone needle.
psuutlu: Anything powerful and dreaded; the word is frequently applied, rhetorically, to Cannibals.
Pu'sulu: Small stream rising north of the Bella Coola valley and east of the Nuxlestsumay; it flows into the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Nuxlestsumay and the Bella Coola.
Piputlu: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
pulsi: Herring scales.
punsuts: Dance-apron.
Punyhlu: One of the first men to settle at Snulsli in the beginning of time.
[825] pkum: Mosquito.
Pumpulstsdimut: Name assumed by Smasas in the beginning of time.
pu'qmuis: Variety of snung.
Putlu: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
Pu'sulu: Moustche Nose, the point between Labouchere Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[824] putsqi: False hellebore.
[411] pulsnu: Bow, weapon.
Psyuy, "Fallen Heavily with a Crash," as when a dead tree thunders to earth: The term is used rhetorically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[195] Psuisi: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
[372] psluu: Meeting of chiefs.
[825] psi: Halibut.
[825] ps': Crabapple.
[824] psuli: Bunchberry.

Q

Qa'sklis: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
[525] qsi: King stick in a gambling game.
qsisuyumlsi: Women's drooling cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
qsi-nuyi: Uncommon term for the second day of a Snaisi dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
Qsiyu: Name conferred on the grandson of Smasas in the beginning of time.
Qsi'lis: Man mentioned in a story.
Qslmu: 1—One of the first women to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[illegible]: Omen of death, generic term. 192*
[illegible]: One of the berries, probably raspberry. [787]
[illegible], vocative, [illegible]: Mother, term used by child.
[illegible]: Celebrated Carrier chief. [824]
[illegible]: 1—Village on west bank of the Necleetsconnay, about three-quarters of a mile from the sea. [601]
2—Mountain behind the village.
[illegible]: am'lel-a name of a Kimsquit man.
[illegible], vocative, [illegible]: 1—Term used for spring salmon during the ritual following the first taking of the fish. [825]
2—Term used by [illegible] to human beings, who are like salmon to them.
3—Salmon, in the language of supernatural beings. [198]
[illegible], "Rope Fastenings," i.e., something binding: The function of the "Bed Covering" and other presents given with a wife which bind her to her husband. [585]
[illegible]: Unidentified species of duck. [431] [illegible]: Kwakiutl term for "The Weeper," a female supernatural being.
[illegible]: Kusiut name of a Stuix man. [825] [illegible]: [illegible] chief living soon after the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Herald who came with the first settlers to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Carrier pronunciation of Tcafos, one of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Kusiut with ability to produce a puppet-patron, cf. [illegible].
[illegible]: Sweat-bath. [515]
[illegible]: Slave mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Star-fish. [825]
[illegible]: Rabbit.
[illegible]: Salmon-berry. [824]
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Unidentified plant.
[illegible]: Black cod. [825]
[illegible], "A Wiping of the Feet upon the Ground of Chiefs": Term applied to a deadly insult offered to persons of importance. [578] [illegible]: Wooden armour.
[illegible]: 1—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm. [714]
2—Island off Rivers Inlet.
3—Island.
[illegible]: One of the names of Raven as chief.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Siskiutl in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Unidentified migratory bird, black in colour. [825] [illegible]: Scratch River, near Bella Bella.
[illegible]: One of the a'alk dances.
[illegible], "Head": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
[illegible]: A verbal exposure of what should have remained concealed, such as comments upon the slave ancestry of a person whose blot in this respect has been covered over by lavish giving. [578]
[illegible]: Presents distributed by a wife to strengthen her husband's seat, and thus prevent him from "wobbling." [431] [556]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

qmāthwelp: The dancing, by several of his associates, to "help" a kusiut performer.
Qnuml: Undefined locality in the Bella Bella area.
Qo: Mountain above Stuax.
[777] qokān·i: Supernatural bird, bringer of good luck.
[825] Qolbaiul: Locality near the head of Dean Channel.
qolon: 1—Beaver.
2—Nusāxkāmx name of a Kimsquit man.
Qolosti: Man mentioned in a song.
Qolliaokmx: Kusiut name of a Stuax man with prerogative of biting himself.
qoludik: The location in a house taken by a wife when ceremonially seated behind her husband.
Qolxwelioll: Influential Nusḑalst chief who died about 1910.
Qomānakwala: Ancestral name of a Stuax chief; the designation may be of Kwakiutl origin.
Qomcua: 1—One of the nine supernatural beings.
2—White person.
3—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
ḑomniḑxwl: Clean, dry skull.
ḑomoqmai·s: Stump, in the language of Raven.
Qomoqua: 1—Supernatural being, lord of the under-sea world.
2—Ancestral name of a Qomqo·ts man.
Qomo'sala: Man living in Bella Bella in early times.
Qomotla: Ancestral name of a Tsmoil woman.
[534] qomo·ts: Large, cone-shaped whistle used in sisaok rites.
Qomqo·ts, "Salty?": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
ḑopai: To drift over, of smoke.
Qopumpmān·a: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
[252] ḑopsta: Framework of split sticks for toasting salmon.
[534] ḑopta: Drum.
Qoḑmai: One of the first men to settle at Nusḑalst in the beginning of time.
Qoqoyel: Bella Bella village.
qosa: Kwakiutl term for "eagle down" presents.
qothm: Third day of a kusiut dance.
Qotlnālas: Harbour on Labouchere Channel.
Qotlnalas: Settlement in the Carrier country.
[581] qotsekm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud.
[825] qotsik: Wolverine.
[567] qotslilsis dimmes, "A Washing to Free from Taint": Term applied to a ceremony to clear the path of the children when a husband has married a slave wife or vice versa.
Qowi: 1—One of the names of Raven as chief.
2—Tlaiyākam name of a Kimsquit man.
3—Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Qoxlanoa: Supernatural woman from whom the Carpenters are said to have derived their skill in the beginning of time.
Qoxolān·i: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsmoil man.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] qoxox: White swan.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX D

607 192*

qaxta, "Bed Covering": Term applied to the presents given as such to the party of a bridegroom when they enter the bride's house on a wedding day. [585]

ḳhāmdjut, "A Shaking of the Fingers": Rhetorical allusion to presents regarded as "Dust." [431]

ḳpāndiktmm: To revolve sunwise. [195]

Ḳpānpāndiktmmlaix, "The One Who Revolves Sunwise to Give Strength": One of Thiccāphlān·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Ḳhāḳlxs: Place of petrified power near Kwatna.

Ḳixman: Village on the Skeena River. [778] ḳtaiset: Supernatural creature resembling a diminutive human being.

ḳubtl: Salmon liver. [825]

ḳuks: Co-wife in a polygynous household.

ḳulus, vocative, ḳuluais: Wife's brother, or sister's husband, man speaking. [595] ḳulxwaix: Gathering of the supernatural beings for the performance of dances in the land above. [601]

ḳuma: Unidentified salt water fish, said to be called "Lard-fish" by white men. [825]

Ḳunqumm ul di dā Sgem, "The Unlooser of Light": One of Raven's names as chief.

ḳupstānm: 1—The ability of a chief to sit down ceremonially in virtue of the goods distributed for his seat, the ground over which he walks, and other requirements.

2—The initial establishment of a youth as chief.

ḳuputsālets: Stone axe.

ḳus: Period of engagement. [412]

Ḳwahila: Ḳwaqo·ts man.

Ḳwai·lils: 1—One of Raven's names as chief.

2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ḳwaiutsmlaix: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ḳwaixestu·i: Shaman's name of a Stuax woman.

Ḳwaixmas, "Begrimed": Name of a copper often cast into fire.

ḳwalts: Unidentified (and probably mythical) type of lizard, allegedly about four feet long, found near Dean Channel. [825]

ḳwalem, vocative, ḳwalām; plural, ālḳwalām: Eldest brother or sister. [601]

Ḳwa'lems: Name, in the Bella Bella language, given to a wooden woman made by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

ḳwalik: Gull. [825]

ḳwal'ma'ks, "Eldest": Term of respectful address to Porcupine as senior of all animals.

Ḳwalwalelim, "The Mover": Name given to their house by one of the first groups of settlers at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.

Ḳwalna: Term from which the Anglicized "Kwatna" is derived: Generic name for the villages at Kwatna Harbour, Burke Channel. [103]*

Ḳwamens·ks: Chief living on the upper Tcawat in the beginning of time.

ḳwanā·xsta: Large box used for boiling olachen. [415]

Ḳwapx: Village south-west of the head of South Bentinck Arm.

Ḳwaqmai: Place on Schooner Pass.

Ḳwaqwasila: Sisaok name of a Bella Coola man.

ḳwatlnokum: Marks made to commemorate an event, such as carvings at chiefs' meeting-place, virtually a memorial. [211] ḳwatlnusam: Figure representing crest.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

[773] ɣwatlnusta: 1—Tally post, one of the supernatural elements possessed by all human beings.

[777] 2—Inviable supernatural element which constantly moves before the face.

ɣwatlnsta; vocative, ɣwatlnstas, (rarely, ɣwalhsta): Crest.

[825] ɣwax: Raven.

ɣwax: Big old male mountain goat.

Ɣwaxila: Ɣomgo·ts man living in the last century.

Ɣwaxlaklis: Celebrated Kwakiutl chief.

Ɣwaxqwax·wamm: Name of a shaman who received his power from Raven.

[601] Ɣwaxwats: One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.

ɣwaxwam: Fourth oldest, or youngest, brother or sister.

ɣwa'yalaks: Steller's jay.

Ɣwakutl: Kimsquit woman.

[825] ɣwana: Woman's pubic hair.

ɣwata: Sea-lion cub.

[431] ɣwem: Those who are present and receive gifts when an announcement of a marriage is first made.

Ɣweta: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

ɣwia·x'sem: A revelation, such as the sight of a supernatural being or object usually concealed.

[825] ɣwilais: Yearling seal.

ɣwimap: Word used in inviting to a marriage announcement.

Ɣwinae: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ɣwiqwaxaowa: Kwakiutl supernatural being, said to be identical with Ālqunīam.

Ɣwixlokilak": Nusqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Ɣwiyai: Bella Bella village west of Namu.

Ɣwl: Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.

Ɣwlaiyu: Professional female marriage droner who came down to Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Ɣwlaxwoa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

Ɣwliutl, "Place of Herbage": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.

ɣwnta: Inspiration, in the sense of the source of a kusiut dancer's power of thought.

[583] Ɣwosalk: Village west of Kwatna, settled in the beginning of time.

ɣwoxlaxdjut: Actual goods used for the repurchase of a wife.

[854] Ɣwoyusditsas: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit chief.

ɣwutlt: Cradle.

Ɣwu'nāk': Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

Ɣwun·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[581] ɣ"xlin: The noble and rightful sentiments engendered in both families by an elaborate marriage, either real or fictitious. The word embodies the concepts of financial interdependence and of consequent mutual strength.

[195] ɣxwakim: The transference of activities to a new sphere; the term is used, rhetorically, when referring to the death of a skilled craftsman.

S

saiks: 1—Skeleton.

2—Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Saikwaio·sem: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

sai·mis Ḿalas: The constant blinking of the eyes.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Saiuit: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192
Saiyuno: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. 821 sałaiti: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. 173 sa·łhałsmm: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. 431 2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sa·łpsta: Cannibalistic incubus. 257 sa·łpsmm: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. 585
sałiskłdimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. 431 sałukwałs: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. 463 sąml: Sockeye salmon. 825
Sąnułpmułłs Alquntąm: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sanunusmmlaix: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sąnułłm or Sąnułłsmdimut: One of the names of Mount Nusąłst as chief.
Sąnuximąxuts, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stuax man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sąhx; vocative, sąhi; vocative plural, sąhxwa·ks: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sa·łła: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sąłłia: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sąłłyenuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sa·łma: Death, anthropomorphized. 761
sałołts: Whetstone, archaic. 412
Sa·tsk': 1—Kimsquit River.
2—Village near the mouth of the river. 101
Sa·tskamp: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley.
satskwał·a: Raft.
Sa·łamnąn·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sawa: Pillow. 573
sawadjut, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sazi, vocative, sazinao: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. 601 Sazinao: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
sąxłum: Bracken. 824 sąxwąnos: Tide flats. 823
sakdjułk: Heart.
Sałwałasąm: That part of Sonq'ut which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Sąmhotł: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Sąmsiutąn·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
sąmsąmłkdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'mtsts, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. 805 sankwołsąm: Leader of musicians. 821

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa·qua·t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sdjidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sekakmân·a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sekilaxt: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
sekima siskamûsk: River net for salmon.
[822] Sesalant: Echo.
Sexexkûlaix: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Sexnxqualqulaoslaix, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Ṭlitcāplilān·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Siâlxelâx: Ancestral name created on earth by a Ḷomqo·ts man.
Siaḳum, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[825] siâqsiu: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
[805] Siâskaos di Ano°likwolsaix, "The Coming of Ano°likwolsaix": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
siusla: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Si'islalil, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] si'illiukek: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of mar-[431] riage is broached.
si'iyikm, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Sûmi, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Sûsûml, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Sikâsmuk, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] siki, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and nsaok rites.
Sikilikmm: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siḳuly, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikualxwlxkx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikuldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
Sikum: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
[226] Siliaz: Celebrated composer.
siltmaq: Salmon-weir.
[827] sinaqyme'ax: Susaok head-dress.
sininits: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[761] si·nipadjaxstmax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Simpicus: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinomuk, "Time for the Use of Olachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinulkemitl, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinunukalâhm: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

APPENDIX D

Sinuyul: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximāl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Sinux repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio°msta: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424] siḥālyālosuts: Song sung by a kusiatem dancer on recovery from apparent death.

siḥkim: Regular beatings given to a male child. [861]

Siqālyam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqalusnām: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626] siqwsk: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage.

sisests: Departure to a new locality. [425]

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother.

sisut: Paddle. [601]

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Siskunsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sisliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778] siut, vocative, sisot: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."

2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large sisook whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutamkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnāles: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·ōs, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djōldamx chief living in the last century.

sinlikum: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Siyman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sixsān·imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sixsinḥutmam: Synonym for Mulakila, the supernatural being connected with sisook rites.

sixwismaq: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, ānānuskx, for the user's protégé on earth.

sixwoḥāxkmuk: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

sixwul: Unmarried mother. [848] siyentla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word sientla may be connected with this.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

sire: Supernatural good luck.

[821] nkuoos: Fog.

[825] nkn': Pack-rat.

nlk: Mind or mentality.

[828] nlqtan: Place of lucky finds, such as a point where whales drift ashore.

nlxetkältwa: Cannibal recently returned from the land above.

Sälislän·i: One of the first women to settle at Sätlia in the beginning of time.

[825] nmd: Mountain.

nmlk or nmlkts: Salmon, generic form.

nmlqmnikdas: (Probably) viscera of an animal, archaic.

Sumsiutaäks: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.

[173] nmsma: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by anyone.

Sumtus: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.

[822] Sunk'luxum: Bella Coola chief.

[828] Sunqlominit: Darkness, anthropomorphized.

nnqus: Anger.

nnx: Sun.

Sunxäkila: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Alqälxl in the beginning of time.

Sunxälotla: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—A'alk name of a Kimsquit man.
4—Suaok name of a Kimsquit man.

Sunxan·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.

[827] nnxkt: Mucus.

Sunxl, "Sunny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

nqulaiät: Game played with miniature spears.

[575] nsaok: 1—Society intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.

nsintl: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.

Sunxakila: Shaman's name of a Sunxl woman.

nskiek': Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Ttitsplitan·a to the one favoured.

[601] nskum: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).

[583] nsmmäs: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.

[431] nsqo·si: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.

[585] nspunk': Western dock (plant).

[824] nsxnatnulep: Snowberry.

nxnqoinu: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.

nxmmsta, "Food Supply": Synonym for sal'alum, ancestral hunting-ground.

[825] skalk": Porcupine.

[824] skal·ats: Black huckleberry.

[821] skälatslaix: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

1924

shalt': Devil's-club.
shalnamadits: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] Shāml, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Snuhali chief about 1910. [765] shamtsk: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
shāy: Anus.
shānm: Splinters projecting upwards from the bole of a broken tree-trunk. [824] Shamdzyman·a: One of the first women to settle at Snuhali in the beginning of time.
Shatpts: Chief of the spring salmon.
shatsāmhm: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585] shelints: Merganser. [825] shelwadjut, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the announcement of betrothal. [584]
shi: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [431] Shimuteitl: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
shimap, "Cure Ye!": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
shinwās: Cloud. [825]
shma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [412]
shma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon.
shmaix, shmanl, or shmdjut: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755]
2—Final kusiut rite at end of the ceremonial season.
shmim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Shml, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": a'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
Shmnānl: House used by a group of first settlers near Stuax in the beginning of time.
Shmnulān·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nusdalst in the beginning of time.
shu'tcalx: Fungus. [824]
shlsmaiaxts: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of sisook head-dress.
shq: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
shshk': Rose.
Shslikman·a: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
shstl: Wasp. [825]
Shsisamnasta: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727]
Shymshtl: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Siskistl in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
shsi, vocative, shsai: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] shtāy: Suitable place in the river for setting olachen nets.
shtsa: Game played with throwing stones.
shusiut: Synonym for yeaxmax, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukusiut in addition to a dance rite. [424]
shwakus: River sculpin. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[765] skwanat: 1—Memorial potlatch.
2—Mourning song.
3—The wailing of mourners at a grave.

[763] Skwanat-an-a, "The Weeper": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

skwanatinkusaix: Professional kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Snitmdu-a during kusiutem dances.

skwatsta: Name.

Skwo-ts: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

[824] Sla-kl: Whitewater River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

slaos: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

[252] slaqk'i: Smoked spring salmon with the bone removed.

slaxki: Many, adjective.

[554] slaxmidjut, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Sla-: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] sleli: Game, resembling a tug-of-war, played with wooden loops and spears.

slemts, vocative, slemtsakais: Grandchild; the vocative indicates endearment.

[578] slexmenix: The deposition of eagle down on the heads of those quarrelling to pacify them.

sli-s: Gall bladder.

sloptsta: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a nsaak whistle, referred to as the breathing of Mislakila.

sluk': Olachen grease.

Sluxlkwaily: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[778] 2—Place of petrified power at site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphized being responsible for power in this locality.

Slilm: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

slumsta: The voice.

[824] slumi: Dried elderberries.

slukwala: 1—Shaman-like power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Coola woman.

[821] slulym: Eclipse.

slwosamlikw': 1—One who keeps in touch with a concealed Cannibal.
[424] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist kusiut or nsaak dancers; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Smaialkila: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaialotla: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaien-a: 1—Synonym for Sluxlkwaily, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] smaiusta: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

smamatsinulp: Debris from cones eaten by squirrels.

Smaoan, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Smaoaxk: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

smai-ung, vocative, smai-ung: Friends.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

xnu-ti: A place of petrified power, i.e., a locality where a supernatural being has been rendered incapable of moving. [778] xnuil ki xnuxnu, "Petrified Name": Designation brought from above in the beginning of time.

xnu-ki: 1—Mussel. [825]
2—Freshwater mussel.

xnuxnuuli: One of the thrushes.

xnuqtmlit: An animal, especially a bear, showing a kindly disposition towards man.

Sudhult: Ätsu-ku-i man mentioned in an ancient story.

xulil': 1—Gum.
2—Name of son made by Raven in the beginning of time.

xulq: Slave.

Suqhkila: One of the first men to settle at Sätia in the beginning of time.

xulqom: Visionary receiving power direct from the supreme god.

xuiundmqs: Worm or larva living under the ocean.

Suiustikuu-a: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.

Suinia: Supernatural being who holds earth in position.

Suitmsu-a: Supernatural woman who restores those who suffer misfortune in the performance of kusiut rites.

Suuskla'ilx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman; it was obtained at Tal-is in the beginning of time.

xumq: 1—Mythical monster. 2 2—Man living at Kimsquit in early times.

xumqs di xuq'dai: Posts of the sun, the barriers which cause it to retrace its course at the solstices. [821] xumqs ne xuulix: Variety of xumq living above tree line.

Suqmulhaista: Stealer of thoughts, an invisible barrier within the door which prevents a man from carrying out a potlatch by robbing him of his good intentions. The concept is anthropomorphized as a supernatural being. [828]

Sus-ahdilx: Island south-west of Bella Bella.

Sus'ulult: Alquntem: Deer son of the supreme god.

Sus'uiqundy, "On the Point": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Susqulqs: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

xus'alyum: Ceremonial collar of hemlock-bark, dyed cedar-bark, and undyed cedar-bark such as is given to Thiexplitäu-a. The word may refer to the throwing of this on the fire.

xusdust'ak: Unidentified berry. [824] xushlmals: Top used by one of the sons of the supreme god.

Sushlmals: Supernatural being resident above who has the power of causing things to curl up and come to him.

xushimtq: Part of house behind fire.

xushlisik: Unidentified plant. [824]

xushlumi: Piece of wood, rolled hard and smooth in a landslide.

Sushwuinmtik: Chief of supernatural singers who accompany Nuskymm.

xushumdi: Twin.

Susqulqtli: 1—Cannibalistic supernatural woman, formerly resident in the supreme god's house.
2—Old woman resident in Xumqum's house.

Susuu-lme: Locality containing repository of name received from Death.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Snapâ·q': Affluent of the middle Bella Coola.
Snafuaix: Kimsquit woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Snqwarwâls: 1—Copper Raven that perched on house of first settlers at Alqâlxl in the beginning of time.
2—Name given to the Raven design used by the first settlers at Stuxr in the beginning of time.
snuseiks: Skeleton. The word is obviously a derivative of saiks.
Snaxlkâls: 1—"The Wise One": One of the more important supernatural beings.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsmoil man
Snaxmkâls: Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Alqâlxl, probably a supernatural designation.
Snaxmlkânk': Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Alqâlxl, probably a supernatural designation.
[374] Snaxlulus, Cold: A supernatural being.
Snaxlaxwai, "The Mystery of Alqunxâm": The place where the supreme god puts what he wishes to conceal, such as the correct solution of the Mystery dance. The concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
snaxq: Generic name for several supernatural animals.
snaxpndjâx·a: Right front corner of a house on entering.
Snakri: Pronunciation of Swakli by a man with idiosyncratic r usage.
Swakli, "Place of Dog Salmon": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
[765] snatlânhn, "A Shoring Up": Term used to describe the functions of mourning songs.
Swalkwals, "Box": 1—One of the first women to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—Box in Xemqma's house.
3—Name of a Tâl·ia man derived from the last.
Swalle·tl, "Place of Nq Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Swathmy: Kwisut name of a Bella Coola man.
Swatqomikeista: Point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
[821] swatsâlâtst: Race of dwarfs, presumably mythical.
[778] Swatsiaxwaxm: Whirlwind, anthropomorphized.
Swalxlkâls: Generic term for four supernatural, eagle-like creatures.
Swawals: Place on South Bentinck Arm where curative power is localized.
swaxwâkwat, "Bring Light": Call of invitation to a kwisut dance in the lower Bella Coola valley.
swaxwâk: One who seeks embers.
Swaxwathwâx·a: One of the first women to settle at Tâl·ia in the beginning of time.
Swaxwalâls: Name of first settlers at Alqâlxl in the beginning of time.
Swayaklwax·a: Rivers Inlet name used by a Bella Coola kwisut woman.
[484] âslits: Food carried for consumption on a journey; the term is also applied to the provender brought from above by the first people in the beginning of time.
sel'oksn: Hunting-ground owned by an ancestral family.
Sem: Woman mentioned in a song.
sengʷ: see dâ sonxʷ dâ.
Senxwatks: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Senxwax·a: One of the first women to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
[431] senxwadjat: Synonym for sywadj, the preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Sonq'mai: Kuziut name of a Stuix man.
Sopiu: Kuziut name of a Tsmqil man.
sqalaxmm: Scalp.
sqmalskl': Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot. [824]
Spaixhaxymmaw-a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spaukalhnais: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
spaniasta: Temporary camping-place.
Spatcalsh, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
spalsi: Star.
sphum, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581]
spepandosts: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] shilhikmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
shikts: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Shihiqinaw-i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spl'ewanta: Island west of Namu.
spka: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smmq with female organs.
spanhkua: Unidentified berry. [824]
S'ki', Cold Wind: A supernatural being. [821]
Shhunsta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Qumqw-ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
shla: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sputy: Olachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down.
spundjut, "Eagle Down-nose": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431] spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825] Spurpunhalinin: Kuziut name of a woman sent down near Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.
Spurpuxp'mpdimut: Sisaak name of Xanis origin.
Spuxpunta: Sisaak name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqil-a: Unidentified berry. [824] sqauk: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqihts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqnk: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sqalst or sqalstmt: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nuqhalt. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316]
sqama: 1—Chest. [103]*
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Sqamt: Land of Ashes.
sqaxnsts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man. [584] sqals: River sand mixed with small pebbles.
Sqatrals: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River. [823] sqaxm: Flood.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

xpaldp: Cedar roots.
xpal: Sling.
xpalpalem: To use a sling.
xpili: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slave ancestry.
xpimamas: Fleecy cloud.
xpiski: Muzzle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary food.
xpma: Wooden comb.
Xpu'i: Land of Ashes, alternative term for Squmi.
xpo: Umbilical hernia.
xpulpum: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by man.
xpulsiajar: Long phallus.
Xpumil: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
xpuxa: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
xpuxly: Food distributed for carrying away as xpuxa.
xpuli: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
xpumuxy: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
xpulp: Maple.
xpum: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
xpupait: Outer plank of cedar, convex and bark-covered on one side.
xpusal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
xpuskus: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
xpuskuskus: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of composition.
xpusl ans: Large, unidentified bird.
Xpuskus: Heat: A supernatural being.
Xpuk: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.
xpu'ua: Loon.
xsai ti: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of preventing hunger.
Xsalpkaum, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Five Sticks": Ala name obtained in the beginning of time.
xsalsmy; plural, xsalsmy; vocative plural, xsalsmy:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sqalsal in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Smal in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smamas for a grandson.
5—Smal name of a Kitamaat man.
xsin: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
xsnakkiskum: Bat.
xsnalmut: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
xsnamum: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
xsnk: Whetstone.
Xsnu: Man mentioned in a story.
Xsq': Mountain near Tal'ds.
xsqkum, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
xsumum: Archaic term for chisk, now used only rhetorically.
xsuk: Cranberry.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

[illegible]: Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
[illegible]: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
[illegible]: That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
[illegible]: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [519]
2—Sleep, intangible hamat prerogative.
[illegible]: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585]
[illegible], "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] [illegible]: Shadow.
[illegible]: Hammer, archaic. [412]
[illegible]: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
[illegible]: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other. [601]
[illegible]: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
[illegible]: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] [illegible]: 1—Caribou hide.
2—Thong made of caribou hide. [825]
[illegible]: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285]
[illegible]: Caribou.
[illegible]: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832]
[illegible]: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828]
[illegible] or [illegible]: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
[illegible]: Body.
[illegible]: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
[illegible]: Professional female berry-picker. [825]
[illegible]: Mountain goat grease. [824] [illegible]: Canoe.
[illegible], "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Octopus. [825]
[illegible]: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
[illegible]: Red rock paint. [386]
[illegible]: Singer's baton.
[illegible]: Yew.
[illegible]: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823]
[illegible]: 1—Memorial post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764] [illegible]: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story. [262]
[illegible]: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
[illegible]: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
[illegible], "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
[illegible]: Black raspberry.
[illegible]: Green. [824]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 [825] Sulukā: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
sulu-ā'xlme-lma: One of the river sculpins.
sumhumā: To gather cedar-bark.
Sumtma: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Sunā: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Sutlulu, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
[101] Sutkmq: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Sutmlk: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Swuslu: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swuq: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
swulxmodmut: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
swulstu: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
swu'swu: Mud.
swuitu: Person or object which is taboo.
Swuiswuu: Evil supernatural being.
Sqaislwu, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon.
sxāhmem pāi mānu: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
sqāksta: Sorcerer's box.
Sxā-lhutemāx-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sqāu: Female lover, especially a paramour.
sqāum: Male lover.
Sqaqa-ā: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
sqow: The bursting forth of light.
[785] sustain: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] sustmdjut: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
sustmmi: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
sqak: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kwiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sqakāqāsstu-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxim: Cedar-bark cord.
Sximqtma: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Sximsimdi: Immoral supernatural woman.
sxlā': Afterbirth.
Sqiyustu-a: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Sqoxtu: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
[761] 2—Man who performs woman's work.
sxumtmuxtu khl': Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sxā'lānā, South Wind: A supernatural being.
Sxāhā, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sxlu-ā': Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tribe.
sxlumuk: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

Spqymatax: Supernatural children guarded by the hermaphrodite in the land above.
Sputl: Name taken by a Stax man in the beginning of time.
sxtmqmmt: Place in stream or river where a salmon has just jumped.
sxmmtl'-a: Name created upon earth.
sxmqmtmt: Deer. [825]
sxmut: Water-tight receptacle made from the internal organs of a mountain goat. [415] Sxmkmymstm, "What Sweeps Away the Food": First moon after the winter solstice. [805] symmmqk, "Tears": Preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch. [431] sxw'ltimkis, "Short-lived": Rhetorical term used with reference to the death of a young chief. [195] sqymwt: An adolescent girl, not yet subject to the full taboos of womanhood.

T

Iskhlit: Cave.
lut: 1—Son, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for lads unrelated to the speaker. [601]
2—Masculine suffix.
Tsiskmnk: 1—One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Swalwt in the beginning of time.
tsimmmnk: Desertion of husband by his wife. [586] lsin: Dorsal fin of a fish.
tsinimp: Heavy kind of copper. [825] tsimmax: Tournament between rival villages. [628]
Tsl-ic: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm. [101]
2—Generic name applied to all villages on South Bentinck Arm.
Tslskm-a: Nuxqual name embodied in a Swalwt origin myth.
Tsmtmnk-pts, "The Breather": One of Thxqhlaw-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Tsmskm: Stax man mentioned in an ancient story.
tspmmmtmm: The issuing abroad of invitations to a memorial potlatch.
lsqts: Forest consisting of dense underbrush between big trees. [824] lsqul: Blood-stained cedar-bark pad.
Tsu-a: 1—Bird arrow.
2—Weapon, invisible to mortals, with which a wolf kills its prey.
Tsut, sometimes, Tsiss: 1—Designation of supreme god used in prayer. [601]
2—Father, term used by child. [824]
Isltsmdp: Water-lily.
Tsqa-ak: Land inhabited by the Kwakiutl.
Tsnkwmm: Leading chief of Skqulxw and reputed founder of the village.
Tsqqkmm: Bella Coola chief living in the last century.
Iskim: Type of sea-going canoe with bow and stern identical. [825] tsmkmd-k: 1—White-fronted goose. [601]
2—Type of sea-going canoe named from the bird.
Isnm: Husband (Ai Isnmmtlut: My husband).
tsmmt': River.
Tsmmmtlm: Chief who came to Cape Mudge in the beginning of time and later moved to Bella Coola.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

#192

Tapendzicla: Bella Bella chief mentioned in a semi-historical account.

[825] Tawaki: Northern tribe, possibly Haida.

tcli: Dog salmon.

Tcalkwq, "Where Feet Are Showered": Village on shore of North Bentinck Arm west and north of the Neclestumoosy River.

tcqaqoa i: Owl.

[601] tcai: 1—Daughter, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for girls unrelated to the speaker.
2—Feminine suffix.

Tcetsacha: 1—One of the names of Mount Nuqhalt as chief.
2—Man who descended to Mount Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.

Tcetsuk: Supernatural name of bald eagle.

tcitsaalal: 1—Type of expansible house brought down from above by several of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
2—One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[825] tcetsilma: White dog with black and red face.

[824] tcilcilalcum: Pleasure walk.

*tcilt: Cedar-bark.

[411] tce e: Sealing spear.

[825] tcen: Snake.

*Tcepelcle: Mountain near the Dean River.

Tcepo: One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean River in the beginning of time.

[824] tcicmaly: Red cedar tree.

Tcewat: Locality on mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island, probably Knight Inlet.

tcewmaa'ata: Unidentified grape-like tuber.

Tcelkwq: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[342] tcile: Underground house with entrance and flue combined.

Tcila: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.

Tcilcaal: One of the first men to settle at Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.

[825] tcimaa i: Large clam-shell.

Tcimlaic: Sacred name of a first man.

Tcinelkaa: Lad mentioned in an ancient story.

tcipa: Fisher.

Tcinmalqaq, "The Sleep Giver": Name of a female shaman.

[601] tci pma di ema: Nephew's wife, term of indirect address.

tci pma di eici: Uncle's wife, term of indirect address.

Tcicmaal: Man mentioned in an ancient story of the upper Bella Coola valley.

Tcikaa: Celebrated Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Tcil'inlya, "He of the Pests": Nickname given to a lad mentioned in an ancient story.

tcimili: Valley.

Tcawat, "Where the River Covers the Stones": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Tcaqwak: Locality on Fitzhugh Sound.

[824] Tcacia: Mountain in the Carrier country.

tcaakcumaly: Unidentified hollow-stemmed plant.

Tcaakcumalqa'a, "Where There Is Much tcaakcumaly": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

APPENDIX D

 192*

Tsalt: River on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
Tsqumit: Mountain near Dean Channel.
Tsza-a: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
tsilan: To marry.
tsimsem: 1—Marriage in which the woman's relatives make the first proposal, especially one hurried owing to bereavement or other financial stringency in the man's family. [584]
2—Marriage without lengthy engagement.
tsisla: One having a voice like an eagle's.
Ts'qumiyaum, "A Holding": The arrangement by which a man's son-in-law gives him an "wife" an infant female relative in repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters. [583]
Ts'ets: Clover. [824]
Ts'ulala: Robin. [825]
Ts'uxwtem: Game played with bows and arrows. [411] Ts'uxwmin: Arrow. [412]
tsyin: Adze. [825]
Tsxwma: Snow mud without handle for driving fish-net stakes. [586] tu: Black bear. [825]
tsiyahum: 1—One of the a'ulk dances.
2—Ceremonial hold to shame a deserting husband or wife.
3—Name taken by an early tsiyahum dancer at Kimsquit.
tsitsu: Snail.
Tsiksmit: Bella Bella woman married by Swanee of Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Tsiksmitla: 1—One of the first women to settle at Kwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—Name acquired by one of the first men to settle at Dean in the beginning of time.
3—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Tsiksmitlaqa: Woman dwelling on the coast south of Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
tsitsuu-i: Knife of mountain goat horn. [412] tsitsulk: Red rock cod. The difference between this and ustay is problematical. [825] Tsiksilla: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tsiksi'ial: 1—Supernatural woman known to the people of Smith Inlet.
2—One of the first women to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tsu'ksem: Servant to the supernatural being Nu'ulayak.
Tsuwiks'ila: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tsqumi-ila: Supernatural woman resident in the land above. This word is said to be unrelated to Tsqumit-la, although a common origin seems probable.
Tsqumit-la: 1—Supernatural child resident in the land above.
2—Name acquired by a female child in the beginning of time. [824] tsqin: Fish-hook.
tsqaqa: Correct term, in the language of Raven, for skull-cap worn by adolescent girls. See skamen.
tu'ewala: The pouring, by a shaman, of grease from two vessels on the fire as a means of curing the sick.
Tsuwau: One of the first women to settle in the Dean valley in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Thwumymid: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Rivers Inlet man from a sea-lion.
[825] tsukuddout: Sardine.
Tsitmaratskla, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water ouzel.
tsitwuts: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.
[825] tsima: Mountain goat snow.
Tsiola: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuce in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nusdalt, when in human form at the beginning of time.
Tsiscaplitte-a: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to those in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.
[825] tsiscin: Sea-lion.
Tsmusdimut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.
[821] tsul: 1—Moon.
2—The zenith.
[825] tsululp: Virulent skin disease.
tsupu-i: Cormorant.
Tsupu-ii, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Tsupuiz, "Maligner" or "Defamer": A supernatural being.
tsu: 1—Gaff.
2—To cut wood for masks.
tsumap: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kusiut dances.
[823] tsupulum: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar rivulets.
[415] tsulai: Water-tight basket.
tsuiu: Water-washed stump with smoved, radiating roots.
[824] Tsuqu: Region on the upper Kitlope River.
[482] tsumt: Tump-line.
tuku: Novel.
Tukuti: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.
[825] tulu: Mink.
tumidjut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.
[583] tup-a: Synonym for dzundzumum, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.
[825] tupiuu: 1—Fawn.
2—Nusdzkmp name of a Kimsquit woman.
[821] Tpikua: Star in the Great Bear.
tpuuj: Lower of the two beaters used in the preparation of cedar-bark.
Tpuuzdzu, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Tsi-ia.
[291] tsuchuti: Hat with flat top and broad brim.
tsuiu: Sunscreen.
Tsuiulitl: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsu-kmut: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.
Tsulitu: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsul: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Tsumkum: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
tsu-ti: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.
[825] tsitsu: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Tsi-dis: Kithobe River.
Tsilmukis: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time. [825] Isima: Animal's entrails.
Isi-a: Note of the kwakwa, foretelling death. [763] Isiseui: Cormorant, in Bella Bella language.
Isskkumm: Goods taken to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [586]
Tskwi: Rescoution Bay.
Tsilit, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [431]
2—Bald eagle. [825]
3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Ina: Novice, either kwaiut or shaman.
Inattmem or Inattlaia: First night of a kwaiut dance.
Ishnkkimut: 1—Heavy coppers in Xemqmu's house.
2—Name obtained from these by a Sisila man in the beginning of time.
Ishi-kdimut: Kusiutem rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415]
Isla: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.
Islaqumsis: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from seeing the perpetrator. [784]
Isla: Presents distributed when a nusek initiate dances. They are provided by the donor "To Shield Our Eyes" from the tsewinam and serve to recompense the carpenters and others who have assisted in the rite. [431]
Isma: Belt. [465]
Isna: Nettle. [824]
Tsemilaks: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
Isqadjat: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the donor of a potlatch in return for being served with food in a rude manner. [431]
Isqeat: Small woodpecker, species unidentified. [824] Isqatka: Winter wren.
Isqmuk: Spawning sockeye salmon. [825]
Isskiks: Intangible kwaiut prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [424] Isulkm: Prompter.
Tsumkiaks: One of the first women to settle at Sualili in the beginning of time.
Tsuskiiki: One of the first men to settle at Tsmsil in the beginning of time. [824]
Isuwatqs: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [825] Isutskmqs: To grasp firmly with both hands, archaic.
Isxpsa-i: Trout, plural.
Isxa'ata'akmk: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.
Isxya, "What Is Good": Synonym for Ahmtmmmem, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] Tsimsi-as: Synonym for Nuxinkinuikm: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
Isxwinam: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to nusek and a'ali initiates.
2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Tsuklite: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Twalosdimut: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

twihmdimut, "A Coming up from Below into Plain Sight": Term used with reference to the obtaining of a call through the medium of Dark-Shade.

[424] tsāmātl, "Whence We Came": A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

*103 Tsēltsik: Old village near the head of Dean Channel, at the site of the present cannery on the opposite side of the fiord from Manitou Cannery.

Tsunpu-ioqim: Tree, inhabited by owls, behind the supreme god's house.

twunikwalotl: Space in a house between central fire and row of chiefs seated behind it.

U

U·sqāxus, "What Is Wanted Is Lacking": Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alqālāxl in the beginning of time.

W

Waāks: 1—One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuloli in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwulst in the beginning of time.
4—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
5—Name of the Kimsquit River as chief.
6—Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.

[825] wai·s: 1—Cohoe salmon.
2—Name acquired by a man from cohoe salmon.

Waiuxum: Man who descended to the Clearwater River in the beginning of time.

Wakitmai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
2—Fraser River.

Wakwas: Village at Kwatna Inlet. This word is in the Bella Bella language.

Walqkitmai: One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.

[825] wal·āsgia: Lynx.

[586] walikw': Woman who has deserted her husband.

wakmptmm: To express a desire concerning the disposal of one's goods after death.

walicinu: "I go."

[824] walilikwātsālātsālāts, "The Most Potent of the Pond": Water-lily.

Wanqt: Name of Smaoan's grandchild in the beginning of time.

Wanuq: 1—Rivers Inlet.
2—Collective term for the villages on its shores.

Waoaqslaix: Nusāxkāmx name of a Kimsquit man.

Waowal·is: Celebrated shaman, ~~central figure~~ in an ancient tale.

Waoyal·a: Tribal name of one of the Bella Bella-speaking groups.

Wa·put: Mountain near Stuax.

Wasila: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

waskusiutaix: Death in the house where a kusiut dance is taking place.

[593] was·nān·imutsts: Mourning songs regarded as expressions of real, not ceremonial, grief.

[765] wasonx^w wawstkloqosil: Synonym for sonx^w: The sky.

192*

Wat·a: Xuxais woman living in the beginning of time.
wals: Dog. [825]
wewnic: Dog, archaic.
wa·xsia: Cape of yellow cedar-bark. [291]
waxwaxtsia: Brother or sister of grandparent.
Wiakai: One of the first women to settle at Snuloli in the beginning of time. [601]
Wiaqaii: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuux in the beginning of time.
Wikwan·ekwla: Synonym for Kwla: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nusqalst chief.
Wikwanutl: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
wina, vocative, winao: War-party.
Winās: Slave living at Nusqalst several generations ago.
winās di qak, "War-Party of the Ocean," or winās di sā·ildjo·ts, "War-Party of the Tides": Supernatural being.
Winwina: Supernatural being who captured birds and fish for the benefit of mankind.
Winwintmak: Supernatural being, perhaps identified with one of the warm winds.
winxta: Assistance rendered by the inhabitants of a town to a neighbouring settlement being attacked. [628]
Wipitpawakts: Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time. [726] Wisamkilak: Smooan's daughter-in-law in the beginning of time.
Wi'tālao: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Wilnlks: Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.
Wixas: Man who travelled to the Skeena River in the beginning of time.
Wixon: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
wl·a: Kusiut dance in which the nine supernatural siblings are summoned to earth.
Wlq: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Wlx: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
wlx: Cripple.

X

Xaitqalatl: Ancestral name of a Tāl·io man.
Xaiqts: Stream entering the Bella Coola from the north near Nulkux. [821] Xai·utl: Continuous North Wind, anthropomorphized.
xak'loi·: Cry raised as each of the first spring salmon is brought ashore. [226] Xālaiya: Step-daughter of Raven in the beginning of time.
xaqants: Great blue heron. [825]
Xas: Designation of a tribe, probably a branch of the Carriers, dwelling far to the south-east of the Bella Coola.
xāxuff: Canada goose.
xal·a: Root of qāymāts, an unidentified plant.
Xekalus: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Xekwotsaw·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Xelitmai: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.
xem: The successive rising of the sun from day to day. This word, which is common in derivatives, appears usually to be pronounced xem after s. [821] Xemcua: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Snuloli in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Ḷomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
Xemtmm: Kusiut name of a Slskistl man.
Xemxemālatla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Sisook name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtmm: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqalaxl in the beginning of time.
[533] xe·tla: Boastful type of song used by chiefs on war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xedilkos: One of the first men to settle at Ḷothnalos in the beginning of time.
Xelāsu: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] ǵaga: Marten.
[412] ǵili: Stone axe.
xlxul: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Ximpdimut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximxmlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximxmoslaix: Celebrated female shaman.
ǵinǵinās·i, plural, ǵinǵināsoksi: Little girl.
[821] Xinǵines: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
[517] 2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xixois: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xuximān·a, "Right Foot": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xuǵis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
xuxmānoās: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
xlāxtmm: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
xlāni: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
Xlikwals: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[586] xlokin·imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
Xmaxots: Locality below Nusḷalst.
[825] ǵmǵmatsl: Minnows.
[601] ǵnes: Woman, or wife in indirect address (tci ǵnesisix: My wife).
ǵnesāxta: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
[614] ǵnesdām or nuǵnesdām: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
[423] Xnutli: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
xokult: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xolāxwosem: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[785] xoldjut: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[831] Xomtsla: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xomxomqa: Ancestral name of a Stuix man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xonǵotām: Supernatural scoop-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xoqotlis: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

xoxa: Kwakiutl term for presents distributed as "Eagle down."
ǫota: Scoop-net for catching salmon in rivers. [227] ǫǫpanhǫta: Head-dress of eagles' tails worn by kusiut dancers.
xwanuil: Spring water. [292]
Xwantlo: Settlement in the Carrier country.
xwe-k': Cow parsnip. [824]
Xwelbon: Name obtained in the beginning of time from the Skeena people in whose language it is said to mean whale.
Xwinxwitsakumlaix: Shaman who obtained his power from Thunder.
Xwinumkila: Daughter of a Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
xwlxwulla: Wrestling.
Xwodjan·i, "The Crash": Name taken by one of the first settlers at Nuilnx in the beginning of time but long since changed to a kusiut designation.
xwonxwonm: 1—Hummingbird.
2—One of the first men to settle at Älqälaxl in the beginning of time. [825] xwonxwontäl·aix: Puppet-patron in the form of a hummingbird.
xwopa·xts di siut: The concluding ritual of the kusiut season.
ǫwosan·i: Gambling game played with crabapple sticks. [525] Xwoinkmis, "The One Whose Work Has Failed": Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
xwpintmak: The desertion of her husband by a wife. [586]

Y

Yäkotlis: Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
Yä·k"axwarma: Kimsquit man mentioned in an allegedly historical account. [576] yao: "Hello!" "Hail!" or "Greetings!"
ye··: Exclamation having the significance of, "May you have a safe passage," said when a corpse is drawn through the roof.
Yeälos: One of the first men to settle at Nutsqualt in the beginning of time.
'Yeäxdji: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
yeaxwax: 1—Prerogative, tangible or intangible, which some kukusiut possess in addition to a dance.
2—Similar prerogative formerly displayed in xsaok rites.
yeix: 1—Call, that is, that which impels a kusiut to dance.
2—Kusiut whistle.
Ye'mdjalaos: Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
yeotla: Term, implying both wealth and good fortune, applied to a man able to give a memorial potlatch soon after the death of a relative.
yeyä'timut: Presents given by a prospective bridegroom to his future father-in-law. [431] ye: Good, adjective. [584]
yeki: Mountain goat. [825] Yel·äxlaix: Goose Island.
yehle: "All Right," cry used in a kusiut dance.
Yelhal·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Yelyelhuslaix: One of the first men to settle at Älqälaxl in the beginning of time.
yelkulmem: Bringing down of a call by means of the rite of sawadjut.
yellailaixl: Presents given by the bride's relatives to the groom's when they enter her house on the wedding day. [431] [585]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[728] yuhmax: Peace ceremony.
Yekhin: Bella Coola carpenter living in the last century.
yen·imut: Ceremonial error.
[534] Yentsänl: House of the first settlers at Sätlia in the beginning of time.
yat·en: Rattle.
[425] yat·imm: The sending back of a name to the family of its original owners through a return marriage, or the proposal to do so, made by the relatives of the wife.
[589] [554] yetsält; plural, yeetsält; vocative plural, yeetsält: A woman who has attained an honourable position through being many times repurchased from her husband; virtually, a female chief.
Yelsqwikaiya: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
Yexasila: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] yexdimut: Fire-holder carried by Thunder.
yexo'maitl: Old, female sea-lion.
Yexthin: Ancestral name of a Sinxl man.
Yexwomaitl: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Yulätimut: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[372] yuhmta: Sticks for making fire.
yuhälx: Promontory.
yu'pätl: The actual appearance of a performer at an a'alk dance during a potlatch.
Yuqwa·t: ustämy village.
Yuyuhmpl: Stone on the shore of Dean Channel believed to have been a man a long time ago.
Yuyulk"mai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Äiqälxl in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuhli in the beginning of time.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[p. 631]
[p.632 is blank]

000

INDEX

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

INDEX

000

A

A̓alk society, I 244, 273-85, 291; II 288:
costume, I 275, 276, 277
dancing, style of, I 277 initiation, I 275, 276, 277, 460
masks, I 275, 276
names, I 274, 275, 278, 280, 282, 283:
validation of, I 280
non-sacred dances, I 213, 277, 278, 279, 280, 287, 288, 290, 390 origin myths, I 275, 277, 280-4 See also, Ancestral family, myths prerogatives:
assumption of, I 274
origin of, I 274, 276, 280, 282
validation of, I 274, 275, 278
relations with other societies, I 202, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 280, 284, 285; II 3, 10, 263, 264, 265, 266, 288 ritual dances, I 273, 274, 276, 277, 278 rituals, I 276, 278; II 266 songs, I 274, 275, 276, 277, 279, 287; II 266, 283-8
texts, II 284-8
themes of, I 275, 277, 279; II 266, 284 specific dances, see a̓m'lal-a, nusqual, qi'aqa, ilaiyakam Abalone, I 7, 255, 264, 296, 299, 300, 308, 309, 311, 319, 322, 327, 328, 332, 343, 346, 465, 486, 688; II 221, 227, 443, 463 Adoption: of adult, I 146, 147, 167, 358
of child, I 145, 146, 156, 358, 374
Adze, as kusiut dramatic prerogative, II 249
After-birth, I 363, 505, 691:
ritual portrayal of, II 199
Aiamkikka, II 64:
graphic depiction of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Aiislāxa, I 26; II 72, 319
Aimālotla, II 64:
graphic depiction of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Aimā·ts, I 7:
first settlers at, I 7
Aiqwaiust, II 225, 226
Ailsamka, I 313, 322, 324, 352, 353, 354, 410
Alder, I 342, 369, 567, 660; II 27, 53, 104, 410, 541, 542
Alert Bay, see Kwakiutl
Ālākwis, I 63
Ālāllumktmm, II 49, 50, 59
Ālkexa, I 283, 336, 337, 338, 340, 349, 350
Ālkwi, I 249, 250, 283, 284, 299, 306, 310, 311, 312, 341
Ālmnmnnām, II 483, 484, 485
Ālmoqtaikila, dance (kusiut) of, II 238-9:
mask representing, II 239
Ālqālāxl, I 6, 315, 320, 625; II 19, 43, 511
contact with other tribes, II 339, 367
first settlers at, I 6, 295, 298, 299
origin myth, I 295-7, 297-9
Ālquntām, I 46; II 6, 71, 116, 118, 166, 176, 180, 181, 240, 241, 311, 314, 487: acts of, I 37, 70, 75, 77, 81, 83, 84, 90, 97, 99, 115, 264, 280, 282, 302, 303, 313, 330, 331, 333, 344, 464, 468, 481, 512, 611, 612, 614, 671, 672, 677, 679, 696, 697, 705; II 90, 173, 189, 222, 236, 297, 299, 486, 493, 495, 496, 497, 499, 500 as creator and despatcher of men, I 4, 32, 34, 35, 36, 38, 39, 69, 81, 94, 95, 97, 100, 117, 131, 183, 247, 262, 292, 295, 299, 300, 301, 303, 304, 306, 310, 311, 312, 321, 322, 324, 325, 326, 328, 330, 331, 332, 341, 343, 347, 348, 467, 688; II 244, 246, 279, 290 as creator of non-human life, I 35, 40, 42, 44, 59, 70, 81, 82, 85, 91, 97, 302, 347, 594, 600; II 43, 386 as creator of worlds and inanimate objects, I 24, 35, 88, 92, 307, 309 as depicted in art, I 354; II 121

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Ālquntām (cont'd):
as recipient of prayer, I 32, 33, 38, 101, 104, 105, 106, 109, 192, 446, 592, 708 as sun, I 33, 34, 38, 282, 295, 296, 297, 312; II 222, 223, 319, 424, 500 children of, II 124, 246, 493, 494, 499, 500 costume of, I 354, 677 death of, I 672; II 22
dramatic portrayal of, II 121, 122, 141 functions of, I 32, 33, 38, 39, 51, 98, 101, 103, 104, 115, 361, 435, 451, 496, 695; II 307 gifts from, I 36, 71, 78, 121, 183, 249, 264, 293, 296, 297, 299, 300, 304, 305, 307, 310, 311, 312, 321, 324, 326, 327, 328, 329, 331, 332, 333, 334, 341, 343, 348, 351, 390, 409, 508, 512, 517; II 64, 222, 245, 246, 279, 285, 290, 326, 340, 473, 476, 483, 488, 520
graphic portrayal of, II 143, 144, 145, 222, 223 house of, I 4, 34, 35, 36, 37, 41, 301, 303, 304, 325, 671; II 124, 490, 495, 499 See also, Nusmāt·a human being, I 15, 131, 303, 330; II 244 marriage of, II 493, 494, 495, 499 masks of, II 121, 122, 145 names of, I 32, 104, 106; II 316
offering to, I 649, 650 power from, I 38, 70, 71, 81, 82, 91, 104, 187, 262, 264, 298, 325, 588-94, 629; II 244, 245 See also, Shamans, empowered by Ālquntām seat of, I 37
slave of, II 495 supernatural kusiut, I 32, 34, 38, 41, 98; II 5, 6, 42, 50, 63, 64, 91, 129, 146, 152, 182, 241, 312, 316, 319, 322 wife of, II 495, 496 Ālquntām's fisherman:
dance (kusiut) of, II 241
patron, II 241
Ālquntām's herald:
dance (kusiut) of, II 240-1
mask of, II 240
patron, II 240
Ālquntām's slave, dance (kusiut) of, II 240
Ālsiāx, II 459-65
Ālxwolsqāmus, I 332, 340
Ālxwolātnum, II 25, 146, 182, 183: graphic portrayal, II 182, 206
mask of, II 182
American aspen:
graphic portrayal, II 198, 199
mask representing, II 198
Anaham Lake, I 331
Ancestral family, I 117-39, 150, 157, 247, 374, 376, 528; II 30: attitude towards, I 140, 394, 396, 522; II 357 functions of, I 129, 143, 145, 148, 229, 248, 268, 275, 368, 390, 436, 443, 454
land of, I 130-9
myths, I 51, 78, 122, 123, 124, 126, 129, 130, 132, 145, 159, 163, 164, 165, 167, 180, 181, 183, 185, 186, 190, 191, 192, 194, 199, 221, 226, 235, 236, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 254, 255, 264, 265, 269, 272, 274, 275, 277, 280, 289, 291, 292-357, 377, 384, 388, 389, 390, 393, 396, 406, 407, 411, 439, 441, 446, 447, 460, 461, 462, 464, 465, 468, 470, 484, 485, 496, 529, 598, 599, 699; II 13, 43, 269, 279, 284, 293, 295, 296, 297, 298, 328, 357, 378, 386
names, I 12, 78, 121-30, 131, 132, 141, 146, 148, 149, 150, 163, 164, 165, 167, 168, 169, 170, 172, 174, 175, 177, 180, 181, 183, 185, 186, 191, 192, 199, 210, 217, 218, 231, 235, 247, 254, 261, 262, 265, 268, 275, 280, 293, 295, 297, 298, 313, 384, 387, 388, 393, 396, 406, 407, 411, 412, 426, 448, 465, 492, 493; II 1, 2, 13, 22, 23, 43, 282 rights of, 78, 167, 194, 221, 226, 249, 250, 264, 265, 269, 272, 274, 351, 375, 389, 390, 407, 411, 461, 466, 468, 489, 699, 706, 708, 712, 713, 728, 729, 730, 732, 737; II 18, 285, 288, 345
See also, Tendencies, hereditary

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Anger, as kusiut dramatic prerogative, II 250, 252 Animals:
anthropomorphized, I 26, 51, 70, 71, 283, 513, 523, 555, 584, 622, 686; II 245
as crest, I 37, 78, 79, 97, 100, 101, 200, 221, 251, 261, 300, 461, 496 as kusiut puppet, II 247
as medicine, I 718, 720
attitude towards, I 29, 30, 35, 59, 61, 69, 70, 71, 74, 75, 81, 513, 584, 679; II 528 dances of, I 71, 283, 303, 341, 583, 622; II 426, 428 graphic depictions of, II 144, 176, 181
origin of, I 4, 35, 69, 131, 303
potency of, I 29, 68, 70, 71, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 114, 362, 373, 496, 555, 584, 672, 720; II 142, 180, 237, 378, 385, 419-35, 460, 461
power from, I 283, 577 preferences of, I 71, 75, 76, 112, 757 stories of, II 419-35
use of, I 70, 75; II 382
See also, Marriage, with mammals; Shamans, animal; Spirit, of animals Ănə'likwolsaix, I 27, 28, 323; II 16, 27, 31, 32, 53, 57, 58, 59, 60, 62, 69, 70, 91, 122, 126, 145, 146, 147, 161, 177, 178, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 196, 198, 207, 208, 218, 219, 220, 221, 223, 228, 239, 240, 245, 246, 324:
husband of, II 238
in connection with repository, II 8, 9, 10, 21, 22
mask of, II 121, 125, 143, 175-6, 195, 197, 205, 206, 217, 223, 226
Ants, as kusiut dramatic prerogative, II 250, 252
Anutlix, I 15
Ănutsqua·xstl, I 7: first settlers at, I 7
Ănuyax, II 132, 134, 135, 136, 140, 142, 152, 156
Ăsăn·ăn·i, I 9, 266, 267; II 372, 514
Ăs·ax", I 14
Ăskla, I 15:
first people at, I 331
origin myth of, I 331-2
Athapascan, I 1
Ăläs·iaistl, I 49, 74, 498, 507
Ăłmăk", II 64, 69:
as kingfisher, II 182
graphic depiction of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Atnarko River, I 10; II 436
Awakener, supernatural, dance (kusiut) of, II 239:
patron of, II 239
Ăgut·i, I 15, 20:
first settlers at, I 326, 327, 328
origin myth of, I 327-8

a am'kl·a:

dances, I 277, 278
songs, I 277; II 285, 288

B

Băhnk', I 63, 64, 65, 604, 605
Bark-beater, supernatural, dance (kusiut) of, II 239:
dancer, name of, II 322
patron, II 239, 322, 323
song, text of, II 322-3
Bat, II 336:
as kusiut dramatic prerogative, II 250
potency of, I 736
Bathing, I 103, 105, 112, 113, 114, 369, 370, 457, 492, 539, 549, 550, 601, 604, 606, 608, 609, 610, 613, 641, 645, 650, 651, 708, 711, 738, 749; II 83, 97, 106, 112, 452, 461, 479, 527, 528
Bay of the Thousand Islands, I 61 Bear:
aid from, I 679, 681
anthropomorphized, I 678, 679, 680, 681
as crest, I 221, 440
as incubus, II 71, 79
as medicine, I 712, 723, 755
hunting, I 133, 272, 680; II 263, 458
marriage with, I 678, 679, 680, 681
potency of, I 73, 76, 534, 536, 678, 679
preferences of, I 76
taboos re, I 76, 77, 329, 757

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Bear (cont'd):
transformation of, I 650, 671, 678, 680, 681
use of, I 77, 337, 602, 603, 665, 683, 689; II 36, 37, 73, 77, 102, 180, 242, 483
See also, Bear, black; Bear, grizzly Bear, black, I 617; II 419:
aid from, I 314, 315, 316, 318, 319, 648
anthropomorphized, I 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 328, 687
as crest, I 36, 79, 328
as medicine, I 703, 707
as supernatural shaman, II 500 dances by, I 318
potency of, I 317, 318, 319, 584, 645, 646, 649; II 500
transformation of, I 314, 315, 316, 318, 650
use of, I 2, 584, 639, 661; II 103
Bear, grizzly, I 617, 718; II 419, 424:
aid from, I 641, 642, 645, 646, 647, 648, 650, 651
anthropomorphized, I 323, 347, 584, 642, 650
as crest, I 36, 79, 201, 250, 304, 305, 312, 347
dance (kusiut) of, II 241:
dancer, name of, II 241
patron, II 241
as medicine, I 700, 709, 710
potency of, I 30, 41, 71, 321, 636, 641, 646, 647; II 430, 431, 500 supernatural, II 241, 460, 467
transformation of, I 323, 642, 646, 647, 650
use of, I 2, 205
Bearberry, red, II 495:
graphic portrayal of, II 194
Beating-sticks, I 342, 351, 506, 560, 570, 703; II 25, 34, 35, 65, 67, 69, 74, 75, 78, 82, 83, 87, 88, 89, 95, 98, 99, 115, 119, 120, 122, 130, 134, 141, 144, 145, 152, 156, 161, 162, 163, 168, 169, 171, 174, 185, 193, 209, 212, 214, 216, 230, 245, 249, 255, 260, 270, 271, 317, 358, 460, 467
See also, Shamans, method of treating sick Beaver, I 617, 718; II 289, 502, 506:
anthropomorphized, I 71, 73, 289, 512, 523, 584
aid from, I 523
as crest, I 190, 217, 307; II 281
as medicine, I 700, 710, 711, 712, 716, 717, 733 hunting of, I 511, 657, 658
origin of, I 35, 306, 308, 312, 313
potency of, I 71, 73, 536; II 234
taboos re, I 362, 757
use of, I 2, 134, 369, 657; II 380, 461, 514
Bella Bella:
as carpenters, I 39, 40, 269, 345 beliefs and practices of, I 39, 50, 53, 134, 135, 137, 149, 176, 182, 206, 224, 324, 327, 330, 334, 341, 344, 346, 350, 355, 356, 403, 418, 438, 453, 458, 459, 460, 464, 484, 563, 597, 644, 702, 708; II 28, 30, 44, 46, 72, 80, 117, 127, 466, 508 contact with other tribes, I 17, 18, 19, 21, 208, 287, 305, 319, 327, 467, 472, 477, 484, 490, 541, 689, 697, 743; II 20, 30, 44, 193, 230, 285, 295, 342, 348, 349, 350, 357, 358, 359, 366, 376, 377, 414 cultural influences from, I 19, 53, 182, 195, 197, 202, 242, 251, 327, 344, 357, 407, 458; II 280, 542
first settlers at, I 347
individual incidents, I 45, 52, 63, 116, 134, 135, 146, 228, 229, 230, 231, 251, 264, 325, 334, 344, 346, 368, 369, 529, 530, 536, 546, 555, 598, 660, 667, 704, 734, 742, 746; II 188, 218, 262, 288, 297, 347, 352, 361, 370, 371, 376, 505, 507, 508, 509 linguistics, I 19, 472, 486; II 335
names, I 344, 346, 350, 352; II 328
origin of, I 312
origin myths of, I 344-7, 356-7
nasek myth, I 360
villages, I 19
Bentinck Arm, I 109
Berries, I 143, 195, 288, 340, 421, 678; II 362, 366, 370, 377, 389: bringing of, II 42, 188, 192, 472
capture of, II 189, 196
graphic portrayal of, II 192, 193

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 in land of ghosts, II 213 land of, I 53, 54; II 188

origin of, I 88, 321
supernatural, I 537, 691
taboos re, I 371, 691
use of, I 3, 88, 189, 214, 215, 216, 217, 245, 454, 468, 677, 691; II 406, 408, 409, 410
Berry picker, professional, I 265
Bilberry, dwarf:
graphic portrayal of, II 194
tall, graphic portrayal of, II 194 thin-leaved, graphic portrayal of, II 194 Birch, I 311, 714; II 53, 78, 341:
as medicine, I 727
Bird-arrow, as hamatsa dramatic prerogative, II 252
Birds, I 2:
anthropomorphized, II 188, 480
as crest, I 37, 78, 79, 97, 100, 101, 200, 221, 251, 261, 300, 461, 469, 496
as hamatsa puppet, II 247
as medicine, I 720
attitude towards, I 35, 81, 513; II 188
dance (hamatsa) of the, II 236 dancer, name of, II 236
patron, II 236
designs, I 100; II 176
dramatic depiction of, II 181, 182, 236
land of, II 481
origin of, I 35, 302, 303; II 386
potency of, I 53, 71, 77, 513; II 188, 236, 237, 378, 385, 458, 459
transformation of, I 672
use of, I 3; II 382, 444
Blackberry, graphic portrayal of, II 194
Blackbird, graphic portrayal of, II 245
Blackfish:
as crest, I 79, 477, 487, 488, 489
potency of, I 51, 352, 354, 544, 545
Blueberry, graphic portrayal of, II 194
Blunder Harbour, II 362
Bodi, I 60, 61, 62, 63
Bracken:
mother of, I 92
use of, II 451
Breaker (hamatsa) dance, I 602; II 24, 26, 123-8: costume, I 602
dancer:
call to, II 125, 126, 127
name of, II 124
power of, II 58, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 250
privileges of, II 73, 86, 118, 123, 124, 148
restrictions on, II 38, 124
in land above, II 125
masks, II 125, 127
origin, I 329
origin myth, II 124
patron, II 125, 325
presents as compensation, II 124, 127
ritual, II 124-7
of other tribes, II 125, 127
songs, II 123, 125, 126
theme, II 123, 125
supernatural, II 126
Breath, I 95, 101
Buffaloberry, I 88:
dramatic depiction of, II 194
Bull-head, II 232:
all from, I 74
dance (hamatsa) of the supernatural, II 237-9
potency of, I 74, 342, 523; II 238
preferences of, II 238
taboos re, I 368; II 238
use of, I 3, 368, 522
Bull-roarer, II 28, 382:
as hamatsa dramatic prerogative, II 250
Bunchberry, graphic portrayal of, II 194
Burke Channel, I 63, 521, 598; II 365
Burnt Ridge, I 88
Butt Inlet, I 22, 134, 305
Butterfly, as string figure, II 549, 550

C

Calendar, I 27-8, 44
Calvert Island:
first settlers at, I 343
incidents concerning individuals, I 165
origin myth of, I 343-4
Cannibal (hamatsa) dance, I 317; II 11, 14, 15, 21, 23, 24, 30, 38, 71-117, 289, 359, 510: costume, II 106, 108
dancer:
burial of, II 75, 81

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Cannibal dancer (cont'd):
call to, II 7, 8, 72, 85, 90, 91, 92, 97, 102, 105, 106, 108, 109, 111, 113, 308, 309 dangers to, II 71, 73, 74, 75, 76, 81, 93, 103
names of, I 317, 323, 324, 344; II 72, 85, 91, 101, 110, 113, 115, 116, 307, 308, 309:
transmission of, II 101, 110
power of, I 614; II 7, 8, 58, 61, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 86, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 123, 124, 135, 174, 187, 212, 215, 221, 228, 232, 250, 263, 288, 308, 309
privileges of, II 73, 86, 88, 123, 124, 148, 257
restrictions on, II 38
dancing, style of, II 45, 108
incubus, I 317, 323; II 78, 79, 80, 82, 85, 87, 101, 103, 108, 117, 308 interactions with other tribes, I 344; II 117, 309
mask, II 90, 91, 116, 117, 309
origin myth, II 110, 115, 116
origin of, I 317, 323, 344; II 116, 242
patron, II 7, 8, 71, 81, 113, 308, 309
prerogative, II 10, 58, 71, 101, 312:
biting, II 71, 72-101, 107, 109:
abbreviated ritual, II 90-1 oneself, II 71, 111-14 eating corpses, II 71, 107, 110 eating dogs, II 71, 92, 93, 101-6, 107, 111, 112, 115 eating raw salmon, II 71, 106
origin of, II 91, 101, 113, 115, 116, 242
validation of, II 72
presents as compensation, II 85, 86, 87, 89, 90, 96, 97, 124
repository, I 317, 323; II 101, 113, 115, 116, 308 rituals, II 8, 21, 71-117, 254, 265, 266: errors in, II 20
foreigners at, II 97
of other tribes, II 30, 80, 107, 117, 349, 350, 359
songs, II 80, 81, 82, 83, 87, 88, 90, 91, 96, 98, 99, 101, 105, 106, 112, 117, 123, 266:
texts, II 307-10
themes, II 8, 80, 81, 82, 90, 96, 99, 105, 106, 123, 266
Canoe, I 127, 644, 723; II 125, 383, 384, 394, 427, 428, 445, 451, 486, 538-40: as gift, I 304, 392, 396, 465
blackfish, I 352 decoration of, I 80
gull, I 663
made of:
bark, II 540
birch, I 311
copper, I 297, 311, 319, 320
jack-pine, I 610
skin, I 63, 507; II 540 making of, I 57, 58, 162, 261, 263, 724; II 352, 359, 540 merganser, I 331, 332, 697
of ghosts, I 582, 583
of Yulatimut, I 529 representation of, I 462 river, I 216, 217, 315, 316, 647, 672; II 373, 414, 473, 538, 539 river, lashed, II 19, 33, 233, 474, 507, 540
salmon, I 86, 345, 346; II 474, 475, 480 sea-going, I 57, 209, 210, 225, 272, 319, 327, 539, 560, 595, 597 sea-lion, I 356, 663
skámtsk, I 322, 486
spring salmon, I 664
supernatural, I 53, 54, 55, 83, 318; II 41, 42, 59, 60, 188, 295 used in war, II 341, 342, 343, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 356, 357, 363, 364, 366, 368, 369, 370, 371, 374, 377
See also, Carpenters, canoe-making; Tsúxsh
Canoe Crossing, I 162; II 444
Cape Modge, I 598, 649
Caribou:
as medicine, I 703
origin of, I 331
potency of, II 428, 429
skin, I 2, 188
use of, I 67, 637; II 430, 515

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Carpenters, I 97, 496, 763; II 382, 532: canoe-making, I 57, 58, 269, 610; II 538, 539 ceremonial construction by, I 193, 194, 195, 203, 220, 221, 227, 238, 249, 269, 275, 305, 341, 348, 439, 440, 442, 461, 463, 471, 477, 489, 493, 558, 566, 568; II 27, 28, 53, 54, 55, 57, 65, 68, 79, 103, 104, 106, 110, 115, 132, 133, 134, 139, 142, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 155, 157, 160, 162, 170, 175, 177, 191, 197, 201, 204, 205, 210, 213, 217, 221, 223, 226, 228, 231, 233, 236, 247, 373 professional, I 263, 269, 270, 695, 704 social functions of, I 441, 704, 715; II 27, 66, 154, 177 supernatural, I 24, 35, 39, 40, 57, 83, 101, 307, 331, 361, 435, 467, 468; II 181
See also, Mämäkälimak; Mälläpemak; Mämmälälimu; Supernatural Carpenters, dance (hainai) of; Yalämu Carriers, I 18, 574; II 518:
attitude towards, I 18, 19, 281; II 372
beliefs and practices of, I 18, 19, 44, 80, 357, 637, 682, 757; II 352, 380, 540 contact with, I 2, 17, 18, 22, 160, 308, 330, 332, 477, 479, 480, 483, 489, 492, 639, 741; II 28, 40, 381, 509, 538
cultural influences from, I 331; II 270, 336, 337, 528 incidents concerning, I 45, 331, 647, 596, 598, 605, 613, 635, 676, 680, 697; II 431, 510 myth of, 510-12
origin of, I 312, 331
settlements of, I 15, 16, 18, 335, 340 war with, I 601, 719; II 343, 372-6, 463 Carving, I 78, 80, 142, 172, 217, 369, 231, 296, 308, 339, 341, 345, 607, 669, 672, 723; II 275, 532:
of masks, II 27, 54
Cascade Inlet, I 21, 599; II 414
Cat-fish, I 360:
anthropomorphized, II 419, 420
Cedar, I 1, 2, 3, 4, 17, 83, 251, 311, 354, 369, 532, 621, 654, 658, 660; II 202 386, 387, 411, 425, 482, 537, 539:
as medicine, I 578, 580, 724; II 108
cedar-bark, preparation of, II 540-2 cedar-bark beaters, supernatural, I 640 yellow, II 168, 177, 352, 542:
as medicine, I 732
Cemeteries, I 20, 444, 450, 452, 453, 455, 461, 462, 480, 490, 504, 508, 509, 546, 586, 751, 752; II 307, 308, 457
Ceremonial chastity, I 76, 101, 110-16, 187, 253, 271, 401, 427, 522, 525, 526, 527, 530, 531, 537, 548, 550, 574, 579, 591, 601, 608, 609, 612, 615, 616, 649, 658, 680, 695, 705, 718, 730, 756, 759; II 42, 381, 454, 455, 457, 503 Chiefs, I 128, 129, 163-82, 188, 204, 247, 255, 261, 269, 281, 304, 379, 433, 4[illegible]423; II 23, 28, 37, 38, 97, 150, 36[illegible] basis of, I 123, 137, 141, 163, 169, 171, 185, 186, 187, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 231, 232, 233, 234, 236, 243, 261, 293, 408, 409, 463, 496, 627, 630, 659; II 24, 230 burial rites of, I 20, 344, 446, 450, 451, 461, 464, 466, 473, 751 children of, I 402, 404, 405, 428, 430, 642, 668, 708; II 33, 34, 437, 445 death of, I 432, 435, 441, 535 dog as, I 5, 174
foreign, I 134, 137, 165, 175, 176, 224, 229, 253, 338, 347, 350, 351, 402, 649; II 347, 348, 349, 351, 357, 361, 362 functions of, I 106, 125, 128, 130, 134, 142, 145, 148, 170, 171, 172, 176, 178, 190, 193, 195, 198, 205, 208, 209, 210, 215, 219, 226, 231, 241, 245, 246, 255, 279, 286, 288, 290, 291, 417, 430, 448, 449, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 478, 479, 484, 591, 651, 652, 653, 753, 754, 755; II 278, 342, 354, 359 meetings and meeting places of, I 95, 177, 178; II 10, 11, 14
of ghosts, I 304, 307

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Chiefs (cont'd):
powers of, I 116, 135, 141, 158, 173-9, 181, 185, 233, 247, 268, 280, 274, 293, 304, 338, 374, 368, 372, 386, 403, 404, 406, 428, 429, 443, 458, 459, 460, 462, 476, 493, 494, 698, 717, 740, 755; II 17, 22, 52, 91, 190, 227, 242, 243, 257, 278, 338, 341, 348, 350, 355, 357, 358, 367, 511, 512, 522
privileges of, II 339, 356, 357
Childbirth, I 69, 245, 361-7, 505, 615, 716:
ritual portrayal of, II 197, 198, 199
See also, Tobacco, at birth
Chilkatin, I 32, 146; II 19, 337, 509, 511, 512, 519
China Hat, I 52, 209; II 218, 349, 350, 354, 502
Chum, I 61, 63, 349, 360, 522, 589, 619, 620, 643, 644; II 423, 424, 466, 501, 503
Clearwater, I 205, 594; II 244, 245
Cloud, marriage with, II 432
Clover, I 537:
graphic portrayal of, II 194
Clowns, II 178, 179, 208:
mask of, II 179, 223
Cod, II 401
black:
catching of, I 90, 251, 252, 253
taboos regarding, I 252, 253, 254
red rock:
as medicine, I 703
graphic portrayal of, II 186
mask of, II 186
Coffin, I 434, 437, 438, 439, 443, 444, 445, 446, 450, 453, 454, 456, 477, 479, 480, 481, 492, 614, 668, 718, 739, 740, 747, 748, 750, 753; II 361, 411, 413, 437, 438, 439, 441, 445, 446, 450, 457, 474
Cold, I 43, 668, 670, 673, 674
Cold wind, I 43, 673; II 330:
anthropomorphized, II 337, 433, 434, 435
See also, Winds
Copper, I 300, 311, 317, 319, 330, 343, 346, 359, 489; II 160, 383, 536:
copper crown, I 483, 489
copper woman, I 639 incidents in use of, I 297, 483 lead of, I 347
manufacture of, I 253, 254
names of, I 256, 259
name of person, II 499
origin of, I 254, 465
ornaments, I 187, 276, 351, 359, 389, 457, 689 pictures of, I 415, 462, 463 plaques, I 222, 225, 256, 253-61, 304, 311, 321, 323, 333, 398, 479, 490, 491, 649, 650; II 297, 338, 445, 446, 516 types of, I 252, 253, 254, 346 uses of, I 472; II 417 value of, I 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260
See also, Painting, on copper Cormorant, potency of, II 188, 189, 331, 394, 395
Cottonwood, I 2, 3, 487, 700; II 410:
as medicine, I 724, 725, 728
graphic portrayal of, II 198, 199
mask representing, II 199
use of, I 760; II 520
Cougar, II 419
Cowichan, I 707; II 218, 434
Cow-parsnip, graphic portrayal of, II 194 Crab, I 536; II 423:
origin of, II 423, 424
Crabs-plus, I 133, 199; II 393, 394, 503: gaming sticks of, I 603, 633; II 379
Crystal deformation, I 702, 703
Creation beliefs:
of animals, I 32, 36, 39
of mankind, I 18, 122, 135, 159, 172 of universe, I 34, 35, 36, 39, 40
See also, Alpamine; Carpenters, supernatural Crests, I 78, 79, 80, 97, 173, 217, 256, 272, 314, 448; II 300, 305, 307, 327, 329, 330, 331: as design, I 80, 461, 469, 470
depiction of, II 273
graphic portrayal of, II 274
masked figure as insignia, I 97, 300, 301, 302, 330, 331, 332, 336, 337, 338, 340, 343, 352, 359, 367, 375, 376, 377, 393, 438, 448, 463,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

463, 472, 476, 477, 487, 488, 489, 491, 493, 496; II 272, 275, 279, 280, 281, 327
of foreign tribes, I 376 on memorial post, I 439, 462 representations at funeral, I 439, 440, 441, 442, 451, 462, 470
See also, Animals, as crest; Birds, as crest; Moon, as crest; Mountain, as crest; Sun, as crest; and specific animals Crow, II 377:
power of, II 439
Crow Statue of Raven, II 408, 418
Curvature, II 376

D

Dancing:
styles of, I 206, 211, 237, 239, 278, 279, 280, 421, 560, 561, 566, 581; II 60, 109, 177, 178, 187, 214, 223, 413, 426
See also, Ts'ak' society; Kwakiut society; Xaxaid society Darkness and Sleep, dance (Xaxaid) of:
mask, II 236
patron, II 236
Dark-Shade, dance (Xaxaid) of, II 233-4:
costume, II 233
dances, name of, II 233:
power of, II 233, 234
patron, II 233
repository, II 233
songs, II 233, 234:
theme, II 233
Dawn, dance (Xaxaid) of, II 239-40:
patron, II 239
Dead: disposal of:
cave disposal, I 710
cremation, I 430, 431, 511
description of funeral in 1922, I 474-83 disposal of property, I 443, 444, 449, 452, 453, 454, 488, 491, 494, 498, 499; II 313 expenses, and contributions towards, I 330, 358, 361, 400, 417, 434, 435, 477, 478 funeral, I 129, 436, 437, 443: procession, I 443, 444, 480 interment, I 415-16, 431, 432, 434, 476, 480, 481, 482, 502, 542; II 440, 457, 466 post-funeral rituals, I 433, 434, 457, 495 preparation of body, I 436, 437, 477, 739 speeches at grave, I 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 454, 479, 481, 493 tree disposal, I 367, 430; II 411, 412, 437
See also, Fire, at funerals; Kwakiut society, dead, disposal of; Mourning; Potlatch, memorial; Xaxaid society, dead, disposal of; Slaves, burial of; Taboos fate of, I 37, 42, 56, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 102, 186, 232, 332, 436, 437, 438, 446, 447, 449, 451, 465, 468, 470, 481, 484, 485, 486, 487, 489, 491-512, 577, 579, 581, 583, 678, 689, 512 property of, I 452, 453, 454 restoration of, I 314, 316, 319, 338, 366, 541, 542, 544, 546, 554, 578, 583, 584, 586, 668, 669, 674, 684, 686; II 132, 154, 157, 241, 469, 472, 489 return of, I 184, 186, 187, 203, 216, 220, 221, 222, 233, 237, 238, 239, 240, 242, 252, 255, 258, 260, 418, 459, 460, 462, 472, 476, 477, 487, 488, 489, 491, 495, 496; II 295, 296, 328, 329, 330, 331, 453
See also, Crests, masked figure as metaphor; Ghosts
Dean Channel, I 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 21, 30, 349, 358, 361, 598; II 234, 436, 483
Dean Inlet, I 330
Dean River, I 13, 14, 15, 16, 50, 57, 326, 327, 328, 330, 331, 333, 335, 351, 386, 388, 527, 591, 592, 600, 606, 611; II 386, 418, 504, 509:
fur settlers on Upper Dean, I 326 Death:
attitude towards, I 448
causes of, I 434-5, 438, 498, 502, 696,

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Death, causes of (cont'd):
697, 698, 720, 721, 722, 730, 732, 742, 763 omens of, I 91, 334, 431-3, 521, 535, 552; II 235
origin of, I 83-5, 90, 434
wailing at, I 334, 435, 439, 443, 445, 446, 448, 477, 479, 480, 535
See also, Dead, fate of; Ghosts; Potlatch, memorial; Sa'ema; Taboos Death-dealing power, I 48, 314-16, 319, 337, 345, 346, 349, 350, 540, 541, 542, 544, 603, 624, 625, 627, 665, 667, 689; II 241, 494 Debts:
incurring and repaying, I 188, 189, 205, 216, 218, 219, 223, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 259, 261, 415, 478, 483; II 37, 524
remembering of, I 143, 227, 228, 289, 369 Deer, I 70, 335, 617, 708, 718; II 348:
as crest, I 79, 330
as medicine, I 717, 718
as Sna'olnulx Alqanxim, II 180
graphic portrayal of, II 181
origin of, I 330
potency of, I 289, 303, 536, 584; II 289, 389-92, 425, 426, 427, 428, 500
transformation of, I 296, 536, 649
use of, I 2, 176, 177, 245, 276, 652; II 34, 45, 106, 107, 132, 161, 213, 235, 289, 353, 413, 489
Devil-fish, I 327, 347
Devil's Club, I 2, 75, 113, 529, 549, 650, 680
as medicine, I 728, 738
Disease:
cause of, I 95, 101, 103, 139, 434, 452, 500, 501, 552, 555, 557, 559, 561, 562, 563, 573, 578, 579, 580, 596, 603, 607, 609, 654, 660, 661, 736, 737, 754, 757, 758; II 200 curing of, I 47, 75, 96, 101, 104, 139, 518
See also, Medicine; Shamans, method of treating sick; Smallpox Dreams, I 144, 184, 402, 414, 416, 418, 419, 422, 428, 478, 483, 622, 627, 628, 631; II 410:
shaming ceremony re, I 419-22; II 209
Djeldkanx, I 732; II 362, 368, 369
Dock, as medicine, I 728
Dog-fish, I 364:
as medicine, I 724, 725, 733
Dogs, I 57, 174, 688; II 93, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 111, 116, 124, 132:
anthropomorphized, I 347, 433, 642, 643, 644, 684
as medicine, I 704
as string figure, II 567
hunting, I 624, 626, 627, 679, 687, 690, 712, 713; II 396, 397, 485, 506
marriage with, I 425, 642, 643, 644, 645
medicine for, I 712-14
names of, I 130, 675, 293, 310, 322, 356; II 485
origin of, I 347
potency of, I 55, 65, 72, 73, 93, 500, 582; II 396, 397
use of, II 106, 107, 132, 161
Douglas Channel, II 354
Dreams, I 38, 46, 94, 98, 99, 108, 115, 365, 366, 514, 518, 548, 549, 552, 565, 572, 608-18, 724, 735: omens and foreknowledge in, I 564, 566, 592, 608, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616; II 481 Drumming, I 26, 389, 390, 488, 560; II 33, 47, 48, 56, 59, 69, 71, 73, 74, 77, 83, 92, 93, 94, 95, 104, 112, 130, 133, 134, 136, 141, 146, 153, 156, 157, 162, 165, 183, 184, 191, 193, 197, 204 208, 228, 230, 231, 247, 255, 288, 316, 317, 319:
prerogative of, I 207, 227, 264-5, 277, 333, 464 Ducks, I 3, 303, 605; II 115, 459: harlequin, I 540:
hunting of, I 320, 540
use of, I 541
mallard, I 76, 635, 637:
anthropomorphized, II 475, 476
as medicine, I 654
potency of, II 42, 431
use of, I 649; II 468
Dudzeep[w], I 307, 310, 311, 312, 574, 575

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

E

Eagle, I 35, 81, 309; II 444:
anthropomorphized, I 333, 531
as crest, I 36, 81, 217, 220, 221, 232, 237, 239, 240, 250, 298, 301, 326, 332, 334, 335, 339, 340, 380, 477, 485, 487, 488, 489, 493, 599; II 274, 286, 326
as dance, I 312
as incubus, II 77, 79, 307, 308
as hactat patron, II 266
as string figure, II 560, 561, 562
potency of, I 77, 309, 323, 342, 350, 630; II 286, 459
transformation of, I 350
use of, I 569, 726, 759; II 43, 44, 45, 48, 104, 162, 190, 202, 338, 354, 357, 358, 477, 478, 496, 497 Eagle, bald:
anthropomorphized, II 188, 189
as crest, I 79
as name of village, I 9
Eagle, golden, as crest, I 306, 440, 676 Earthquake, I 23, 42, 43; II 237:
dance (hactat) of:
dancer:
call to, II 237
name of, II 237
patron, II 208, 237
song, II 237:
theme of, II 237
Echo, I 302, 306, 309, 341; II 274, 405, 406, 407:
as crest, I 323; II 275
mask of, II 27
Eclipse, II 166, 167, 224, 225, 315
Education, I 143, 227, 228, 289, 290, 291, 367-70, 399, 400, 711, 722, 723
Elche Harbour, I 21; II 427
Elderberry:
as medicine, I 727
graphic portrayal of, II 194
use of, II 379
Endogamy, I 120, 121, 137, 140, 374, 375, 378, 396
Extra-marital relations, I 27, 111, 112, 113, 115, 160, 372, 402, 403, 427-30, 541, 542, 617, 633, 642, 644; II 216, 218, 221, 410, 412, 413, 480, 490

F

False hellebore, I 53, 53, 69, 113, 180:
as medicine, I 723, 725, 732, 733
Family, I 137, 141, 142, 143-50, 154, 157, 303, 307, 329, 330, 333, 334, 235, 236, 361, 367, 368, 376, 380, 382, 391, 394, 395, 398, 399, 400, 401, 419, 436, 438, 453; II 256
Famine, I 368, 621, 634, 635; II 457, 500, 501, 502
Fern, II 432, 433, 453, 501
Fern root, I 607
Fir, I 536, 634; II 612
Fir-Bark, II 411
Fire:
at funerals, I 443, 464, 469-80, 472, 473, 476, 480, 492, 494, 495, 498, 508, 509 (hactat) dance, II 235-6:
dancer, name of, II 235
origin of, II 236
theft of, I 298, 303
See also, Myths, cataclysmic, fire
Firewin, I 44, 676
Fish:
anthropomorphized, I 26
attitude towards, I 313
fish traps, I 3, 28, 37; II 404, 417, 418, 501 graphic depiction of, II 176
land of fish, I 651 methods of fishing, I 3, 80, 90, 306, 313, 351, 352, 353, 522, 661, 669; II 341, 335, 395, 398, 417, 504
origin of, I 4, 117, 320
potency of, I 31, 72, 74, 77, 86, 87, 513; II 383
transformation of, I 31
use of, I 3, 20, 131, 189; II 263, 270
See also, Salmon, weirs (or traps); Tobacco Fisher, I 617:
as medicine, I 713
Fishhook found, II 370
Flood, see Myths, cataclysmic, flood Flowering juneberry, graphic portrayal of, II 194
Fog, as hactat dramatic prerogative, II 246, 247, 248, 249, 250

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Fort Rupert, see Kwakiutl
Fox, black, II 431, 432
Fraser River, I 138, 318, 373, 388, II 383
Frederick Island, II 436
Frobisher, graphic portrayal of, II 196,
Frog, power of, I 607, 608
Ptarmigan, I 77, 343, 362, 411, 438, 713, 720, 724, 728, 729, 735, 737, II 419 Pumpe:
as medicine, I 722
(Sacred) dance, II 24, 144-6:
dances, call to, II 143, 315:
name of, II 144, 146, 313, 315, 316, 317
name, transmission of, II 144
power of, II 143, 144, 145, 313, 315
origin of, II 142
patron, II 313, 314, 317
repository, II 143
songs, II 142, 143, 146:
texts, II 313-15
theme, II 142

G

Gambling, I 93, 179, 380, 419, 430, 433, 434, II 38, 156, 299, 360, 379, 380, 381 Games, I 419, 430, 431, 433, 434, 438, II 38, 39, 341, 378-84, 343, 347, 351, 352: archery, II 381
canoe-racing, II 379
smoking, II 379 tournament, II 383-4 ways, II 382
wrestling, I 443, 443, II 378, 414
See also Gambling; Spring figures
Gardner Canal, I 17, II 324
Geese, I 3, 270, 271, 368, 380:
Canada, II 468:
anthropomorphized, II 473, 474
geneses of, II 439
use of, I 420, II 467, 468
Ghost (Sacred) dance, II 311-14:
dances, call to, 311, 313, 315:
name of, II 311, 319
power of, II 313, 315, 316
restrictions on, II 38
dancing, style of, II 314
dematerial visits of ghosts, II 313, 313
origin of, II 311
patron, II 73, 84, 311
rituals, of other tribes, II 314
songs, II 314, 315:
text, 318-19
themes, II 314, 315
Ghosts, I 99, 415, 496, 500, 517, II 315, 416: actions of, I 11, 34, 434, 472, 497, 498, 500, 501, 506, 507, 548, 579, 580, 581, 583, 587, 734, 737, II 314
aid from, II 309
chiefs of, I 498, 504, 507
dances of, I 497, 499, 500, 506, II 444, 447
description of, I 11, 34, 500, 502, 577, II 311, 312, 315, 316 furnish, I 507
land of, I 23, 26, 11, 99, 499, 497, 498, 500, II 307:
description of, I 500, 509, 578, 582, 583, 590, II 314
visits to, I 26, 34, 110, 499, 507, 508, 509, 510, 577, 578, 579, 582, 583, 584, II 312 myths of, I 502-12 powers to, I 499, 510, 512, 513, 573, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 578, 580, II 38, 314
privileges of, II 73, 84
visits from, I 34, 437, 446, 449, 499, 500, 501, 502, 504, 506, 509, 510, 577, 578, 579, 580, 584, 587, II 307, 311, 447
See also Dead, fate of; Heaven, in land of ghosts; Sun, in land of ghosts Good luck (or fortune), supernatural, I 44, 198, 199, 432, 517, 534-38, 649, 692, 704, II 249, 427, 476: myths illustrating, I 538, 539-5, 613-41, II 245-6
Grass Island, II 307:
first settlers on, II 295, 296
origin myth of, II 297

J:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Gooseberry, spiny swamp, I 680:
as medicine, I 73, 703, 720
graphic portrayal of, II 194, 198
mask representing, II 198
use of, I 610; II 279
Grass:
graphic portrayal of, II 198
mask representing, II 198
Grebe, II 433
Grizzly Claw, dance (Sanim) of, II 240:
mask of, II 240
person, II 240
Green Bay, I 11, 48, 314, 316, 317, 318, 443, 600; II 263
Green River, I 31
Ground-hog, primary of, I 433
Grouse, I 2, 661:
as medicine, I 703
Blue, primary of, II 404, 405 hunting condition, I 661
use of, II 9
Gull, I 537; II 501, 538:
as food, I 330
as medicine, I 704, 724
primary of, I 61, 94, 343, 399, 443; II 116, 393
use of, II 468
Gum, II 413, 414, 490, 504

H

Hagenburg, I 9; II 413
Halibut, I 319; II 318, 337, 381: beliefs and practices of, I 44, 80, 313; II 476, 540
Halibut:
anthropomorphized, II 479
as food, I 304
fins, I 304; II 405, 483
primary of, I 331; II 180, 405, 434, 435
use of, I 331, 444, 454; II 394, 395, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403
Hawkins, I 44, 45; II 309, 310:
graphic portrayal of, II 117, 146, 166
as snake, II 37, 180
Hawley Bay, II 253
Hawk:
anthropomorphized, II 188, 189
primary of, II 439
Hawthorn:
as medicine, I 733
black, graphic portrayal of, II 194, 199
Hare, I 11, 38, 41, 43, 99, 383, 436, 438, 468, 630, 671, 677; II 468, 483, 490, 500, 509
Hemlock, I 208, 301:
as medicine, I 100, 378, 403, 713, 718, 734, 739
use of, I 311, 562, 604, 634, 680, 711; II 263, 283, 533 hemlock-bark, as food, I 3, 189, 713
Heralds:
assumption of prerogatives, I 247, 248, 261, 483 choosing of, I 290 contests of, I 267; II 181-2 functions of, 189, 190, 196, 199, 203, 204, 207, 209, 217, 218, 224, 235, 237, 244-8, 256, 279, 289, 316, 349, 363, 383, 388, 398, 438, 443, 459, 465, 467, 468, 471, 478, 522, 543, 612, 761; II 21, 29, 33, 34, 44, 46, 48, 49, 51, 53, 55, 56, 57, 63, 66, 67, 68, 73, 74, 75, 78, 83, 83, 84, 86, 87, 88, 93, 96, 97, 98, 102, 103, 111, 113, 130, 136, 138, 139, 140, 141, 143, 144, 145, 146, 159, 161, 162, 164, 167, 168, 169, 171, 172, 174, 175, 176, 177, 190, 201, 204, 209, 211, 213, 217, 218, 230, 231, 232, 233, 247, 249, 252, 253, 264, 269 gifts to, I 236, 238, 244, 247, 248, 303, 738 in local shows, II 240 incidents to, I 299, 395; II 463 nature of, I 247, 248
origin of, I 247, 248
rights of, I 177, 261, 291 supernatural, I 206, 238, 239, 251, 256; II 144, 146, 181, 182, 183
See also, Chiefs, heralds Hemorrhoids, I 45, 84, 85, 171, 365; II 179, 188, 189, 192, 194:
graphic portrayal of, II 179
mask of, II 37, 180
Heron, I 35, 723:
anthropomorphized, II 188, 189

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Hawk (cont'd):
as crest, II 273
as string figure, II 567
graphic portrayal of, II 273
name of, I 675
potency of, I 331, 669, 670, 672, 673, 675
transformation of, I 722
Hearing, I 28, 334, 630; II 433, 479, 513;
anthropomorphized, II 475
graphic portrayal of, II 238
lend of, I 67, 651; II 475
origin of, I 67, 89
potency of, I 99; II 238, 477
Hearing-head, dance (facial) of the supernatural:
masks, II 238
person, II 238
Hot Springs, I 13, 15, 598, 601, 602, 603; 604, 605, 606, 609, 690 Houses:
description of, I 6, 7, 16, 17, 130, 142, 167, 176, 303, 367, 473, 686 ceremonies, I 299, 304, 306, 309, 333, 333, 340; II 43, 278, 279, 298, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331 idiosyncrasies, I 164, 193, 194, 195, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 310, 312, 322, 324, 325, 329, 331, 341, 349, 399, 599; II 370 in land otters, II 312
in land of ghosts, I 498, 507
in land under ocean, II 116
made of:
abalone, I 332
copper, I 297, 317, 331, 346, 447, 481; II 294
driftwood, I 331
evergreen boughs, I 296, 307; II 245 kelp, I 340
skins, I 308
of first settlers, II 296, 297 of dreamers, I 11, 13, 303, 317, 331, 332, 333, 334, 597, 615; II 241, 296 stepped semi-subterranean, I 30, 194, 195, 334, 341, 380, 748, 749; II 370, 438, 444, 459 subterranean, at Hot Springs, I 601, 602
Huckleberry, black, graphic portrayal of, II 194 Hummingbird:
as crest, I 291
as facial puppet, II 246, 247, 248
potency of, I 126; II 133, 418, 419
Hunters:
method of acquiring skill, I 704, 705, 706, 709, 717 preparatory propitiation by, I 71, 76, 77, 105, 109, 112, 113, 115, 116, 271, 272, 128, 133, 134, 136, 577, 606, 612, 614, 616, 617, 622, 624, 625, 680, 688, 731 professional, I 261, 270-3; II 110
protective measures of, I 92, 734, 737, 739
See also, Hunting, methods; Taboos, of hunting Hunting, methods, I 30, 33, 270, 271, 272, 140, 584, 686; II 313, 440, 461, 462
See also, Hunters
Hunting-grounds, I 2, 3, 368, 378, 506, 520: bestowal of, I 5, 134, 393, 394
lending of, I 498
of ancestral family, I 134, 135, 146 ownership of, I 118, 120, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 139, 146, 261, 293, 330, 340, 358

I

Iminidiwain, II 49, 50
Incest, I 147, 374, 375, 404, 429
Incubus, see facial
Indian Cove, II 369, 370
Infanticide, I 364, 434; II 466
Interest, I 164, 188, 189, 205, 219, 227, 228, 229, 231, 232, 233, 238, 239, 288, 409
Iqla-cum, I 606
Iqwaxd, I 15, 340

J

Jalaidawal, II 434
Jealoy, I 21
Jealway: area of, I 360
contacts with, I 17, 625; II 383, 384
first settlers at, I 369
origin myth of, I 351-5

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

origin of name at Ulkatcho, I 254
tribal area, I 21, 347
xɛxɛxɛxɛ, I 247, 298, 308, 328, 329, 330, 648; II 275, 284, 290, 291, 454 xɛhɛmɛs-i, I 43, 44, 306, 670, 676, 677; II 337 xɛpɛnɛm, I 32; II 307
xɛpɛhɛm, I 399, 600, 607

J

Jacobsen's Bay, II 366
Jay, blue, as medicine, I 702
Jay, Rocky Mountain, potency of, II 631-3
Johnny Bay, I 347

K

Kɛlɛhɛ, I 300, 301, 302, 465, 471, 688, 689, 690
Kɛmɛ-ɛ, I 41, 42, 343, 678, 725; II 71, 294, 298, 303
Kɛmɛlɛmq', I 304, 305, 307, 676
Kɛmɛlɛhɛ, II 188, 191, 195, 196
Kɛmɛtɛmq', I 306; II 327
Killer whale, as crest, I 221, 222
Kimsquit:
attitude towards Bella Coola, I 698 beliefs of, I 149, 507, 526, 762; II 10, 22, 32, 42, 237, 238, 240
contact with other tribes, I 17, 22, 197, 264-5, 327, 331, 335, 338, 339, 384, 541, 592, 593; II 86, 123, 230, 288, 350, 365, 366, 367, 383, 384, 412
first settlers at, I 247, 280; II 265, 275, 285, 297 individual incidents at, I 1, 15, 45, 50, 55, 56, 65, 66, 75, 87, 88, 95, 107, 199, 233, 245, 247, 253, 264, 280, 284, 325, 327, 330, 339, 340, 369, 377, 433, 457, 481, 501, 505, 506, 508, 531, 533, 593, 614, 615, 624, 645, 701, 705, 707, 714, 718, 719, 721, 723, 726; II 20, 64, 67, 72, 110, 111, 129, 149, 167, 174, 196, 209, 214, 216, 234, 267, 272, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 289, 291, 292, 299, 300, 302, 306, 307, 315, 316, 321, 333, 339, 340, 343, 344, 348, 349, 351, 352, 354, 355, 411, 422, 423, 424, 439, 440, 481, 495, 496, 498, 500, 504, 505, 506 linguistics, I 17, 273 practices of, I 219, 327, 450, 459, 648, 751; II 25, 26, 47, 51, 55, 56, 61, 65, 66, 68, 74, 92, 101, 135, 139, 142, 152, 168, 175, 176, 190, 200, 206, 239, 261, 262, 276, 279, 280, 281, 336 tribal area, I 13, 17, 21, 131
villages, I 14, 15
Kimsquit River, I 14, 15, 16, 332, 335, 336, 340, 384, 527, 591, 653, 672; II 209, 274, 279, 285, 434, 486, 504, 505
Kingcome Inlet, I 111, 649; II 362, 368
Kingfisher, II 332:
anthropomorphized, II 69
as crest, I 350
as supernatural being, II 182
design, I 328
potency of, I 328, 329, 350
King Island, I 62, 63, 501, 502, 520
Kinship terms, I 137, 146, 150-8, 405, 424, 447, 616; II 447
Kitimat, II 218, 354: incidents concerning individuals, I 45, 159
Kitkatla:
beliefs and practices of, I 79, 80, 82, 175, 176; II 30, 359
contact with, I 22; II 30, 339, 349, 354, 358, 360, 505
incidents concerning, I 125, 402; II 30, 282
war with, II 346-62, 374
Kitlope:
contact with other tribes, I 17, 22, 125, 132, 377, 384, 429; II 354, 359, 360
first settlers at, II 275 incidents at, I 338, 339; II 282, 353, 505
influences from, II 281
practices of, I 133, 338, 341, 431, 704; II 138
Kitlope River, I 336, 337, 338, 384; II 277, 505

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Kulde-t, I 21:
first settlers at, I 356, 357
origin myth of, I 356-7
Kundust, I 348
Knight's Inlet, I 22, 649; II 362
Kulslhäkmidjut, II 129, 141, 144, 145
Kusiotem (kusiut) dance, II 6, 24, 128-61, 200, 202, 203, 204: costume, II 149
dancer:
call to, II 129, 130, 131, 152, 156, 158, 160
danger to, II 131, 132, 133, 134, 136, 138, 152, 156, 157
names of, II 129, 149
power of, II 128, 131, 138, 141, 148, 149, 153, 154, 156, 157, 159, 161, 261
privileges of, II 148
restrictions on, II 155, 158, 159, 161
masks, II 131, 141, 142, 143, 144, 146, 147, 150, 151, 152, 154, 155, 158, 161
origin of, II 129, 242
patron, II 129, 142, 144, 154, 156, 158
prerogative, II 128, 129
puppets, use of, II 131, 132, 134, 136, 139, 152, 153, 157, 158, 203 repositories, II 129
rituals: Beheading Dance, II 128, 149-55
Burning Dance, II 128, 158-9
Drowning Dance, II 128, 155-8
of other tribes, II 131
Stomach-cutting Dance, II 129-49, 150, 152, 153, 154, 155
Swallowing of Hot Stones Dance, II 128, 160-1
songs, II 131, 133, 134, 140, 141, 143, 151, 154, 155:
themes, II 131, 133, 141, 151, 154
Kusiut society, I 98, 242, 246, 261, 266, 273, 284, 285, 287, 462, 711; II 1-266, 1, 3, 6, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 24, 30, 41, 42, 50, 71, 110, 350, 372, 116, 128, 203, 254-66, 338, 111, 114, 415, 511: attitude of members, II 10, 11, 12, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 29, 30, 32, 36, 38, 39, 40, 62, 63, 67, 68, 73, 74, 78, 79, 80, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 92, 93, 94, 95, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 108, 109, 111, 113, 119, 122, 125, 126, 129, 130, 131, 134, 135, 143, 196, 233, 248, 249, 250, 251, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262 calls, II 4, 6, 13, 14, 21, 25, 26, 27, 36, 39, 40, 50, 51, 56, 62, 63, 66, 67, 70, 74, 75, 143, 177, 209, 211, 232, 233, 234, 246, 247, 249, 250, 254, 255, 256, 259, 260, 312
contact with other tribes, II 18, 19, 20, 30, 38, 44, 46, 107, 127, 149, 359
costume, II 23, 34, 37, 39, 45, 65, 73, 77, 144
dances, I 18, 44, 46, 53, 59, 64, 91, 96, 101, 160, 196, 244, 256, 261, 264, 266, 305, 376, 381, 398, 400, 429; II 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 33, 38, 39, 40, 41, 46, 47, 51-63, 64, 67, 68, 69, 72, 100, 110, 114, 115, 121, 132, 141, 143, 150, 181, 206, 212, 232, 234, 248-9, 321, 375, 382:
at other than kusiut rites, I 196, 209, 256, 287, 290, 381, 388, 390, 419, 420; II 39, 209
by animals, I 318
in land above, I 34, 38, 41, 53, 98; II 5, 6, 17, 21, 55, 129, 143, 144, 146, 147, 154, 165, 205, 206, 224, 253, 254, 308, 312, 314, 317, 319, 322
origin of, I 324, 327, 328, 329, 334, 344, 345, 666, 690; II 230, 465 specific dances, see Älmoqtaikila; Älquntäm's Fisherman; Älquntäm's Herald; Älquntäm's Slave; Awakener, supernatural; Bark-beater, supernatural; Bear, Grizzly; Birds; Breaker; Bull-head, supernatural; Cannibal; Darkness and Sleep; Dark-Shade; Dawn; Earthquake; Fire; Fungus; Ghost; Greedy One; Herring-head, supernatural; Kusiotem; Moon; Mother Nature; Murdered Slave; Mystery; Noäkymm; Nunnqwistmm; Nunnuxygnam;

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

001

Octopus; Otter; Repository Maker; Salmon, supernatural dog; Scratch; Stone Man; Sun; Supernatural Carpenters; Supernatural Charmer; Supernatural Lover; Tally Posts; Thunder; Tide-Measurer; Top; Whirlwind; Winwina; Wi·a dancing, styles of, II 33, 39, 45, 46, 60, 83, 146, 147, 170, 177, 178, 187, 233 danger to members, I 115; II 4, 8, 16, 264 danger to performers, II 17, 41, 47, 71, 72 dead, disposal of, II 8, 40, 254, 255 employment of sorcerers, I 695, 740, 741 entry into, II 13, 14, 15, 31-41, 72, 107, 136, 140, 173, 175, 196, 259, 265, 266, 288 errors in ritual, I 246, 266, 285; II 12, 13, 14, 18, 19, 20, 22, 57, 58, 128, 149, 214, 262, 339, 376 final rite, II 27, 255-6 foreign influences, I 242, 327; II 30, 44, 230, 231, 312 initiation into, I 177, 178, 197, 401, 413, 751; II 2, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 21, 23, 31, 32, 34, 35, 36, 37, 96, 325, 359
in land of ghosts, I 497
invitations, sending of, II 29, 30, 174, 266 marshals, II 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 31, 32, 33, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 49, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 60, 63, 64, 68, 70, 72, 73, 75, 76, 81, 85, 87, 88, 91, 92, 93, 96, 98, 99, 100, 102, 106, 107, 111, 114, 118, 120, 122, 124, 127, 128, 129, 130, 133, 135, 136, 138, 140, 143, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 175, 177, 187, 190, 192, 195, 197, 200, 203, 204, 209, 211, 212, 215, 216, 220, 222, 224, 225, 227, 231, 232, 233, 235, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 261, 262 masks, I 46, 64, 264; II 7, 12, 14, 25, 26, 27, 28, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 61, 62, 75, 148, 240, 246, 254, 260, 261, 262, 373, 382 meeting place, II 17, 31, 32, 129, 150 membership in, II 2, 3, 23, 24, 30, 38, 375
names, I 262, 387, 407, 492; II 1, 2, 9, 20, 21, 22, 34, 36, 244, 246, 251, 253, 259, 263, 300:
origin of, I 305, 310, 323; II 36, 124, 244
prerogatives, I 129, 247, 293, 313; II 8 professional, II 16, 17, 34, 66
transmission of, II 20, 21, 244
origin myths, II 43, 114, 124, 188, 191, 209-10, 226, 241-6 patrons of members, I 40, 42, 44, 53, 54, 56, 284; II 4, 6, 9, 12, 21, 22, 24, 25, 28, 30, 36, 41, 42, 43, 44, 50, 53, 62, 63, 75, 132, 142, 182, 234, 246, 254, 325 power, obtaining of, II 8, 9, 32, 33, 39, 58, 246 powers of members, I 96, 285; II 1, 2, 3-20, 22, 39, 55, 63, 71, 132, 137, 138, 164, 165, 175, 186, 208, 256, 261, 264 prerogatives, II 2, 3, 8, 9, 11, 13, 16, 21, 22, 24, 31, 37, 43, 46: dramatic, II 246-54
of dancing at eclipse, II 167 of using puppets, II 132, 134, 136, 139, 142, 246, 247, 248, 250
origin of, II 227, 248
professional, II 16, 34, 62, 66, 96, 106, 251, 256
transmission of, I 393; II 31, 34, 127
validation of, II 3, 16, 21, 31, 37, 38
relations with other societies, I 241, 242, 284, 285, 327, 344; II 3, 27, 56, 70, 231, 263, 264, 265, 266, 320 relations with shamans, I 558, 565, 566, 567; II 11, 18, 23, 31, 56, 84, 89, 95, 98, 100, 106, 119, 142, 154, 157, 159, 173

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Kusiut society, (cont'd):
repositories, I 8, 14, 285, 317, 323, 324, 599, 607, 690; II 8, 10, 13, 21, 22, 30, 32, 33, 36, 39, 51, 58, 62, 227, 232, 239, 243, 246, 256, 324, 325, 326, 328, 329 restrictions on members, II 63, 68, 258, 259, 380 rituals, foreigners at, II 2, 28, 29, 40, 64, 127
rituals of other tribes, II 46, 47, 61, 72, 80, 120, 125, 127, 128, 131, 169, 214, 231
siki, II 34, 35, 36
songs, I 209, 256, 287, 419; II 21, 25, 26, 27, 32, 33, 37, 46, 52, 60, 75, 142, 143, 148, 167, 234, 242, 249, 254, 269, 271:
composition of, II 51, 169 mourning, II 325-31
texts of, II 66, 306-31
themes of, II 142, 148, 255, 267 spies, I 569; II 14, 15, 16, 138, 153, 157, 159, 181, 202 whistles, I 305, 310; II 7, 12, 14, 15, 25, 28, 33, 36, 50, 52, 56, 57, 66, 67, 70, 72, 73, 74, 76, 77, 85, 92, 94, 96, 97, 102, 103, 120, 130, 136, 137, 139, 152, 153, 162, 174, 175, 191, 201, 217, 219, 256, 260
See also, Ālquntām, supernatural kusiut Kwakiutl (including Alert Bay and Fort Rupert), I 309, 322, 325; II 20, 218, 244, 283, 309, 328, 356, 362, 371, 504: contact with, I 22, 166, 208, 234, 260, 304, 305, 324, 377; II 30, 339, 340, 363, 364, 365, 366, 371
language, I 1, 218, 223
practices of, I 165, 176, 193, 225, 232, 242, 256, 257, 258, 260, 362, 398, 532, 732; II 10, 30, 72, 80, 117, 345, 376-7 tribal area, I 22; II 370
war with, II 362-71, 483
Ḳwalnuta, I 101; II 272, 280, 297, 299, 320:
See also, Ḳnatlunta and Ḳnatlunuta. The sound indicated by the initial letter is uncertain.
Kwatcino, I 405; II 362
Kwatna, I 108:
first settlers at, I 348
incidents at, I 61, 93, 313, 546, 573, 752; II 364, 366, 367, 441, 442
origin myth of, I 34
practices of, I 751
Kwatna Bay, I 19
Kwatna Inlet, I 19, 20, 134, 518, 520, 598
Kwatna River, I 19, 20
Kwililas Nuskämpta, II 64, 66, 69:
graphic depiction of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Ḳxdiz, I 14

L

Labouchere Channel, I 48, 55, 109, 302, 351, 352, 502, 519, 520, 552, 597, 598, 601, 602, 603, 606, 625; II 348, 482
Labret, I 7; II 227
Lake Kisik, I 657
Lake-Swallower, II 497, 498
Land above, I 4, 24, 25, 30, 34, 42, 43, 44, 45, 79, 122, 281, 636, 637, 639, 640; II 7, 14, 22, 25, 73, 75, 76, 79, 80, 81, 82, 88, 94, 101, 103, 105, 108, 110, 115, 118, 119, 123-4, 125, 131, 143, 144, 148, 153, 162, 165, 169, 171, 178, 179, 180, 194, 200, 203, 204, 240, 309, 467, 498, 499, 503
See also, Sky; Sun
Land above Nusmät-a, I 44, 107
Land below, see Berries, land of; Ghosts, land of Land below ocean, I 26, 50, 51, 52, 77, 353, 354, 520, 544; II 475
Land of ashes, I 59; II 468, 471, 472
Land of berries, see Berries, land of Land of copper, see Copper, land of Land of fish, see Salmon, land of Land of olachen, see Olachen, land of Land of wolves, see Wolf, land of Land tenure, I 130-9, 261, 330
Land under lake, I 520, 632
Land within mountain, I 632
Language, I 323:
origin of, I 35, 90, 301, 306, 312

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Lard fish, I 52
La'qlx, I 10
Life, I 97-100, 442, 446, 451, 495, 609, 611, 615, 688
Lizard, I 74, 576
Loon:
as crest, I 79, 317
graphic portrayal of, II 221
potency of, I 321; II 221, 393
Lynx, I 392, 617; II 396:
anthropomorphized, I 631, 632
origin of, I 662
use of, I 2, 421

Ł

Łkumkila, I 9

M

Mackenzie, I 4, 5, 10, 13, 56, 57
Magic, I 368, 454, 693, 695, 696, 698, 708, 756; II 374: causative, I 31, 60, 75, 144, 179, 262, 265, 363, 547 concepts of, I 110, 693, 694, 695, 744 preventative, I 46, 55, 64, 65, 68, 69, 70, 75, 92, 93, 362
See also, Medicine
Maple, I 331, 570, 760; II 270, 341, 540
Marmot, I 57, 305; II 487
Marriage, I 373-430: age at, I 372, 375, 379, 384
attitude towards, I 373, 374, 385, 395, 415, 422, 424; II 531 between tribes, I 17, 18, 19, 21, 121, 124, 125, 165, 197, 202, 229, 251, 264, 269, 273, 295, 297, 316, 317, 319, 327, 334, 335, 338, 339, 342, 343, 344, 351, 355, 356, 377, 378, 387, 402, 472, 477, 484; II 230, 282, 285, 295, 320, 328, 347, 349, 352, 354, 360, 361, 366, 372, 414, 457, 505, 506, 509, 523 choice of mate, I 118, 119, 120, 137, 140, 161, 187, 281, 340, 374-9, 380, 384, 385, 386, 399, 403, 478, 479
discreditable, I 405-6 exchange, I 377
fictitious, I 317, 422-7, 428, 524, 625
functions of, I 373, 374, 378, 427
invitations to, I 387 number of wives, I 144 participating group, I 380, 381, 382, 392, 396 period of engagement, I 380-6, 403 prerogative of dancing at, I 328, 388, 389, 390; II 290, 291 proposal of, I 379, 380, 382, 385 reciprocal, I 124, 126, 339, 376, 377, 378, 382, 384, 394, 395, 401, 416, 478 rituals, during engagement, I 380, 381, 382, 383, 385 rituals, of wedding, I 246, 387-9, 417 rituals, subsequent to wedding, see Wife, repurchase of songs, I 308, 329, 331, 389, 390, 391, 392; II 271
texts of, I 390; II 290-3, 412
transmission of myths, I 375, 377, 393, 396 transmission of names, I 376, 377, 384, 393, 394, 395, 396, 401, 406, 408, 410, 414, 423, 424, 425, 426 transmission of prerogatives, I 375, 376, 377, 378, 384, 389, 390, 393, 394, 398, 401, 406, 408, 414, 418, 423, 425 transmission of presents, I 124, 375, 376, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 391, 392, 395, 396, 397, 398, 400, 401, 402, 404, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 478, 483, 491; II 124, 507 trial for, I 281, 629
with birds, II 476, 477, 480 with mammals, I 318, 630, 631, 634, 642, 644, 678, 680; II 216, 219, 488, 489 with slaves, I 161, 162, 374, 405, 406 with supernatural beings, I 344, 630, 671, 684, 686; II 413, 483, 484, 485, 491, 493, 498, 499 See also, Polygamy; Slaves, marriage with Marten, I 617, 721:
potency of, I 584, 721
use of, I 2, 305, 392, 584; II 349, 364, 513, 514, 516

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Masks, I 251; II 271, 357, 359, 376, 377:
See also, A'alk society, masks; Crests, masked figure as tutwinam; Kusiut society, masks; Susook society, masks; Sorcerers, masks worn by Mäsonx^{w}, I 306, 312, 676
Massage, I 337, 338, 339, 556, 605, 623, 628, 629, 633, 634, 641, 646, 650; II 62, 355, 472
Mätlakätituk, I 319, 331; II 386
Mätläpexunk, I 39
Mätsqus, I 526; II 458, 459:
aid from, I 339, 528, 531
appearance of, I 525, 527, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658 danger from, I 525, 527, 529, 533, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658 depiction of, I 33, 339; II 178
myths or incidents describing, I 527, 528, 653-8; II 116
origin of, I 332, 526, 529
use of, I 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 656, 658
Medicine:
causative, I 364, 694, 695, 696, 698, 700-19, 757; II 355, 509
concepts of, I 694, 734 curative, I 75, 531, 694, 696, 720-40; II 197, 393 for secret killing, I 740, 741 from human body, I 31, 60, 65, 68, 69, 70, 75, 93, 241, 242, 365, 373, 525, 528, 536, 537, 538, 573, 578, 586, 694, 734, 735, 736; II 356, 418, 439, 441, 498 herbal, I 75, 113, 114, 501, 531, 694, 699; II 411, 413, 475 of copper, I 254
preventative, I 69, 70, 694, 720-40
See also, Magic; Sorcerers
Memorial-post, I 80, 252, 260, 450, 461, 462, 463, 472, 490, 493 Merganser:
anthropomorphized, II 476, 477, 478
as crest, I 79, 697
as medicine, I 701
hunting methods for, II 473 marriage with, II 476, 477
potency of, I 311; II 400, 431
red-breasted, II 431
use of, I 336, 665; II 473
Mesatche Nose, I 53, 108, 302, 347, 519, 573, 597, 598
Mismesälmx, I 39, 347, 361; II 181
Mink:
origin of, I 282
potency of, I 33; II 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424
Mnakais, I 32, 33, 104, 105, 106, 109, 349, 350
Mslakila, I 197, 198, 211, 212, 243, 437, 438, 439, 442
Mslezsta, II 202:
graphic portrayal of, II 205
Moon, I 26, 27, 28, 38, 497, 546, 591; II 295, 315, 319:
aid from, I 677
as crest, I 305
as kusiut patron, II 208, 225, 315
eclipse of, II 166, 167, 225, 226, 315
graphic portrayal of, II 226
house of, I 677, 678 (kusiut) dance, II 225-6, 237:
call, II 225, 321
graphic portrayal of moon, II 226
masks, II 226
name of dancer, II 225, 320
patron, II 225, 315, 321
song, II 225:
text of, II 320-1
theme of, II 225
origin of, I 35
Moose:
use of, I 2
moosehides, I 38, 236, 255, 299, 308, 310, 328, 583; II 284, 341, 356, 357, 383, 384
Mosquito:
graphic portrayal of, II 207, 208
mask of, II 207, 208
origin of, II 444, 488, 500
Mother Nature, I 91; II 196, 199:
(kusiut) dance of, II 196-200:
dancer:
call to, II 197, 200
name of, II 196
graphic portrayal of, II 197
mask of, II 197, 200
Mount Kwatna, II 503

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Mount Mi'ek, II 445
Mount Nuximusta, I 267
Mount Nus-mätlaix, I 295, 297
Mount Nuxalst, I 9, 41, 194, 306, 493, 572, 598, 599; II 246, 502, 503, 504, 512:
  anthropomorphized, I 305, 306, 461; II 504
  as crest, I 306; II 331
  names of, II 292, 331
Mount Nuya, I 307, 312
Mount Ofuan-i, I 65
Mount Qimr-v, I 6, 618
Mount Qo, II 189
Mount Stap', I 323
Mount Swaky, I 326, 600; II 329, 330, 504:
  potency of, II 326
Mount Tcaqolekx', II 209
Mount Tcuisi, I 308
Mount Tcuix, II 437
Mount Wa-put, I 341
Mount Xfikwali, I 594
Mountain:
  as crest, I 250, 461
  power of I 88, 92, 93, 599, 735; II 453
  transformation, I 88, 305, 306, 461, 595, 598, 600
Mountain goat, I 70, 245, 270, 528, 617, 669, 706, 718; II 426, 486, 497: aid from I 645, 646, 691; II 460, 465
  anthropomorphized, I 645
  as crest, I 305, 330
  as medicine, I 717, 730, 735
  hunting methods, I 93, 188, 272, 349, 350, 531, 532, 624, 626, 627, 658, 659, 665, 684, 690, 691, 706, 713, 757; II 209, 210, 396, 398, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 484, 500, 501, 512, 514, 515
  origin of, I 300
  potency of, I 70, 71, 73, 284, 519, 584, 621, 646, 687, 688, 691; II 180, 459, 460, 465, 501 preferences of, I 76; II 460, 461, 465 transformation of, I 536, 621, 671; II 461, 465
  use of, II 28, 413, 414, 449, 492, 494, 497 use of grease, I 93, 215, 284, 300, 352, 356, 512, 532, 604, 622, 633, 678; II 306, 397, 404, 406, 446, 448, 463, 477, 478, 492, 494, 506, 513, 514, 516 use of horns, II 446 use of meat, I 2, 284, 286, 300, 336, 350, 520, 600, 626, 627, 652, 684, 685; II 36, 263, 397, 399, 404, 406, 461, 462, 463, 464, 489, 500, 513, 514, 516 use of sinew, I 634
  use of skin, II 161, 450, 461, 463, 513, 516 use of wool, I 2, 188, 300, 356, 391, 392, 584, 585, 659, 665, 705, 723; II 447, 449 Mountain goat, yearling:
  aid from, I 283, 284
  as supernatural being, II 207
  dances of, I 277, 283
  potency of, I 73, 74, 76, 277, 283
  transformation, I 283
  See also, Nusqual
Mourning:
  ceremonies, I 175, 244, 264, 338, 344, 385, 444-9, 467 marks of, I 352, 438, 457, 464, 469, 470, 472, 755 professional mourners, I 464, 466, 471, 472
  songs, I 435, 438, 440, 460, 464, 465, 466, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 477, 482, 484, 485, 486, 490, 496; II 133, 134, 138, 139, 140, 142, 152, 153, 157, 160, 269, 365:
    prerogative of singing, I 351, 464
    texts of, I 465, 466; II 138, 139, 293-9
    theme of, II 138, 139
  See also, Dead, disposal of; Droning; Kusiut society, songs, mourning; Potlatch, memorial; Taboos Mouse, I 763:
  anthropomorphized, I 86, 87, 638, 677
  as crest, I 341
  as medicine, I 704
  potency of, I 321, 548, 636, 637, 639, 640, 690, 720

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Murder, I 39, 134, 141, 147, 148, 170, 178, 266, 396, 401, 406, 425, 512, 629, 645, 647, 648, 669, 689, 697, 719, 737, 752, 753; II 137-8, 243, 341, 355, 360, 366, 367, 372, 374, 426, 428, 451, 452, 455, 456, 487, 509, 511:
burial of those murdered, I 451, 503; II 375 revenge for, I 147, 149, 406, 594, 630, 647, 648, 651, 666, 667, 690, 697, 736, 737; II 108, 242, 243, 340, 341, 348, 349, 351, 356, 360, 363, 366, 367, 369, 370, 372, 374, 428, 451, 452, 477, 512.
Murdered slave, dance (kusiut) of, II 226-9:
dancer:
call to, II 227, 229
name of, II 227
mask, II 227, 228
origin myth of, II 226-7
patron, II 227, 229
repository, II 227, 228
song, II 228:
theme, II 228
Muskrat:
anthropomorphized, I 632
as medicine, I 718
Mussel, I 363, 502, 520, 643; II 376, 377, 426, 428, 501, 503 Mystery (kusiut) dance, II 167-87, 206, 207:
dancer:
call to, II 168, 317
danger to, II 167, 173, 174
names of, I 167, 173, 174, 177, 181, 315, 316
power of, II 167, 168, 169, 170, 174, 175, 178
restrictions on, II 170, 172
masks, II 175, 176, 177, 180, 181, 187
patron, II 167, 174, 317
remembrancers, II 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 173
repository, II 173
ritual, error in, II 171:
of other tribes, II 169
songs, II 169, 171, 172, 175, 176:
texts, II 315-17
theme, II 169, 171, 175
Myths, I 4, 11, 29, 32, 33, 35, 117-18, 135, 136, 143, 163, 183, 191, 235, 292, 293, 294, 295, 303, 313, 314, 332, 336, 340, 342, 351, 356, 368, 375, 513, 619; II 114-15, 188, 378, 379, 385, 386, 504, 516, 526, 527:
catastrophic, II 500-4:
cold, II 433-5
famine, I 621-2, 624, 625, 702; II 500-2 fire, I 282; II 424, 500 flood, II 502-4
foreign, I 295, 342-57, 360, 508-12; II 466
historical, I 225, 360; II 14-15, 265-6, 348-62, 362-71, 372-6, 376-7, 385, 505-17 non-ceremonial, I 19, 37, 43, 50-1, 52-3, 55, 61, 64, 66-7, 68, 75, 83-5, 85-7, 87-8, 90, 93, 100, 111-12, 293; II 378, 385-517 supernatural stories, II 451-500
See also, A'alk society, origin myths; Ancestral family, myths; Animals, stories of; Ghosts, myths of; Good luck, supernatural, myths illustrating; Kusiut society, origin myths; Marriage, transmission of myths; Mätsqus, myths or incidents describing; Raven, stories of; Shamans, myths describing; Susook society, origin myths; Susiut, myths or incidents describing; Smnuq, stories; Sorcerers, myths illustrating; Supernatural aid to the unfortunate

N

Names:
acquisition of, I 123, 124, 127, 128, 129, 140, 156, 170, 236, 273, 275, 278, 284, 289, 290, 300, 310, 322, 327, 329, 339, 357, 358, 383, 398, 409, 410, 412, 493, 494, 529, 593 elevation of, I 123, 129, 149, 165, 167, 170, 171, 185, 186, 192, 204, 231, 235, 339, 409, 410, 487 functions associated with, I 33, 121, 122, 126, 127, 129, 132, 136, 140, 141, 149, 292, 312

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

origin of, I 36, 47, 117, 121, 122, 129, 163, 168, 170, 171, 181, 247, 256, 262, 282, 383, 284, 289, 293, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 302, 303, 304, 307, 308, 310, 311, 312, 317, 321, 327, 329, 334, 335, 336, 339, 345, 346, 347, 354, 356, 357, 409, 411, 412, 413, 421, 493, 523, 586, 598, 623, 648, 666, 689
transmission of, I 121, 122, 124, 125, 129, 133, 136, 144, 149, 150, 163, 166, 168, 169, 171, 174, 182, 183, 191, 219, 231, 247, 248, 262, 283, 354, 356, 395, 409, 410, 412, 494, 616, 689; II 285
validation of, I 122, 123, 127, 129, 132, 136, 145, 148, 149, 162, 165, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 180, 192, 198, 203, 204, 205, 217, 218, 236, 243, 248, 256, 262, 274, 278, 283, 290, 310, 327, 332, 335, 336, 339, 357, 358, 410, 493, 494, 555, 558
See also, A'alk society, names; Ancestral family, names; Copper, names of; Dogs, names of; Heralds, names of; Kusiut society, names; Marriage, transmission of names; Nusäxkämx; Prerogatives, professional; Sisaok society, names
Namu, I 19, 50, 61, 350, 522
Nass River, I 208, 348
Neclectsconnay, I 5, 6, 12, 622, 753; II 245, 424, 509
Nettle, I 369:
as medicine, I 728, 759
graphic portrayal of, II 198
mask representing, II 198
use of, II 200, 535
Newitte, I 75, 405, 732; II 360, 370
New Westminster, I 48, 707
Ninitsamlaix, I 326, 395, 396, 555, 567, 568; II 244, 245, 248, 299, 300
Nixokäxta, II 251, 252
Nixps, II 185:
graphic portrayal of, II 185
mask of, II 185, 207
Noäkila, I 301, 326, 331, 332, 335, 347, 458, 697; II 280
Noäkymm, I 761; II 42, 43, 44, 48-9, 50, 60, 63, 190, 223, 238, 255, 290, 307: bringer of salmon, I 53, 54, 85, 651; II 59, 187, 188, 470, 472
canoe of, II 50, 59, 60
Noäkymm, dance (kusiut) of, II 41-63, 64, 65, 68, 224:
costume, II 45, 48
dancer:
names of, II 42, 306, 307
names, transmission of, II 42
power of, II 44, 47, 48, 59, 63
masks, II 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62
origin myth, II 43
prerogative, II 43, 51
ritual, II 42-62, 306
songs, II 43, 44, 45, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 54, 56, 60, 61, 62, 63:
texts of, II 306, 307
themes, II 44, 48, 49, 52, 60
Nootka, I 731
North Bentinck Arm, I 6, 11, 13, 87, 302, 314, 316, 317, 318, 320, 325, 519, 552, 597, 621, 690, 753; II 467, 470
North Wind, I 43; II 199:
graphic portrayal of, II 198, 199
mask representing, II 198
wife of, I 43, 44
Nose-ring, I 49, 436, 501, 669; II 463
Nowakila, I 82, 106; II 392, 393
Nu'exmäq, I 8
*Nuk*ʷ, I 14, 320
*Nuk*ʷ River, I 14, 302
Nukils, I 9; II 372:
first settlers at, I 9
Nuliliqolänk, I 20; II 441
Nulhnikta, I 301; II 297:
as crest, I 79
Numäm-ic, I 6
Nunuqwiutsmm, II 323
Nunuqwiutsmm, dance (kusiut) of, II 324:
dancer:
name of, II 324
patron, II 324
song, text of, II 324
Nunulcuqnam, dance (kusiut) of:
origin myth, II 245-6
patron of dancer, II 246
Nuqäymäts, I 9; II 12, 459

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Nusälnm, I 12
Nusälnm River, I 9
Nusäxkämy, I 28:
names, I 289, 290; II 289
rituals, I 289, 290, 291, 370
songs, I 289, 290, 291:
texts of, I 289; II 289-90
Nuskiayek, I 670; II 468-72
Nusmät·a: dances in, I 34, 41; II 5
description of, I 4, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 100, 101, 301, 331, 332, 498; II 314, 382, 496
model of, I 299
residents of, I 4, 37, 39, 40, 44, 45, 46, 47, 59, 83, 100, 200, 299, 304, 326, 333, 334, 341, 343, 345, 347, 446, 497, 612; II 64, 148, 300, 319, 486 spirits in, I 97, 222, 451, 481, 495, 496
visits to, I 49, 52, 83, 84, 97, 98, 99, 102, 677, 683; II 424, 487, 495
See also, Alqantäm, house of; Land above
Nusqäps, I 324
Nusqäpts, I 15:
first settlers at, I 15, 330
Nusqalst, I 9:
first settlers at, I 304, 305, 306; II 328, 330 incidents re, I 146, 302, 304, 308; II 222, 373, 374, 375, 376, 445, 503, 515, 516
names of, II 331
origin myth of, I 304-5, 305-6 prerogatives of people, I 323; II 91
sisook myth of, I 345
See also, Mount Nusqalst
Nusqatl, I 21
Nusqulxwaista, I 34, 38, 41; II 17, 41, 42, 50, 62, 63, 179, 180, 181, 186, 222, 239, 240
See also, Nusqualxwaista Nusqual (A'alk dance):
by animals, I 283
dances, I 277, 278, 279, 284; II 287:
origin of, I 284; II 287
functions of, I 279
mountain goat, yearling, as, I 277, 283
names, I 280, 282, 284, 303; II 286, 287
origin myth of, I 282-4
songs of, I 277, 279:
texts of, II 286, 287, 288
See also, Mountain goat, yearling Nusqualxwaista, I 38
See also, Nusqulxwaista
Nusx, I 11
Nusxeq, I 11:
first settlers at, I 11, 314
name of man, I 314, 315
origin myth of, I 314-17, 317-19
Nuksm, I 19, 134
Nulsl, I 15, 16:
first settlers at, I 326; II 286
origin myth of, I 326-7
Nulltux, I 10, 317:
first settlers at, I 306, 307, 574
incidents at, I 534, 569, 691
origin myth of, I 306-7
Nutsqualt, I 15:
first settlers at, I 328
origin myth of, I 328-30
Nulsqtskwan·e River, see Necleetsconnay
Nuxälk, I 11, 315
Nuxwulst, I 16, 21, 340; II 501:
first settlers at, I 340
origin myth of, I 340-1

O

Obsidian, II 341, 351, 398, 445
Ocean Falls, I 63, 347, 591
Octopus, I 67, 68:
as kusiut patron, II 231
graphic depiction of, II 231, 232 (kusiut) dance, II 230-2:
dancer:
call to, II 231
name of, II 231
power of, II 231
mask, II 232
origin of, II 230, 231
patron, II 231
repository, II 231
song, II 232
medicine from, I 700, 707, 710, 714
potency of, II 231
Olachen, I 326; II 155, 158, 433, 535-8:
anthropomorphized, I 342; II 475

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as medicine, I 724
catching, I 28, 131, 135, 645, 647, 648, 758; II 360, 535, 536 grease, I 3, 189, 214, 216, 217, 225, 263, 338, 468; II 66, 84, 274, 275, 359, 369, 376, 505, 506, 537, 538
land of, I 651; II 475
nets, I 3, 28, 74, 89, 135, 136, 263, 286, 301, 384, 538, 648, 672, 716; II 535, 536
origin of, I 301, 302, 310, 311, 320, 326; II 63, 326
potency of, II 477
ritual of first taking, I 758-9
taboos regarding, I 263, 436, 455, 758, 759
use of, I 364, 645; II 368, 505, 537
Omqomhikha, I 332, 333, 335, 339, 340, 412, 526; II 43, 64, 66, 71, 190, 242:
graphic depiction of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Ootsa Lake, I 66, 159, 358, 511; II 234, 505
Operation, surgical, I 726, 727, 733, 734; II 86, 460
Ojmihmy, I 9; II 353, 374, 375, 376
Ojulikts, II 141, 144, 145, 240, 241: graphic depiction of, II 181, 182
mask of, II 181
See also, Ilquntäm's herald, dance (kusiut) of Orphan, I 93, 145, 146, 281, 411, 635, 639, 640, 666, 668, 682, 689, 690; II 242, 243, 244, 501 Oosqkpamy, I 7
Otter, I 617:
as kusiut patron, II 229, 331
as medicine, I 713, 714
hunting, method of, I 713 kusiut) dance, II 229-30, 322:
dancer:
names of, II 229, 321, 330, 331
power of, II 230
dancing, style of, II 321
mask, II 230
otter, graphic depiction of, II 229, 230
patron, II 229, 331
prerogative, origin of, II 229 song, text, II 321-2, 330-1
potency of, I 341; II 229
Owiki, I 343, 442
Owl, II 463:
anthropomorphized, I 100, 347
as crest, I 348, 349, 350
in land above, I 38, 100
potency of, I 350, 432, 433; II 419, 420, 455, 456, 457, 459
taboos regarding, I 76, 680

P

Pack-rat, I 617, 625:
as medicine, I 701
Paint, I 80, 302, 464, 636, 637, 639, 642, 644, 730; II 465, 490, 542 Painting, II 552, 542:
by supernatural beings, I 63
on coppers, I 256, 259
on tongues, II 162
on houses, I 80, 142, 190, 192, 194, 228, 252, 339, 407, 461; II 170 on houses of first settlers and supernatural beings, I 51, 52, 284, 296, 297, 305, 321, 325, 329, 338, 341, 598 on masks, II 27, 57, 59, 60, 65, 176, 177, 186 on memorial-posts, I 462, 463, 472 on seats, I 301, 302
Pâluätl, I 579
Pa·s, I 75
Pe·ssb, I 5, 6, 12, 297, 315
Petrifaction, I 307, 317, 334, 461, 462, 517, 594, 595, 598, 599, 600, 606, 678; II 209, 234, 235, 241, 294, 295, 297, 424: methods of curing at places of petrified power, I 554, 600-8, 609; II 113 of names, I 122
power, petrified in specific places, I 517, 594-608; II 166, 301
Petroglyph, I 178; II 101
Physical characteristics, II 518, 519, 520
Pine, I 2, 658:
jack pine, I 610
Polygamy, I 403-5
attitude towards, I 403, 404
polyandry, I 404, 405, 424, 671, 675:
maxsai·s, I 155
polygyny, I 155, 192, 403, 404

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Porcupine:
as medicine, I 709, 715, 716
as string figure, II 559, 560
graphic depiction of, II 179
potency of, I 71, 321, 583, 584, 621, 622, 624, 625; II 428, 429, 430
use of, II 500
Port John, I 63
Port Simpson, II 347:
practices of, I 731
Potency: Term used throughout this index to describe the actions of animals which the white man would regard as belonging to the realm of the supernatural, but which the Bella Coola regard as natural.
Potlatch, I 7, 22, 102, 115, 122, 125, 129, 131, 141, 147, 149, 163, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 182-291, 293, 300, 302, 303, 311, 369, 407, 429, 453, 458, 459, 462, 472; II 23, 29, 64, 70, 359:
functions of, I 141, 185, 186, 340, 626, 438, 459; II 529, 531 guests at, I 22, 180, 181, 184, 198, 208-15, 217, 231, 234, 244, 335, 402, 411; II 377 held by individuals, I 7, 175, 225, 296, 322, 326, 329, 336, 339, 340, 341, 348, 350, 351, 354, 358, 402, 406, 586, 630, 648, 649; II 339, 340, 355, 357, 358, 370 invitations to, I 207-10, 290, 302, 349; II 358, 358 370, 371, 377 memorial potlatch, I 458-74; II 41, 295, 299, 508: description of memorial potlatch held in 1922, I 482-95 expense of, I 458, 459, 460, 476, 477, 478, 482, 491, 492 guests at, I 463, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 490 preliminary rites, I 458-69
preparations for, I 460, 463, 477 presents at, I 461, 469, 470, 471, 472, 483, 490, 492, 493 purpose of, I 459, 473, 474, 483; II 257 speeches at, I 461, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 483, 493
taboos re, II 38
time of holding, I 453, 454, 460, 476, 482 See also, Dead, disposal of name, validation at, I 180, 183, 218
origin of, I 102, 242, 313
practices of other tribes, II 376, 377
preparations for, I 136, 185, 187-98, 203, 213, 258, 288, 304, 426, 460, 461 rituals at, I 9, 184, 200-2, 220-2, 226, 262, 267, 273, 274, 277, 278, 283, 292, 296, 303, 305, 306, 329, 407, 408, 409, 416 slaves obtained at, I 158
taboos re, II 38
those assisting, I 131, 147, 172, 187, 195, 203, 204, 227, 228, 229, 231, 236, 238, 423
Potlatc, I 121, 175, 197, 305, 378, 403, 404, 407, 415, 593; II 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 367, 511, 520
Power of thought, I 58, 179, 301, 318, 319, 458, 524, 545, 587, 612, 679, 688, 696, 697, 698, 737, 740 Prayer, I 104-8, 115, 187, 369, 573: to ghosts, I 502, 731
to Xamai-ts, I 42
to localized powers, I 109, 600, 601, 606 to mammals, I 625, 700, 710, 716 to Raven, I 106
to sun, I 445
to the supreme god, I 32, 33, 38, 101, 103, 104, 105, 106, 109, 192, 193, 349, 350, 390, 446, 706, 708 to Thindzhiw-a, I 109, 563 to unspecified powers, I 106, 107, 108, 110, 539, 549, 723 to Xemsemhiela, I 107
Prerogatives, I 78, 117-36, 145, 163, 176, 219, 261, 293, 308, 342: ceremonial, I 117, 118, 119, 120, 126, 163, 233, 234, 248, 274, 283, 303 dances as, I 118, 122, 126, 128, 149, 163, 197, 261, 274 graphic, I 164, 179, 190, 192, 194, 195, 209, 221, 222, 223, 226, 232, 237, 238, 249, 250, 251, 252, 261, 305, 306, 329, 332, 334, 339, 341,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

348, 354, 355, 359, 439, 440, 441, 442, 455, 477, 487, 488, 489; II 370
See also, Crests, masked figure as tutelaem names as, I 12, 127, 128, 136, 149, 163, 174, 261, 283, 293, 355 prayer as, I 106, 107
professional, I 57, 184, 236, 261-73, 293
See also, Berry picker; Carpenters; Drowning; Hunters; Mourning; River Guardian; Singers; Warrior validation of, I 145, 232, 236, 261, 464; II 15
See also, Heralds, assumption of prerogative; Houses, idiosyncratic; Marriage, prerogative of dancing at; Marriage, transmission of prerogatives; Names Presents, I 164-7; II 284, 354:
as atonement, I 148, 756
as recompense for aid, I 195, 223, 227, 233, 238, 241, 439, 455, 471, 492; II 26, 53, 150, 215, 273, 276, 359
in land above, I 98; II 5 investment, I 205, 218, 229, 231, 233, 234, 258, 471 legalizing functions of, I 146, 163, 164, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 173, 175, 182, 191, 204, 209, 222, 223, 235, 236, 237, 238, 248, 250, 252, 257, 258, 261, 262, 265, 267, 268, 278, 283, 284, 339, 351, 400, 402, 406, 408, 409, 413, 414, 415, 438, 441, 490, 555, 558; II 37, 56, 97, 232, 269, 358 supernatural aids in obtaining, I 102, 115 to acquire status, I 163, 164, 166, 169, 173, 180, 190, 193, 198, 204, 205, 207, 210, 214, 218, 219, 223, 224, 226, 227, 229, 231, 233, 235, 236, 237, 248, 266, 286, 287, 288, 290, 303, 328, 397, 408, 409, 413, 422, 425, 426, 427, 428, 454, 463; II 368 to gloss slavery, I 161, 162, 406 to increase status of children, I 161, 162, 169, 170, 171, 207, 216, 236, 408, 413, 414, 427
See also, Cannibal dance, presents as compensation; Marriage, transmission of presents; Potlatch, memorial, presents at; Shaming, by gift giving Prostitutes, I 429, 430
Puberty, I 370-3:
costume, I 371
See also, Taboos, at puberty
Puffin, use of, I 211; II 34, 45
Puppets:
use of, II 250, 323
See also, Kusiut society, prerogatives, of using puppets

Q

Qāmcs, I 6
Qaskdst, I 13, 320, 662
Qed, I 7, 170, 194, 262, 299, 309, 447, 485; II 217
Q'iqa, (a'alt dance):
dance, I 277
song, I 277; II 284, 285
Qakdo-i, I 531, 532, 533
Qomcua, I 56; II 64, 283, 319:
graphic depiction of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Qomoqua, I 51, 52, 53, 317, 322, 352, 353, 354, 355, 434, 597, 615; II 296
See also, Houses, of Qomoqua
Qomoo-ts, I 7, 8, 65, 178; II 20: beliefs and practices of, II 50
contact with other tribes, II 348, 359, 367
first settlers at, I 262, 299, 300, 306, 315, 318, 319, 676
incidents re, I 141, 377, 447, 448, 480, 592, 611, 747; II 38, 43, 340, 356, 510, 511
origin myth of, I 299-300
Qoqoi, I 344, 402
Qaiset, II 392-4
Queen Charlotte Islands, II 469
Qulxuaix, I 34, 38; II 313, 317, 322
Qnapx, I 14, 302, 320
Qnaqmai, I 348; II 377
Qnathnasta, I 101, 102; II 325
See also, Qnathnsta and Kualhasta. The sound indicated by the initial letter is uncertain.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[illegible], I 78, 81, 101; II 327, 329
[illegible], I 19, 355:
first settlers at, I 323, 333, 334
origin myth of, I 350-1
[illegible], II 64:
graphic depiction of, II 193
mask of, II 183
[illegible], I 10

R

Rabbit:
as facial dramatic pantomime, II 249
as string figure, II 547, 548
graphic representation of, II 207
mask of, II 207
use of, I 631
Rain, I 105, 106, 107, 717; II 433, 433, 453, 502
Rainwater:
dance of, II 207
graphic portrayal of, II 183
mask of, II 183
Rainwater-Dripping-From-the-Roof, II 208
Raspberry, graphic depiction of, II 194
Rat, potency of, I 720
Rattle, I 206, 211, 214, 215, 237, 274, 389, 390, 472, 486, 487, 554, 561, 575, 753; II 147, 184, 185, 201, 202, 203, 204, 207, 210, 224, 270, 318
Raven, I 81-91:
aid from, I 83, 85, 87, 88, 89, 90, 351, 666, 667; II 190
anthropomorphized, I 325; II 188, 189, 388
as crest, I 36, 78, 79, 80, 81, 221, 232, 297, 300, 303, 305, 308, 309, 322, 335, 440, 477, 485, 487, 488, 489; II 282, 294, 295, 297, 568
as design, I 686; II 227
as medicine, I 705, 721, 736
as string figure, II 548, 549, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569 exploits of, I 31, 81-91, 118, 246, 264, 296, 298, 301, 302, 303, 307, 312, 322, 325, 329, 331, 342, 351, 352, 353, 354, 373, 434, 447, 595, 600, 666; II 43, 190, 299, 305, 378, 386-419
origin of, I 81, 319, 333
potency of, I 696, 705, 707, 715, 716, 736; II 276, 419
prayers to, I 106
stories of, I 85-8, 90; II 386-419 tales of, I 83, 106; II 381, 383, 399, 395, 393
transformation, I 667; II 400
Reincarnation, I 116, 364, 498, 616
Remembrances, I 128, 396:
See also, Mystery (burial) dance, memorabilia Repository-Maker, dance (burial) of, II 245: person of, II 240
Reptiles:
as facial puppet, II 267
as medicine, I 720
potency of, I 362
Restoration Day, I 61, 98, 61, 93, 365, 632
Revenge, see Murder
Rheumatism, as medicine, I 721
Ribes bracteosum, graphic portrayal of, II 194
Ribes laciflorum, graphic portrayal of, II 194
River Guardian, I 262-4, 299, 371, 695, 756; II 50
See also, Tahoun, re river Rivers Inlet, I 14, 18, 325; II 218, 294:
beliefs and practices of, I 224, 555; II 30, 72
contact with, I 17, 22, 319, 320, 486, 551, 662; II 30, 107, 320 cultural influences from, I 195, 197, 202, 241, 242, 344, 439
first settlers at, I 325, 355; II 295
incidents concerning, I 165, 230, 311, 322, 369, 661, 719, 732; II 14, 15, 359, 360, 361, 376-7
language, I 14
River Monster, I 570
Robin, as medicine, I 701
Rose, wild, graphic portrayal of, II 194

S

Sacrifice, I 56, 77, 78, 108-10, 111, 222, 348, 372, 499, 542, 563, 572, 580, 600, 606, 607, 613, 649; II 66, 242

Lubbock Wealth E-5 (1922-1924) 1940
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Salishan, I 65, 650, 660:
graphic portrayal of, II 194
Salish-speaking people, I 159, 342:
language, I 1, 22
Salmon, I 639, 702; II 30, 410:
aid from, I 72, 666; II 305, 306, 462
anthropomorphized, I 87, 666; II 473, 474, 475, 476, 478, 481, 483 as medicine or magic, I 65, 68, 591, 611, 712, 724, 725, 726; II 430
capture of, II 193, 196
coming to Bella Coola, II 42, 59, 187, 472 dangers, I 15, 38, 313; II 59, 166, 269
gulping, I 661
graphic portrayal of, II 193, 199
jerking, I 309
head of, I 15, 34, 84, 87, 651, 666; II 41, 188, 472, 479
names of, II 300, 301
nets, I 286, 668, 670 omen-wings, I 15, 16, 118, 163, 330, 331, 660
origin of, I 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72
potency of, I 72, 77, 94, 233, 234, 365, 366, 370, 485, 561, 562; II 39, 209, 238, 382, 416, 420, 421, 478, 481
predecessors of, II 482 presents to, I 562; II 477, 478, 481, 482 scoop-net, I 30
spearing, I 669, 670, 672, 674; II 302
supernatural, I 297
taboos regarding, I 77, 263, 361, 365, 366, 370, 371, 457, 561, 573, 604, 730, 757; II 38, 473
transformation, I 72, 664, 665, 670, 672, 674, 675; II 477, 479, 481, 482 transformation to actual, I 539, 550, 660
use of, I 3, 18, 77, 118, 159, 189, 209, 212, 215, 288, 314, 339, 364, 454, 468, 532, 619, 630, 633, 673, 681, 682, 691, 763; II 84, 105, 106, 112, 113, 330, 342, 343, 345, 377, 387, 389, 412, 424, 435, 451, 463, 537 weirs (or traps), I 3, 10, 11, 30, 31, 37, 111, 118, 131, 136, 143, 296, 299, 302, 304, 307, 309, 311, 313, 330, 332, 333, 334, 336, 340, 366, 534, 533, 534, 535, 668, 673, 668, 666, 667, 707, 709; II 40, 304, 414, 419, 464, 465, 471, 477, 482, 491, 503:
as seeing figure, II 343, 360
See also, Salmon, coho; Salmon, dog; Salmon, hump-back; Salmon, sockeye; Salmon, spring; Salmon, steelhead Salmon, coho:
aid from, I 555, 666; II 330
capture of, II 189
catching of, I 555
graphic portrayal of, II 193
head of, I 651
names of, II 189
transformation into actual, I 539
use of, I 3, 55, 314, 607, 676; II 313
Salmon, dog:
anthropomorphized, II 470
capture of, II 189
dance (hamat), of the supernatural, II 239
graphic portrayal of, II 193
head of, I 651
names of, II 189, 238
potency of, I 9; II 483
taboos regarding, I 71, 337, 666, 698, 757
use of, I 3, 37; II 373, 482, 483
Salmon, hump-back:
capture of, II 189
graphic portrayal of, II 193
head of, I 651
names of, II 189
use of, I 3; II 441, 442
Salmon, sockeye, I 15, 37, 338, 630:
anthropomorphized, I 86; II 416-19
as medicine, I 724
capture of, II 189, 191
graphic portrayal of, II 193
head of, I 651
names of, II 189
origin of, I 85, 87, 332
potency of, I 86, 87, 366, 367; II 417, 419
transformation of, I 86
transformation to actual, I 659
use of, I 3; II 83, 376, 418
Salmon, spring, I 15, 38, 630, 670:
aid from, I 555

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Salmon, spring (cont'd):
anthropomorphized, II 475, 475, 477
capture of, II 189, 192
graphic portrayal of, II 192, 193
land of, I 671
names of, II 189, 192
pottery of, I 367
propagation of, I 761, 762 rituals concerning, I 71, 719-22, II 301, 302
taboos regarding, I 436, 437, 439
transformation to actual, I 136, 695, 699
use of, I 3, 192, II 495
Salmon, coho-head, I see:
catching of, I 3, 326, II 453
land of, I 671
origin of, I 87, 326, 330
use of, I 3, II 192
Salmon Ohman, I 11, 326, 330, II 301, 309, 310
Salmonberry, II 309:
graphic portrayal of, II 309
Sasquatch (Bigfoot), I 96, 100, 10 124, 125, 126, 134, 167, 177, 241:
graphic portrayal of, II 177
mask of, II 177
Saxwumdaxu, I 82, II 328, 329, 330, 332, 333, 335, 336, 337
Sardine, I 252:
anthropomorphized, II 475
land of, II 475
pottery of, II 477
use in land of, II 475
Sathla, I 13, 307, 317, II 237:
four sentinels of, I 330, 331
origin myth of, I 319-20, 330-1
Sea lion:
actions of, I 48, 434, 435-6
evil from, I 337, 338, 339, 387, 448, 449, 450
Sea otter, I 16, II 373:
four sentinels of, I 331
origin myth of, I 333-40
Sekumer Pass, I 322, 340, II 377:
four sentinels of, I 340
origin myth of, I 340
Sewatch (Sacred) dance, II 34, 56, 117-23:
dancer:
call on, II 118, 122
costume of, II 118, 122, 208, 301
power of, II 58, 117, 118, 119, 120, 122, 124, 128, 343, 348, 361, 362
privileges of, II 73, 86, 118, 122, 124, 148, 240
restrictions on, II 34, 122
taboos of, II 30
dancing, style of, II 120
foreign influences, II 362
masks, II 121, 122, 124
purpose, II [illegible], 310 perspective, II 118, 119
transmission of, II 119
property as compensation, II 118, 119, 120, 122, 124, 125
repository, II 310, 311
ritual, II 119-23:
of other tribes, II 120
songs, II 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 125:
texts, II 310-12
thanks, II 118, 119, 122
Seal:
[illegible]
as medicine, I 713, II 87
hunting of, I 111, 112, 114, 271, 272, 305, 341, 453, 453, 713, II 466 pottery of, I 318, 336, 449, II 308, 309, 468, 472
taboos regarding, I 176, 177, II 237
use of, I 3, 176, 177, 330, 334, 341, 342, 449, 453, 453, 713, 715, II 237, 468, 550 Sea-lion, I 343, 390, 391, 443, II 360, 361:
anthropomorphized, I 391, 394, 443
evil from, I 443
as medicine, I 395
origin of, I 393
pottery of, I 394
use of, I 393, 394
Sea-lion Island, I 343, 390, II 390:
four sentinels of, I 390
origin myth of, I 391-6
Sea-otter, I 390, II 307
Sears (ceremonial), I 167-72, 174, 176, 181, 183, 190, 209, 333, 335, 336, 337, 338, 344, 346, 361, 373, 396, 397, 302, 336, 339, 342, 398, 438, 440:
of Alquantun, I 37

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sasalim, I 46; II 274
Sasquatsalem, I 38, 41; II 6, 71, 143, 145, 308, 309, 327
Shamans, I 59, 139-94, 615; II 411, 487, 506: animal, I 71, 318; II 460, 467 association with sorcerers, I 744 costume, I 158, 159, 166, 167, 181, 636, 682, 683; II 11 dances, I 166, 151, 153, 158, 161, 166, 167, 168, 169, 171, 175, 178, 181, 592, 663, 666, 683, 685; II 460, 461 dangers to, I 173, 158, 173, 174, 175, 193, 339 dramatic feats by, I 162, 164-72, 181, 617, 668, 746; II 11, 303:
validation of, I 164, 165, 166, 167, 181
empowered by Sisauitlas, I 38, 117, 159-94; II 344 foreign, I 166, 151, 156 from the dead, I 300, 302, 303, 339, 377-87, 616; II 211 functions of, I 69, 70, 139, 192, 193, 194, 436, 436, 450, 502, 502, 503, 504, 572, 573, 589, 739; II 64, 89, 95, 98, 100, 103, 119, 173 information obtained by, I 26, 56, 76, 110 method of treating sick, I 55, 96, 104, 348, 435, 543, 553, 556, 557, 559-64, 571, 575, 576, 578, 580, 581, 593, 607, 668, 683, 685, 694, 736, 744, 753; II 115, 339, 360, 460 myths describing, I 52-3, 540, 541-6, 576-5, 577, 578-9, 582-7, 588-9, 591-4, 661-92
names of, I 47, 122, 209, 547, 551, 553, 554, 555, 556, 558, 565, 567, 584, 587, 592, 593, 690; II 299, 301, 302, 303, 304 obtaining of power, I 26, 27, 28, 47, 49, 53, 109, 302, 314, 317, 321, 323, 324, 337, 343, 348, 359, 486, 500, 517, 530, 547, 548, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 569, 570, 571, 573, 576, 577, 579, 582, 584, 586, 589, 592, 606, 608, 611, 612, 614, 663, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 677, 679, 681, 686, 687, 690, 691, 692; II 140, 243, 300, 301, 304, 465, 470, 501 power of, I 31, 56, 71, 73, 94, 96, 101, 102, 103, 104, 319, 499, 540, 541-6, 547, 548, 553, 556, 558, 559, 561, 562, 563, 564, 566, 568, 569, 570, 572, 573-7, 578, 580, 584, 586, 587, 589, 591, 592, 593, 603, 607, 640, 663, 666, 667, 668, 669, 671, 673, 684, 691, 692, 693, 735, 740, 753, 763; II 5, 18, 91, 154, 243, 300, 320
songs, I 47, 96, 388, 390, 547, 551, 552, 553, 555, 557, 558, 565, 566, 569, 571, 578, 581, 590, 592, 665; II 11, 56, 162, 164, 157, 159, 201, 271, 299, 320:
texts, II 299-301
supernatural, I 71, 685; II 188, 460, 467
taboos, I 373, 558, 573, 574
See also, Boating sticks; Kusiut society, relations with shamans; Sorcerers Shaming, by gift giving and otherwise, I 165, 166, 207, 210, 223, 224, 225, 226, 230, 245, 303, 412, 413, 416, 582, 651, 652, 653; II 109, 276, 279, 287, 360, 463:
songs, I 420, 422; II 288, 290, 291-3
Shooting Star, II 181
Siki, see Kusiut society, siki; Susuk society, siki Singers: activities of, I 196, 199, 200, 201, 202, 213, 215, 220, 238, 239, 256, 275, 276, 277, 279, 287, 288, 289, 291, 319, 381, 390, 419, 438, 440, 441, 466, 470, 478, 482, 484; II 358 means of acquiring ability, I 703, 717 professional, I 236, 263, 268, 270, 272, 287, 290; II 268 protector of, I 41
recompense to, I 227, 238, 471, 492 technique of singing, I 196, 486, 581; II 25, 26, 268-72, 342, 453
See also, Songs
Sinaqul, I 280, 326, 327; II 230, 231, 282, 283, 286, 296, 297, 383, 384 Sipalumlas, II 185:
graphic portrayal of, II 184
mask of, II 184

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sicka, I 704
Sisaul or, I 15, 330:
first mothers of, I 330
origin myth of, I 330
Sonoma, I 293; 294, 295; II 274, 301
Sonthlale (an individual), I 323, 380, 296, 313, 335, 457, 458; II 281
Sonthlale (synonym for Alpaumine), I 32, 33, 390, 466; II 6, 144, 222, 239, 314, 319, 320, 322
Sooel, I 8, 11; II 342: contacts with other tribes, II 367, 372
first mothers of, I 8, 445 incidents occurring at, I 161, 221, 238, 297, 302, 313, 339, 571, 614, 651; II 58, 101, 201, 278, 298 sacred myth of, I 339-60
Sooel society, I 13, 165, 180-2, 192, 193, 195, 208, 210, 211-26, 240, 241, 242, 246, 254, 264, 273, 284, 393, 438, 441, 442; II 372: association with ceremonial gatherings, I 458, 460, 463, 466, 472, 477, 486, 488 association with other societies, I 241, 242, 273, 274, 275-276, 284, 303, 337, 344; II 27, 56, 70, 231 customs, I 190, 205, 206, 214, 230, 237, 239, 271, 389; II 45 dances, I 44, 46, 160, 180, 181, 205, 206, 207, 211, 213, 216, 220, 221, 223, 237, 240, 278, 279, 280, 287, 288, 290, 300, 398, 488, 566; II 204, 358 dances, non-sacred, I 196, 205, 213, 256, 278, 279, 287, 290, 301, 388, 389, 419, 426, 451 dead, disposal of, I 437-43, 455, 467, 489 entry into, I 160, 198, 181, 184, 185, 197, 198-203, 206, 207, 208-11, 214, 216, 223, 224, 232, 235, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 267, 271, 277, 288, 413, 416, 440; II 15 errors in sicsul, I 192, 436; II 19, 362 foreign influences, I 13, 182, 197, 205, 207, 206, 238, 239, 241, 242, 272, 327, 334, 384, 387, 378, 407, 438, 458, 472, 484
masks, I 44, 46, 200, 201, 202, 203, 206, 208, 211, 213, 214, 220, 239, 264, 318, 365, 488; II 262, 357
names, I 180, 181, 182, 198, 199, 201, 202-3, 216, 217, 218, 235, 242, 297, 300, 331, 357, 358, 359, 360, 369, 401, 438, 598; II 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 278, 279, 280, 281 names, origin of, II 43, 237
origin myths, I 181, 242, 357-60, 598
origin of, I 197, 202, 234, 235, 264, 300, 354, 358, 522
paraphernalia, II 230, 270
rite, I 197, 198, 200, 206, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 239, 257, 258, 259, 261, 262, 271, 276, 486; II 34
songs, I 199, 200, 201, 202, 205, 208, 211, 214, 216, 230, 236, 237, 242, 438, 439, 440; II 268, 272-82, 287, 291, 358:
texts, II 272-82
theme, II 272, 273
whistles, I 188, 192, 197, 198, 199, 200, 202, 208, 209, 211, 212, 230, 231, 232, 238, 240, 241, 297, 268, 318, 330, 332, 334, 336, 337, 342, 380, 384, 407, 437, 438, 458; II 18, 278
Sooklet, I 324:
old form, I 571; II 452 appearance of, I 325, 329, 336, 440; II 304
as crest, I 79
danger from, I 325, 329, 330, 434, 439, 440, 441
myths or incidents describing, I 326, 330, 418-21; II 304
origin of, I 341, 329
parentage of, II 304
supernatural name of, I 341, 329
transformation of, I 324, 330, 405, 418, 440
use of, I 325, 326, 329, 330, 331, 571, 605, 720; II 279
Sqlaxel, I 170
Squamish, I 44, 47, 78, 330, 332, 335, 421, 437; II 156, 440
Stamm River, I 447, 484; II 305: first mothers of, I 7, 99, 297, 313, 334, 481; II 363 influences from, I 330

2:McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

[illegible]
graphic portrayal of, II [illegible] mask representing, II [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Sky, I [illegible]
for sale, Land above Sky of Rivers, I [illegible]
Slavery, I [illegible] acquisition of, I [illegible] as gift, I [illegible]
burial of, I [illegible]
heirlooms representing, I [illegible] in land above, II [illegible] marriage with, I [illegible] power over, I [illegible]
Sleep, as factor determinate geographies, II [illegible]
Sling, I [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Smoke-a, I [illegible]
fear evidence as, I [illegible]
personal power, I [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Snake, Indian, I [illegible]
Snail:
as medicine, I [illegible]
as supernatural being, II [illegible]
graphic portrayal of, II [illegible]
mask of, II [illegible]
Snakes, I [illegible]
as factor property, II [illegible]
as medicine, I [illegible]
Shadow of Snakes, I [illegible] power of, I [illegible]
fear evidence as, I [illegible]
for sale, Serpent
Snake-dance, I [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[

Z: McIlwraith E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Fishing
Fish-hook
Fish-spear
Flag
Flattery
Food
Forest
Fortune
Fowl
Fox
Frog
Fruit
Fuel
Funeral
Furs
Gambling Game Gardening
Gift
Gold Gossip Grandchildren
Grandfather Grandmother
Grandparents
Grandson Grave
Grease
Greed
Grey-bear
Grey-hair
Grey-head
Grey-hound
Grey-land
Grey-man
Grey-mouse
Grey-rock
Grey-sea
Grey-sky
Grey-stone
Grey-tree
Grey-water
Grey-wind
Grey-wolf
Grey-wood
Grey-wood-pecker
Grey-wood-tick
Grey-wood-worm
Grey-wood-wren
Grey-wood-yellow
Grey-wood-yellow-bird
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing-cotton-tree-bark-cloth
Grey-wood-yellow-bird-nest-egg-shell-fragment-bone-marrow-fat-oil-lamp-wick-cotton-tree-bark-cloth-garment-hat-band-feather-down-bed-mat-pillow-case-stuffing

2:McDowalb E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Supernatural Charmer, dance (Social) of, II 216-20, 221:
dances:
call to, II 217, 220
name of, II 216
masks, II 216, 217, 218, 219, 220
origin of, II 216
persons, II 216
songs, II 216, 217, 219, 220:
Shaman, II 217, 219, 220
Supernatural Lover, dance (Social) of, II 220-2: dances:
call to, II 220, 221
name of, II 220
inheritance of name, II 220
masks, II 221
persons, II 220
songs, II 221:
Shaman, II 221
Swallow, I 18
Swanfeb, I 21, 183, 687; II 483:
first appearance at, I 220
origin myth of, I 249-50
Swan, I 765:
primary of, II 459
use of, II 21, 45, 49, 148, 447, 471
Swimming, I 628, 689, 728; II 383
Symbolism, I 47, 48, 49, 363, 433, 499, 555; II 179:
graphic portrayal of, II 148, 179
minds of, II 179
Sylvatic, I 80
Sub-of, I 34, 55

T

Taboos, I 199, 368, 435, 495, 498, 765, 766-8:
at birth, I 363, 365, 370, 374, 495, 768 at death, I 434, 435, 436, 775, 495, 768 at puberty, I 370, 371, 373, 378, 526, 528, 575, 577, 687, 495, 738, 755, 756; II also, 487, 488, 489, 490 menstruation, I 328, 370, 371, 373, 375, 378, 379, 380, 738, 739
childbirth, I 494, 526, 761, 766, 768, 775, 777, 782
of fishing, I 495, 755; II 238 of hunting, I 363, 373, 448, 571, 488, 489, 738, 755, 757, 759 of mother during child's infancy, I 364 of mourners, I 363, 444, 434, 437, 438, 531, 549, 574 of pall bearers, I 444, 445 of pregnancy, I 361, 363, 495, 739 of widows and widowers, I 363, 434, 437, 531, 549, 574, 738, 755 at river, I 363, 364, 399, 528, 364, 379
See also, Bears; Dead, disposal of; Devils; Chickens; Salmon; Shamans; Sorcerers; Twins; Women; Whale
Taichmada, I 6, 7, 313, 313, 348, 413, 499
Tattooing:
contact with other tribes, I 14, 17, 32, 302, 326, 344, 397; II 47, 86, 133, 271, 340, 348, 350, 367
first appearance at, I 130, 131, 313, 324, 326 incidence on, I 15, 47, 133, 313, 324, 343, 438, 498, 546; II 30, 214, 298, 301, 311, 317, 318, 333, 337, 338, 339, 343, 345, 365, 462, 463 origin myths of, I 333-4, 336, 338-9, 339
practices of, I 130, 271, 413, 431, 483, 436; II 30 Rites, I 324
tribal area, I 13, 14
Tally Poles, I 100-2, 104, 113, 373; II 300, 302, 304, 305:
dance (Social) of, I 100; II 300-1:
dances:
call to, II 300
danger to, II 300
name of, II 300, 302
power of, II 300, 301, 302, 304
propagation of, II 300 inheritance to, II 302
masks, II 302
origin of, II 302
persons, II 300
ritual, name to, II 300, 302
songs, II 301, 302, 303, 304:
Shaman, II 300
Tattooing, I 66, 67
Tradition, I 6
Tsimshian, I 111, 114, 313, 333; II 278, 298, 337, 338, 339
Tsimsi, I 134, 302, 307, 308, 310, 343; II 300

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[illegible], I [illegible]; II 20, 347, 348, 350, [illegible], 356, 357, 358, 359, [illegible]
[illegible], I 8, [illegible], 33, 447, 448, 610, 654; II 42, [illegible], 200, 211, 222, 225, [illegible]
[illegible] I 8, 302, 308
[illegible], I 7
[illegible], hereditary, I 81, 138, 139, [illegible], 526, 547, 576, 612, [illegible]; II 298, 299, 454, 509
Thread:
as medicine, I 710
potency of, I 12, 759
[illegible] thread:
as medicine, I 717
graphic portrayal of, II 180, 181
mask of, II 180
potency of, I 180, 389
Thunder, I [illegible], 683; II 146, 182, 183, [illegible], 210, 224, 318:
aid from, II 34, 355, 356
as [illegible] among supernatural beings, II 146, 183, 205, 206, 317 graphic portrayal of, I 341; II 27, 147, [illegible]
[illegible] of, II 82, 183, 206
([illegible]) dance, II 205-11, 224, 225, [illegible]
dances:
call to, I 318
[illegible] of, II 206, 211, 318
[illegible], transmission of, II 211
power of II 206
graphic portrayal of, II 207
mask, II 36, 210
origin myth, II 209-10
[illegible], II 205, 206, 208, 209, 210, [illegible]
song, II 39:
[illegible], II 317-18
[illegible], I 209
mask of, II 7, 147, 184, 185
[illegible]'s [illegible] of, I 592, 593
Tide [illegible] dance ([illegible]) of, II 237:
[illegible] of dance, II 237
[illegible], II 37
[illegible], I 237
song, II [illegible]
[illegible], II 237
Tides, I 38, 90, 302, 341; II 76, 153
Time, measurement of, I 27, 28, 44; II 44, 50, 76, 153, 190, 306, 500
Tlaiyāham, (a'alk dance):
dances, I 277, 280, 326, 333, 334, 420
names, I 280, 282, 327; II 286, 291
songs, I 277, 420; II 285, 286, 291, 292, 293
Tlāqmā·ks, I 44, 107, 603, 688, 689
Tlincāpilāw·a, I 47, 109, 517, 547, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 557, 558, 562, 563, 564, 569, 572, 574, 575, 667, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687; II 64, 66, 72, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304:
graphic portrayal of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Tlaqo·ā, I 6
Tlaqots, II 182:
graphic portrayal of, II 183, 206, 207
mask of, II 183, 206, 261
Toad, II 178, 491, 494:
aid from, I 74
as medicine, I 549, 563, 564, 716, 719, 720, 731, 741
as string figure, II 555, 556, 557, 558
graphic portrayal of, II 139
potency of, I 74, 528, 591, 717, 720, 736; II 132, 136
Tokaēl, I 81, 86, 87, 88; II 406, 408, 409, 415
Top, dance (kusiut) of, II 241:
patron, II 241
Totem-pole, I 143, 249-52, 273; II 346, 476: design on, I 7, 8, 190, 192, 194, 249, 250, 251, 260, 261, 296, 297, 303, 306, 308, 309, 311, 312, 317, 321, 348, 349, 350, 354, 407, 469, 470 miniature, I 42, 469, 470, 471 miraculous, I 42, 308 of first settlers, I 126, 143, 296, 297, 303, 306, 308, 309, 311, 312, 341, 348 of supernatural beings, I 317, 321, 583 preparation of, I 227, 228, 249, 250, 251 significance of, I 80, 249, 250, 251, 252, 461, 463, 470
Tsamalos, I 14

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Trout, I 3, 522; II 334, 538: fishing methods, I 522; II 501, 502, 516
use of, I 3, 329, 522; II 106, 418, 501 Tsaaltmem, I 13
Tsimshian, I 193, 341, 710; II 218, 282
Tsilit, I 9, 655
Tsiwinam, see Crest
Tsulalit, I 300, 528, 624, 625, 626, 627; II 396, 397, 398, 399, 460, 483, 484, 485 Twins: association with salmon, I 72, 365, 366, 616, 674, 675; II 477
burial of, I 450
mother of, I 365, 366, 367, 412
power of, I 72, 366, 367, 674, 675 taboos re parents, I 365, 366, 757

U

Ulkatcho, II 355, 498

V

Victoria, I 68, 79, 80; II 508, 530
Village community, I 4, 12, 17, 118, 119, 125, 130, 131, 138, 139-43, 167, 294, 375; II 339, 341 Villages, Bella Coola, I 5-16, 140, 141, 142:
Bella Bella, I 19
description of, I 7, 16, 17, 142; II 340
ustáwy, I 21
Kwatna, I 19-20
Virgin Rocks, II 360, 361, 362

W

Wáklas, I 301, 340, 341, 342, 350; II 276, 285, 294, 296, 297
Wawmal-is, I 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546
Warfare, I 125, 132, 141, 158, 159, 304, 307, 326, 620, 705; II 188, 338-77, 383, 405, 408, 409, 423: causes of, I 132, 134, 165, 192, 193, 230, 316; II 19, 20, 38, 128, 169, 338, 339, 341, 348, 349, 361, 362, 372, 377 incidents, I 19, 318, 324, 595, 597, 602, 707, 719; II 346-62 internecine, I 17; II 19, 339 privileges of chiefs during, I 175; II 339, 356, 366 religious preparations for, I 105, 106, 601; II 342-3, 367, 368 safe-conducts during, I 208, 209; II 357, 358, 370, 371, 377 tactics, I 304, 306, 316; II 19, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 348, 350, 351, 362, 363, 365, 368, 370 with Carriers, II 342, 372-6, 463, 464 with Kitkatla, II 346-62 with Kwakiutl, II 362-71, 483
See also, Warrior
War-Party of the Ocean, I 54
War-Party of the Tide, I 54, 55, 72, 734, 735 Warrior, II 341, 342, 367, 368, 384: attitude towards, II 346
professional, I 236, 265-8; II 281, 282, 341, 349, 350, 352, 367, 368, 371, 374, 510, 522
taboos regarding, I 267; II 344
See also, Warfare
Wash-basin:
in land above, I 103-4, 218
tangible, I 104 used by shaman, I 558, 560, 562, 593; II 11, 300, 301, 302, 303, 320 Wasp:
as crest, I 201; II 280
as medicine, I 701; II 509
graphic portrayal of, II 228, 260
mask of, II 228
potency of, I 326, 331; II 227
Water-lily, as medicine, I 729, 730
Water ouzel, I 501:
anthropomorphized, II 188, 189
as string figure, II 544, 545
medicine from, I 701
potency of, I 9; II 386, 387, 388
Weasel:
origin of colour, I 282; II 624
potency of, I 323; II 500
use of, I 205, 206, 277; II 56, 357, 367
Whale, I 51, 83, 84, 251, 447:
as crest, I 36, 79, 226, 232, 251, 440, 485

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as graphic prerogative, I 193, 221, 222, 226, 348, 440; II 281, 359 as name, I 313
design, I 335, 339
potency of, I 321, 322; II 295, 297
taboos re, I 334
use of, I 334; II 282
Whirlwind, II 236, 237:
dance (kusiut) of, II 236-7:
mask, II 237
patron, II 237
graphic depiction of, II 237
Whistle, I 274, 326; II 296, 370:
imitative, I 220, 237, 238, 305, 335, 350, 440, 441, 488, 489
See also, Kusiut society, whistles; Susaé society, whistles Whistler:
potency of, I 584
use of, I 584
Whitewater River, I 10, 622; II 436, 437, 438 Wife:
repurchase of, I 184, 187, 191, 216, 218, 313, 393, 402, 406-16, 417, 418, 423, 424, 425, 426, 436, 463, 476, 478, 479, 483, 484, 491, 524
See also, Marriage
Willow:
graphic portrayal of, II 198, 199
mask representing, II 198
use of, I 760; II 535
Winds, I 43, 44, 63, 66, 67, 69, 84, 111, 307, 594, 596, 673, 676, 717; II 217, 220, 307:
in land above, II 204
See also, Cold wind; Heat; Storms
Winter Ray, I 66; II 342
Winter Wren:
graphic portrayal of, II 207
mask of, II 207
potency of, II 430, 431
Wiwaiwa, II 190, 191, 196:
as bringer of berries, II 189
as bringer of salmon, I 54, 85; II 187, 188, 192, 194
dance (kusiut) of, II 40, 187-96:
canoe, graphic portrayal of, II 191, 192
costume, II 190
dancer:
call to, II 190, 191
name of, II 189, 190
power of, II 190, 191, 194
mask, II 195
origin myths, II 188-9, 191
patron, II 189, 190, 196
prerogative, II 189, 190, 196
repository, II 189, 190
ritual, II 187-96
song, II 191, 194, 195:
theme, II 191, 195
Wala, dance (kusiut) of, II 64-71, 224:
dancer:
call to, II 64, 66, 70
names of, II 64
power of, II 65, 66, 67
masks, II 68, 69, 70
origin of, II 242
patrons, II 64, 65, 67, 69
prerogative, II 64, 71
rituals, foreigners at, II 65, 70
songs, II 65, 67, 68:
texts, II 66
themes, II 67
Wolf, I 76, 77, 450, 617, 691; II 419:
aid from, I 308, 337, 584, 587, 633, 634, 691, 692
anthropomorphized, I 583, 584, 587, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635; II 245, 488, 489
as crest, I 79, 298, 343
as incubus, II 71, 79, 103, 104, 105, 115
as medicine, I 708, 713
graphic portrayal of, II 79, 103, 104, 116, 180, 181
in beginning of time, I 135, 298, 308, 336, 337
land of, I 583
marriage with, I 630, 631, 633, 634, 635; II 488, 489
potency of, I 60, 71, 73, 99, 135, 308, 336, 337, 583, 633, 634, 635, 736; II 101, 102, 115, 116, 425, 426, 427, 428, 447, 449
transformation of, I 308; II 449
use of, I 655, 656, 753, 754; II 414
Wolverine, I 617; II 419, 502:
medicine from, I 700, 713

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Wolverine (cont'd):
potency of, I 71, 584, 685; II 396-99, 429, 430, 467
use of, I 2
Woodpecker:
graphic portrayal of, II 246
potency of, II 459
World, ideas about, I 23, 40, 42: travels around, I 23, 308, 313, 333, 335 Worm:
potency of, II 399, 400, 401, 402, 404
transformation of, II 402, 403

X

Xaiqa, I 10
Xemesa, I 247, 301, 302, 326, 331, 485; II 64, 69, 286, 326:
graphic portrayal of, II 182
mask of, II 182
Xemermálala, I 44, 45, 107; II 64, 359:
graphic portrayal of, II 66, 69, 182
mask of, II 182
Xemermenem, I 43, 299; II 239
Xe-sla, I 214, 217, 392, 393, 446; II 342, 344, 384:
song, text of, II 282-3
Xipois, I 159, 335, 357, 511, 512

Y

Yaláiemut, I 39, 40, 57, 83, 269; II 323: acts of, I 327, 331, 345, 346, 347, 529
as hamat patron, II 318 marriage of, I 269, 344
origin of, I 331, 344
Yayakmyl, I 334, 433; II 234, 235:
graphic portrayal of, II 235
See also, Stone Man, dance (hamat) of the

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6
103, 192, 551, 773, 776

/For a Bella Coola-English vocabulary which includes place names, personal names, and names of spirits, gods, mythological characters and places, see category 116, pp. 573-630./

2: McIlwraith
203

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

/For information on the role of "heralds" in the winter ceremonial dances of the kusiut society see category 116, pp. 41-241./

2: McIlwraith
533, 539

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

/For a discussion of Bella Coola songs and the text of songs see category 116, pp. 267-337./

2: McIlwraith
539

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

/The text of Bella Coola stories relating mythological and historical events will be found in category 116, pp. 386-517./

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6
539

/For songs and dialogue which accompany the making of string figures see category 116, pp. 543-567./

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6
539

/Native accounts of warfare between the Bella Coola and neighboring tribes will be found in category 116, pp. 346-377./

2: McIlwraith
535

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

/For a discussion and description of the winter ceremonial dances see category 796./

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6
175

/For a discussion of the kusiut society, including its ritual and origin myths, see category 116, pp. 1-271./

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola 2E6

575, 796

/For texts and commentaries on songs used in burial rites see category 116, pp. 305-331./

2: McIlwraith
796

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

/For a description of the ritual of specific dances of the kusiut society see category 116, pp. 41-271./

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6
681

/For information on sanctions employed to discipline members of the kusiut society see category 116, pp. 1-266./

2: McIlwraith
642

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

/The locus of political power and authority appears to be the hamatsa society. For information on this secret society, its disciplining of members, and its relations with the uninitiated see category 116, pp. 1-266./

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NES Bellacoola NES

American Anthropologist

NEW SERIES

ORGAN OF THE AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF WASHINGTON, AND THE AMERICAN ETHNOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK

Committee on Publication

WALTER HOUGH, Chairman ex-officio, R. H. LOWIE, Secretary ex-officio, G. A. MARCOTT, A. CULIN, J. W. POWELL, A. L. KROEBER, O. T. MASON, G. A. DORSEY, A. HRDLICKA, A. F. CHAMBERLAIN, A. L. KROEBER, A. LUTTER, G. G. MACCURDY, W. H. HOLMES, A. C. HADDON, R. RAPIN, M. J. MEGGERS, H. H. WARNE, C. WISSLER.

Advisory Sub-Committee

F. W. HODGE (CHAIRMAN), J. W. POWELL, A. LUTTER

ROBERT H. LOWIE, Editor, Berkeley, California
FRANK G. SPECK and E. W. GIFFORD, Associate Editors

VOLUME 27

MENASHA, WISCONSIN, U. S. A.
PUBLISHED FOR
THE AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION
1925

[title page]

St. Smith. E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NEA Bellacoola NEA

SYMPATHETIC MAGIC AND WITCHCRAFT AMONG THE BELLACOOLA

By MARLOW S. SMITH

MANY OF the Bellacoola Indians today believe in sympathetic magic and witchcraft, after over a hundred years of contact with white men. Most of them live within hearing of the bells of the mission church, and the government school. Not a few of the men take logging contracts; some of them build and operate motor boats; many of them join the fishing fleets of the salmon canneries; most of the women work in the canneries; and all deal at the white men's stores.

The Bellacoola lived on the heads of the long inlets half way up the Pacific Coast of Canada and in the tributary Bella Coola valley. Now, numbering perhaps two hundred and fifty, they, with the exception of a few families, are concentrated on one reservation at the mouth of the Bella Coola river. The Bella Coola valley has been called the Doorway of Canada. This was where Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first white man to cross Canada overland, reached the sea.

Aboriginally, the Bellacoola were of the North Pacific Coast culture of Swanton, which is characterized by the extensive use of red cedar and its products, particularly salmon, the making of graceful, sea-going canoes, each hewn from a single cedar, the erection of large rectangular houses made of cedar planks, with carved house posts and totem poles, lack of pottery, and superiority in carpenter work, carving, and painting. This culture belongs to the Northwest area, but the Bellacoola were marginal to a certain extent. The art of the area was their best known from the paintings and carvings of the totem poles, largely of conventionalized animal forms. The life centered around a very highly developed social organization, an extensive and powerful financial system, and property rights to names, rituals and houses. The Bellacoola language is one of the Salish linguistic stock. They are apparently more recent comers to the coast than their neighbors and have not fully adopted the coast culture.

Jr Smith. E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NEB Bellacoola NEI

105

The following examples of sympathetic magic and witchcraft, collected during 1920 to 1923 among the Bellacoola, illustrate the extent of their belief in this direction. 114 121

Most of this information was given me by the late Captain Schooner, born about 1848, and Joshua Woody, born about 1854, both apparently full-blood Bellacoola Indians. Neither of them spoke English and both gave me the data in Chinook jargon, which I have endeavored to interpret and arrange in logical order, but have tried to render it as nearly as possible the Indian mode of thought, feeling and expression. Schooner was a pagan gentleman. Joshua has great knowledge of plants and animals, and is a Bellacoola scientist, but his great ambition and jealousy, combined with his dishonesty in giving up his own people's customs and adopting a very thin veneer of Christianity, color his statements relating to beliefs, although his plant and animal data have always withstood cross examination and comparison with the data supplied by other Indians. Alec Davis and Mrs. Willie Black told of the road. They do not talk English and spoke me in Chinook jargon. Only the accounts about the grizzly bear skin and the bracelet of beaver skin, which were given me by Pete Stuwaiqen, were told in English. 15 [141] [19]

The material was not given as accounts of magic or witchcraft, but rather as part of the data regarding the properties of plants and animals of which I was endeavoring to collect as complete information as possible. 114 121

Joshua, who is even younger than Captain Schooner, remembers the time when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in the Bella Coola valley, and when they saw only one other white man every year or two. Consequently these men remember the old Bellacoola beliefs before they were much, if at all, affected by European ideas. 114 115

It will be noticed that magic among the Bellacoola is considered of two kinds: for beneficial and injurious purposes, and that the materials giving effect to it are of both plant and animal origin. 787 794

J: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NEA Bellacoola NEA

759 The beneficial purposes include: making a child grow up to 78 be a good dancer, industrious, a swift berry picker, or a strong 856 man; curing lung trouble; making the river crude where wanted; and two ways of stopping rain. The injurious purposes include: two ways of making a person grow up to be a thief; the causing of craziness and quarrelsomeness and the three ways of causing death.

754 The materials and actions used include: ashes of aspen leaves;
78 a dead toad, used with hair, with a red cedar bark face wiper,
824 and with hot pieces of thimble berry shoots which were accidentally dropped while being eaten; ashes of a yellow jacket's nest;
825 a living raven with phlegm; beaver paws, in two instances; a skin bracelet from a beaver's foreleg; a dead wood-rat; a dead mouse; a grizzly bear's skin; a living red squirrel with a bit of aspen fringe; setting fire to a wood-rat's house; and poking an ant hill.

78 To make a person a good dancer the ashes of the burned leaves 856 of the aspen or trembling poplar were said to be useful, but Jackson said this may have been a joke. The Bellacoola Indians say the leaves dance. They never say that they tremble. When 856 a baby was born, if the parents talked about it and the father desired that the baby grow up to be a good dancer, the mother or father got the leaves, burned them and put the ashes on the baby's hands, knees and elbows. When telling of this Jackson held his hands with the finger tips up and moved them as the Bellacoola do in dancing. Both rich and poor were danced.

78 A baby girl would grow up to be industrious, it was believed, 825 if the warm finds of a recently dead beaver were applied to her.
824 The Bellacoola apparently observed the great industry of the beaver.

To make a baby girl grow up to be a fast berry-picking woman, the ring of skin from between two cuts around a beaver's foreleg was put on her wrist and was left on until it were off.

To make a boy grow up to be a strong man, a skin of the [illegible]

755 For phlegm on the lungs, more permanent than a simple cold, 825 the patient expectorated in something and some one recently mixed the fresh phlegm with salmon eggs and put the mixture

J: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1923
NER Bellacoola NES

755
815

out for the ravens to eat. This was done four times, and if a raven ate it, the patient recovered, according to Captain Schooner's belief. As the call of the raven sounds somewhat like a person affected with phlegm in the throat, this may be a case of sympathetic magic, at any rate it is one of witchcraft.

(314)

To make the river erode at a certain place in order to break a log jam, a beaver's foot was buried in each of several spots in the place.

785
815

A continuous rain would cease, and the sun would come out, it was said, if the people set fire to a wood-rat's house.

When it rained too much the Bellacoola Indians poked down an ant hill and said, "Give us warm sunshine." They believed this would bring results, but now that Joshua is a Christian he says he does not believe it and says it is useless play talk.

Bad boys or girls, but not adults, would take a dead mouse, warm it over a fire, and rub the warmed mouse on the hands of a baby. This made the baby steal when it grew up. The so-called stealing habits of the mouse were supposed to be transferred to the child.

759
756
815

The still warm body of a freshly killed wood-rat was used in the same way to make a baby, boy or girl, "crazy," and grow up to be a constant thief. The notorious habits of the wood-rat, as well as those of the mouse, were evidently well recognized by the Bellacoola.

To make people crazy, the red squirrel had to be properly used by a shaman and then it possessed strong power. One woman who had been made crazy in this way died in 1887. She did not like the shaman and he did not like her. He stole her apron. She was crazy. He took it into the forest and performed witchcraft because he wanted to spoil her life by making her crazy. He caught a red squirrel alive, possibly in a little basket. He had a box called a "bad box," in which he kept his things of evil power. He put some of the fringe of her apron around the red squirrel and let it run her crazy. The woman then became crazy and sometimes fell down, but part of the time she seemed well. My Indian informant, Joshua, had seen her. This example of sympathetic

759
756
815

Sc Smith B-5 (1920-1921) 1921
NEB Bellevue NEB

magic probably originated from observing the many very erratic and apparently purposeless movements of the red squirrel.

When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow up to be a quarrelsome person, a yellow jacket's nest was burned and the ashes were rubbed on the face, hands, and arms of the child. When the child grew up, it was believed, he or she would fight with everyone. The yellow jacket's natural defense of its nest is interpreted as quarrelsome, even by white people.

The toad was a powerful medicine for the bad bee used in witchcraft.

To make a man or woman die of cruelness, one of the hairs of the person's head was put in the body cavity of a disembowled toad.

To make a person's face swell and suppurate until death came, the little pieces of softened red cedar bark used to clean the person's face were put in the body cavity of a disembowled toad. The idea underlying this was probably the reproduction of the warts of the toad on the face of the person.

To make a person die, a piece of the young shoot of a thimble berry, hair by that person while eating, was put in the mouth of a toad. Death was supposed to take place in half an hour.

One very old man, John by name, boasts of having killed seven people by means of his bad bee used in witchcraft, especially of having caused the death of Mr. John Clayton, who was the first white man to remain long in this area, having kept the Hudson's Bay store at Bella Coola, and later a store of his own, but who died far away from Bella Coola in 1909.

Mrs. Samuel King who died in 1913 was said to have been poisoned by Willie Mack. Her father, Captain Johnson, was said to have stated that Willie would die in July on the anniversary of her death. Willie Mack died in the summer of 1913. Captain Johnson died a few days later. He was said to understand understand witchcraft thoroughly. It was said that people often cut off the collars of Willie Mack's shirts. Willie Mack's father was too great a chief so that people were ashamed, and consequently killed Willie by means of witchcraft with something in a bad bee.

Jr. Smith E-5 (1920-1922) 1925
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Charlie West, a Carrier Indian from Ulkatcho, believed that Mrs. Samuel King had been killed by Willie Mack's witchcraft. Alexander Chinnow, a Bellacoola Indian, believed that Willie Mack had been killed by Captain Schooner's witchcraft in revenge for his daughter's death, and that Captain Schooner died of witchcraft on the part of Willie Mack.

That Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first white man to visit the Bellacoola, performed acts of witchcraft on the beach, was strongly asserted by Indian, who would not believe me that Mackenzie was probably taking observations, determining his geographical position.

Ethnology Museum of Canada, Ottawa.

Gt Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NBA Bellecourts NBB
Carrier NET

American Anthropologist

NEW SERIES

ORGAN OF THE AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF WASHINGTON, AND THE AMERICAN ETHNOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK

Committee on Publication

WALTER HOUGH, Chairman ex-officio, S. H. LOWIE, Secretary ex-officio, S. A. BARRETT, L. COLIN, J. W. FEWKES, A. A. GOLDENWEISER, F. W. HODGE, E. A. HOOTON, A. HRDLIČKA, A. L. KROEBER, R. LOWIE, G. G. MacCURDY, W. H. HOLMES, G. G. MORLEY, S. RAPIN, R. J. SPINDEN, G. G. WORCESTER, C. WISSLER.

Library Sub-Committee

F. W. HODGE (CHAIRMAN), J. W. FEWKES, R. LOWIE

ROBERT H. LOWIE, Editor, Berkeley, California
FRANK G. SPECK and E. W. GIFFORD, Associate Editors

VOLUME 27

MENASHA, WISCONSIN, U. S. A.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

1925

[title page]

G. Smith B-3 (1920-1922) 1921
MS. Bellacoola 9/84
Carrier 9/87

ETHNOLOGY AMONG THE BELLACOOLA AND CARRIER INDIANS

By HARLAN I. SMITH

B 1/31

THE Bellacoola Indians live in the Norway of Canada, about midway of the Pacific Coast, where Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first white man to cross Canada, reached the sea—that is, about half way between Vancouver and Prince Rupert. Their country is around the head of the bitter about sixty miles in from or east of Ocean Falls and the usual route of the steamers up and down the coast. This inland passage is with few exceptions protected by the outer fringe of islands. The Bellacoola language is one of the Salish linguistic stock. The people are of the typical North Pacific Coast culture, characterized by the extensive use of red cedar and its products, especially salmon, large houses of split cedar planks with carved house posts, and totem poles, and houses mapping crests flag out of cedar. They were expert carpenters and had a peculiar art, especially in painting and carving, largely of conventionalized animal forms—a valuable contribution to the art of the world. This art may become of great financial value to the manufacturers of this country as well as a magnet capable of exploitation to bring to tourists with money from foreign lands. These Indians had a very highly developed social organization, many dances and rituals, and a complex financial system popularly known as the potlatch.

B 1/35

C 1/31 [1/34]

The Carrier Indians of Ulkatcho, on the other hand, live in the high plateau of the semi-arid region, perhaps 70 miles northeast of the Bellacoola. They differ from the Bellacoola in language, appearance, and culture perhaps as much as do the Turks from the English. They had a less realistic art, which was largely geometric and pictographic, highly conventionalized and symbolic. Their social organization and financial system also were less highly developed.

B 1/36

From time to time during 1920-1922 inclusive, I have secured from both these peoples data about their use of materials. Part of these data refer to insects, and may be of interest to entomologists, although my spelling of Indian words is very problematical, because some of the words I can neither hear nor make, and I am unable to record adequately many of those that I can hear. The data here given are preliminary to a complete working over of my notes, but are believed to be nearly complete.

Insects apparently were not so well observed by the Ojibwayas as were useful mammals and plants, the stinger of the bumble-bee, for instance, being supposed to be in its mouth. Five insects had names, that is, mainly those which were used or which troubled the Indians. Insects were not used for food, and honey was unknown until after the coming of the white man. The head of the gold-fly was used as a pattern in painting designs, the wing of the yellow jacket in sympathetic magic or witchcraft, and "fly spit" was said to be good for warts. They had a story about the bumble-bee.

Among the Ojibwayas also observation of insects was weaker than that of mammals and plants, and they apparently had names for only a few insects, those which troubled them. Not bees gathered nor method of taking prey were known. Insects were of no use to the Ojibwayas whatever. No instance was observed of an Indian covering himself with a bunting fly held in his mouth. They employed smudges, fish oil, grease of the rattlesnake, and blankets of cow parsnip with oil to protect themselves from mosquitoes, black flies and no-see-ums, and smoke to protect tents from flies.

The fish lice, among the Ojibwayas, is called [illegible]. It is said to be common in Ojibwayas but that it was unknown that there was no story about it. My informant voluntarily showed me the pike made by the larvae of this insect and, striking aside for this purpose, demonstrated the well-known method of taking to prey.

The grasshopper (Pokopinsi), that makes a noise by rubbing its wings together when it flies, was called [illegible], among the Ojibwayas.

"Fly spit," that is the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, also known as a frog hopper (Cercopidae), is said

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

A fly which does not bite, perhaps the house fly among the Bulkeeds, was called Mamnish, and was said to lay its eggs on fish and fish eggs. The place called Nemmenish was so named because the people thought they saw flies and they said mamnish, but when the supposed flies fell they were seen to be beads.

Among the Ulatchs, this fly was called Arthus, and was said to lay its eggs on clothes. To keep off flies of all kinds and mosquitoes the Shamans of the cow parsnip, Heracleum lanatum Michx, called Yuan in Ulatchs, were put in all of the cabins that a sick child and the mixture was put on the body. Every food that was cooked was smoked so that flies would keep away from it. This secret used as fish bait.

The Gad-fly, Ahmaw sp.? probably Gymnomia G. G. of the family Tabanidae, which is commonly called horsefly, is numerous when the leaves come down to Bella Coola from the interior. Among the Bulkeeds it is called Tilt lay coil. It is said to lay its eggs in the backs of the earlbeas in July, and these hatch into "worms." The eye and eyes, being pretty, were used long ago as a pattern for a design which was painted on the house. There was no name for this fly.

Among the Ulatchs, this gad-fly is called Chu ca, and a smaller one is called Chu cha yun, yun signifying small. Once I was told that no medicine was used to keep off the gad-fly, but no mention occurs that cottonwood gum with oil was used. Apparently for its own amusement, my Ulatchs Indian informant held one of these flies by the abdomen inside his mouth and made it hum.

The black, white black biting fly, horse fly (Gymnomyia sp.?) apparently considered as one, are called Tickple and in Bulkeeds. They are called Chu cha yun in Ulatchs yun signifying small.

The black fly, Simuliidae, among the Bulkeeds is called Tiam cum cum ch co ch hell.

Among the Ulatchs it is called Wiachs, while Tah is the name of black fly, mosquitoes, and no-see-ums. All these were kept off with a smoke smudge made with a fire of any kind of wood on which one put such things as grass, wet, or cotton wood,

B C [illegible] or grass. Black flies were sometimes kept off by putting oil of [illegible] or tree on the face and hands. Cottonwood gum with oil was also used for this purpose.

The No-see-um among the Bellacoola is called Skaqk or al ka.

C [illegible] Among the Ulkatcho the no-see-um is called Whelkuil and it is said that the bite of this little fly causes swelling and sickness. It was kept off in the same manner as the black fly.

Mosquitoes, Cokulsin, among the Bellacoola, were called Pilim.

C [illegible] Among the Ulkatcho they were kept off with smoke in the same manner as the black fly, and with ointments of the cow parsnip in oil in the same manner as flies. It is not clear if the gum of the cottonwood was or was not used for this purpose, as it was to keep off no-see-ums.

C [illegible] Among the Ulkatcho "worms" were not used as fish bait.

Victoria Memorial Museum,
Ottawa, Canada.

[illegible]

CANADA

DEPARTMENT OF MINES

[illegible]

NATIONAL MUSEUM OF CANADA

[illegible]

BULLETIN No. [illegible]

Annual Report for 1927

CONTENTS

[illegible] Page

[illegible] 1

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

[Title Page]

[illegible] SECTION OF THE BELLA COOLA AND VEDDER-RIVERS, THE CHUKS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

By Stefan J. Smith

INTRODUCTION

This paper describes the entirely oralcy of two tribes of British Columbia, the Bella Coola of Bella Coola valley, the Chukes of Chuckes River, the Chukes are live in the central inland belt of British Columbia, and the Bella of the Southwest of Chuckes River. Among the Bella Coola the societies are largely family associations formed by a few individuals only. In fact, each family has some different ancestry for the same specific ancestors but this is not the case among the other tribes. Everything related primarily with largely into the structure of Chuckes, but are considered here in this report. It was impossible for the Indians to disparage many of their ancestry, so that the distributions given here are in many cases problematic.

Most of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1938-39, by Julius Nicely, apparently a full-blood Bella Coola Indian, born about 1870. He did not speak English to give the many in Chinook jargon, which has been interpreted and arranged in logical order. Julius is an Indian educated with great knowledge of the local plants and animals. He remembers when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in Bella Coola valley and when the Christians and only one other white man lived near to him. Consequently he was good the old Bella Coola customs which have in two ways affected by European ideas.

Some of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1938-39 by the late Francis Sampson, also apparently a full-blood, born about 1870, who died the Chinook jargon. Also Charlie Alexander Clayton, Lucie Hall, and other Bella Coola Indians likewise gave information and corroboration.

Most of the information relating to the Southern Carrier Indians of Chuckes was secured during 1938-1939 from Charlie Wren (also known Charlie or Hawkeyes Charlie, a native of that place, born about 1870). Charlie speaks the peculiar form of broken or pidgeon English, commonly employed for communication between the whites and the Carrier and Chilcotin Indians of this region.

The information about the Sheet and the Southern Carrier of Chuckes is from data that were kindly furnished by Mr. D. Jenness.

The information relating to the Chukes has access to 1938-39 from the late John Prudes and Abraham Prudes of Chuckes, John Prudes and Jack Sebastian of Chuckes, with additions and corroboration from a few others all of Chuckes Indians apparently full-blood. The information was secured mainly in English, although Abraham Prudes used also the Chinook jargon.

The method the notes employed was to submit questions of the chiefs to the informants and publish their meaning of their use. All the information thus obtained only the mentioned persons has been accepted here. The plants were later identified by Mr. H. D. Skeels of the National Museum, Ottawa.

POLYPODIACEAE, FERN FAMILY

Polypodium vulgare L., Polypody, Fukaatsu Swan Fern

Sioux Indian: Sores—sometimes mixed with leaves of the red cedar (Thuja plicata Don) or with other medicinal roots which the informant has forgotten—boiled, and the warm decoction taken internally for pains in the stomach, but not for vomiting or diarrhoea. Pulver on smoke use a pungative.

Roots chewed for coughs were chewed.

Southern Cheyenne: Dog used.

Asplenium ruta-muraria Sugr., Lady Fern

Sioux Indian: Little roots chewed off, from five to ten minutes, mixed or done with roots or branches of the current (Ribes hudsonianum Richards. var.) boiled strongly, but for a short time only, and the decoction used as a wash for sore eyes.

Southern Cheyenne: Dog used.

Asplenium spleniomanes Sw., Spleen Fern

Sioux Indian: Root taken raw to neutralize poisoning from eating several kinds of mushrooms in the early part of the summer.

Fern, species unknown

Southern Cheyenne: Root boiled and the decoction taken internally for worms.

Gilmore: The large, round, green rootstock, but not the rootlets, mixed with roots of Indian Ipecac (Gillenia trifoliata (Linn.) and devil's club (Fatsia horrida Sm. K. and H.), a little gum of wood pine (Pinus ponderosa Dougl.) or ponderosa spruce (Picea ambrosiana Carr), and root of devil's cabbage (Lycoctonum barbatum Nuttall), mashed a little, put pulled in a bag or sheet, which is brought to a boil. Also used for dysentery, and as a plaster on the chest for hemorrhage of the lungs.

OPHIOGLOSSACEAE, GRAPE FERN FAMILY

Botrychium dissectum L., Cutleaf Grape Fern

Southern Cheyenne: Inserted in the nose to cause bleeding and cure headache.

TAXACEAE, YEW FAMILY

Taxus brevifolia Nutt., Yew

Sioux Indian: Branches with leaves boiled, and the decoction taken internally for the lungs. Pulver a pungative and an emetic.

E. Smith. E-9 (1930-1933)[illegible] NEB Bulletin NEB
Contrib. NEB
[illegible]

CUPRESSAE, PINE FAMILY

Juniperus communis L., Juniper

Folk Uses: Roots, leaves, branches and bark boiled, and the decoction taken internally as often as desired for many ailments, including a cough from the lungs, and pain in the stomach. Bathed a purgative say an emetic.

Southern Carrier: Branches boiled, and the vapor inhaled for headache and pain in the chest.

Northern Carrier: Tips boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative, also for a cough.

Juniperus sp.

Ottawa: Entire plant, including roots and berries, boiled for a day, and the decoction, when cool, taken internally for many ailments, including hemorrhage and kidney trouble. A purgative and diuretic.

Thuja plicata Don, Red Cedar

Folk Uses: Tree with bark used to bind up wounds, and to cover positions of false bighorn (Ovis canadensis Nels.) and of tail bighorns (Ovis canadensis nelsoni L.).

Leaves, sometimes with the gum-resinous cones, boiled, and the hot decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach. Bathed as emetic and a purgative.

Leaves powdered by pounding, mixed with a little cold water and taken internally for pain in the stomach, also externally for coughs and internal pains, as heart trouble, rheumatism, swollen neck, and pain in the stomach. (See also Polypody, page 49.

Ottawa: Bite used.

Chamaecyparis nootkatensis (Lamb) Spach, Yellow Cypress, Yellow Cedar

Folk Uses: A little with bark used to cover positions of false bighorn (Ovis canadensis Nels.) and of tail bighorns (Ovis canadensis nelsoni L.).

Pinus monticola Dougl., Western Pine, Lone Pine

Folk Uses: Gum applied to cuts.

Gum chewed and applied as broken skin.

Gum on the ends of branches, collected in November, December, and January, boiled and the decoction taken internally for "consumption."

Gum—like that of ponderosa species (page 51) and western larch (page 51)—mixed with the boiled shoots and leaves, or the dried and pulverized bark, of false bighorns (page 49), and applied as a poultice (sometimes spread on red cotton cloth) on the chest for heart trouble, and to the arms for rheumatism. Around the skin which was at three days, but was sometimes left on as long as two weeks.

Southern Carrier: One dozen bulbs, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach. Essential the decoction made from the bark of the roots (page [illegible]), or from the root dozen and bark of the highest spines (page [illegible]), but the last-mentioned are different most effective.

Northern Carrier: Usually due mixed with large vessels (one of the "British Columbia plant" (Prince [illegible]), the inside bark of the wild gooseberry (Rose [illegible]), bark of the mountain dogwood (Cornus [illegible] Nuttall), the bark pulp of raspberry canes (Rubus [illegible]), stems of the "raspberry" (Thimble raspberry, Western raspberry Nuttall), and the inner bark of the wild rose (Rose [illegible]), placed in a vessel holding two gallons of water, boiled down to a half decoction, strained, and bottled. Drink one tablespoonful taken, as needed and warm, for constitutional weakness or paralysis, or if the body was covered with sores.

Eyes diseased by heating a green piece of glue (no?) painted on the eye to remove white scum and to cure sore blindness.

Others: Flesh covered and the saliva swallowed for a cough.

Others: Some bark (scraped from the wood) with a bare scraper when the outer bark (of bark removed) outer bark for food and as a blood purifier. Purgent the body to feel bad as bare to as bear.

Shavings of the yellow cedarwa (Indian food after removal of the bark bulbs), the decoction placed in oil, and taken internally as a purgative and diuretic for many serious ailments, including gonorrhoea. Said to produce beneficial results in "consumption."

Young needles (plucked in June and eaten as a purgative and diuretic.

For use with a lens, see page [illegible].

[illegible] Wound Pus, Bumps Pus

Pelle Cedar: Bark of root or of stem bulbs, and the decoction taken internally every day for tuberculosis and stomach trouble. Said to have cured many cases of tuberculosis.

Gum from bark (Indian food on young trees method), mixed with mountain goat tallow, and taken internally for sore throat, also placed on a bad sores and eyes.

Young green leaves bulbs, mixed with bark of skunk cabbage (Symplocarpus foetidus Salisb.) gathered in October, or the bulb gathered in April, gets, dried on top of the house, roasted, mixed with a small quantity of slightly roasted roots of the sun parsnip (Frasera speciosa Douglas Nuttall), one or two ounces of the green bark of the black cottonwood (Populus trichocarpa T. and G.), and then on the outside of bark underside all placed in small sun dry, then bulbs and bark in a box for a bad gathered. Children (children) said to be sore eyes to be prepared.

Southern Carrier: Two and for medicine, for bowels not diagnosed.

Chilcotin: Six each.

(6)

Allow up:

Feathers (large): Dark bulbul to moist and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Cow meat as an ointment on wounds, and especially on bones.

Albino: Cow applied to wounds.

Albino: Bibi bone bark, spread from the trunk of the tree, after removal of the outer bark, taken internally for constipation.

Cow from the bark (Ghana) taken internally as a purgative and diuretic for "homosexuality", gonorrhoea, and sexual abuse (bites of) insects. Applied externally to cuts and sores, especially the sores of gonorrhoea.

The young sores, obtainable in August, dried sprays, crushed, and used for the same purposes as the gum from the bark (Ghana).

See also item, page 40.

Pseudomonas aeruginosa Bibi, Tomato Fly

Bibi Fudu: Cow bulbul and taken internally, while warm, as a diuretic for gonorrhoea.

Cow spread on and under bark applied to cuts. (The informant said that although gum of scrub plum (see page 40), baobab (see page 41), and Gabbard spores (see page 6) were good, Douglas Bi gum made cuts worse.)

Cow mixed with English (Dutch) oil or if that was not available, collection oil, taken, two spoonfuls at a time, with warm water, as an emetic and purgative for colds, flatulence, gonorrhoea, constipation, intestinal colds and diarrhoea.

Southern Cameroon: Not used.

Albino: Not used.

Tangy Intermediate (Dut) Bark, Wharton Diseases, and Tangy Intermediate Can, Wharton Diseases

Bibi Fudu: Leaves dried and applied to bones.

See also scrub plum (page 40).

Cow treated and applied to cuts. Dry bulbul for a diuretic for gonorrhoea.

Burning twigs applied to the skin for various internal ailments.

Southern Cameroon: Not used.

Albino: Not used.

Plane deciduous Can, Tomato Sweep

Bibi Fudu: Tips of small, hot out of bulb, sprouts mixed with the sweep (Bibi Gnamonia, Dogo), white bamboo (Dogo, another Bunda bark), and crushed bibi (Dogo and spread of garden monitors) (Gymnarchus niloticus Bibi), boiled and taken internally for gonorrhoea.

Bee from the pulled scrub taken in doses of two half a cup to a cupful on a baseline from May to August.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

CONFIDENTIAL
[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Salix Sericeolanata Hook., Woolly

Folk Use to: Pulled inner bark and the dust of Salix lucinda Bonpl. for sore; but charred from the stick and used for diarrhoea.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gibbons: Not used.

Salix sp., Willow

Silver: Young willow charred and the ashes applied to emerged sores.

White pondbery tops charred for a cough.

Populus tremuloides Michx., Aspen, Trembling Poplar

Folk Cure: A quantity of bark from the roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally from seven to ten times a day for gonorrhoea with hemorrhage from the urethra. A very bitter decoction, said to be a good remedy that stopped the hemorrhage.

Southern Carrier: Bark used instead of Gibbons spruce bark (page 51) to make a decoction for pain in the stomach. Considered inferior to the spruce bark.

Silver: Bark pulverized by pounding, moistened with water, and applied as a paste to wounds.

Bark scraped, scrapings steeped in hot water, and the decoction taken internally for worms. Caused a steel immediately.

Gibbons: Bark of roots charred or smoked and put on cuts.

Bark alone boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative. Not as emetic.

Populus wislizenii T. and G., Bigtooth Cottonwood

Folk Cure: Leaves, say to fifteen years old, from the lower leaves lying rotting on the ground, boiled, and the decoction used as a bath, the patient sitting in it up to his neck for about two hours to ease pain in the body, not rheumatism. A hot stone added from time to time, and the bath repeated the next day.

The body with their nails boiled and the decoction used as a hair wash. See also white fir (page 63).

Half a capful of buds, plucked some time between December and March, mixed with two tubs of raw parsnip (Heracleum lanatum Michx.), a half capful of buds of mountain alder (Alnus tenuifolia Nutt.), and a little water, smashed, and applied warm, but smashed, as a poultice for pains in the lungs or like the decoction. Said to effect a cure in two days, but harmful if left on longer.

See also western fern (page 62).

Southern Carrier: Body with their nails boiled for one or two hours, and the decoction taken internally for coughs and lung affections.

Buds from the buds applied to the face as a cosmetic, or, with the addition of oil, to small scratches, black flies and gnattes.

Roots and bark not used; buds are boiled to make a hair wash.

Northern Carrier: Green roots charred to a pulp and applied to wounds to stop bleeding.

Inside bark boiled and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Gibbons: Cottonwood bark boiled and the roots mixed with bear grease for a hair pomatum.

Roots, barks, and seeds not used.

WITHACHAR

Myrica Cerifera L., Sweet Gale

Folk Uses: Decoction, secured at any time of the year, pounded with their bark, boiled, and the decoction taken internally for gonorrhoea. A diuretic. The decoction, which was kept in a tin made of red cedar wood with a little wine to keep out the dark, caused in two or three days and twenty unclean.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

WITHACHAR, BUSCH FAMILY

Abies alcalicola (Eng.) Sarg., Cedar Acres

Folk Uses: Cones used as a remedy for some unspecified complaint.

Abies mexicana Nutt., Mexican Acres

Folk Uses: Cones used as a remedy for some unspecified complaint.

See also bark mentioned (page 84).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gibbons: Pastilles within crushed, and the mass eaten raw as a laxative.

Pastilles within and shavings eaten raw, or also boiled in water and the decoction taken internally three times a day, as a diuretic for gonorrhoea. Said to effect a cure in one week.[1]

Abies rubra Sang., Red Acres

Folk Uses: Bark boiled, and a cupful of the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Southern Carrier: Sap applied to cuts. Not used for a medicinal decoction.

Northern Carrier: Inside bark ground, steeped in water, and injected with a syringe made from the wing of a bird, for bilousness.

Gibbons: Bark and roots boiled for sheep ticks and the decoction drunk in the morning for a cough.

Bark from the stem, but not from the roots, scraped, mixed with water, and the infusion taken internally, as an emetic and purgative, for headache and many other maladies.

WITHACHAR, WITTLE FAMILY

Cretes Lyelli Wats., Wiscasset Berries

Folk Uses: Used for a form of paralysis where the patient had been unable to walk for a long time. Drinks among daily, causing urine and gradual revival of sensation. In one case said to have effected a cure in ten days.

See also western dock (page 84).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gibbons: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally for many diseases, including hemorrhage and bladder troubles.

Bringing not used.

---

[1] Gibbons informant stated that the Tongchaw of the area, with a description of [illegible] used as an emetic, purgative, and diuretic, and he had the Tongchaw name for it [illegible].

J. Smith. E-5 (1920-1922) 1929 NES Bellacoola NES CARTER NES
Tsimshian, NES

ARISTOLOCHIACEAE, DUTCHMAN'S PIPE FAMILY

Asarum caudatum Lindl., Wild Ginger

Bella Coola: Boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting.

Boiled, and applied externally for headache, intestinal pains, and pain in the loins.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

POLYGONACEAE, BUCKWHEAT FAMILY

Rumex acetosella Wats., Wiscous Dock

Bella Coola: Roots roasted for a short time in a hole in the earth among the ashes of a fire, covered with earth, mashed, and applied to painful as a poultice for boils. Both leaves and roots used, according to another informant, and the poultice applied to wounds as well as boils.

Leaves used for a sweat bath for pains similar to rheumatism all over the body. Stones were heated, a little cold water spread over them, and leaves spread on the mass; or else the leaves were spread on hot ashes. The patient sat or lay naked directly on the leaves, and was covered with blankets. Western Hemlock (Tsuga Heterophylla Sarg.), small branches of black cottonwood (Populus trichocarpa T. and G.) with the leaves on them, or the small kelp found on rocks were sometimes used when leaves of the western dock could not be obtained.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

LORANTHACEAE, MISTLETOE FAMILY

Arceuthobium campylopodum Piath., Dwarf Mistletoe

Bella Coola: Boiled, and decoction taken as a potent medicine for hemorrhage of the lungs.

Southern Carrier: Boiled, and decoction taken freely for hemorrhage from the mouth, tuberculosis of the lungs, and consumption.

SYMPHORACEAE, WATERLILY FAMILY

Symphoricarpos polymorphus (Hooker.) Gray, Trailing Snowberry

Bella Coola, old custom: Used in a magical way for pain in all parts of the body. A rope as many times as long as a man's leg was cut from the bark of a pole with a hatchet; pole sharpened like a shovel. A hollow was made in it, stones placed in the mouthfuls, and hot stones added. The stones were changed four times, after which the patient drank one or two mouthfuls of the water. He repeated the dose each day for four days. To be effective the rope had to be thrown back into the water, not on the ground.

Present custom: Root boiled twelve hours, and decoction taken internally for pain in any part of the body, such as "consumption", rheumatism, heart disease, and gonorrhoea. Considered good for the blood. Not used as a diuretic, or for diarrhoea, constipation, or vomiting.

Gitksan: Infusion of scrapings of inner root (or according to another informant, heart of root, boiled) taken internally for hemorrhage of the lungs and as a consumptive.

RANUNCULACEAE, BUTTERCUP FAMILY

Anemone globosa Nutt. (A. multifida Poir.), Wind-Flower

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Plant, except roots, boiled and decoction taken internally for any sickness. Leaves of crushed leaves inhaled for cold in the head or lungs; for this purpose leaves sometimes placed in water and heated.

Gitksan: Squeezed juice in sweat bath for rheumatism. A decoction of the plant sometimes used for the same purpose.

Trautvetteria grandis Nutt., False Bronchus

Bella Coola: Roots pounded in a little water, and the resulting juice, covered with a little soft bark of the red or yellow cedar, applied as a poultice to boils and left on for half a day or a day. Said to promote suppuration and opening of the boil, but to cause such intense burning that it could not be applied to children. Considered less strong than the tall buttercup (page 57), but, like it, preferred to the red paintbrush (page 81), which was used in the same way.

Thalictrum occidentale Gray, Meadow Rue

Gitksan: A small piece of the root chewed, and some of the juice swallowed, for headache, eye trouble, and sore legs. Considered phlegm and possibly conducted the circulation of the blood.

Ranunculus uncia L., Tree Bronchus

Bella Coola: Roots used as a poultice for boils in the same way as those of the false bugbane (page 57), but considered stronger and better.

CRUCIFERAE, MUSTARD FAMILY

Sisymbrium incisum Eng., A Sinew Mustard

Gitksan: Mashed and applied to bad sore.

CRASSULACEAE, ORPINE FAMILY

Sedum spathulifolium Hook., Stonecrop

Bella Coola: Leaves of the plant boiled in blanketed water to stop the flow of milk. Said to take effect in one day. Leaves warmed and applied externally for the same purpose.

SAXIFRAGACEAE, SAXIFRAGE FAMILY

Ribes bracteosum Dougl., Black Currant

Bella Coola: See blackberry sprouts, page 81.

Ribes lacificum Pursh. var., Currant

Bella Coola: Roots boiled in a very small box with hot stones and the resulting decoction used each day for washing the eyes when filled with cataract.

See also lady fern (page 68).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

St Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

B
C
T 139
757

Ribes lacustre Pair., SWAMP GOOSEBERRY

Bella Coola: Roots boiled and the decoction taken internally many times a day to cure constipation.

Leaves chewed and cud tied on sores caused by the prickers of the plant; if leaves unobtainable the bark substituted after singeing off the prickers.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Bark boiled and used as a remedy for some unspecified malady.

B
C 137
757

Ribes divaricatum Dougl., COMMON GOOSEBERRY

Bella Coola: Bark or roots, sometimes mixed with those of the wild crab apple (Pyrus diversifolia Bong.), boiled, and the decoction used as an eye-wash three times a day for soreness and approaching blindness.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Ribes sp., GOOSEBERRY

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 49.

Saxifraga Bongardi Prest., SAXIFRAGE

Bella Coola: Roots and leaves gathered in the autumn, placed in a very small box with a very little water, and boiled. Decoction taken cold, or preferably hot, in quantity to cure strangulation of the bladder. Said to effect a cure in one day.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

ROSACEAE, ROSE FAMILY

B
C 137
757

Prunus emarginata Dougl., WILD CHERRY

Bella Coola: Roots and inside bark boiled with much water and the decoction taken in quantity daily for heart trouble.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Rubus spectabilis Pursh., SALMON BERRY

Bella Coola: Bark of roots boiled and taken internally for certain stomach troubles, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Rubus sp., RASPBERRY

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 49.

Fragaria bracteata Heller., STRAWBERRY

Bella Coola: Not used, but said to be used by Haida of Queen Charlotte Islands to cure vomiting.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

S: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE5
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

Rosa sp., WILD ROSE

Bella Coola: Roots and branches boiled, and the decoction taken internally, even ten cupfuls a day if desired, as a purgative for pain in the stomach. 137 757

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 49.

Sikani: Roots crushed, steeped in water, and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Gitksan: Not used.

Physocarpus opulifolius (L.), Maxim., NINE-BARK

Bella Coola: Inner bark boiled for two hours, and two to four cupfuls of the decoction at blood heat taken internally as an emetic for persons dizzy with pain. Four or five cupfuls of lukewarm water then taken as a cleansing emetic and repeated about five times. 137 757

Inner bark boiled a long time (when it ceased to have emetic properties), one cupful of the hot decoction taken internally, and thereafter applied externally as a wash twice a day for gonorrhoea and scrofulous glands in the neck. Said to be a laxative that caused the glands to break, discharge fully, and heal. A cupful taken internally daily in advanced cases. 6 [L4]

Southern Carrier: Bark (gathered near the coast) boiled for two hours, and two cupfuls of the decoction taken as an emetic, or one cupful as a purgative. Said to act in half an hour, and to be an excellent remedy, but fatal in too large a dose.

Aruncus sylvester Kost., GOAT'S BEARD

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and one or two cupfuls of the decoction (or as much as desired) taken internally for pain in the stomach and gonorrhoea. A diuretic, but neither a laxative nor an emetic.

Roots boiled in grease of mountain goat (Oreamnos montanus Ord.) for a day and the decoction taken internally for smallpox. T [757]

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Geum macrophyllum Willd., LARGE-LEAVED YELLOW AVENS

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea, or vomiting. Leaves, usually chewed but sometimes bruised, applied to boils.

Southern Carrier: Leaves boiled and the decoction taken internally for any sickness.

Leaves boiled and applied to bruises.

Pyrus sitchensis (Roem.) Piper., MOUNTAIN ASH

Bella Coola: Bark of the roots, and sometimes the inner bark of the stem, collected at any time of the year, boiled for an hour, and the hot decoction, weak or strong, preferably the latter, taken internally for the stomach or rheumatism. Said to effect a cure in from one to seven days. Not taken for diarrhoea, or vomiting; and for rheumatism sometimes poured into a large box and used as a bath. Used also as an eye-wash. 137 757

Southern Carrier: Bark chewed for colds.

Gitksan: Fresh fruit crushed and eaten raw as a strong purgative.

J. Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NEB Bellacoola NEB
CARTIER NET
TSIMSHIAN NE 15

P 139
957

Pyrus diversifolia Doug., Crab Apple

Bella Coola: See common gooseberry (page 56).

Gitksan: Juice, scraped from peeled trunk, used as an eye medicine.

Trunk and branches, or scrapings from inside of bark, boiled until thick, and the decoction taken internally over a period of from four to six months for "consumption" and rheumatism. Said to be a fattening medicine, both laxative and diuretic.

Amelanchier florida Lindl., Juneberry, Saskatoon

Bella Coola: See tideland spruce (page 51).

EMPETRACEAE, CROWBERRY FAMILY

Empetrum nigrum L., Crowberry

Bella Coola: Green leaves, with or without berries, boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

P 137
957

VIOLACEAE, VIOLET FAMILY

Viola adunca Sm. var. glabra Brain., Violet

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Entire plant boiled and one or many cupfuls of the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting.

Gitksan: Not used.

ELAEAGNACEAE, OLEASTER FAMILY

Shepherdia canadensis Nutt., Soapberry

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: Root boiled in water and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

[IL4]

Gitksan: Roots, stem, and branches boiled, and the decoction used as a wash for gonorrhoea.

Bark, branches, and leaves without roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally for chronic cough.

See also tideland spruce (page 51).

ONAGRACEAE, EVENING PRIMROSE FAMILY

Epilobium angustifolium L., Fireweed

Bella Coola: Root roasted in ashes, mashed between hands or stones, and applied to boils.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

UMBELLIFERAE, PARSLEY FAMILY

Cicuta maculata sp., Water Cowbane

Folk Uses: Tea to Bloom kids pieces of root, as large as the end joint of the thumb, ground by rubbing on a stone; two capfuls placed in water warmed to blood heat, and two capfuls of the decoction (according to the strength of the patient) taken internally as an emetic. Decoction used (sometimes as a purgative instead of an emetic) within five or ten minutes, but last its power if heated too much. Warm water taken afterwards until the patient vomited four or five times and the stomach was entirely cleaned. Used also for pneumonia.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Heracleum lanatum Michx., Cow Parsnip

Folk Uses: Roots crushed, baked (or boiled in a box with hot stones), and applied as a poultice for boils. If too hot a poultice injured the skin.

Root, crushed and boiled in an opened boil and left from half a day to a day. Pus said to come away with the root.

See also white fir (page 34), balsam fir (page 36), black cottonwood (page 54), and false hellebore (page 57).

Southern Carrier: Blossoms steeped in sulphur or other oil and the mixture rubbed on the body to keep off flies and mosquitoes.

Southern Carrier: Roots applied to swellings and bruises.

Eskimo: Roots crushed and applied to swellings of neuralgia or rheumatism.

Ojibwa: Roots crushed and applied to boils, rheumatic and other swellings.

Angelica pinnata Nutt.

Folk Uses: Roots boiled and decoction taken internally as a purgative. Not an emetic. Sometimes used raw, but never crushed.

Ojibwa: Roots well boiled with twigs of squashberry (Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.) from which the bark had not been removed, and decoction taken internally for headache and weak eyes.

Ligusticum scothicum L., Lovage

Folk Uses: Leaves spread over a hot stone or stones and used as a medicinal bed for the sick.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Cicuta douglasii (DC.) C. and R., Water Hemlock, Poison Parsnip

Folk Uses: Roots used as a purgative.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

ARALIACEAE, GINSENG FAMILY

Aralia nudicaulis L., Sarsaparilla

Folk Uses: Roots boiled in a box with hot stones, and decoction taken internally as often as desired for pain in the stomach, or merely as a beverage. Nowadays sweetened with a little sugar. Stem, or its bark, not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Ojibwa: Not used.

Parnassia kotzebue Fen. (E. and H.), Pierce's Grass

Pelle Cuda: Bark of roots chewed, and juice swallowed with a little water as a stomach purgative.

Bark of roots and entire boiled, and some on two capfuls of the decoction taken internally as a purgative, or one capful, three times a day for a week or two, in case dysentery.

Southern Carrier: Bark boiled, and one or two capfuls of the decoction taken internally before and after childbirth as a purgative.

Northern Carrier: Inside layer of the inner bark rolled into pills and employed to engage in the stomach and bowels, especially after a purgative. Boiled also as a purgative, especially if much bile exists with it.

Gitksan: A decoction used as a purgative in the treatment of gonorrhoea. Believed to make the knitting of broken bones if taken internally.

Boiled, together with entire plant of monotheory (Hypopitys monotropa Hall), and the decoction taken internally as a diuretic and purgative, for dropsy or any sickness. Used externally for bruises.

For use with a lure (See page 66).

CORNACEAE, DOGWOOD FAMILY

Cornus canadensis L., Bunchberry, Dogwood, Dwarf Cornel, Pomegranate

Pelle Cuda: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Whole plant, without leaves, boiled, and the strong decoction used as an eye-wash.

Northern Carrier: Used as a medicine for some unspecified malady.

Gitksan: Not used.

Cornus stolonifera Michx., Red-Osier Dogwood, Red Willow

Pelle Cuda: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: See medi plan, page 69.

Gitksan: Not used.

ERICACEAE, HEATH FAMILY

Pyrola secunda L., Wintergreen

Pelle Cuda: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Roots, gathered at any time of the year, boiled, and the strong decoction used as an eye-wash.

Pyrola bracteata Hook., Wintergreen

Pelle Cuda: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Leaves boiled, and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Pyrola asarifolia Michx., Wintergreen

Pelle Cuda: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Leaves and roots, gathered at any time of the year, boiled for about two hours, and the warm decoction used as an eye-wash.

Gitksan: Not used.

Symphoricarpos racemosus Michx., Common Snowberry

Sills Creek: Branches, large and small, with the bark left on, boiled and the decoction taken internally daily as the best cure for gonorrhea. A diuretic. Roots, blossoms, and berries not used for medicine, unless, as one informant stated, the berries were used with the tansies.

See also Kirkland spruce (page 51).

Southern Carrier: Juice of ripe berries used to cure eyes.

Gibson: Not used.

Symphoricarpos vulgaris L., Red-Fruited Snow

Sills Creek: Bark of the root placed in water, a few hot stones added until water reached blood heat, and decoction used as a powerful emetic and purgative for pain in the stomach.

Bark of the roots pounded with the teeth, chewed, gratuitously with a little cold water, and juice swallowed as an emetic and purgative. Bark acts within half an hour.

Southern Carrier: Roots boiled, and two cupfuls of the warm decoction taken internally twice a day as a purgative.

Northern Carrier: Roots brewed, the first water discarded and the second taken internally as a purgative.

Gibson: Bark boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Gibson: Bark of roots scraped off, water added to the bark, and the infusion taken internally as an emetic and purgative.

Viburnum prunifolium Ref., Sarrowbery

Sills Creek: Bark chewed, and the juice swallowed for whooping cough and cold on the lungs.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: Inside bark crushed, steeped in cold water until the water turned green, and one cupful of the infusion taken internally as a purgative and for dysentery.

Gibson: Bark and twigs boiled, and one cupful of the decoction taken internally in the morning for coughs and "consumption". Said to be always taken in conjunction with devil's club (page 62). See also Cephalanthus occidentalis Nutt., page 81.

VALERIANACEAE, VALERIAN FAMILY

Valeriana septentrionalis Rydb., Valerian

Sills Creek: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Roots, mixed with grease, used for perfume.

Northern Carrier: Valerian? Blossoms crushed, and the oil, often mixed with fat from a black bear hide, applied as a hair tonic. Believed to make the hair smooth and shiny, to help its growth, and to give it a fragrance.

Gibson: Entire plant steeped in bear grease and the grease applied to hair and face as a perfume.

Valeriana sitchensis Bong., Valerian

Southern Carrier: Leaves mixed with grease used as a perfume for the hair.

COMPOSITAE, COMPOSITE FAMILY

Achillea Millefolium L., Yarrow

Bella Coola: Leaves chewed and applied to burns.

Southern Carrier: Entire plant, except the roots, boiled, and the decoction taken internally at frequent intervals for colds.

Leaves chewed and applied to sprains and swellings.

Gitksan: The young plant, except the roots, gathered between June 1 and July 15, boiled, and the decoction applied for sore throat. Roots, marked by the road stakes, dug out at other seasons and used instead.

Artemisia discolor Dougl., Sagebrush, Coast Wormwood

Bella Coola: Used for medicine.

Southern Carrier: Chewed and applied to sprains and swellings.

Northern Carrier: Sagebrush (sp. ?) steeped in water and the hot decoction taken internally for headache.

Artemisia Herwilii Greene, Sagebrush

Bella Coola: Leaves boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pains in the body, but not for pains in the limbs. Not used for colds.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Taraxacum officinale Weber., Common Dandelion introduced

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting. Remedy said to have been learned from white men.

Gitksan: Not used.

Lactuca spicata (Lam.) Hitchc., Tall Lettuce

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and many cups of the decoction taken internally for heart trouble, hemorrhage, pains in the body (but not in the limbs), for vomiting, or for diarrhoea. Neither an emetic nor a purgative. Milky juice not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Prenanthes alata (Hook.) Gray, Rattlesnake Root

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, two or three cupfuls of the decoction taken internally daily for colds. For a baby only a small spoonful given three or four times a day.

Bella Coola: Chewed, and applied to burns or to any painful part of the body.

Boiled, and two or three cupfuls of the decoction taken internally daily.

Malum sylvestre Bland, Moss

Southern Carrier: Entire plant, except the "roots", boiled, and two or three cupfuls of the decoction used to bathe a swollen face.

Fomes Lactis (Sacc.), more generally known as Polyporus officinalis Fries, or Boletus Purgans.

Indian Uses: This (?) fungus ground, steeped in water, and the decoction taken internally for gonorrhoea.

Southern Carrier: If found on the Douglas fir tree, dried, powdered, a handful steeped in boiling water and the tea decoction taken internally as an emetic and purgative. Said to act violently on bowels. Not used if found on any other tree.

(According to Dr. John Dearness, this is a medical polypore, perhaps the only fungus used by pharmacists. Dyer, Davis, and Cooper make a fluid extract and a tincture which is prescribed for the relief of night sweats in tuberculosis. The fungus is a cathartic in large doses. Its medicinal virtues have long been known in the old world.)

Boletus spp. B. and C., Pine Bun.

Indian Uses: Spores dusted on wounds, sores of gonorrhoea, and supporting some other dues bolts.

LICHEN

Indian Uses: A certain long, white lichen, if found on the red alder tree, warmed, and applied to a broken boil or suppurating sore.

Usnea sp., Lichen.

Indian Uses: Entire plant, if from red-alder, dogwood (Cornus stolonifera Michx.) or crab apple (Pyrus diversifolia Bong.), but not from willow (Salix sp.), boiled, and five ounces of the tea decoction taken internally daily for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea, constipation, or vomiting. Boiled a purgative not an astringent.

Entire plant boiled and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Entire plant pulverized and applied to skin.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

KELP

Indian Uses: A small kelp found on the rocks sometimes used for a sweat bath. See western dock, page 56.

WOOD SAP

Indian Uses: The sap that oozes from any kind of wood when burning considered a good remedy for sore.

MOUNTAIN GOAT

Oreamnos Montanus, Ord., Mowtsuc Goat

Indian Uses: Mountain goat fat boiled with droppings of goat that had fed on roots, and the mixture given to babies once or twice a day for colds.

Goat meat with droppings of the bushy-tailed woodrat, commonly called packrat (Neotoma cinerea), taken internally with water as a remedy for scouring babies when they had colds.

[illegible]

Sphingulus, Sycomus Sycous, or Whightlin, Sycomus Sycous

Sulu Codex: Oil was used as a remedy.

Southern Carrier: Oil removed, used a cupful taken as a purgative for women.

[illegible]

Lagopus sanctijacobus columbianus Shoals, Tree Sycous Sycomus Tumorus Sycus

Northern Carrier: Stop opened, containing stomach containing something like the skin of an egg removed, and the liquid applied to a foot diseased by frostbite. Considered a sure cure.

BIRD SQUIRREL

Sciurus hudsonicus Erxleben

Sulu Codex: Opened along the under side and applied as a remedy to badly broken sinews in the groin.

GIANT SLUG

Sulu Codex: Slug made to crawl into a baby's mouth to cure loss of skin on the inside of its eyelids.

Slug opened, and bound tightly over large cut.

SEA CUCUMBER

Sulu Codex: Discretion of the water in which the sea cucumber was boiled, taken internally as a specific against heartburn. Not a purgative.

SPITTLE INSECT

Cercopidae, Sycous Tumorus, Pons Sycous

Sulu Codex: "Fly spit," i.e., the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, applied to sores.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

WOODWORMS

Gibbons: Pulverized and applied to cuts.

COPPER

Sulu Codex: Fine particles scraped from clean copper (not not from a weathered green surface) placed in sore eyes.

Gibbons: Copper ground, poured into a bowl of cold water, first water poured off, and second water taken internally as a harmless contraceptive.

CHARCOAL

Northern Carrier: Charcoal dusted under the eyes to prevent snow-blindness.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Bella Fonte: [illegible] range of very dry handbells used to ease the pain [illegible]
Hyalgum Farrier: [illegible] used as a blister for a bad pain in the leg before applying an ointment.

[illegible]

Oldman: [illegible] taken from a bleak (or sometimes a handbell), [illegible] and used to ease a [illegible] pain.

[illegible]

Hyalgum Farrier: [illegible] placed in a dish of cold water, the hand covered with a cloth and the cloth dampened for a bad cough.

SCALDED WATER

Hyalgum Farrier: A hole made in the ice and the [illegible] in the [illegible] water when they were frozen.

[illegible] WATER

Bella Fonte: [illegible] water used as an emetic.

[illegible]
[illegible]

REPORT

OF THE

SIXTY-FIRST MEETING

OF THE

BRITISH ASSOCIATION

FOR THE

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE

HELD AT

CARDIFF IN AUGUST 1891.

[title page]

LONDON:
JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.
1892.

OFFICE OF THE ASSOCIATION: BURLINGTON HOUSE, LONDON, W.

[illegible] the shore of the Pacific to 1793. As a result of this intercommunication between the Bilqula and Tsimsh it is found that known essentially similar to those of the Coast Indians in mode of construction and ornamentation, though smaller and less skillfully built, owing, for school to the upper reaches of the Salmon and Skeena rivers; while, on the other hand, the practical identity of some points in the mythology of the Bilqula with that of the Tsimsh of the interior is a clear instance of widespread influence.

The second part of the report will be found to contain the most complete series thus far obtained of anthropological measurements relating to the tribes of the North West Coast, with a discussion by the author of the data which these afford, in which several points of value are brought out and important suggestions are made for further inquiry. In this connection it must be mentioned that the committee are much indebted to the courtesy and enlightened liberality of Major J. W. Powell, Director of the U.S. Bureau of Ethnology, who has permitted Dr. Boas to incorporate with the measurements obtained in British Columbia those made by him in Washington and Oregon under Major Powell's direction. It has thus been possible for Dr. Boas to give to his treatment of this subject a comprehensive character, which could not otherwise have been obtained, by enlarging the scope of his discussion so as to include the more or less intimately related tribes of the Pacific States with those of the Province of British Columbia itself.

Third Report on the Indians of British Columbia.
By Dr. Franz Boas.

104 The following alphabet has been used in the report:—

The vowels have their continental sounds, namely: a, as in father; e, like a in mate; i, as in machine; o, as in note; u, as in rule.

In addition the following are used: ä, ö, as in German; ewse in how; owse in flower (Lepsius's ę).

Among the consonants the following additional letters have been used: g', a very guttural g, similar to gr; k', a very guttural k, similar to kr; q, the German ch in buch; x, the German ch in ich; ɣ, between g and x; sowsh in show; c, as th in thin; dl, an explosive l; ł, a palatal l, pronounced with the back of the tongue (dorso-apical).

THE BILQULA.

105 The Bilqula, who are generally called Bella Coola, are the most northern tribe belonging to the Salish family. They are separated from the tribes speaking allied languages by the Chilcotin (of the Tsimsh stock) in the interior, and on the coast by the Kwakiutl. Their language is—considered grammatically—more closely related to the dialects of the Coast Salish than to those of the tribes of the interior. A number of terms referring to the sea and sea-animals are the same in Bilqula and in the dialects of the Gulf of Georgia; so that we may safely assume that the two groups of tribes were at one time closely related, and that the Bilqula were differentiated from this group. They inhabit the coasts of Bentinck Arm and Dean Inlet, as shown on the map accompanying the sixth report of the committee, and 000 extend far up Bella Coola River. Since the end of last century they Tribes. The tribes of this tribe are [illegible] have detailed from to southern and a few only of their then southern villages are still inhabited, namely, Bella on the head of Dean Inlet, Dsai'a'i, at the mouth of Salmon River, Nuxa'lin (which embraces five villages) at the mouth of Bella Coola River, Ts'a'ts, twenty-eight miles up Bella Coola River, and Ts'ilo, at the head of South Bentinck Arm. The dialects of Dsai'a'i and Bella differ slightly from that of the other villages. The following is a list of their ancient villages, most of which are still inhabited at certain seasons, although not regularly:—

1. Bella.
2. Dsai'a'i. The tribe of this place is called Dsai-ai.
3. Nuxa'lin, embracing the villages K'ninkt'in and Sisk'ai'al on the north side, Ts'ai'ts and Dsiai'ainkint on the south side of the river.
4. Gengli.
5. Tsinai'ali.
6. Sai'i'ali.
7. Ts'ai'ts.
8. Sai'ainti.
9. Sisk'ai'aquoto.
10. Tsqumk'a'ai.
11. Ts'ai'ts'ilai.
12. Sisiklig.
13. Ts'ilo, twenty-eight miles from the sea.
14. Sai'a'ilai. Nos. 6 to 14 are situated along Bella Coola River, and are given as they are met with in ascending the river.
15. Ts'ai'ai, at the confluence of Bella Coola and Dean (?) Rivers.
16. Ts'ai'a, at the head of South Bentinck Arm, embracing K'ne'ya, Ts'ai'a, Ts'ai'a', A'ata.
17. K'ne'ya, at the bay of that name in the southern entrance of Bentinck Arm. On the north entrance of Bentinck Arm were the Kilts'ai, but it is doubtful whether they belonged to the Bilqula or to the Ht'dank. The latter call the people of Dean Inlet K'ninkt'in.

Each of these tribes is subdivided into gentes, which appear to be arranged in exogamic groups. I learnt the names of the following gentes, which bear the names of their ancestors:—

Gentes of the Kuqa'kwa:

1. Tak'ai'a (looking down on his family).
2. Sqaqqai'kwa; Qi'mistan name: Ma'kaylhell (see p. 411).
3. Sisiqlit'aq.
4. Ka'lalqi'ana.
5. Ts'ilas.

Gentes of the Nuk'a'ainxu:

1. Ti'ak'aunt'ai.
2. K'inqi'ik'ai.
3. ?

Gentes of the Tsic'aai:

1. Iak'ainxit (smoking good fire); Qi'mistan name: T'i'i'ai-lakit (an cave protecting from rain).
2. Sqaiai'ili.
3. Tsaqai'ai'ayas.
4. Ha'ainili.

[illegible] The evidence which I was present regarding the form of intermarriage in the Haidaqa, I imagined of Pond Dirlas, I could refer to Kuiq, a number of the Sakirlaiwi gens, whether he might marry a Sqanlaiwi woman; this suggestion he rejected with the greatest indignation.

Fig. 5.—Show front of the gens Kiskaiwi.

Structure of the first two gentes, he replied: Iskai ma, ma, ma, ahaiwi ta Iskamaqa, neither are members of the first two gentes, while the first and second may marry among the third and fourth. He answered for this by stating that Iskiskaiwi's son married Qaskiskiski

Fig. 6.—Show front of the gens Kiskaiwi, representing the crest.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tribes. The crest is represented in paintings on the house-front and on dancing implements.

The gens Tsik'ak'is has a killer-whale (Delphinus orca) painted on the house-front (fig. 1). The tradition says that the ancestor of this gens

614
614
532
342
713

FIG. 1.—Crest of the gens Snai'ks, showing the mountain hawk'ban, with two clouds near its summit; above a cloudless sky.

one day, when hunting in the mountains, found a house on which a killer was painted. The chief who lived in the house invited him and presented him with his crest for himself and for his descendants. The crest consists of the killer-whale, eagle, owen, and hawk.

The crests of all gentes were obtained in the manner.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The gens Spatsi'lk have bumkows painted on the house-front, and use 532 in dances the mask of a large kind of whale (ł'ooh), of the crow, and of the black bear.
942 The gens Tsemqa'skyas use the mask of Ōxsmitl'ma (=the sleeper) and the eagle.

The gens Tl'ah'amnl'ok of the Nuk'a'lstems use the moon (fig. 2).

The gens Ialc'atsmit of the Talc'ma use the raven, robin (ooi'a-gwa'l), eagle, whale, the bird t'ooilala (goose?), and s'ulal'ots, the food-tide.
They have sun, moon, and stars painted on the house-front, and the sang'ots suspended from the beams of the roof (see p. 410).

The highest gens of Nuł'a'l has the name Sual'ts (=the north wind).
He has the mountain Sawt'kaf surrounded by a cloudred sky, and with clouds on its sides, painted on the house-front (fig. 3). Another object belonging to his crest represents waves.
614 The children belong to the gens of either father or mother, the deci-851 sion being left to the choice of the parents.

Secret Societies and the Potlatch.

171 The social organization, festivals, and secret societies of the Bilqula 575 are still more closely interwoven than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the Sisna'ka, and the Ka'wit. The Sisna'ka corresponds to the Tlodz'qa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the Ka'wit to the Ts'ensa'ka. The 556 Bilqula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine 773 brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Qō'ntsiza, to whom 776 even the warriors is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Qō'ntsiza.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Qōmqamatl'ela.

[532] [575]

house in the far west, and rises 8 | 8 every morning when the sun rises.
He has to take care that the sun rises properly. The first six of these deities

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the Ki'wit'tsum dances make their appearance, and are represented by masks which I have copied. Qi'ntsim and Qmqmaili'ula wear the design of the full moon, indicated in the mask Qi'ntsim (fig. 4) by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Qmqmaili'ula has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin (fig. 5). Aiomki'ikya (fig. 6) and Aiomaili'ula (fig. 7) wear the design of the crescent, drawn

556
773
776
532
575
776

FIG. 6.—Mask representing Aiomki'ikya.

FIG. 7.—Mask representing Aiomaili'ula.

in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second. The fifth, K'mek'mekl'ikya, and K'u'wistim have designs representing stars (fig. 8), both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is K'ula'qwa, whose face represents the blossom of a mountain-berry bush (fig. 9). The next in order, Kalil'ima (—who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue (fig. 10). The ninth, Ki'ma'l'i wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bluish blanket. The last of the series is a woman called Ti'ma'qstikim (=the sister), the sister of all the others. Her face is painted with a bluish-blue with green (fig. 11). She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

The Sisa'ku, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of gentes, is presided over by a being that lives in the sea. A man who had gone out hunting met the Sisa'ku, and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned he asked the people to clean their houses, and to clean them with clean sand, before he commenced to enter. Then he danced the Sisa'ku, and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with

575
773
776
796

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NEA Bellacoola NEA

575 773 776 776 tools of cousins skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sea. Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Sisaw'ka. Besides this it is stated that the Raven gave each gens its secrets.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing K'ooh'ooka'kaya.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing K'ala'qoka.

532 575 776

619 632 632 Each gens has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the Sisaw'ka only, and are otherwise kept a deep secret, i.e., they are the sacred posses-

Fig. 10.—Mask representing Kold'ma.

Fig. 11.—Mask representing Ts'ooq'qoldma.

[575] [776]

[575] [776] sions of each gens. All gentes, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the seven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ornament. Every time the sacred objects of a gens are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various gentes, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual. That is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the gens to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, could not become Sisaa'ka. A person cannot take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nesk'ɛ-la'sta, to whom I owe my information regarding the gentes, and who is a member of the gens Talo'stimôt of the Talio'mɛ, stated that he had received the raven when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the eagle. He hopes that his mother will give him the whale at his next potlatch, and will at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a Kû'siût name, which remains the same throughout life; and a Qê'mtsica name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Nesk'sla'sta's (which is his Kû'siût name) present Qê'mtsica name is Atl'itlɛnnɛ'lna'sain, but at his next potlatch he intends to take the name of Kalia'kia. These names are also the property of the various gentes, each gens having its own names. In the list of gentes given above, the names enumerated are the Kû'siût names of the members. In two cases only the Qê'mtsica names have been ascertained (see p. 409). When a man possesses several Sisaa'ka secrets he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their Sisaa'ka secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of the gens. When a person gets to be old he gives away all his Sisaa'ka secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the Sisaa'ka carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular gens.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die his heirs become responsible for the debts. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper-plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so he had to name the price which he was going to pay to the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The Kû'siût is presided over by a female spirit, called Anɛ̂likûtsai'ɛ. The abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Anɛ̂likûtsai'ɛ invited her into her cave and taught 575 her the secrets of the Kû'siôt. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark 773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair 776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whoever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kû'siôt. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kû'siôt.'

575 Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Kû'siôt. When a man has 776 seen Amâlikûtsai'a sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a Kû'siôt. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kû'siôt lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kû'siôt are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted
614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, 424 as in the case with the Sisau'ku dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed [424] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower 575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kû'siôt is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kû'siôt name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kû'siôt names, [428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pô'pô until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Ti'akû'ell. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[554] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisau'ku, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kû'siôt have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] tlaqô'tla (the Hâ'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ô'lxq (the Nô'tlamâl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dâ'tla (the Nô'ntaintâl of the Hô'itsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kû'siôt novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the tlaqô'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 785 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs hold 787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and any one who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be [246] killed, in order to serve as food for the tlaqô'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the tlaqô'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, 575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the house. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite 575 naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, [774] which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after [756] they have recovered it the tlaqō'ila dances clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large headring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red [292] and white cedar-bark. Some tlaqō'ila do not bite people, but merely [301] devour raw salmon, or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The tlaqō'ila has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble.
He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

The Ō'lēq (= the laugher) and the Dā'tia (= the thrower) do not go [785] into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'lēq 'makes fun of everything' and scratches people with his nails. The Dā'tia carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ō'lēq and the Dā'tia must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses.

If a person transgresses the laws of the Kō'sōit, for instance when the 575 tlaqō'ila gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no 688 right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead.
The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in 575 the Kō'sōit are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. 532 Novices must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, 796 and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Atlqula'tzxum, who wears a mask with [776] red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qō'mōtsin and his brothers and his sister (see p. 412), Mamamlā'niq and his fellows, the raven and the Nanqō'mia, and many others.

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house 844 and resorts to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by pro-

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [845] near the room for a year (according to Nuk'ulu'ets, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole [852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive [854] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member of the Ka'aitt, when it is given its Ka'aitt name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qu'mtaka name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [265] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1890, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his [431] friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [527] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and [302] accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisa'ka secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [321] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they shave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, shaving new trees every day. Meanwhile they cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [995] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or chicken. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was "the same as giving away the house of the deceased." 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

* * *

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

what cause this divergence is due. Mythology and religion are so closely connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Snq, the sun-god (compare sinq, sun). The rays of the sun are his eyelashes. When prayed to he is called Tsat'an. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the following formulas: Ailkuw itlō'tlenq, Tsat'an, 'Look on us where we are crying, Tsat'an;' and Tsat'an, atlkmaltnomdō'tlq, 'Take care of us, Tsat'an.' Snq is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with the actions and thoughts of man. These are given by Masmasalā'niq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Masmasalā'niq, Yula'timot, Matlapē'eqoek, and Itl'itlu'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been expanded between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Masmasalā'niq, and found there a beautiful prairie country in which all the birds lived. Masmasalā'niq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his arts. The raven was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the nusqē'mia (nu-tam-place of, sqi'm=the day is dawning). The nusqē'mia was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously, and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pond from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pond, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the nusqē'mia. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Masmasalā'niq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Matlapē'eqoek and Itl'itlu'lak tried likewise to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Yula'timot carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Masmasalā'niq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that man should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by man.

The Bilqula believe that Masmasalā'niq and his brothers still continue to give new ideas to man. They say that any new design of painting or carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Masmasalā'niq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been relegated to above.

The soul is believed to dwell in the nape. It is similar in shape to a bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies away its owner must die. Shamans are able to see and to recover souls.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swoons it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy. 774 756 [828] [753] [828]

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Snq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Snq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself. 756 [776]

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awiky'ô'noq wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Ma'tom) who will initiate him. No Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way.' [171]

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ek'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called smk. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms. 753 755 754 [825]

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die. 682 754 [825]

I add here a few current beliefs:— 827

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry. [777]

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die. 825

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky. 763

777

WARS.

When a war party was organised the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their 726 714

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

726 hair with white eagle-down. Warriors when on a war party must not [714] drink more than four mouthfuls of water, else they would be killed. A watchman was appointed in each canoe, who sat in the bow. On landing [297] near the village of their enemies they divided themselves into a number of parties, one house of the village being assigned to each. Then, early in the morning, when all were asleep, they rushed up to the village uttering their war cry 'wai!' They took a stand at the fire which burns in the centre of the house, and if any one of the enemies succeeded in taking up his arms and came out of his bedroom they killed him. Then 727 they entered the bedrooms, killed the men, and took the women and children along as slaves. The heads of the dead were cut off, the houses burnt, and they returned home singing war-songs. The heads which they had taken along were then scalped, and the scalps tied to each end of a pole.
When they approached their village one man stood up in the bow of each canoe and swung the pole to which the scalps were attached, and they all sang songs, in which their deeds were recounted. The scalps were valued the higher the longer and fuller the hair. They were used in the Sisan'ku.

648 The following tales of war expeditions offer some points of interest.
726 About thirty or forty years ago there was a famine at Bella Coola. The people went overland to Knight Inlet, which belongs to the Tenaqtaq, a [731] tribe of the Kwakiutl, to fish there. The Tenaqtaq made fun of them, took from them the fish they caught, tore the blankets from the backs of the women, and seduced many of them. Finally the Bilqula returned home. There they held a council and resolved to make war upon the Tenaqtaq. The Tsimsh joined them in this expedition. They crossed the mountains in four days. When they approached Knight Inlet they sent two spies in advance, who were to count the number of houses in the village of the Tenaqtaq. Early in the morning they attacked the houses and killed a great many men. The Tenaqtaq could not escape, as they were hemmed in by the river. The Bilqula slew them with knives, lances, and stone axes. They took away the clothes of the women, leaving them naked, and subjected them to shameful insults in revenge for the disgrace put upon their wives and daughters. Then they burnt the village.

About thirty-five years ago the Talio'mx were attacked by the Kwakiutl. Originally they intended to attack Nuqa'lkx, but the raven, according to the narrator, changed their mind, as he always protects the village of Nuqa'lkx. They came in many canoes, while most of the Talio'mx were at the lake, which is situated above that town, fishing.
Four men were in charge of the village, and a number of old men and women had also remained at home. The father of Nuk'alx'ska, who told me of these events, happened to be out picking berries, accompanied by his wife. He saw the canoes passing by and kept himself hidden. The [712] village of Talio was at that time surrounded by a strong stockade, which consisted of a double row of palisades crowned with thorns. At each corner there was a strong box fastened on the stockade like a tower.
Here watchmen were stationed, who were able to shoot at the enemy while being themselves protected. At that time the Talio'mx had only four guns. The Kwakiutl sent out two spies, who reported that the village was well fortified. The Talio'mx had seen the canoes coming and were on their guard. The Kwakiutl thought that they would not be able to enter the village until after the stockade had been destroyed.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They resolved to make an attempt to burn it and to break open the door. 648
On the following day they came up to the village, but the guard on the 726 towers used their guns to such good effect that the enemy had to retreat with severe losses. They made still another attempt, but with no better success. They had lost many men, while only two old men of the Talio'mx, Tsanxi'akyas and A'k'ias by name, and one woman had been hurt. The latter had been killed. When the Kwakiutl turned back a messenger was at once sent up to the lake to call the young men, who then went to Nuqa'Tkx to ask for help. The Kwakiutl passed close to Nesk'ala'sta's father's canoe, but they were so terrified by the losses they had sustained that they passed by without so much as noticing it. Two of their number were so ashamed of their defeat that they would rather remain in the enemy's country than return with their friends, and they stayed ashore. Meanwhile the Talio'mx and the Bilqula were pursuing the fugitives. They had reached the outlet of Bentinck Arm without overtaking them. Then their chiefs resolved to return, as they believed that their enemies had a long start upon them. Later on they learnt that the Kwakiutl were at that moment only a few miles from them, about to continue their homeward journey, after having encamped at the outlet of the channel. Afterwards the Talio'mx found the two men who had remained ashore. They called them and promised to send them back to their friends, saying that the war had ended, and that they had no grudge against them. The men were, however, too much afraid, and finally starved to death.

Later on the Talio'mx and Bilqula organized an expedition against the Kwakiutl to take revenge for the unprovoked attack. A chief named Kuxsi'la, whose father was a Talio'mx, while his mother was a Kwakiutl, was their leader. They intended to attack the Lo'kwiltok and the Kwe'k'ala'tsaq. When they approached the village of the latter they sent a canoe ahead to search for the village, and to report the number of houses. For two days they were unable to find the village, which lies in a labyrinth of islands; but finally they found it, and saw that it consisted of sixteen houses. On the next morning they attacked it. The tribe was wholly taken by surprise and almost all of them were killed. Kuxsi'la's mother lived at this place, and when she heard the Bilqula coming she asked at once for her son, and was taken care of by him. Only five men and four women escaped. The Bilqula allowed these to run away, as they had killed as many as they desired. Anakxi'tsem, a chief of the Sisqila'mx, was the only man of the Bilqula who was wounded. He died on the way home. They returned, but in the country of the Na'kwartok they were overtaken by four Kwakiutl canoes which pursued them. The Bilqula were victorious, but Kuxsi'la induced them to desist. During the fight two of the women, whom they had taken as slaves, and one boy jumped overboard, and were rescued by the Kwakiutl.

MEDICINE.

Boils are treated by cauterization with dry bark or with gunpowder. 752
Sometimes a series of parallel cuts is made over swellings or boils. Fractured bones are set, and fastened between splints of cedar-bark.

Enemata of shark oil or chicken oil are given by means of a kelp tube, 757 with a mouthpiece made of the wing-bone of an eagle. Snake poison is [237] collected and used as a poison. Women wear tight anklets to prevent 700

751 Women wear tight anklets to prevent the calves of their legs from slipping down.' During their monthly 481 periods women place soft cedar-bark in the vagina. The bark is afterwards 824 burnt in the woods. The smoke of this fire is believed to be poisonous.

It is evident that the culture of the Bilqula is very greatly influenced 177 by that of the Kwakiutl. The secret societies and the potlatch ceremonies 551 are almost a copy of those of the Hēiltsuk'. This influence has been so 556 deep that names of even deities and of the mythical ancestors of certain 575 gentes are purely Kwakiutl words, or have at least Kwakiutl endings. Thus 776 the name Alemk'ilkya (see p. 413) is purely Kwakiutl, meaning 'good all 771 over the world.' K'tsak'tsak'ilkya is also a Kwakiutl word, meaning 'the rich one of the world.' The chief's name, Mā'lakyilaīl (see p. 409) belongs to the same class of Kwakiutl names. On the other hand, the religious ideas of the Bilqula are very curiously developed, and apparently but slightly influenced by their neighbours. The whole Mamamalā'ula tradition is peculiar to them, but has been partly adopted by the Awiky'- ē'ntq, with whom the Bilqula have intermarried.

[pp. 425-449 not processed]

7;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

WHOLE SERIES, VOL. II. ANTHROPOLOGY, VOL. I.

MEMOIRS

OF THE

American Museum of Natural History.

Volume II.

Publications

of the

Jesup North Pacific Expedition.

Volume I. 1898–1900.

Edited by FRANZ BOAS

NEW YORK:
Published by Order of the Trustees.
FOR SALE BY
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS, New York and London;
J. B. BAILLIÈRE ET FILS, Paris;
R. FRIEDLÄNDER & SOHN, Berlin;
AND AT THE MUSEUM.
1900

[title page]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

II. — The Mythology of the Bella Coola Indians.

By Franz Boas.

Plates VII–XII

CONTENTS.

PAGE

I. Location of the Tribe 26

II. Literature 26

III. General Description of the Mythology of the Bella Coola:

The Upper Heaven 28
The Lower Heaven 28
The Earth 37
The Lower Worlds 37
The Country of the Salmon, and the Origin of the Salmon 38
The Causes of the Salmon and of the Winter Ceremonial 40
The Calendar 41
Anutlikstn'al'x' 47
Protectors of the Shamans 47
Tsi'ias.'ic, the Protector of the Mountain-goat Hunter 48

IV. Village Communities and their Traditions:

List of Villages 48
Tradition of Sx'ain 50
Tradition of Nuxsd q' 53
Tradition of Atsqi'ex 59
Tradition of Sisl'a'k 60
Tradition of Nsad'ix 61
Tradition of Sxnxx 61
Tradition of Nek'ix 63
Tradition of Nsaq'e'lat 64
Tradition of Nsxlad'ix 64
Tradition of Sxa'ix 65
Tradition of Sdnx 65
Tradition of Sdzq 67
Tradition of Another Village . . . 68
Tradition of Nsaqa'gix 69
Tradition of Sx'ax 70

V. Miscellaneous Traditions:

The Salmon 73
The Sxaiad'iq 83, 86, 87, 88
The Raven 97
The Mink 95
The Deer 97
The Hea'kea 100
The Woman who married the Stump . 100
The Wolves 103
Tradition from Bella Bella 108
The Glacier 109
The Black Bear 111

VI. Remarks on the Kalosi and Sxaa'k' . 114

VII. Development of the Mythology of the Bella Coola 120

6—ANN. AN. ETH. EXT. SERV., VOL. II. 2TH., 1898.

[p. 25]

I.

105 The Bella Coola are a small tribe inhabiting the coasts of Dean Inlet and Bentinck Arm, two long and narrow fiords situated in about latitude 52° north, in British Columbia. Their habitat extends along Bella Coola River, which empties into North Bentinck Arm. The name "Bella Coola" is a corruption of the word "Bilxula," by which name the tribe is known to the Kwakiutl. There is no term in their own language embracing all the tribes speaking the Bella Coola language. It seems that at a former time the tribe was quite populous; but, owing to various epidemics and the introduction of other diseases, its numbers have dwindled down, so that at the present time it has been reduced to only a few hundred souls. The 105 language spoken by the tribe belongs to the Salishan family, more par-
197 ticularly to the group of dialects spoken along the coasts of Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia. The great similarity between the Bella Coola and the other Coast-Salishan dialects leads me to assume that at one time the tribes speaking these dialects inhabited contiguous areas. At the present time the Bella Coola are separated from other tribes speaking Salishan languages by a considerable stretch of country, which is inhabited by tribes of Athapascan and Kwakiutl lineage. Vocabulary and grammar have been highly modified, particularly by an excessive elision of vowels. The relation of their language to the other dialects of the Coast Salish is similar to that of the Tillamook, another language belonging to the Salishan family, which is spoken on the coast of Oregon, in an area separated from the rest of the Salishan territory by the district inhabited by the Chinook.

105 Physically the Bella Coola bear evidence of long-continued contact with the northern Coast tribes, and also with the Athapascan tribes of the interior.
144 Evidently intermarriages have been quite frequent, so much so that their present physical appearance differs considerably from that of the southern Salishan tribes, of whom they form a branch. The same is true in regard to their customs and beliefs, which differ fundamentally from those of the southern Salishan tribes.

121 In the present paper I shall describe the mythology of the Bella Coola, and discuss its development.

II.

114 Our previous knowledge of the mythology of this tribe is based on studies made by Adrian Jacobsen, Filip Jacobsen, Gunkes, and the writer. In 1886 I published a few brief notes on their traditions.[1] Gunkes pub-

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1886, p. 446.

published some remarks on the religious life of the Bella Coola in 1886,[1] which, however, contain so many misconceptions that they cannot be used to advantage. At the same time I published a brief description of the tribe, based on information received from a small group of members of the tribe who were travelling in Germany. In this description also there are a number of misconceptions. The Indians were shown a collection of masks from Vancouver Island with which they were not familiar. They gave, however, explanations of these masks, judging by the similarity to masks of their own tribe; consequently the explanations given there are not correct.[2] In 1890 I fell in with a number of Bella Coola who were fishing for salmon in Fraser River. The information obtained from them was published in the reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1891.[3] A. Jacobsen published a description of their ceremonies in 1895.[4] Philip Jacobsen described some of their traditions and customs in 1894 and 1895.[5] I published a collection of traditions in 1894 and 1895.[6]

III.

All the collections which have been made heretofore do not bring out clearly the principal characteristic of the mythology of the Bella Coola. The tribes of the North Pacific coast consider the Sun as the most important deity, but at the same time they believe in a great many beings of supernatural power. For this reason their whole mythology is very unsystematic. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, have developed a peculiar mythology, in which a number of supernatural beings have been co-ordinated. A system has been evolved which justifies our terming the supernatural beings "deities." The general features of this system are as follows:—

The Bella Coola believe that there are five worlds, one above another. The middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are spanned two heavens, while below it there are two underworlds. In the upper heaven resides the supreme deity, a woman who interferes comparatively little with the fates of mankind. In the centre of the lower heaven, that is in the zenith, stands the house of the gods, in which reside the Sun and all the other deities. Our own earth is an island swimming in the ocean. The underworld is inhabited by the ghosts, who are at liberty to return to heaven, whence they may be sent down again to our earth. The ghosts

[1] Original Mythologien der Bella Bella Indianer. Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1886, pp. 479-486.
[2] Ibid., pp. 486-488.
[3] Fourth Report of the Committee on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, pp. 1-15. Report of the Ninth Meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, held at Leeds, 1890, pp. 262-268.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1895, pp. 371-380.
[5] Globus, Illustrirte Zeitschrift für Länder- und Völkerkunde, 1894, pp. 173-176; 1895, pp. 1-3, 33-36.
[6] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, pp. 501-508; 1895, pp. 176-179.

772 who die a second death sink to the lowest world, from which there is no [775] return.

The upper heaven is called Ainl'ax, or Sneix'ak'a'n ti Stex'ulx', or Stexaxa. Omq'a'mkilk'a. The deity ruling there is a woman who is called [774] Qmsi'ts, or Tsi'ontsaxts. ("our woman"), or Ek'lyak'tsatsa'n. ("afraid of nothing").

772 This heaven is described as a prairie without any trees. It is said that 776 in order to reach it one must go up the river from the house of the gods in the lower heaven. In another tradition it is said that in travelling from the lower heaven to the upper heaven one has to pass the rest in the sky which is called Tsi.ns'tinx ti Stex'ulx'. The house of the supreme deity stands in the far east, and a gale is continually blowing over the open country, driving every thing towards the entrance of her house. Near the house, however, it is calm. In front of the house stands a post in the shape of a large winged monster, and its mouth is the entrance to the house. In front of the house-door there is gravel of three colors,—blue, black, and white. Behind the house is a salt-water pond in which the goddess bathes. In this pond lives the s'ulx, or xsalmalt'xam. This being sometimes descends to our world. Wherever it moves, the rocks burst, and slide down the sides of the mountains. It is described as a snake or a fish (see pp. 44, 66).

773 In the beginning of the world the mountains were of great height.
923 They were human beings who made the world uninhabitable. Qmsi'ts made war upon the mountains. She vanquished them, and made them smaller than they used to be. During this fight she broke off the nose of the mountain Yelyale'ns., which is situated near Nuxl'a'l. Its face may be recognized even now; and the Indians say that when its name is called, it answers. There are two mountains near the head-waters of Bella Coola River. The one is called Sneix'ulkmal'i.; the other one, Na'xxi. The former had a fire, called Sneinl'k'ulmata, burning in his house. This fire warned him of the approach of enemies. When Qmsi'ts made war upon the mountains, the fire warned its master. Qmsi'ts was coming down the river in her canoe, which is named "T'ikus." When she approached, he broke her canoe, and she returned to heaven. The canoe has been transformed into stone, and may be seen to this day at the foot of the mountain Sneix'ulkmal'i. It is said that Qmsi'ts visits the earth every now and then. Her visits cause sickness and death. She is described as a great warrior.

772 In the centre of the lower heaven, which is called Stex', stands the 776 house of the gods. This house is named Nsems'ts (the House of Myths), or Nuxl'ousmal'xata ("where man was created"), or Nuxl'alas'mata ("the house from which people come down"), or Nuxpilasal'xata ("the house to which people go"). In front of the house stands a post called Nsiasl'xta. It is painted with representations of all kinds of birds. A white crane (?), Qq'ots, is sitting on top of the post. The master of the house is Snaa, the Sun. He is also called Ts'ats ("our father"), or Sunal'yaxilla ("the sacred sun"), or Sunayakt'ax.la. It seems that he is the only deity to whom the Bella Coola pray. They do not pray to Qsnal'ia, the deity of the supreme heaven. I have not found any prayers directed to the other deities of the lower heaven. I recorded a number of such prayers directed to the Sun. They are as follows:— 772 776 776 783 539

Ash'ts'ni(?)ism Tsiaa'! ("Look on us where we are going, Father!")

Tsiaa'! ash'alex'ustit'ia! ("Take care of us, Father!")

Tsiaa'! ch'ulx'ustal'ia ale ustustal'ia! Tsiaa' ustp'alex'ustia! ("Father! take care of our road; Take care of us!")

After a long-continued rain, they pray:—

Tsplat'ism Tsiaa'! hin'k'lexustal'ia, Tsiaa'! ("Wipe your face, Father! that it may be fair weather.")

The mountain-goat hunter prays:—

Ooqs yaxustiaa, Tsiaa', ta ustustu'ustuk, Sustqalat'ian'! ("Let your children look at us, Sustqalat'ia, Father!")

A person pursued by misfortune prays:—

Nuqlaustk'l'ustu Tsiaa'! ustqustk'ustu ta q'lqustustustal'a'a. ("Make me happy, Father! You have given me too much misfortune.")

A sick person prays:—

Nuqlaustk'l'ustu Tsiaa'! ch'a ustqlustustal'ustu Tsiaa'! ("Let my life be long, Father!")

The successful hunter, or the woman who has found a plentiful supply of berries, prays:—

Nustqlustustk'l'ustu ta nalustal'ala ch'a nuqlaustk'l'ustu ch'a yaxustu ustustk'l'ustu ta ts'ala ch'ank'a ta ts'qlaxal'ala'a. ("Father! You make me happy. You give me what I desire. Then I find what I wished for.")

The Bella Coola also make offerings to the Sun. Hunters throw four small slices of seal-meat, of mountain-goat tallow, etc., into the fire as an offering to the Sun, in order to obtain success in hunting. Sick people have parts of their clothing, which they decorate with red cedar-bark, for an offering to regain health. 776 783

The second deity, who is called Ash'ustal'ia, seems to be of equal importance. Snaa and Ash'ustal'ia stay in the rear of the House of Myths. Near the fire stays Sustch'alx'a'la. He is an old man who formerly ruled over 776 [712]

the House of Myths, but who has given up his place in favor of Raven and Ack'uxtl'in. These two might be called the values of mankind. In most traditions they are described as trying to destroy man, notwithstanding the fact that they are considered the creators of mankind. This peculiar characteristic of these deities is clearly brought out in the traditions recorded on pp. 50 ff. In one legend which I collected in 1890, Ack'uxtl'in's mother, Nemamik-tequen'ts, is described as a Cannibal, who leaves her long uvula in the care of man, and sucks out his brain. Eventually she was transformed into the mosquito.[1] I did not hear her mentioned as one of the deities residing in the House of Myths. According to the same tradition, the salmon were obtained by a man who gambled with Ack'uxtl'in, the stake being the salmon. Ack'uxtl'in lost, and the man took the salmon down from heaven. Another legend of the origin of the salmon is recorded on p. 58, where it is told how the birds obtained the salmon. According to still another tradition (p. 94), the Raven obtained the salmon by marrying a salmon girl. In the tradition quoted above, Ack'uxtl'in also gives to man the power to cure disease by means of the water of life, which the shaman sprinkles on the sick person.

A number of inferior deities live in the House of Myths. They might be called the ministers of the principal deities. In order to understand their functions, it is necessary to state that the deities residing in the House of Myths have particular charge of the religious winter ceremonial of the Bella Coola which is called ki'xtas, and which corresponds to the ts'ooxtqs of the Kwakiutl. I have described this ceremonial and its importance in the social life of the Kwakiutl, in another paper.[2] The ki'xtas is of equal importance to an understanding of the social life and mythology of the Bella Coola. It is sufficient to say at this place that the ceremonials performed during the ki'xtas are mostly dramatic representations of myths relating to the various deities, particularly to those of the House of Myths; therefore masks representing these deities are used in the ceremonials. Plates VII to XII[3] show a series of these masks. Figs. 1, 2, and 4 (Plate VII) are Sun, Ack'uxtl'in, and Sunk'alex'ts. The functions of many of the inferior deities seem to refer solely to the ki'xtas. These deities and their functions are as follows: Sk'ark'ul'e (Plate VII, Fig. 6) subdues the death of man and animals. According to one statement that I received, there are four deities of this name in the House of Myths. It is his particular duty to kill those who transgress the laws of the ki'xtas. This duty is assumed by Jacobsen, who calls him Sek-ulk Kalla.[4] Nemel'ooqi'ts (Plate VII, Fig. 7), or the Sweep of the House of Myths, sits by himself in one

[1] Contributions to the Mythology of the Bella Coola Indians, Anthropological Publications, p. 100.
[2] Report of the U. S. National Museum, 1895, pp. 311-377.
[3] Drawings by Mr. Stewart Culin.
[4] Contributions to the Mythology of the Bella Coola Indians, Anthropological Publications, p. 100.

Tribes B-5 (1899-ca. 1942)700 NBA Bellecourte NBA

owner of the house. He prevents those who are not initiated in the secrets of the ka'ulat from approaching the house. The Sacsa'q is a fabulous monster, the peculiarities of which are described in a number of traditions (see pp. 83 ff.). S'ants.a'mana'k (Plate VII, Figs. 12 and 13) is a boy who performs ka'ulat dances all the time. When the deities resolve to send a new dance down to our world, it is conveyed by S'ants.a'mana'k. It is the office of another deity to sing, accompanying the ka'ulat dances of the gods (Plate VII, Fig. 3). Anuqal'ulem is a deity in regard to whose functions I have not been able to obtain detailed information. It is said that he intervenes on behalf of man when Sisa and Ack'uxal'u threaten to punish him. There are two goddesses in the house who also intervene in favor of man when the principal deities threaten him with death and sickness. Their names are Sumsal'ua (Plate VII, Fig. 9) and Ainlit'uxa (Plate VII, Figs. 10 and 11). They wake man after sleep. Without their help, nobody could wake from sleep. Ainlit'uxa is at the same time the guardian of the moon. Every month she restores the moon to her full size, and she cleans her face after an eclipse. The moon is called A'ns.'ts.g'ds (Plate X, Fig. 10). The eclipse is produced by several deities called Aiq'ul'yumsm, which means "painting the face black" (Plate X, Figs. 4-6). It is believed that at this time the moon performs one of the most sacred ceremonies of the ka'ulat, which are thought to be very dangerous to the performer. The black paint with which her face is covered is supposed to be a protection against these dangers. Ainlit'uxa cleans off the paint after the dance has been completed. According to Jacobsen,[1] the Indians say that during an eclipse the moon (Ensklel'ulitsa) paints her face black. The same deities are believed to paint and to clean the faces of human ka'ulat dancers. Sumsal'ua and Ainlit'uxa also resuscitate those who are killed by the dangerous performances of the ka'ulat.

While the functions of the beings enumerated here are mostly concerned with the ka'ulat, others are more immediately concerned with the affairs of the world. Important among these is K'ucuk'a'n (Plate VII, Fig. 5). Sisa is the creator of man, but his work is supplemented by that of the god K'ucuk'a'n. When Sisa creates a new-born child, K'ucuk'a'n gives the child its individual features. Before children are born, the goddess named Nacqamalal'a or Sumsmal'ulas Sacsalil'ua.ala places them in a cradle and rocks them. After she ceases rocking them, the children are sent down to our world. She also rocks the young of all animals; and when she stops, Sisa sends them down to our world to be born. At the same time he ordains that their skins and their flesh shall serve for clothing and food for man. Nacqamalal'a might therefore be called the deity

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 100.

[77K] having charge of the birth of all animal beings. While she is reaching the [Bro] [illegible], she sings, —

[639] "[illegible]
[illegible]"

Another deity living in the House of Myths is the mother of flowers, called Nuxt'mqa (Plate X, Figs. 7 and 9), the daughter of Sinkpa'ux.ts. It seems that this last name means "going to the right." This evidently refers to the fact that the Sun is believed to move on his path towards the west, [illegible] forward, and consequently during the spring months towards the sky [621] moving towards the right; so that Sinkpa'ux.ts, moving to the right, means at the same time the springtime, when the sun is moving up the sky. This is the time when flowers begin to [illegible]. Every spring Nuxt'mqa gives birth to all the plants in the order in which they begin to appear. A shaman is called to her aid by two old women who assist her (Plate X, Figs. 8 and 11).

Every year, at the time of the winter solstice, the deities determine who shall die during the coming year. Two beings called Kakimul'ts. ska xnxt'mm are placed on the ends of a long plank, which is supported at its [761] centre, and swings like a seesaw. Then all the men and all the animals are called to stand near the ends of the plank. When one of the swinging beings falls down from the plank, the person standing near it will die sooner than the one standing at the opposite end. The deities have a messenger called Nuxwhm'bika (that means "long ear"), who carries all the news from our earth up to the House of Myths. Ak'amt'm has two children, — the elder, who is called Sant'lexnlts Ak'amt'm, that is, "the foolish son of Ak'amt'm" (Plate VII, Fig. 8), and [illegible] Ak'amt'm. I have not been able to learn any thing in regard to the functions of these two beings.

While Sasa and Ak'amt'm are principally concerned with the fates of mankind, they do not personally interfere with the doings of men. Their thoughts are carried out by four brothers, who are called collectively Mas-[illegible]'ala, or Qaalx'ustqamas (Plate VIII, Figs. 1–4). These brothers are Mas.qat'lauk ("the one who finishes his work by chopping once"), Yala'- [illegible] ("the one who finishes his work by rubbing once"), Mas.qat'cauk
("the one who finishes his work by cutting once"), and [illegible]. They [772] have a sister called [illegible]. These four brothers live in an elevated room in the rear of the House of Myths. They are engaged in carving and painting. It is said that they gave man his arts. They taught him to build canoes, to make houses, to build houses, and to carve in wood and to point. They taught him the methods of hunting, and, according to some, they made the fish. The Bella Coola say, when carving a design, that Mamamalt'sis gives them the idea which they are working out. 776

Sisaa has a daughter named Sp'ex'p'ik'ua'ts, who invented the art of working cedar-bark. Her figure is also used in the kq'sist ceremonial, in which the invention of the preparation of cedar-bark is represented. This deity has an assistant called Omatsu'k', who supports the stick over the edge of which she is breaking the bark. When first breaking bark, she shouts, "Aatsx sisya'ltxaa ti Omatsu'k'atsx" ("Bring to me Omatsu'k'"). After he has been given to her, she shouts, "Aatsx sisya'ltxaa ta tspek'a.ts" ("Bring me the board on which to break the bark"). After receiving this, she demands the cedar-bark breaker, saying, "Aatsx sesskpaa.ai'ts ta sp'k'a'ists." Finally she asks for cedar-bark, saying, "Aatsx k'a.ala.Alamx-lats ti sp'k'a'ustsx." Then she begins to work, singing,— [579] [539] [539]

"E ses ask'a'usset ti ses'a'usts ta ka'a E ses ttsaad ta sal Sp'ex'p'ik'ua'ts ses'a'usts ta ka'a" ("Behold me, ye who are not initiated!

I am the Cedar-bark Breaker of Sp'ex'p'ik'ua'ts.")

It seems that most of the Bella Coola maintain that the Raven also lives in the House of Myths, but this point of their mythology is somewhat obscure and contradictory. According to the tradition of a number of families, the Raven was one of the beings sent down by Sisaa to our world to become the ancestor of men, but at the same time it is told that he invented certain arts. It is stated that he made the first salmon-trap (ex.k'a'l), which is used in connection with the salmon-weir. 776 773

It is also said that Mamamalt'sis attempted to make the whistles for the winter ceremonial, but he was unsuccessful, and that the Raven succeeded in making them; also that the Raven came down to give the world its present shape. He instituted the festivals of the Bella Coola, and then returned to the House of Myths.

Besides all these deities, there are nine brothers and their sister particularly concerned with the observances of the kq'sist ceremonial (Plate IX, Figs. 1-9). The names of the brothers are, Xtsaatsmalt'a.la, Xt'ansiwa, Omq'amk'ilk'a, Q'o'ansiwa, Aimalt'a.ala, Al'amk'ilk'a, K'ic'lias, Q'alaxt'ua, A'l'amk'; and of their sister, i.'ltsat'aplai.ana. These deities are painted with certain designs. Xtsaatsmalt'a.la and Xt'ansiwa are painted with the designs of the full moon (the former carries a staff wound with red and white cedar-bark); Omq'amk'ilk'a and Q'o'ansiwa, with the design of the half-moon; Aimalt'a.ala and Al'amk'ilk'a, with the design representing the stars; K'ic'lias, with the design of the rainbow; Q'alaxt'ua, with the de- 776 776 532

776 sign of the salmon-berry blossom: A't'mâk^a has the shape of a kingfisher; and L'ëtsa'aplëLana is painted with the design of a sea-lion bladder filled 532 with grease. She wears rings of red and white cedar-bark. The carving representing the kingfisher has the wings attached to the sides of the head, while the tail rises over the forehead. Xëmxëmalâ'oLla is said to carry a small woman in his arms. Her name is Nuspô'xta. When the brothers and their sister threaten to do harm to man, she entreats them to desist. In some traditions these deities are described as the children of ALk'unta'm.[1]

776 In one tradition L'ëtsa'aplëLana[2] is described as visiting houses and 773 stealing provisions. She is then pursued by the person whom she has wronged, and returns to the House of Myths. The deities are unable to cure her; but the person who wounded her is called in, and withdraws his arrow, whereupon she recovers.[1] Formerly I had the impression that these [114] ten deities were particularly concerned with the sisau'k^a ceremonial,[2] but this [575] impression has not been substantiated by the information I received during the past year. The ten deities appear much rather as deities of the kô'siut.

575 In the rear of the House of Myths there is a room named LlÔ'sta, in 773 which the son of the deities lives. His name is Ba'gxôLla or Snupaaxola'lt.
776 When SëNx and ALk'untâ'm desire to destroy their visitors, they send them past the door of Ba'gxôL'a's room. The latter then rushes out of his room [772] and devours the visitors. He also initiates the Cannibal. According to the tradition of the tribe Së'nxLëmx^a, they acquired membership in the Cannibal Society in the following manner: Ba'gxôLla came down to the mountain Sqtsl, where he met with the son of SëNxalô'Lëla, the first of the tribe. He conducted him up to the House of Myths. He took him into his room, and gave him the name Q'oalaiu'tstimot. He put a snake into his body, which enabled him to pass through the water. When the youth applied his mouth to the body of a person, the snake tore pieces of flesh from the body, and devoured it. Then Ba'gxôLla took the youth to the upper heaven, past the rent in the sky, and to the house of the supreme deity, Qama'its. The two approached the house, being blown towards it by the strong gale prevailing in the open country of the upper heaven. They found Qama'its sitting in front of her house; and she said to Ba'gxôLla, "Why don't you come in? You wish that your friend should obtain great supernatural power. Bring him to my house, and I will give him what you desire. Stay for a short while where you are, and I will show you what I am doing. Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." After a little while the post closed its eyes. It grew dark at once, and the two visitors fainted, but soon they recovered. When the post opened its eyes again, it grew light. The visitors remained sitting on the ground, and

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 994.
[2] Seventh Report on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, p. 6.

suddenly a strong wind began to blow, which rolled them over the prairie until they reached the door of the house. Then suddenly the wind calmed down. They remained sitting on the ground near the doorway; and Qama'its said, "Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." They were sitting opposite each other, watching the post; and when it closed its eyes, they were transformed into two stones, but they soon regained human shape. Then Qama'its asked them to enter. Now the woman took the youth's blanket, and gave him another one made of bear-skin set with fringes of red cedar-bark. She told him that this blanket was to keep him warm, and that it would direct his course. Next she fetched some water from the salt-water pond behind her house. She sprinkled it over the faces of her visitors, and told the youth to sing about his experiences in the upper heaven when performing the Cannibal dance. If she had not sprinkled the faces of her visitors with water, they would have died. She said to the youth, "Your country is not far away. Do not be afraid of the dangerous road that you have to pass. Later on there shall be many Cannibals like you. Do not be afraid to touch the food that another Cannibal may offer to you. You are strong because you have seen me." Then Qama'its sent him back to the lower sky. Here the gods placed him on the back of a bird (Sq'xsgn), which carried him down to the sea. As soon as the bird reached the water, it uttered its cry, and at the same time the young man uttered the cry of the Cannibal. The people heard it, and said to one another, "That must be the boy whom we lost some time ago." They connected many canoes by means of planks, and paddled out to the place where the bird was swimming about. They covered the canoes with red cedar-bark and eagle-down, and tried to capture the youth; but when they approached, the bird swam towards the village. They surrounded it with their canoes; but the bird flew up, and disappeared in the sky, and at the same time the youth flew towards the village. When the people landed, he attacked them, taking hold of their arms; and the snake, which was still in his body, tore pieces of flesh out of their arms. The people sang and beat time in order to appease him. 575 773 776

In a second room in the rear of the House of Myths, next to that of the Cannibal, lives Kôkô'sLXEm, another son of the deities. His room is called Nus'ô'lxsta. He initiates the Olx-dancer (see Chap. VI). 776 575

The path of the Sun is guarded by a number of deities. At sunrise is stationed the Bear of Heaven, Snanô's ti Sônx t'aix (Plate X, Fig. 2). He is described as a fierce warrior, who protects the Sun against the attacks of his enemies, and he is the cause of the warlike spirit of man. His hair is tied up in a knot on top of his head. His mask is used in the sisan'k [772] [821]

776 ceremonial, and sometimes in the ka'siut. The following song belongs to 575 his mask and dance:—

[539] Nanemô'tstauit ti q'ûqaki'mtst'aix'. Nô'nq'awêxum ts'ên t'ayôłałat'aix' ayati snanô'a ti wônx' t'aix', wâ, nôn, ai!

("Cry now, as though you had left me! I shall tie up my hair, warriors, like the Bear of Heaven.")

776 At sunset stands an enormous post which is called Nutêexoa'axtatas ti 821 Sônx' t'aix'. It supports the sky, and prevents the Sun from falling down into the lower world. The trail of the Sun is described as a bridge which was built by Masmasala'nix. The bridge is as broad as the distance between the winter solstice and the summer solstice. The Sun walks, his face turned towards the west. In summer he walks on the right-hand side of the bridge, in winter on the left-hand side of the bridge, which explains the varying heights of the sun in the course of the year. The extreme right and extreme left of the bridge are called Sê'ɛmt ("the place where he sits down," that is, the solstices). At each of these points a being is placed who is called Ałk·x·ê'łnɛm (Plate X, Fig. 3). It is their duty to see that the Sun does not tarry too long at the solstice. If in summer or winter he should be inclined to stay too long or to return too soon, they regulate his course. When the Sun tarries too long at the winter solstice, the people say, "êx tsês pa'nia" ("salmon will be dried late this year"). If he leaves it without tarrying, they say, "êk·!x· tsês pa'nia" ("soon we shall dry salmon"). Three guardians named Naqumiqa'otsaix (Plate X, Fig. 1) accompany the Sun on his course, dancing around him all the time. The halo is called Itwu'xtsia ti Mânł t'aix· ("the cape of our father"). A sun-[73] dog that appears westward from the Sun is called Ałqôł ti Mânł t'aix· ("the [753] painted face of our father"). The Bella Coola believe that when it drops down to our earth, it causes epidemics. During an eclipse the Sun is believed to lose his torch. The rays of the Sun are his eyelashes.

There are twenty-four guardians appointed to take care of the sky. They are called Nexolak·ai'x·. According to tradition, the sky must be continually fed with firewood. Once upon a time they put too much firewood into the sky and made it burst. All the pieces except one, called S'ałwalô'ɛm, fell down to our earth. The fragments hit the faces of the twenty-four guardians, and distorted them. They tried to mend the sky, but did not know how to do it. They went down the river, and came to Masmasala'nix, whose assistance they asked. Masmasala'nix gathered up the broken pieces, and glued them together. Up to that time the Sun had staid in the east, but now he began to go on his daily course. At that time Masmasala'nix built the bridge over which the Sun travels every day. He placed a wedge in the opening of the sky, into which the Nexolak·ai'x·

TrBoas B-1 (1886-ca. 1892)900 NBS Bellacoola NBS have to put the firewood. This opening is called K'awa'omsta, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Mamasala'nix spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following ka'siut song refers to these deities: — 776 821

[539]

Ai'mms ti mmmal' tlexs ti ai'ax'tagi t'aix
Aiēx ti mmmal' ōx. ti S'ālxalō'omm ti Sōmx' t'aix.
Sīx yalxēx ti ai'lxnē ti mmmal'.
Sīx mdga wq exmē'x ti K'awa'omstash ti Sōmx' t'aix ti mmmal.

("My child perished like the sky when it broke
Go to S'ālxalō'omm of the sky, my child!
Gladden my heart, my child!
Sit down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'nēkō'ōt, or Qenkī'lst, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Alēp!alaxtnaix'. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake: and the Bella Coola say, "Snēnik"pstak'intōls," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [731] [753]

In the ocean lives a being called Sēlāts, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the ka'siut ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kōlk"lolg'mx'). It is called Asiutā'nxm. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787] their kā'sist. It is just below the burial-place of each village. The dancing-house is very large and long. It has four fires. The women stay on the floor of the house, while the men sit on an elevated platform. The houses have doors, but the ghosts who first reach the lower world enter the house through the smoke-hole. A rope ladder placed in the smoke-hole facilitates their entrance. Two men stand at the foot of the ladder. They are called Anset.'xemlal'x'. For a person who has once entered the dancing-house there is no return to our earth. The souls are at liberty to return to the lower heaven, which they reach by ascending the rope ladder. Those who return to the lower heaven are sent back to our earth by the deities, to be born as children in the same family to which they belonged. Those who enjoy life in the country of the ghosts, and who do not return to heaven, die a second death, and then sink to the second lower world, from which there is no return.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NEb Bellacoola NEb

772
775

I received another description from an old man. He stated that he reached the country in his canoe. He saw two trails, — one the trail of the living, one that of the dead. He followed the trail of the dead, and reached a village in which there was a dancing-house. The language of the ghosts differed from that of the living (see p. 42).

773
825
[823]

The Bella Coola believe that in the far west is situated the land of the salmon, which is called Mta'ltsa. The salmon leave this country early in the spring every year, and ascend the rivers. They are believed to return to their own country in the fall. The following tradition is of importance, explaining the manner in which the salmon were first brought from their country to the rivers of our world: —

Once upon a time a man named Winwt'na lived at Q'ō'nqōtis. One day he was sitting in front of his house, looking at the river. He thought, "I wish fish would ascend this river." At that time not a single salmon visited Bella Coola River. Winwt'na entered his house and lay down, thinking about the salmon. One night while he was asleep he dreamt that with the help of all the animals he had made war upon the salmon, that he had vanquished them, and that since that time the salmon had ascended Bella Coola River. When he awoke he invited all the animals to his house, and told them about his dream. They all came, and when they had entered he shut the door. Then he spoke: "My brothers, I have invited you to my house that you may hear what I wish to do. You shall help me to obtain what I desire." The Mink asked him in what they were to assist him; and he replied, "I want to go to Mta'ltsa. There is not a single fish in our river, and I dreamt that with your help I vanquished the fish. Let us make war upon them. I shall certainly take some slaves, and we will place them in this river." Mink retorted, "I am glad that you are speaking, in regard to this matter. I asked my father the Sun (see Chap. V) to give us salmon, and I think he gave you the dream which you told us."

Tribes B.1 (1884-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773
825

All the birds agreed, and they resolved to start as soon as possible. Then Winwt'na asked Masmsala'nix to build a canoe. The latter complied with his request, and made a self-moving canoe, to which he gave the names "Wisaioseus," and "Kuskuu'qstus." In the third moon after the winter solstice the canoe was completed, and Winwt'na started, accompanied by the clouds, the birds, and by all the animals. The Hermaphrodite was sitting in the stern of the canoe. They went down the fiord; and when they passed the village of Bella Bella, they saw the Cormorant sitting on the beach, who asked to be taken along as a passenger. They travelled westward for a long time, and finally they reached the country of the Salmon. They saw that there were no trees. The country was a vast prairie. A large sun was shining in the sky. Soon they descried the village of the Salmon. They sent out the Raven as a spy. When he returned, he told them that in the evening the Salmon were in the habit of playing on the beach. Mink suggested that this would be the best time for carrying some of them away. Then the Crane (according to another version, the Hawk) said, "I shall carry away the Sockeye Salmon." The Wren said, "I shall carry away the Humpback Salmon." The Kingfisher (according to another version, the Crane) said, "I shall carry away the Dog Salmon." The Raven said, "I shall carry away the Silver Salmon." The Fish-Hawk said, "I shall carry away the Olachen and the Salmon Trout." The Cloud said, "I shall carry away the Spring Salmon." Finally the Cormorant said, "I am only a passenger, and I will take whatever I can get." The Mink remarked, "I will not say what I am going to carry away: I only want to tell you that you must each take one male and one female. Now start. You are invisible to the Salmon. When you approach them, they will not be able to see you, just as we cannot see the ghosts, even when they are walking by our side." They left Wiewt'na to guard the canoe. Then all the birds and the Mink took each one male and one female child of the various kinds of fish. When they carried them off, the children fainted, as though their souls had been taken away. Their bodies remained at the place where they had been playing. The Salmon did not see their captors, and did not know why the children were fainting. The birds returned to the canoe, carrying the fish. Then Winwt'na said, "Let us go on and see what is beyond the country of the Salmon." Soon they arrived at a place called Qoale'nia (this name is not quite certain), in which vast numbers of berries were growing. Here the Hermaphrodite went ashore, and picked all kinds of berries, which she carried into the canoe. Then they returned home. For seven months they had staid in the country of the Salmon. They reached the coast shortly after the winter solstice (?). When they passed Bella Bella, the Cormorant

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE5

773 825 said, "This is my home. I will go ashore here." He went, and took along the Salmon which he had captured. Ever since that time there are salmon at Bella Bella. The others travelled on, and came to the mouth of Bella Coola River. Then they threw all the various kinds of fish into the water. The Salmon jumped, and began to ascend the river. Then Winwī'na arose in his canoe and told each at what season he was to arrive. He scattered the berries over the mountains and through the valleys, and told them at what season to ripen. After he had done so, he invited his companions into his house, and gave them a feast.

773 825 192 In this tradition the birds and animals are not called by their ordinary names, but by mythical names. These names are as follows:—

ENGLISH.	ORDINARY NAME.	MYTHICAL NAME.
Spring salmon	ämt.	t'ōh'ō'ls'timōt
Sockeye salmon	sämt.	nanätsak·mēxaxnt'm ("very long")
Humpback salmon	k'ap'ai'	snuk'pämai'x.
Dog salmon	tlīl	sasia'lton ("fair weather")
Silver salmon	wa'ls	k'pōtōhōnō'laix ("making himself beautiful")
Salmon (sp.?)	——	ō'sip'äq
Cloud	sk·ī'ē'nons	tsa'hosk· ("long hand")
Hawk (?)	stsīx'n'ex	snuk·'k'iqnaix· ("looking down into water")
Wren	mōxat'a'laqa	t.'lk'ma'lnt.aix· ("jumper")
Crane	xaq'ā'ns	mexexē'lien
Raven	qoa'x	t.xoa'xoaqnai'laix· ("rising early")
Cormorant	t.'ō'pana	k'oa'k'nagrla
Hermaphrodite	ex'inta	st.a'ya'ō

773 According to the belief of the Bella Coola, Winwī'na's canoe arrives from the country of the Salmon every year. It stays in the country of the Bella Coola for nine months, and then returns to the country of the Salmon. At the moment when it leaves, another canoe, which is named "Nō'ak·nem" or "Nunuk·su'tanem," which brings the kū'siut ceremonial, arrives from the country S'anōk!pta'ltna. The canoe reaches a distant point of land before the departure of the canoe of the Salmon. After four days it reaches a nearer point of land. Four days more, and it is seen at the point of land nearest to the mouth of Bella Coola River. Another four days, and it reaches the mouth of the river. The Indians believe that there is a house named Snō'amlitnank· at this place. A post is standing in the water in front of the house. It is called Snutexoalaxbtana'nk·. In the house live three men who are named Naspaulaxxai'x, Ā'mlīag·ilis, and Tixti·k·'a'nemem. The canoe is tied up in front of this house. As soon as it arrives, the kū'siut ceremonial begins. At the head-waters of Bella Coola River, forming the watershed between Bute Inlet and Bentinck Arm, is a mountain called

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NEb Bellacoola NEb

Smaya'ma, that is considered a human being. It is said that his children make the canoe go up Bella Coola River with the rising tide, A'nxumk'ila. The canoe travels the distance from the mouth of the river to the mountain Smaya'na in a single tide. The canoe "Nó'ak'nem" stays for four months. Then the canoe "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns from the country of the Salmon, while "Nó'ak'nem" leaves again. It is said that all the gods of the House of Myths come to the villages of the Bella Coola in the canoe "Nó'ak'nem." 773 [776]

The arrival and the departure of these canoes are strictly regulated according to the calendar of the Bella Coola, which for this reason should be explained in connection with their beliefs. The Bella Coola divide the year into two parts, which are separated by the winter and summer solstices. The solstices are periods of indefinite length, between which five months are counted. Each solstice is reckoned, therefore, as approximately six weeks. The names of the months are as follows: — 773 805 821

Sé'mt (winter solstice)	Sé'mt (summer solstice)
Sxólt'mx'nem	Sl'uxum
A'xó'nstumá	Sexe'x'mel
Sinq'u'm	Sinulá'hsemtnem
Siqió'k'	Tsi sitak'ím tsi.zu Ananlikuts'ai'x'
Sinó'moak'	Lemuté'm

The canoe "Nó'ak'nem" arrives, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" leaves, in the month Sinulá'hsemtnem. The canoe "Nó'ak'nem" leaves, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns, in the month Sxólt'mx'nem.

At the moment when the canoe "Nó'ak'nem" arrives, a deity called Ananlikuts'ai'x' (Plate XII, Figs. 1 and 2), who is believed to live in a cave, opens the door of her abode. There is one deity of this name to each village. Her cave is called Nuskésiú'tsta. It is said that one Ananlikuts'ai'x' lives on the mountain Sqtsi. Her house is described as a large hollow bowlder suspended from the top of the mountain by means of a rope. Each Ananlikuts'ai'x' has an older sister who is called Nutsé'xnem. When the canoe "Nó'ak'nem" appears, and she opens her door, she steps outside and stands in front of her house, dancing, with trembling hands. When a person sees her, he faints. His soul is taken into her house, and is initiated into the secrets of the kn'siut. 773 776 [575]

A particular Nuskésiú'tsta is believed to be at the foot of the creek Anó'nk', on the northern side of North Bentinck Arm, near the mouth of Bella Coola River. A woman called Nustsxoaxló'stxuit, lives there. She is described as emaciated, of black skin, and as wearing a black blanket. A certain chief who lived long ago was the first to see her. He was initiated by her, and after his return he performed a dance, and told what he had seen. Then he died.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 There is a special deity who initiates the shamans. His name is LALA-ia'it, or Sxai'cxnax (Plate XI, Fig. 9). He lives in the woods. He carries [756] a wooden wand wound with red cedar-bark, which he swings in his hands, producing a singing noise. Around his neck he wears a large ring made of strips of bear-skin and red cedar-bark. He sometimes plays in ponds which are believed to be in certain mountains. When he jumps into the water, it boils. When a woman meets him, she begins to menstruate; when a man meets him, his nose begins to bleed. When initiating a person, he touches the chest of the latter with his wand, and paints his face with the design of the rainbow. Then he swings his wand, the noise of which causes the person who hears it to faint. He creates sexual desire in man [787] and animals. A shaman who was initiated by this being told me that he very often sees LALAIA'IT, who tells him who will die and who will fall sick. Sometimes he sees that the body of a person is black. Others he sees dancing on their heads. These are signs that they will die at an early date. I obtained from this man the description of the visit to the country of the ghosts, quoted before (p. 38). He told me that when reaching the country of the dead, he saw the ghosts of his deceased relatives sitting in the house. When they saw him, they began to weep, and said, "Don't come here. We don't want to see you so soon." While they were speaking to him, the chief's speaker entered the house, and called all the people to come to the dancing-house of the ghosts. One of the ghosts painted his face black and white, and tied long strips of white and red cedar-bark in his hair. The people were called four times. Then they started to go to the dancing-house. The entrance to the door was over a narrow plank. When he had just stepped on the plank, he suddenly saw LALAIA'IT, with his large neck-ring made of red cedar-bark and strips of black bear-skin, who took hold of him, turned him round, and told him to return to his own country, because, if he should once enter the dancing-house, he would not be able to return. Then he revived; and from that time on, LALAIA'IT was his supernatural helper.

A. Jacobsen describes this spirit as follows:[1] — 776 "The most prominent among the spirits of the shamans is Kle-klati-e'il 756 [LALAIA'IT]. He lives in the woods, where the youth who intends to be initiated tries to find him. When the spirit meets him, the youth faints. When he recovers, he begins to sing a song, the tune and words of which have been given to him by the spirit. Now he has become a shaman, who uses this song in all his incantations; but he does not retain it throughout life, because he meets his guardian spirit almost every year, and then he receives new songs. The Indians believe that Kle-klati-e'il has human shape, but he is clothed in cedar-bark, and wears a great many rings of cedar-bark.

[113] [1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 104.

7;Boas E-9 (1886-co. 1900)900 NEB Bellacoola NEA

Some of these he gives to the shaman. . . . A third spirit is the Skaia [Sxal'ĉuoax], which is believed to live in rivers, and to have the shape of a salmon. When a shaman who is inspired by this spirit makes an incantation in a house, singing and dancing, as all the shamans do, whoever approaches the house and hears the song turns back. They believe that whoever passes the house during the incantation will be punished with death by the spirit Skaia." 776 756

I believe this spirit is identical with LALAIT'E., who, as stated before, has the second name Sxal'ĉuoax. According to Jacobsen, some shamans are initiated by the ghosts. He says that the ghosts are believed to have bald heads and blue faces. I am under the impression, however, that the people initiated by them are not shamans, but ka'sint dancers (see Chap. VI). [775] [575]

Another being who initiates shamans is described in the following tradition: — 539

Once upon a time there was a man and a woman who had four sons. The three elder ones died. Then the father and mother and the youngest brother were very unhappy, and the old people cried for grief until they died. The young man was now left all alone. He left his village, intending to go away and never to return. He pulled his blanket over his head and walked on. Sometimes he would stop to pray. He lived on the meat of mountain-goats which he shot. He built a small hut high up on the mountains, and dried the meat. He was crying and praying all the time. He prayed to the Sun to give him a gift which would restore his happiness. One day early in the morning he ascended the mountain. He addressed the rising Sun, saying, "Look at me, how unhappy I am." After he had gone a short distance he came to a ravine. The bed of the ravine was filled with pretty pebbles. There he met a beautiful man, who was no other than the Sun, who had descended from the sky. He had caused the water of the creek that runs through the ravine to disappear. When the young man saw the stranger from a distance, he thought, "He seems to be looking for me." He went nearer; and when they met, the Sun said, "I am the one to whom you are praying all the time, and I come to help you. Now be happy. When you open your mouth and speak to me, I know your thoughts at once. I help those who address themselves to me. Take this." With these words he handed the young man a switch carved in the shape of a man. The Sun was carrying it under his arm, the point of the switch directed downward. "Fold your arms and hold this switch to your chest, and then return to the village. When you approach any one, hide the switch under your arm. You will find a person who wears a nose-ornament of beautiful green color. Then you must try to hit the ornament with this switch, and throw it to your right side." 756 776

539 He walked on, and after a while he noticed a man sitting at a distance.
756 Then he hid the switch under his arm. When he came near, he saw that 776 the man wore a large green nose-ring. He hit it with his switch, and threw it to the right-hand side. Then the man said, "You have attained me as your supernatural helper. Your name shall be S'a'tems [from 'a'tema,' 'dead']. Many people have seen me, but nobody has done what you did. If you had not struck my nose-ornament, you would have died on seeing me. You shall have the power to heal the sick by the touch of your hands. Whenever a person dies and is put into a box, after the box has been placed in the burial-ground, go there. You will find me sitting on the coffin. If then you knock the nose-ring from out of my nose, I shall leave, and the dead will revive. He will break the box, and will arise."

Then the young man felt very glad. He returned to the village, and by following the instructions of the spirit he resuscitated the dead. He was given many blankets, and the men whom he had resuscitated gave him their daughters in marriage.

756 Other shamans are initiated by L'etsa'apletana. The same man who 776 gave me the record of his supposed visit to the country of the ghosts (see p. 38) told me that at another time he saw L'etsa'apletana flying in the air outside of his house. She wore a ring of red cedar-bark around her neck. She was turning round all the time. Songs were coming from all parts of her body. Although she did not open her mouth, it sounded as though a great many people were singing. She gave him a song, or, as the narrator expressed it, "she threw a song into his body." At that time he was sick, suffering from a wound in his leg inflicted by an axe. He said four days after meeting the spirit he was able to walk, and since that time she has assisted him in curing diseases.

The st'ist, is another helper of the shaman, and the means of curing disease (see p. 38). It appears that it obtains its supernatural power from the fact that it lives in the water in which the supreme deity washes her face. When a person sees a st'ist, he should throw sand on it, by which means he will be able to catch it. Its skin is so hard that it cannot be pierced with a spear or knife. The person who catches it should not try to cut it with his knife, but should stretch his hand backward, and thus he will find the leaf of a holly, which is the only thing that can cut its skin. He should not touch the st'ist, with his hands, but hold it with hemlock twigs. He should wrap it in white cedar-bark and tie it up in his blanket. If it is not thus tied up, it will disappear. It must not be taken into the [755] house, but should be placed in a small box and hidden under stones, or buried in a hole under the root of a tree. It is a most potent means of curing disease. Sick people will buy small pieces of the st'ist, for which they pay high prices. The piece is thrown into water, in which it is kept for four days. Then the water is used for washing the body. If a healthy person uses this water, he will live to an old age. Sick persons chew the white cedar-bark in which it is wrapped up, in order to regain health. They must not swallow the cedar-bark, but only the saliva that gathers in their mouths. A person who has chewed the cedar-bark becomes invulnerable. The eye of the at'sinx is described as about a foot in diameter, and as transparent as rock crystal. 756 776 [755]

?:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NES Bellacoola NES

Tox'lax.'it is the spirit who protects the mountain-goat hunter. He himself is invisible; but great hunters sometimes see his hat, his moccasins, or his mountain staff moving about. The following tradition describes some of his characteristics: — 776 539

The Raven and the Lynx lived in one house, each occupying one side. Early in the morning the Raven went out to catch salmon with the harpoon. He was very successful, and carried the fish home. Tox'lax.'it watched the Raven, who, when he arrived at the house, roasted his salmon. The children of the Lynx were sitting near by, and looking at the Raven while he was roasting the fish. They wished to participate in the meal, but he did not give them anything. Then the children were very sad. Now the Lynx made up his mind to make arrows and to go hunting mountain-goat. He went out and cut some wood for his arrows; then he told his wife to make a quiver, which he called Ts'o'lapala. She did so, and wove a quiver of cedar-bark. The Lynx was quite impatient for the sun to rise, so eager was he to start hunting. Early in the morning he arose and ascended the mountain. When he reached the limit of the trees, he sat down on a flat rock and looked for goats. Then he saw the staff of a man who was coming down the mountain. He did not see the person himself. He thought, "Who is that? Who may be hunting here?" The stick approached him; and when it came near, he saw Tox'lax.'it, who wore a large hat. His hat was named Q!p'it (that means a "barren mountain-top"). Tox'lax.'it reached the Lynx, and sat down opposite him. Neither spoke a word. After a while Tox'lax.'it arose, took the arrows of the Lynx, and said, "How beautiful these arrows are!" He took up one after another until he had looked at all the four arrows of the Lynx. Then he asked, "Who made these arrows?" The Lynx did not reply. Tox'lax.'it asked again, "Who made these arrows?" Then Lynx replied, "Tox'lax.'it made my arrows." Then Tox'lax.'it was very much pleased, and said, "Is he the one who made your arrows?" — "Certainly!" replied Lynx. Then Tox'lax.'it took his arrows and threw one after another down the mountain, and said to the Lynx, "Now go down the mountain and look at your arrows. If you spoke the truth, every one of them will have killed a large mountain-goat." The Lynx descended the mountain, and saw that every one of his arrows had killed a goat. Then he was glad, because now he had food for his children. He jumped and danced for joy. And Tsi'lan,'k said, "I am Tsi'lan,'k. I am so called because I am the mountain-goat hunter. Now return to your village. From now on, I am your supernatural protector. The next time you go hunting, and you do not find any mountain-goats, sit down and throw your arrows down the mountain. Every one will kill a goat. But do not lose those arrows. If you should lose them, you would never kill another mountain-goat." The mountain-goats were so large, that Lynx took only their fat, which he put into his quiver and climbed down the mountain. He arrived at his house in the afternoon. He left his quiver outside, and the Raven saw him coming in. The Lynx sat down by the side of his wife. He did not say a word. His wife and his children also received him in silence. In the evening, when it was dark, he said to his wife, "Go and fetch my quiver. It is hanging outside on a stick." She went there and tried to lift it, but it was too heavy. She returned to her husband and told him that she was not strong enough to lift it, and asked him to fetch it himself. He said, "It is not heavy." He went out himself and brought it in. He opened it and took out the fat; and he gave some of it to his children, but he did not give any to the Raven's children. Then the Raven was very sad. After a little while, the Raven's children began to cry, because they wanted some of the fat.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca.1892)900 NEA Bellacoola NEB

539
71

Early the next morning the Lynx went to fetch the meat of the mountain-goat. The Raven watched him, and saw where he went. When he saw that the Lynx had killed mountain-goats, he made up his mind to go hunting too. He told his wife to make him a quiver while he went out to cut wood for his arrows. In the evening the quiver and the arrows were done. In the afternoon the Lynx came home, bringing the meat of the mountain-goats. Early the next morning the Raven started, following the tracks of the Lynx. He reached the place where the Lynx had sat down. He sat there, and placed his arrows by his side. He looked around for mountain-goats. After some time he saw a staff moving along in the distance. It approached, and soon he saw a man coming down the mountain. It was Tsi'lan,'k. He reached him, and sat down opposite the Raven. They did not speak a word. After a while Tsi'lan,'k arose, took up the arrows, and said, "Man, your arrows are beautiful. Who made them?" The Raven did not reply. Then Tsi'lan,'k said again, "Tell me who made your arrows." Then the Raven answered, "The name of the man who makes my arrows is Raven." Then Tsi'lan,'k took the arrows, threw them down the mountain, and said to the Raven, "You are bad!" And he turned back, and ascended the mountain. The Raven went down the mountain, trying to find his arrows.

T:Bell B-5 (1884-A, 1898)500 NEB Bellacoola NEB

They had hit a stone, and their points were broken. He staid there some 539 time, and when it was utterly dark he returned home. Before he reached 776 his house, he cut his own belly and took out some of the fat from his intestines. He cut it in five pieces, and replaced his intestines. He put the fat into his quiver. When he reached his house, he hung the quiver up outside, and entered. He imitated everything the Lynx had done. When it grew dark, he told his wife to fetch his quiver. She brought it, and he told her to open it and to feed his children. She took the fat out, placed it on a stick, and put it near the fire; and as soon as it grew warm, the Raven cried, "Tsi! Don't put it so near the fire. I feel sick when you do so." He jumped up, took hold of the fat, and put it back in his belly. The Lynx said, "Formerly I fed your children, but you were the first one to treat me properly. You did not give any food to my children." Then the Lynx took some fat, and flung one piece to each of the Raven's children. He cut some meat and gave it to them also. Then the Raven said, "I will give you one of my children, that it may grow up in company with yours."

It is said that the former spirit Tsi'lm.'k was killed at one time by an 713 Indian who took his place. This tale is recorded in Chap. IV. It belongs to 776 the tribe of the village Nuxt'q'l. A similar tradition is told of Anim,* [70] by which name the Carriers call the Raven, their principal culture hero. Many traditions referring to Anim are common to the Carriers, the Bella Coola, and the Awik'nais of Rivers Inlet.

The Bella Coola believe that a being called K'mm is the father of all 776 mountain-goats. When a hunter meets him, he thinks he sees a kid. Then 025 he should close his eyes and open them again. If the animal is K'mm, it will appear in its real shape as a buck of enormous size. The hunter should then ascend the mountain. If he should descend, he would fall and die.

The thunder-storm is produced by the Thunder-bird, who lives on the 776 mountains, in the company of a number of spirits, who are considered his [62] particular friends. The Thunder-bird himself is represented by a black mask with red nostrils. The nose is strongly curved, the forehead bulges forward, and the chin protrudes almost as far forward as the nose (Plate XI, [572] Fig. 1). His herald is called Acoalc'tamum (Plate XI, Fig. 2). His face is painted with orange and blue stripes, and he carries a speaker's staff, which is painted with spirals of the same color. He watches the door of the Thunder-bird's house. In his house live the Rabbit (Plate XI, Fig. 3); the Owl, who is considered the rival of the Thunder-bird (Plate XI, Fig. 4); the Mountain, c'qas (Plate XI, Fig. 5); the Raindrop (Plate XI, Fig. 6). [575]

* Cf. the Anim of the Carriers (Footnote 1, p. 46). Other myths of Anim, cf. p. 50.

Tribes B:3 D886-co, 1892/999 NEA Bellacoola NEA

776 The Thunder-bird and his companions appear in the kl'ulat ceremonial.
575 When they enter the house, a dancer appears who carries an instrument in [534] the shape of a bird-rattle (Plate XI, Fig. 1), which is provided with holes in its lower side, and has a horse head. This implement is filled with cedar-bark and eagle-down, and is shaken by the dancer. The eagle-down is then made to fly about in the house, symbolizing the wealth and power of the Thunder-bird.

IV.

184 In the preceding pages I have summarized the principal features of 773 Bella Coola mythology, which are characteristic of the traditions of the whole tribe. Besides these, there are other groups of traditions which are very conflicting. One reason for the existence of numerous contradictory traditions must be looked for in the peculiar social organization of the Bella Coola. In former times, when the tribe was populous, the Bella Coola inhabited a great many villages. The inhabitants of each village are considered the descendants of a number of mythical ancestors who were sent down by Sun. Each of these village communities has traditions of its own, which are its property, and which are not well known to the rest of the tribe. Many of these traditions refer to the origin of our world, and for this reason a number of the most important myths differ in various villages. Indications of such conflicting ideas may be found in the traditions recorded in the preceding pages. To make this subject clear, it is necessary to describe somewhat fully the traditions belonging to a number of village communities. Before recording these traditions I shall enumerate the villages of the tribe.
103 The following list is the result of repeated inquiries. In it the names and 361 locations of the villages are given in consecutive order from the mouth of 773 Bentinck Arm upward along Bella Coola River, and the names of the mythical ancestors of the village communities have been added where these have been ascertained.

Village.	Location.	Ancestors.
1. Q'ul'ten	At the bay of this name.
2. Ne'ln	At the entrance of South Bentinck Arm.	Tsmul'ts.
3. Nuxul'q	On South Bentinck Arm.	Sunsulut'k'ts, Ts'ensul'-ulent, Ne'ln, and their sister E'ne'ts'ents.
4. Ts'ln'ln	At the entrance of the valley opening on the south side of the mouth of Bella Coola River.	Sul'lemx, Ts'ex'ts'ts', Skuxul'i, Sul'i.
5. Anqlo'ut	The present division at the south side of Bella Coola River, near the mouth.	Sqal'ut, Kamul'tem-ulem, Sunsulut'k'ts, and their sister Lanqlo'tem.

103
361
773

Tribes.	Locations.	Villages.
6. Ts'ēmēnsk'ēp	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 5.
7. Ts'ē'ts'ēkēmē	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 6.
8. Sēlkē'lē	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 7.
9. Sē'qēs	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 8.
10. Nēk'ē'ls	South side, near mouth of Bella Coola River.	Q'ī'c'ī.
11. Q'ī'ēnqēlē	South side, near mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 10.	Xē'nēlēs, Ts'ēnq'ēnkēlēlē, and their sister Nēmē'ēs.
	(Nos. 9-11 jointly are called Nuxa'lk.)
12. Nēmēs	About one mile above Nuxa'lk.	Ts'ēs'lēmēnē, Ts'ēnē'ēnēlēs, Nēnē'ēs'ēlē, and their sister Nēnē'ēnēs.
13. Tsēmēnē'ēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 12.	Xē'ēk'ēs, Tsēcēnēnēnēk'ēl'ēs, and their sister Nēnēk'ēnē'ēs.
14. Nēē'ēlē	On Bella Coola River, above No. 13.	Ēēk'ēl'ēs.
15. Nēē'ē'ēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 14.	Ēēnēnē'ēs.
16. Nēnē'ēnēs	At junction of Nēnē'ēnēs and Bella Coola Rivers.	Q'ēnēnēk'ēs'ēs.
17. Ānē'ēnēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 16.	E'ēnēk'ēs or Ānq'ēnēs'.
18. Nēnq'ēnēnēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 17.	Ānēnqēk'ēnēnēs', Ts'ēq'ēnē, one more than, and their sister.
19. Tsēnēnēq'ēnē	On Bella Coola River, above No. 18.
20. Nēnq'ē'ēs	On Bella Coola River, at foot of Mount Nēnq'ē'ēs, above No. 19.	Tsēnē'ēkēs.
21. Nēnē'ē'ēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 20.	Nēnēnēnē'ēs', Nē'ēs'ēnē, Nēnē'ēs, and their sister Q'ēnēnēnē'ēs.
22. Nēē'ēs	28 miles above mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 20.	Ālēs'ēnēē'ēs or Nēnē'ēs'ēs', Nēnē'ēs, Xē'ēnēnēs, Ānēnē'ēs, Kēnē'ēs, Nēnēqē'ēs, and their sister Kēnēnē'ēs.
23. Nēē'ē'ēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 22.
24. Nēē'ēs	On Bella Coola River, above No. 23.
25. Q'ēnē'ēs	At head of South Dentlack Arm.
26. Nēē'ēs	" " " "
27. Ānē'ēs	" " " "
	(Nos. 25-27 jointly are called Tē'ēs.)
28. Nēnē	At mouth of Nēnē'ēs River, Dean Inlet.
29. Nēnē	Dean Inlet.

[illegible]

TiBoas E-5 (1886-ca. 1895)700 NES Bellacoola NES

361 773 It is very remarkable, that, besides the ancestors of the villages enumerated here, the Bella Coola state that the Sun created a number of men whom he sent down to a mountain on Skeena River, and that they became the ancestors of a part of the Tsimshian. Another group of men was sent down to Dean Inlet, and later on migrated to Bella Coola River. The names of these villages and men are as follows: —

[103]

Villages.	Ancestors.
Nesup'ner (Skeena River)	Tsqa'mem, A'nnk, Ma'ya, and their sister K'ntsqa'k.
Ne'ne (Dean Inlet)	Sisaukan, Ts[illegible]'ents, Sqa'k-pa'ntsis, [illegible].

The full traditions relating to them will be found at the end of this chapter. Each of these ancestors, when sent down to our world, received a salmon-weir, which was placed across the river at the locality where they built their village. I shall now relate a number of traditions of the various villages.

Tsimpsian of Ne'ne.

080 In the beginning our world was dark. At that time Tsimsi'ns descended from heaven, and reached our world on a mountain near the river Wa'k-tempi (Fraser River). Here he built a house, in which he lived in the company of the Raven. The latter had a black canoe which was called "Raven." The two resolved to travel in order to find people. They descended the river until they came to the sea. After some time they reached a house which was covered inside and outside with abalone shells. The totem-post of the house was also covered with shells. It shone like the sun. They saw a canoe on the beach, and this too was completely covered with abalone shells. A chief, whose name was Pelsaxt'ner ("abalone man"), invited them to enter his house. As soon as Tsimsi'ns reached this place, the sun rose. If he had not found the place of the abalone chief, there would be no sun. Tsimsi'ns did not wish to stay. He looked at the house, and saw something turning about on top of it. When they came nearer, he saw that it was a Mink, which was running about on the roof. Many people were inside the house. When Tsimsi'ns approached and saw the beautiful canoe, he wished to have it. He offered the chief their canoe in exchange. This offer was accepted, and Tsimsi'ns travelled on with the abalone chief. The Raven said with the abalone chief. Tsimsi'ns continued his travels, following the course of the sun. First he travelled southward, and came to the post which stands in the west of our world. From here he travelled on, and reached the copper country, which is situated

[pp. 51–113 not processed]

9/Boas E-5 (BBS-ca. 1895)/900 NEA Bellacoola NBS

the middle of the water, the barnacles and worms bit her. She jumped up, and the canoe capsized. The birds swam ashore. After a short time the barnacles and sea-worms came ashore too. They looked very stout, because they had eaten the bear. Then the youth said to the girl, "There are two trails here,—one leading to the left, the other to the right. You follow the one, I will follow the other. If the trails meet, we will marry; if they do not, we have separate forever. They started, and after a while met each other. Then the youth married the girl. (Hook of the Bear, Plate X, Fig. 11.)[1]

VI.

It is necessary to make a few remarks on the relation of the ceremonials of the Bella Coola Indians to their mythology. I have not seen any of their ceremonials, and my descriptions are based on inquiries, and upon the accounts published by Filly and Adrien Jacobsen.

The Bella Coola have two ceremonials,—the sisnu'k and the ts'ists, which correspond to the xat'kwa and the ts'ists'ops of the Kwakiutl. I have described these ceremonials fully in another paper.[2] The sisnu'k ceremonials are mostly dramatic representations illustrating the clan legends, some of which have been recorded in Chap. IV, while the ts'ists ceremonials are dramatic representations of the initiation of members of various clans into certain secret societies. Among them, the Cannibal Society, the Society of the Laughers, and the Society of the Throwers, are the most important. These are called by the Bella Coola the sisnu'k'ais, Olo, and Dō'ds. I described on pp. [illegible] the spirits presiding over the two first-named societies. The information which I obtained on these points is perfectly clear and consistent. I cannot quite reconcile the explanations given by A. and F. Jacobsen to the accounts which I received. It seems that their accounts do not clearly distinguish between the opinions held by various tribes. In the article above referred to, I described fully the opinions held by the Kwakiutl in regard to the origin of their Cannibal Society. They believe that a spirit called Bēēkūnkwa'wat initiates the Cannibals. He is represented as having an enormous black head with dilated nostrils and large mouth. I have made frequent inquiries among the Bella Coola, but received the uniform answer that this being does not initiate their Cannibals. It is not impossible that a few families may have adopted this tradition from the Kwakiutl tribes, but I have not been able to find it among the Bella Coola. Jacobsen maintains that Bēēkūnkwa'wat is the particular spirit of the Cannibal among the Bella Coola, and brings forward the well-known

[1] Additional legends of the Bella Coola have been published in the publications quoted on pp. 41, 42.

[2] General Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. [illegible] tradition of the Ax'k'ists as an explanation of the ceremonial. The only modification which I saw in this tradition is that the Cannibal's wife is described as making out through their sore the brains of children,—an incident which I heard related of the mother of Ax'k'ent'n.[1] He calls him "Beck-Beck-Kwakwak, and in the Bella Coola dialect, Pih-Pih Kwakwaxlen." This word is decidedly of Kwakiutl origin, meaning "the one who eats human flesh at the mouth of the river (or at the north end of the world)." Neither here I have able to find any mask representing this being among the Bella Coola tribe. The masks which they use in connection with the Cannibal ceremony are of quite a different character (Plate XII, Figs. 1-6). I am the more inclined to think that Mr. Jacobsen did not clearly distinguish between the customs and traditions of various tribes, since he introduces "Gaskilla Ko" (Qi'ing'ilak') in the traditions of the Bella Coola, while it is distinctively a legend of the Kwakiutl tribes of the extreme northwest of Vancouver Island. Jacobsen does not distinguish clearly between the sisa'k' and the ki'ut, stating that the ki'ut dances are performed during the sisa'k' in the same way as, among the Kwakiutl, a tai'kos may be celebrated during the tsi'ts'ainga. This may be, but theoretically the two ceremonials must be considered entirely distinct. According to the information which I received, sisa'k' dances may be held in summer, in which case the ki'ut could not possibly form part of the sisa'k' ceremonial. When, on the other hand, the sisa'k' takes place during the ki'ut period, it would naturally be accompanied by ki'ut dances.

As stated below, the sisa'k' is a ceremonial in which the legend of the clan is illustrated by means of dramatic performances. At the same time valuable presents are distributed among the guests who are invited to witness the ceremonial. The value of the gifts amounts often to several thousand dollars. At this time the family legend is told in general outlines, but the details of the legend are kept a secret, and are transmitted only to those who are initiated in the sisa'k' of the clan. It seems that we must consider the transmission of the sisa'k' legend in the following manner: At any given time it is the property of the chief of the family, who, at the time of the celebration, transfers his rights to his successor, generally to his son. The full tradition is kept secret by the owner. It seems that there is a close analogy between the conditions prevailing in the northwest and those found among the southwestern Indians, among whom certain priests are guardians of traditions. Among the tribes of the northwest coast the chief of a family is the guardian and owner of the family tradition, while among the southwestern tribes the priest is the guardian of the traditions belonging to a clan or to a fraternity. My impression is, however, that among the northwestern

[1] Unfortunately the Indian translator for ethnographic linguistic and linguistic, was a man
[2] Ibid., vol. 2, 140

Tillamook E-1 (1886-ca. 1893)/900 NEA Bellacoola NEA

[824] [575] Indians the tradition is considered much more clearly the property of the person who has it in charge than it is among the southwestern Indians. A description of the sisa'k' ceremonial has been given by Jacobsen in the paper above referred to.[1]

[604] [424] A clan legend which is illustrated in the sisa'k' ceremonial is called by the Bella Coola "Semsem" or "Sasi'yems." These traditions are the exclusive property of each clan. The laws according to which they descend from generation to generation differ from the laws prevailing among the other [621] Coast tribes. The inhabitants of each Bella Coola village are not subdivided into clans, gentes, or septs; but each village community forms a unit, and possesses the same tradition. In order to keep the tradition in the tribe, the [614] [424] [582] law requires that no person shall marry outside of his own village community. Thus the clan tradition is kept the exclusive property of the village community by means of endogamy. I have made very careful inquiries in regard to this point, and all the old men make substantially the same statement. Even marriages among near relatives are permitted;[2] and although marriages of people who are distantly related, or not related at all, are preferred, it even happens that cousins marry, or that an uncle marries his niece, in order to keep the clan tradition from being acquired by another village community. It seems, however, that, owing to the influence of the Coast tribes, the endogamic system has begun to give way to an exogamic system. Powerful [622] and wealthy chiefs marry outside of their own village community, in order to secure an additional clan legend through marriage. This new system agrees with the one prevalent among the Kwakiutl tribes.

[575] [604] [796] The hi'nat, as stated before, is a religious ceremony in which all the deities of heaven are personified. The members of various clans are initiated according to their clan traditions; but the same societies and the same deities appear in the traditions of all the various clans. From what little I have been able to learn, it seems that there is an elaborate opening of the whole ceremonial, corresponding to the opening of the ceremonial among the Kwakiutl.[3] I received the following description of the opening ceremony:—

[575] [796] The person who invites to the hi'nat, that is to say, the man whose son is to be initiated into one of the secret societies according to the tradition of his clan, requests a person who is called E'xem to invite the nine brothers and their sister, who reside in the House of Myths, and in whose charge the [796] hi'nat is placed. The names of the brothers are Xemsemsala'xa'la, Xa'mnlwa, Qmq'mnk'lik'a, Q'a'nmlwa, Ainmla'xa'la, A'mnk'lik'a, K'ek'lim, Q'ulnat'wa, A'mnk'; and that of their sister, L'ma'qaxlana (see p. 11). In the rear of the house an elevated room is prepared for E'xem, in which he lies down. He is covered with rings made of red cedar-bark. For four days he stays

[1] Dorsey, Ohio, pp. 1-42.

[2] I have described this fully in the Annual Report of the U. S. National Museum for this, my good.

TyBoas E-5 (1884-ca. 1899)900 NES Bellacoola NES

575
796
[203]

in this room. Then the host sends messengers to invite the people. They take staffs, and tie red cedar-bark round their heads, and go from house to house, singing, "Nayuxdets wa ninnap'ineme' he!" (="I wish to find some one who understands the winter ceremonial.") This they repeat in every house. Then they return to the host's house, who sends them out again, ordering them to sing, "Qaus'ak'ten tsetts wa ninnap'ineme' he!" (="I wish the dancers would wash their hands.") Again they return to his house. They are sent out once more with the message, "Xo'tsak'emdets wa ninnap'ineme' he!" (="I wish the dancers would make their hands tremble.") They return once more to the chief's house, and are sent out again with the message, "Tupunak'tets wa ninnap'ineme' he!" (="I want the dancers to look at their hands.") Now the dancers are ready, and come to the house. Then E'xem arises and dresses. He puts on a head-dress of birds' skins, ornamented with red cedar-bark. He is accompanied by women. Another man, who is called Nuxa'a'ms., adorns himself with red cedar-bark. He carries in his right hand a small baton covered with red cedar-bark. In his left he carries a larger stick, on which he beats time with the small baton. He sits down, and now all the people enter. First of all, E'xem comes in, accompanied by many women. Nuxa'a'ms. begins to sing and to beat time, and E'xem shouts, "Ous!" E'xem walks around the fire, keeping it to his left, and shaking his bark. Before he begins the circuit, he gives four jumps near the door. Four times he goes round the fire, and every time he reaches the door he gives four jumps. As soon as he does so, Nuxa'a'ms. beats time slowly. When E'xem has finished his dance, the people take him to a place near the door, and a woman sings near him. Nuxa'a'ms. and the people join her, then she dances her winter dance. Before she quite finishes, the people make her stop, and another woman begins her dance. Nuxa'a'ms. beats time, and the other people join his song. The people make her stop again. Then a great many people perform their dances. Now E'xem appears again, crying, "Ous!" and Nuxa'a'ms. beats time. Again he jumps four times to the right and four times to the left when reaching the door. After this, two more men and two more women perform their dances. After this has been done twice, E'xem stands near the door, looking upward, and says, "They are very near now." By this time the whole house is full of people. He goes around the house three times, dancing. Then he stays near the door, looking upward, saying all the time, "They are near by." When he reaches the door the fourth time, he cries, "They have arrived! Now they are here, dancing on the roof." E'xem continues to dance in the house, in order to induce them to come down. The first to come down is Xemxemsalt'ea.la, who stops at the rear of the house and sits down. E'xem continues to dance, and the others enter in order. E'xem stands near them and says, "Now I have placed

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 796 them. Let the chief give them red cedar-bark." The people take small pieces of blankets, and sew red cedar-bark on to them in designs corresponding to the paintings on the faces of these deities, and they give these to the deities in order to appease them. Then they throw grease into the fire. During all this time Ê'xêm stands in the rear of the house; and when a painting has been finished, the man who offers it to the deity shouts, "Xêmxêmalâ'ôL.la t'aix·tau'!" ("This is Xêmxêmalâ'ôL.la.") And Ê'xêm sings, "Yayak·lamêts'ek·a wa k'WALTENai'x·AL t'aix· tai'ya; ALT'AL.'ô'mataxstôs nusk·asiôtstai'x· asELkulatôtita'ya." As soon as he has finished his song, a loud noise is heard on the roof, as though a heavy stone were falling down. Ê'xêm arises and performs a dance, while the noise of whistles is heard proceeding from him.

575 I am not familiar with the details of the ceremonial, and shall proceed to record the principal characteristics of the various societies. The Cannibal is initiated in the House of Myths by BA'EXÔL.la. I recorded above (p. 34) how a young man was initiated by this spirit, and how he was returned to his friends. The return of the Cannibal is accompanied by ceremonies similar [184] to those recorded in this tradition. It seems that the ceremonies of the Cannibals of various families are much alike, each having a tradition of its own referring to the initiation. It is believed that all the Cannibals, during their initiation, go up to the sky. I was told that on this journey they have to take human flesh along for food. It is said that in former times the chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and any one who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for BA'EXÔL.la. The offer was accepted, and a [266] payment made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the BA'EXÔL.la order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods.

The spirit appears to the novice while he is in the woods, and takes him up to the House of Myths, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside of the houses. He has lost all his hair except a little in the median line of the head. It is believed that it has been torn off by the strong wind blowing in the higher regions. Some Cannibals do 575 796 not devour human flesh, but tear dogs to pieces or devour raw salmon. The ceremonial consists in pacifying the Cannibal, and exorcising the spirit that possesses him. This is the object of the ka'siut ceremonial. After a Cannibal has returned, the people try to capture him. When he is first heard to approach, the speaker, whose face is painted black, and who wears a cedar-bark ring, and is covered with eagle-down, shouts, "Tix·ma'ts'EN tak·'axta'LIL tsaL'ai'ôts'ai. P'alx·êxtsalstsEnai' tix·ma'ts'EN tasiswalô'LIL t'aL'aiôtst'ai'!" ("Arise, it may be our Cannibal. Awake!") The Cannibal is accompanied by four assistants, who are called ALILpa, and who from time to time utter the cry, "Hoip!" which is intended to pacify the Cannibal. They wear masks (Plate XII, Figs. 4 and 5). The people try to throw a noose over his head; but he throws it off, refusing to be captured. Then the people shout, "Ya'i!" beating time rapidly. The Cannibal tears the ropes that hold him, and disappears. Then the people follow him, and search for him until they find him. As soon as they approach, he attacks them, but gradually he becomes quieter. Then the speaker (Alk°) invites the people to the dancing-house, saying, "Ip'a'nap kukusiau't!" That means, "Dance, dancers!" Now the Cannibal opens the door, accompanied by his assistants. He wears the mask shown in Plate XII, Fig. 3. At once a number of women arise, ready to surround him as soon as he enters the house. They are called Atal'au'ltemx°. The speaker, who holds a staff, arises and shouts, "Ô n ya'li-watimôtx Alqôtayak·ai's!" That means, "Act like a real Cannibal." The Cannibal utters his cry, "Hoaaa, hoaaa, hoaaa!" ending with a long deep growl. He stays in the doorway for a long time. Then he steps into the house, turns his left shoulder outward once, bites one man on the right-hand side of the house, and one on the left-hand side, and then performs his circuit of the fire, leaving the fire to his left. In dancing he holds his fists in front of his chest, one on each side. He moves in a stooping position, raising his feet very high. He dances for four nights, during which time the people try to pacify him by means of songs and dances. After he has first been induced to enter the house, he becomes quieter. Then he tells the people what he has seen during his absence, and the song-leader makes a song on the subject. The women do not learn about the events that took place during his absence until they hear the song. After four days the ceremony of exorcising the S'a'ltpsta (Plate XII, Figs. 6 and 7), the monster that possesses him, is performed. A large dish is ornamented with red cedar-bark; and the assistant of the S'a'ltpsta (Plate XII, Fig. 8), by means of incantations, makes the Cannibal vomit the snake, or the wolf, or the eagle, that possesses him. Then he is seen to carry the head of the animal under his left arm, while the body is seen in the rear, being held by his assistants. Then this animal is seen to vomit flesh and blood into the dish which has been prepared for the purpose. The Cannibal's assistants cover the body of the animal with down, while they cry from time to time, "Hoip!" Then the people beat time very rapidly, and suddenly the S'a'ltpsta has disappeared. The people beat time four times, and after this the Cannibal has become like an ordinary man. He walks around the fire, which he keeps to his right, and says, "Now Ba'gxôlla has left me." The contents of the dish are thrown into the water, but the dish itself is burned in the dancing-house. It is supposed that it is thus conveyed to heaven. After the dish has been burned, the Cannibal does not dance any more. Then a bed is prepared for him in the rear of the house, in which he must stay for four days. After this, he is

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 allowed to re-enter the houses; but before doing so for the first time, he 796 must stop at the door and shout, "Wa, wa, wa!" Then he jumps over the threshold. Accompanied by many men, he is led, after four days more, to the river for final purification. He is pushed into the water, but struggles to free himself. He tries to duck his companions, and utters his cries. Finally he is led back. Then he weeps, because the spirit has left him entirely. The people beat time while he is going back to the house. Then he is offered a piece of salmon, which is placed on his throat, while the people shout, "Hoip, hoip!" The salmon is taken away again, and after some time he is allowed to take one bite. Then he must lie down. After the dancing season is ended, he is again allowed to eat in the same way as other people do. The piece of salmon that was placed on his throat is eaten by children as a protection against sickness. Finally a ceremony is performed which is called "taking the lip of the S'a'i.psta out of the Cannibal's body." While this is being done, the people cry, "Hoip!" Then they throw the lip upon another Cannibal, who at once falls into an ecstasy. Then the shaman takes it back and throws it up towards the sky, where it disappears. The dish and the spoon that the Cannibal used during his ecstasy are destroyed. For four years he must wear a small ring of red cedar-bark, in summer as well as in winter.

The Ölx is also initiated in heaven by the being described before (p. 35). There are different traditions regarding his initiation among different clans. Some Ölx, during their performances, walk ropes which are stretched [534] through the house. When he returns from his initiation, small whistles, called ea.i'laxa, which imitate the voices of eagles, are heard outside of the houses. Then the Ölx enters in a state of ecstasy, scratching the people who assemble to hold him, and tearing their blankets. Finally the people succeed in placing a blanket over his head, and he begins to come to his senses. When he enters the house, the people beat time, then he teaches the chorus-leader a song. The mask worn by the Ölx is quite large, and characterized by a large nose (Plate XII, Fig. 9). He carries a dancing-club (Plate XII, Fig. 10), and rings made of red cedar-bark. He is accompanied by two assistants, who also wear masks.

VII.

121 We will now discuss the probable origin of the mythology described in the preceding pages. In order to do so, it is necessary to make a brief statement in regard to the social organization of the neighboring tribes. In 114 another paper[1] I have fully discussed the considerable amount of borrowing 177 that has taken place among the Coast tribes, and the relation of their

[1] Indianische Sagen von der nord-pacifischen Küste Amerikas, Berlin, 1895, pp. vi + 363.

[112]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

mythologies to those of the interior. It is unnecessary to revert to this subject here. The similarity of the Bella Coola legends to those of the other Coast tribes on the one hand, and to the traditions of the Athapascan tribes on the other, is evident. 114 177

It is, however, important to compare their social organization with that of the neighboring tribes, in order to gain a clearer understanding of the origin of their peculiar organization. As stated before, the Bella Coola are divided into village communities, which are organized on an endogamic basis. Each village community has its tradition, which is represented in certain ceremonies. The supernatural beings which play a part in these traditions are personified by certain dancers. Other Coast tribes have a much more complex organization. The Tlingit and Haida are divided into two clans, each of which is subdivided into a great many families, which, as it would seem, were originally village communities. This opinion is based on the fact that the names of many of the families must be translated as "inhabitants of such and such a place." The two clans are present in all the villages of the tribe, each family belonging to either one clan or the other. The Tsimshian have the same system, except that the number of clans is four instead of two. Each tribe is divided into families, which embrace the inhabitants of a certain region; but all the families of the whole tribe are classified according to the four clans. Among the Haida, Tlingit, and Tsimshian, descent is purely maternal; among the northern Kwakiutl tribes, conditions are somewhat different, according to observations made by Dr. Livingston Farrand. Here we have village communities which are subdivided according to four clans in the same way as those of the Tsimshian, but descent is not purely maternal. There is a strong preponderance of the latter form of descent, but parents are at liberty to place their children in either the paternal or maternal clan. The preponderance of maternal descent is, however, so strong, that from my previous occasional inquiries I drew the inference that descent was purely maternal. 621 171 [196] [176]

Among the southern Kwakiutl tribes the families constituting a village community are subdivided into a number of clans, but each clan is confined to one village. We do not find a limited number of clans pervading the whole tribe, as we do among the northern tribes. An analysis of the social organization of this tribe has shown that the present organization has evidently developed from a previous simpler state, in which the tribe was divided into single village communities. The present more complex organization resulted from the amalgamation of various villages. Owing to the influence of the totemism of the northern tribes, each village community adopted a crest, which in course of time became the totem of the clan.[1] The Kwakiutl have a peculiar organization, which may be considered a transitional stage between

[1] "Social Statistics of the Kwakiutl Indians" (Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, p. 330). [113]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

171 maternal and paternal institutions. Descent is in the paternal line; but a 621 man, at the time of his marriage, receives his father-in-law's crest as a dowry, which he holds in trust for his son, so that actually each individual inherits the crest of his maternal grandfather. The clans are exogamic.

The organization of the Salish tribes of the southern coast, who are linguistically closely related to the Bella Coola, is somewhat similar to that of the Kwakiutl. They are divided into village communities, a few of which have amalgamated, as, for instance, among the Salish tribes of Vancouver Island, among whom the tribe consists of a number of septs, each of which owns a separate village. Here the influence of northern totemism is very much weaker. While most of the village communities have certain crests, these do not play so important a part in the social life of the tribe or in its mythology as they do among the Kwakiutl, and the village communities are not exogamic. The Salish tribes of the interior are organized in very loose village communities without any trace of totem.

The fundamental difference between the northern tribes and the southern tribes consists, therefore, in the fact that the northern tribes have a limited number of clans which are present in all the villages, while among the southern tribes the village community is the only unit of organization.

The organization of the Bella Coola resembles most closely that of the Coast Salish tribes of southern British Columbia. In both cases the tribe is divided into village communities, which possess crests and traditions. This latter feature is, however, very much more strongly developed among the Bella Coola than among the southern tribes. They differ in their laws of intermarriage. While among the southern Coast Salish tribes there is a tendency to exogamy, the Bella Coola have developed a system of endogamy.

The tribes of the Coast Salish of the Gulf of Georgia claim descent from mythical ancestors, who are believed to have originated at the place which the tribe now inhabit. A number of traditions of this kind bear evidence of having been derived from historical events. Some of the tribes in the delta of Fraser River have traditions which refer to the amalgamation of tribes who descended from the mountains, and who are described as the descendants of animals living in the mountains, and of the natives of the delta.[1] I believe 174 that the tribal traditions of the Bella Coola which were told in a previous chapter also bear evidence of the historical fates of the tribe. It is very remarkable that the important tradition of Tötoo'nx gives Fraser River as the place to which he descended from heaven. In another tradition, Bute Inlet is given as the place at which one of the Bella Coola tribes originated. In still another one, Skeena River is mentioned as the home of one of the tribes (see p. 69). I do not doubt that these allusions to territory

[113] [1] Ninth Report of the Committee of the British Association for the Advancement of Science on the North-western Tribes of Canada, 1890, p. 3.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

inhabited by Salish tribes refer to the early separation of the Bella Coola tribe from the related tribes of the Gulf of Georgia, and that in their traditions they have retained the memory of the emigration of part of the tribe from the southern territory. It seems also probable that the allusion to the origin of one family of the tribe on Skeena River refers to a mixture with the tribes inhabiting northern British Columbia. 174

The traditions of the tribes also describe the style of house used by the ancestors of certain village communities; and it is interesting to note that some of these houses correspond to the subterranean lodges that were in use among the Chilcotin, while others correspond to the tents that were in use among the Carriers. It is said that the ancestor of the Nuxalk'ix used the subterranean lodge which is called tsi'pa (see p. 87), while the ancestor of the Nusq!a'lst used the skin lodge which is called sk·ma (see p. 64). 171 174 177 342

Since the Bella Coola retain the fundamental traits of the social organization of their congeners in the south, and since their traditions bear evidence of an emigration from that region, and since, furthermore, the linguistic evidence proves that the Bella Coola and the Coast Salish at one time inhabited contiguous areas on the coast, we are justified in assuming that the general culture of the Bella Coola at the time of their emigration must have resembled that of the Coast Salish. The question then arises, How did the peculiar endogamic system and the remarkable mythology of the Bella Coola originate from the much simpler forms that we find among the Coast Salish? 174

One of the most remarkable features in the inner life of the tribes of the northern coast of British Columbia is the great importance of the clan legend, which is considered one of the most valuable properties of each clan or family. It is carefully guarded in the same way as material property, and an attempt on the part of a person not a member of the clan to tell the tradition as his own is considered one of the gravest offences against property rights. The possession of a clan tradition is felt by the Indian to be one of his most important prerogatives. When, therefore, the Bella Coola settled on Bella Coola River, and were thrown into contact with the northern Coast tribes, the lack of a well-developed clan tradition must have been felt as a serious drawback. The physical appearance of the Bella Coola proves that at one time they must have intermarried to a great extent with the Bella Bella. Through these marriages the peculiar customs of the Coast tribes were first introduced among them. This is shown by the fact that a great many of the mythological names can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin, of which stock the Bella Bella are a branch. Thus the name for their supreme deity, Smai'yakila, is a Kwakiutl word meaning "the one who must be worshipped." The name Ō'mq'ōmkilika is also of Kwakiutl origin, and may be translated as "the wealthiest one." The great frequency of 174 177 424 614 [144] 174 177 776

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

174 words of Kwakiutl derivation will become clear by a glance at the following 177 list, which contains words that can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin:—

176 a'ɛ̄ɛkoula = shaman.

Alk* = speaker.
[195] É'mask'ln (p. 49) (Kwakiutl, Hę'mask'ln) = the greatest chief.
Hau'hau (p. 106) = a fabulous bird.
L'ā'qoag'ila = the copper maker.
L'ā'qumēlks = sister of Masmasolā'nix (the ending, ilx, designates "woman" in Kwakiutl).
Lēqumaii' = mythological name of deer.
Ma'lsk'ilaL.
Mxntsi't (p. 48).
Mta'lina = the country of the salmon (p. 38) (Kwakiutl, mē) = salmon.
No'akila (pp. 49, 66).
O'meatk'as (p. 30) = the real O'mēsL.
O'meat.mai (p. 70).
Omq'ōmk'lik'a (p. 33) (Kwakiutl, Q'ō'mq'ōmkilik a) = the wealthiest one.
Pō'LaS.
Qanāstola'qs (p. 49).
Q'ōmō'qos (p. 32) = the wealthy one.
Q'ō'mqātis (p. 49) = rich at opposite side of river.
Q'ō'mtsiwa (p. 33) = wealthy at mouth of river.
Smai'yakila (p. 29) = the one who must be worshipped.
sl'siut = a fabulous fish or snake (pp. 18, 44, 48).
Smayalō'otla (p. 29).
T'ō'pewas (p. 97) = the fawn.
Winwi'na (p. 38) = war.
Wa'k'itxmai (p. 30) = the greatest river.

174 With these names and customs the clan traditions must have found their 177 way to the Bella Coola, but their social organization differed fundamentally 424 from that of the Bella Bella branch of the Kwakiutl. While the latter, 614 owing to intimate contact with the northern tribes, had adopted the four-clan
[621] system with prevalent maternal descent, the Bella Coola were still distinctly divided into village communities that were not exogamic. It seems very likely that the jealousy with which the ownership of a clan tradition was guarded by the Coast tribes was very early introduced among the Bella Coola. Two means were available for preventing outsiders from acquiring the traditions. Among the Coast tribes with prevailing maternal institutions, among whom a limited number of clans existed, the ordinary law of inheritance was sufficient to retain the tradition inside of the clan. Not so among the Bella Coola.
174 If their organization at an early time was similar to that of the Coast Salish, 182 it is likely that the child was counted as well a member of the father's as 424 of the mother's family, although the young woman generally moved to the 614 village occupied by her husband. If the child belonged to the families of both parents, it had the right to use the tradition of either family; and consequently in the course of a few generations, the traditions acquired by [591] each family would have spread practically over the whole tribe. There were [851] only two methods possible to avoid this result. The one was to prevent marriages outside the village community; and this method would seem to have been most natural for a tribe organized in village communities, members [621] of which were allowed to intermarry. The other method would have been to regulate the laws of inheritance in such a way that the child had to follow either father or mother, but that it had not the right to use the property of both parents. It seems to my mind that the former method was more likely to develop under the existing social conditions, and that to this reason we must ascribe the development of an endogamic system among the Bella Coola. The occurrence of endogamic marriage among this tribe is quite isolated on the Pacific coast. All the other tribes have exogamic institutions, and by this means preserve their property rights. It is interesting to note that the southern Kwakiutl, who originally seem to have been organized in village communities, have adopted exogamic institutions; but there is a notable difference, in the organization of the village community, between the Bella Coola and the Kwakiutl. Among the Bella Coola we generally find four ancestors to each village,—usually three men and one woman. It is true that these are generally called brothers and sister, but they were created independently by Sgnx, and are therefore not necessarily considered as blood relations. Among the Kwakiutl the village community are considered the descendants of one single being; consequently, among the latter tribe they are all relatives, who are forbidden to intermarry; while among the Bella Coola they are not relatives, and may intermarry.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

My inference is, therefore, that the curious social system of the Bella Coola developed through the influence of the customs of the Coast tribes upon the loose social unit of the Salish village community. The possession of clan traditions was felt as a great advantage, and consequently the desire developed to possess clan traditions. These were acquired partly by intermarriage with the Coast tribes, as is shown by the fact that many of these traditions are borrowed from these tribes, partly by independent invention. The desire to guard the traditions which were once acquired led to the development of endogamic institutions, in order to prevent the spread of the traditions over the whole tribe.

The jealousy with which the traditions are guarded has had the effect of making each family try to prevent other families from knowing its own clan tradition. For this reason the clan traditions of the whole tribe are remarkably inconsistent. We find, for instance, that the well-known raven legend of the northern Coast tribes has been utilized by many families as a family tradition. But while one family uses one part of the tradition, other families use other parts of the same tradition. Thus it happens that among the Bella Coola we find the most contradictory myths in regard to important events in the world's history. Some families maintain that the Raven liberated the sun, while, according to another one, the Mink was essential in bringing about the present state of affairs. Still others say that Totoso'nx, during his travels, caused the sun to appear. The discrepancies in the traditions referring to the visit of the Mink and Wasp to their father, the Sun, are also very remarkable. Although a considerable amount of 174 contradiction is inherent in all the mythologies of the North Pacific coast, 424 they nowhere reach such a degree as among the Bella Coola; and I presume 614 the fact that the traditions are kept secret by the various families accounts for this curious condition.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The prayers of the Bella Coola directed to SEBX or Ta'ata bear a 171 remarkable resemblance to the prayers of the Tsimshian addressed to Laxha, 782 the sky. In both tribes we find the idea that when the Sun wipes his face it will be clear weather, and man will be happy; consequently the prayer to [821] the deity "to wipe his face" occurs quite often.

One of the most important customs that the Bella Coola borrowed from 177 the Coast tribes is the kē'siut ceremonial, with which are connected the various secret societies, particularly the custom of ceremonial cannibalism.
575 The ceremonies and the paraphernalia used by the Bella Coola and by the 773 Kwakiutl are practically identical. I told above (p. 34) the legend explaining the origin of cannibalism. Among the Bella Bella and Kwakiutl, another 796 tradition is told to explain the origin of this custom. The tradition tells of a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsl'waē, who lives in the forest, and who initiates the members of the Cannibal Society. The series of traditions clustering around this being differ fundamentally from those referring to the Cannibal Society of the Bella Coola. The custom has also spread to the Tsimshian, who say that the secret societies were introduced by a hunter who was taken into the inside of a cliff by a white bear. Inside he saw a house, in which the various societies were performing their ceremonies. It appears, therefore, that the same ritual which is practised by three distinct tribes is explained by three fundamentally distinct myths; and we must conclude that in this case the ritual is older than the myth,—that the latter has been invented in order to explain customs that were borrowed from foreign tribes, so that the ritual is the primary phenomenon, while the myth is secondary.[1]

These considerations explain some of the psychological motives for the 174 development of certain traditions and myths, as well as the curious incon-773 sistency of the clan traditions of the Bella Coola. They do not, however, explain the most fundamental characteristic of the traditions of the tribe. I pointed out in the third chapter of this paper, that, notwithstanding the numerous contradictions contained in family legends, the conception of the word and the functions of the various deities are so well defined that we must consider the mythology of this tribe vastly superior to that of the neighboring tribes. While the latter believe in a great many spirits which are not co-ordinated, we have here a system of deities. The existence of a systematic mythology among the Bella Coola proves that under favorable conditions the advance from the lower forms of beliefs to higher forms may be a very rapid one.

[113]

[1] See Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 646 ff.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Our analysis shows that this system cannot be considered as an importation, but that it probably developed among the Bella Coola themselves. After they removed to their new home, a mass of foreign ideas had come into their possession through contact with their new neighbors. While these new ideas were being remodelled and assimilated, they stimulated the minds of the people, or of a few members of the tribe, who were thus led to the formation of an elaborate concept of the world. The concept which they have developed agrees in all its main features with those created by men of other zones and of other races. The mind of the Bella Coola philosopher, operating with the class of knowledge common to the earlier strata of culture, has reached conclusions similar to those that have been formed by man the world over, when operating with the same class of knowledge. On the other hand, the Bella Coola has also adopted ready-made the thoughts of his neighbors, and has adapted them to his environment. These two results of our inquiry emphasize the close relation between the comparative and the historic methods of ethnology, which are so often held to be antagonistic. Each is a check upon rash conclusions that might be attained by the application of one alone. It is just as uncritical to see, in an analogy of a single trait of culture that occurs in two distinct regions, undoubted proof of early historical connection as to reject the possibility of such connection, because sometimes the same ideas develop independently in the human mind. Ethnology is rapidly outgrowing the tendency to accept imperfect evidence as proof of historical connection; but the comparative ethnologist is hardly beginning to see that he has no right to scoff at the historical method. Our inquiry shows that safe conclusions can be derived only by a careful analysis of the whole culture. The growth of the myths of the Bella Coola can be understood only when we consider the culture of the tribe as a whole. And so it is with other phenomena. All traits of culture can be fully understood only in connection with the whole culture of a tribe. When we confine ourselves to comparing isolated traits of culture, we open the door to misinterpretations without number.

If, then, the demand is made for a more critical method in the comparative study of ethnology than it has generally been accorded, it does not imply a depreciation of the results of the method. When the human mind evolves an idea, or when it borrows the same idea, we may assume that it has been evolved or accepted because it conforms with the organization of the human mind; else it would not be evolved or accepted. The wider the distribution of an idea, original or borrowed, the closer must be its conformity with the laws governing the activities of the human mind. Historical analysis will furnish the data referring to the growth of ideas among different people; and comparisons of the processes of their growth will give us knowledge of the laws which govern the evolution and selection of ideas.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE VII.

Cross-hatchings indicate black; vertical hatchings, red; horizontal, blue; diagonal, green; dots, orange; white, natural color of wood.

532
776

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Sisa (front and profile). Natural color, nostrils red, eyebrows black. Height, 29 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Ala'uatl'a (front and profile). Natural color, nostrils red, eyebrows black. Height, 30 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing the Singer of the House of Myths. Blue, red, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Sudala'ala'k'a (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing K'u'ts'ek'ul'a (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing Sis'ek'ul'a (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 31 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 7.—Double mask representing Nuxul'aeq'ala (opened, closed, and profile of inner mask). Inner face, red, blue, and black; inner side of wings, black and red; outer face, black, red, blue. Height, 14 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing Sunl'ala'ala Ala'uatl'a (the deer). Nostrils and mouth, red; forehead and eye region, blue; eyebrows, eyes, nose, black; rest, natural color. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing Sulaua'ua. Natural color, black, spots blue, lines red. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 10.—Mask representing Ala'ulil'aua (front and profile). Black, blue, red. Height, 10½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 11.—Mask representing Ala'ulil'aua (front and profile). Red, green, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 12.—Mask representing S'ualu.s'uala'k. Natural color, black, orange. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 13.—Mask representing S'ualu.s'uala'k. Blue, black, red, natural color. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

[Facing End Plate VII]

[End Plates I-VI not processed]

532
776

Masks of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate VII.]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NES Bellacoola NES

EXPLANATION OF PLATE VIII.

532
776

All Crooked-beak colours black, central feathers red, terminals blue; white, natural color of wood.

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Mas-ap'ēmēk (profile and front). Black, red, blue. Height, 18 inches. Cat. No. 1185.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Yels'ēmēk, and details of ornaments attached to head-ring. Black, red, blue. Height, 31 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing Mas'ap'ēmēk. Black, red, blue. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 1186.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Ts'ēs'ēnk. Black, red, blue. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. 1188.

[Facing End Plate VIII]

532
716

Masks of the Haida Crests Indians.

[End Plate VIII]

7:Bms E-5 (1884-ca. 1890)1900 NES Bellacoola NES

EXPLANATION OF PLATE IX.

All Cowichan tableau black; vertical feathers, red; white, natural color of wood.

512
776

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Xwexwmilt'ela (front and profile). Design: full moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 13½ inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Xd'mwiwa (front and profile). Design: full moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 3.—Mask representing Ôwq'tsuki'lik'a (front and profile). Design: half-moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Q'ô'mwiwa (front and profile). Design: half-moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Al'mwki'lik'a (front and profile). Design: sun. Natural color, black, red. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 6.—Mask representing K'ô'lim, wearing a ring of red cedar-bark (front and profile). Design: rainbow. Natural color, black, red. Height, 14 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 7.—Mask representing Q'ôwsd'wa (front and profile). Design: salmon-berry blossom. Natural color, black, red. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 8.—Mask representing À'Vmlâ' (the kingfisher). Wings or sides of head, tail over the forehead. Natural color, black. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

Fig. 9.—Mask representing c'lmô'qyilchen, wearing a ring of red and white cedar-bark (front and profile). Design: grouse-blinker. Natural color, black, red. Height, 14½ inches. Cat. No. 1[illegible].

[Facing End Plate IX]

7:Boas E-5 (1886--ca. 1896)900 NEB Bellacoola NEB

530
776

Masks of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate IX]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NEA Bellacoola NEA

EXPLANATION OF PLATE X.

∴ Cross-hatchers indicate black; vertical hatchers, red; diagonal, green; white, natural color of wood, except in cases where the whole mask is black.

530
T76

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Nayamiyo'mais. Black, red; ornamented with red cedar-bark. Height, 16 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing the Bear of Heaven. Green, black, red. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing Ash'a'Lomm (front and profile). Natural color, red, black, green. Height, 8 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Aiq'ne'yomem (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Aiq'ne'yomem (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing Aiq'ne'yomem (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 7.—Mask representing Nomi'omp, before the birth of the flowers (front and profile). Greenish with faint reddish spots, black. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing the shaman of Nomi'omp (front and profile). Black, white streaks under eyes. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing Nomi'omp, after the birth of the flowers (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 10.—Mask representing A'ne'Ka'Ge (the moon). Natural color, black. Height, 18 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 11.—Mask representing attendant of Nomi'omp (front and profile). Natural color, red, black. Height, 11½ inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 12.—Mask representing the Black Bear. Natural color, green, red, black. Length, 13 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

[facing End Plate X]

[End Plate X]

EXPLANATION OF PLATE XI.

(1) Cross-hatchings indicate black; vertical hatchings red; horizontal lines, blue; dots, orange; white, natural color of bone except in case where the whole head is black.

532
796

Fig. 1.—Mask representing the thunder-bird (front and profile). Black, red. Height, 17½ inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Kwakil'usam (front and profile). Ornamented with red cedar-bark. Orange, blue. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 3.—Mask representing the rabbit. Set with mountain-goat skin. Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 4.—Mask representing the owl. Black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 5.—Mask representing t'ā'yam (the mountain). Natural color, black. Height, 14½ inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 6.—Mask representing the raindrop. On top of the mask is a long switch set with feathers, only the lower part of which is shown. Natural color, black. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

[796] Fig. 7.—Bird-shaped implement worn by a companion of the thunder-bird. It is filled with eagle-down. During the dance it is shaken, and the down flies out of the holes in the lower part of the implement and from the back. Length, 18 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 8.—Mask representing the sea-monster Q'ā'ts'ts. Red, blue, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 9.—Mask representing the spirit xwalā'k. Black, orange, set with bear-skin. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

Fig. 10.—Mask representing the hermaphrodite (front and profile). Natural color, red, black. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. 18[illegible].

[facing End Plate XI]

592
776

Masks and Carving of the Haida Canoe Indians.

[End Plate XI]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NES Bellacoola NES

EXPLANATION OF PLATE XII.

Contributors indicate black; vertical lachrymal, red; horizontal, blue; white, natural color of wood.

532
776

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Anutlkun'a'x (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Anutlkun'a'x (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 3.—Mask worn by the Cannibal dancer (front and profile). Natural color, black, red. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 4.—Mask worn by the assistant of the Cannibal dancer. Blue, red, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 5.—Mask worn by the assistant of the Cannibal dancer (front and profile). Blue, red, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 6.—Carving representing the S'k'qana in the shape of an eagle. Red. Length, 11 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 7.—Carving representing the S'k'qana in the shape of a wolf. Red, black. Length, 12 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 8.—Mask worn by the assistant of the S'k'qana (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 8 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 9.—Mask worn by the Ōts (front and profile). Red, blue, black. Height, 14½ inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

Fig. 10.—Club carried by the Ōts. Red, blue, black. Length of head, 7 inches. Cat. No. [illegible].

[facing End Plate XII]

532
T16

Masks and Carvings of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate XII]

[End Plates XIII - XXVII not processed]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

BOARD OF REGENTS

OF THE

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,

SHOWING

THE OPERATIONS, EXPENDITURES, AND CONDITION OF THE INSTITUTION

FOR THE

YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1895.

REPORT

OF THE

U. S. NATIONAL MUSEUM.

[title page]

WASHINGTON: GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1897.

DDD One of them must wash his body, one must wash his head, and the two others hold him. In return they receive one or two blankets each. During this ceremony the quqq'ö'lEñ, who are described as wild men, dance around the novice. They have ropes tied around their waists, and are held by other members of the society by these ropes. Then the xEnxanl'tEl lead the novice into the woods, where he remains for a long time, until he meets the spirit that initiates him. It seems that during this time he is secretly led to the house in which the xEnxanl'tEl continue to celebrate festivals at the expense of the novice's father, and there he is taught the secrets of the society. During this time, until the return of the novice from the woods, the house is tabooed. A watchman is stationed at the entrance, who keeps out uninitiated persons. During the absence of the novice, his mother prepares cedar bark ornaments and weaves mountain goat blankets for his use. One afternoon he returns, and then his father gives a feast to let the people know that his child has returned. The latter performs his first dance, in which he uses masks and cedar bark ornaments. This dance is called nuxnEä'mEñ. On this day the father must distribute a great number of blankets among the xEnxanl'tEl. The initiated are permitted to take part in the feast, and sit on one side of the house. The new member spends all his nights in the woods, where he bathes. In the spring the new member, if a man, is thrown into the sea, and after that is free from all regulations attending the initiation. One of the principal regulations regarding novices of the xEnxanl'tEl is that they must return from the woods in the direction in which the sun is moving, starting so that the sun is at their backs. Therefore they must sometimes go in roundabout ways. They must go backward through doors, which are sLä'lEqam (supernatural) against them. Frequently the siö'ua (a female shaman) is called to bespeak the door in their behalf before they pass through it. Before their dance the siö'ua must also address the earth, as it is supposed that else it might open and swallow up the dancer. It is also sLä'lEqam against the novice. The expression used is that the earth would "open its eyes" (k'u'nalasEn); that means, swallow the novice. In order to avert this danger, the siö'ua must "give a name to the earth," and strew red paint and feathers over the place where the novice is to dance.

THE BI'LXULA.

121 The social organization, festivals, and secret societies of the Bi'lxula 171 are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the sisax'k·, and the kö'siut. The sisan'k· corresponds to the Lsö'laxa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the kö'siut to the 556 ts'ö'ts'ö'qa. The Bi'lxula believe that the potlatch has been insti-773 tuted by ten deities, nine brothers and one sister, the foremost among 776 whom is Xö'mtsica, to whose care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful house in the far east, and cries "ö, ö,"

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

every morning when the sun rises. He takes care that he rises properly. The first six of these deities are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the kū'siut these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks. Xē'mtsioa and Xēmxēmalà'oLa wear the design of the full moon, indicated on the mask of Xē'mtsioa by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Xēmxēmalà'oLa has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Aiumkī'lik·a and Aiumalà'oLa wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second masks. The fifth Q'ōmq'ōmkī'lik·a and Q'ō'mtsioa have designs representing stars, both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Qula'xawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The next in order, Kulō'lias (who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, At'amā'k, wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called L'ētsā'aplēLāna (the eater), the sister of the others. Her face is painted with the design of a bladder filled with grease. She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

556
773
776
532
575
776

The sisau'k·, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of the clans, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the sisau'k· and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned, he asked the people to clean their houses and to strew them with clean sand before he consented to enter. Then he danced the sisau'k· and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the sisau'k·. Besides this, it is stated that the raven gave each clan its secrets. Each clan has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the sisau'k· only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are the sacred possessions of each clan. All clans, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent. Every time the sacred objects of a clan are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various clans, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual—that is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the clan to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisau'k·. A person can not take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'ēlu'sta, the Indian, to whom I

575
773
776
796
614
424
532
[592]
[534]
424
532
556
614
[567]
[848]
[115]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 owe my information regarding the clans, and who is a member of the 532 gens Ialô'stimôt of the Taliô'mx·, stated that he had received the raven 614 when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received [115] the eagle. He hoped that his mother would give him the whale at his [556] next potlatch, and would at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his own children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new 424 secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a kû'siut 551 name, which remains through life, and a Xê'mtsioa name, which is 556 changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'ɛlu'sta's (which is his kû'siut 575 name) Xê'mtsioa name was AL'ILEMNE'lus'aix·, but at his next pot-
614 latch he intended to take the name of Kalîn'kis. These names are also the property of the various clans, each clan having its own names. When a man possesses several sisau'k· secrets, he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their sisau'k· secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of her clan. When a person grows old, he gives away all his sisau'k· secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more.
[426] The crest and the sisau'k· carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular clan.

426 The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl.
556 The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die, the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die, his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so, he had to name the price which he was going to pay the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

575 The kû'siut is presided over by a female spirit, called Anañlikuts'- 773 ai'x·. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from 776 February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to 535 have been the first to find her. Anañlikuts'ai'x· invited her into her cave and taught her the secrets of the kû'siut. She wore ornaments of red cedar bark around her head, waist, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair strewn with eagle down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kū'siut. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kū'siut." 575 773 776 535

8;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the kū'siut. When a man has seen Anaūlikuta'al'x· sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kū'siut. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kū'siut lasts three days. 575 776 535

The various dances performed by members of the kū'siut are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisau'k· dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kū'siut is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kū'siut name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'akō'oL. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisau'k·, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kū'siut have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the ƛaxō'ʟa (the hā'mata'a of the Kwakiutl), the ō'lƛx (the nū'ʟmaʟ of the Kwakiutl), and the dā'tia (the nō'ntsistalaʟ of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kū'siut novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation. 535 575 614 575 [426] [551] [428] [556] [171] [554]

When the ƛaxō'ʟa is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the ƛaxō'ʟa. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ƛaxō'ʟa order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears 575 785 787 [266]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [152] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [774] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [756] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ELAXŌ'LA dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large [292] head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark.
[301] Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the S'Ā'LPSTA (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of BaxbakuālanuXsl'waē of the Kwakiutl. Some ELAXŌ'LA do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and [266] devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The ELAXŌ'LA has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his [525] initiation he must not [834] gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 200.
MASK OF THE S'Ā'LPSTA.
Bi'lxula.
Cat. No. 19509, U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The ō'lEX (the laugher) and the dā'tia (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The ō'lEX "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The dā'tia carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The ō'lEX and the dā'tia, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the kū'sint, for instance, when 688 the ELAXŌ'LA gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in [592] council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 575 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the sub-688 stitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted 754 to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-756 ease into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way.
The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

8;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575
688
754
756
575
532
796

the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender, he will fall sick. Blood is believed to collect in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the kū'siut are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklace of red cedar bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others, the thunder bird and his servant, ALxulā'tENum (who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and carries a staff with red and blue spiral lines), appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Xē'mtsioa and his brothers and his sisters; Masmasalā'nix and his fellows, the raven and the nuxē'mta, and many others.[1]

Fig. 201.
HEADDRESS OF ŌLALA'.
Haida.
Cat. No. [illegible], U. S. N. M. Collected by J. G. Swan.

000

THE TSIMSHIAN, NĪSQA', HAIDA, AND TLINGIT.

The tribes of this group learned the ceremonial avowedly from the Hē'iltsuq. Although I have not witnessed any part of their ceremonials, the descriptions which I received bring out with sufficient clearness its similarities to the winter ceremonial of the Kwakiutl. The ceremonials seem to be almost identical among all these tribes. It is most complete among the southwestern Tsimshian tribes, particularly the G·itxā'La, but has been adopted by all the tribes of the coast. It is said that it reached the Haida not more than a hundred years ago.

I will tell here what I learned from the Nisqa'. They have six societies, which rank in the following order: The sEmhalai't, mēiLa', lōLE'm, ōlala', nanēstā't, hōnana'L, the last being the highest. The sEmhalai't is really not confined to the winter ceremonial, but is obtained when a person acquires the first guardian spirit of his clan and performs the ceremony belonging to this event. The tradition of the origin of these ceremonies localizes the events at Bellabella, and it

[1] See "Indianische Sagen von der Nord-Pacifischen Küste Amerikas," page 241, by F. Boas.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PREFACE

THE term Bella Coola can be applied to the Indians who formerly occupied more than twenty villages on the lower Bella Coola River in central British Columbia, to their near kinsfolk on the Kimsquit River, and to those living at the head of South Bentinck Arm. Disease and changed conditions consequent upon the coming of the white man have so reduced their numbers that the last two groups of settlements have been virtually abandoned, while only one village remains in the Bella Coola valley. This is located on a reserve near the mouth of the river, and its four hundred inhabitants comprise practically all the survivors of what was once a tribe of several thousand people, with a distinctive language and culture of their own.

The material contained in this monograph was collected in this one village many years ago for the National Museum of Canada.[1] I was in the field during two periods that extended from March to August, 1922, and from September, 1923, to February, 1924. My field notes were worked up and the completed manuscript submitted to the Museum in 1926. Since that time it has suffered various vicissitudes. Recommended for publication by the Chief of the Anthropological Division, it passed through the hands of various editors; questions were raised about its size and the suitability of detailed studies of social anthropology in a government publication, and by the time these matters were adjusted, funds for extensive publications were unavailable and the manuscript was put aside. Since the aim of the investigation was to record, as far as possible, the sum-total of the complex and interwoven social life of the Bella Coola, I did not think it desirable to prepare short articles[2] summarizing different aspects, preferring to await an

[1] Then the Victoria Memorial Museum.

[2] The only exception was a short article on Bella Coola supernatural animals published in the Ontario Annual Archaeological Report for 1924-25, pp. 17-27.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

128 opportunity for the publication of the manuscript as a whole. I am deeply grateful to the Canadian Social Science Research [121] Council for making this possible, and to their anonymous readers, many of whose suggestions I have utilized in the final draft, and to the University of Toronto Press for their subsidization.

Though the lapse of time between the field investigation and the appearance in print of the results is unfortunate, it is a matter of less importance than would be the case in other branches of science. To the student of social institutions, the significant fact is that a certain group of homo sapiens has practised certain customs, whether in 1922 or 1948 is imma- [121] terial. Furthermore, the aim of the investigation was to collect information on Bella Coola life as it was before the breakdown of their own culture, and for this, data collected between 1922 and 1924 are more valuable than those acquired today. The manuscript was prepared from my extensive field notes, when the material was still fresh in my mind, and, with the exception of this preface and a few minor changes in editing,[1] is presented as it was written in 1924-26.

121 When studying the Bella Coola, I was definitely under the influence of the English school of anthropologists. To Haddon, Rivers, and Seligman, to name the outstanding English field anthropologists of their generation, the study of a native tribe meant an expedition to some far-off corner of the world, to a people about whom little was known. A return visit was improbable; aboriginal customs were passing away, hence it was the duty of the field investigator to learn and to record every scrap of information. I remember Dr. Haddon's insistence that it might be some trivial detail which would throw light on culture distribution, and hence, perhaps, aid in the reconstruction of tribal or racial movements, or in theoretical studies of the development or degeneration of institutions. Characteristic of this school, too, was an intense human interest in field work. To overcome the difficulties of language, of suspicion, and of native reticence was a task in itself. And only when this was accomplished and the investigator recognized as a friend, could the information be obtained upon which the investigator was to describe "his people." As a broad generalization, the attitude of American anthropologists to field work in America is very different. Indians live near at hand; well-educated interpreters and informants are usually available; there is no thought of gleaning information from suspicious natives at the ends of the earth; and, perhaps most important of all, so much of Indian life has disappeared that the American anthropologist must learn by interview and question, rather than by observation and participation. The American school has tended to return repeatedly, often for short periods, to a small group or even to a single informant, and to publish intensive studies of aspects of culture with which the investigator is concerned.

[1]Especially in changing the number of years which has elapsed since various incidents took place.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE4 Bellacoola NE4

121 ●

Both approaches have their advantages. Anthropologically, using that term in its broadest sense, American Indians are better known than the natives of other continents; the professional anthropologist knows where to find detailed studies in technical journals and government publications, and to combine them if he wishes to know the life of a people as a whole. But to the anthropologist who is not a specialist in America, as well as to scholars in other social sciences, this lack of synthesis is a definite deterrent, and it may well be asked whether the anthropologist has played his part in making known the results of his branch to workers in cognate fields. It was this which led R. H. Lowie to publish his Crow Indians,[4] and though the author reiterates that the volume contains little that he had not made known in earlier writings[5] in anthropological journals, it is safe to say that the Crow Indians will be read, quoted, and used when other reports on which it is based have been forgotten.

121
128

[4]New York: 1935.
[5]Id., p. xi.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

121 If I were to investigate and report on the Bella Coola at 128 the present time, I would undoubtedly be influenced by many years of contact with American anthropologists and their work. I would assume a greater knowledge of North-West coast institutions, less interest in the details of ceremonial rites, and it would be impossible not to avoid comparisons with, and observations upon, the theoretical implications of many of the facts recorded. But though every field investigator is strictly objective as to the facts he collects, yet his interests, and his method of presenting them, are coloured by his background; in my case, by the older school of English anthropology. On the whole, I think this is fortunate. It means that the Bella Coola are portrayed as I saw them when I came fresh to a new field, practically uninfluenced by problems of North-West coast culture, and fully prepared to throw myself into their life. They were "my people," not a group in which I was interested because they had, or had not, certain culture traits with which I was concerned. In the course of my teaching experience, furthermore, I have wished repeatedly to give serious students detailed field monographs in which are recorded the interwoven social, religious, and folk-lore concepts of a people, the sum-total of their mental life, collected by one man at one time. This I have tried to do for the Bella Coola.

123 Following the English tradition, I wish to record how this material was collected. Before leaving for British Columbia, [115] I was advised by the late H. I. Smith, who had worked in the area, to talk to Joshua Moody (see Plate 2), an elderly Bella Coola Indian with whom Smith had worked. On explaining to Joshua that I had come to record in permanent form the traditions and lore of his people, Joshua grinned broadly and promised his help. Unfortunately, he spoke only a few words of English. I tried interpreter after interpreter, Indian and white, with only fair success, and my difficulties increased with the [464] opening of the canning season and the consequent employment of the younger men and women. I was urged to learn the [122] Chinook jargon, which serves widely as a lingua franca on the [198]

CHAPTER IV

GAMES

517 THE subject of games, lying on the border-line of social 18.1 customs, was one which was not fully investigated. The [177] Bella Coola, like all other peoples, have a number of sports and pastimes and although the old diversions are being forgotten by the younger people, many of the old men and women are familiar with those played in their youth. As isolated customs these may be of small value, but games of all kinds often preserve ancient practices and, as providing useful clues to the spread of peoples or of culture, are worthy of investigation. Unfortunately, lack of time made it impossible to give the subject the attention it deserved, and the few games here described must not be considered an exhaustive treatment of the subject.

526 Though less fond of competitive sports than the Indians
[171] of the Plains, the Bella Coola enjoy canoe-racing and wrestling.
[628] The former appears to have been an ancient diversion; picked crews from different villages competed amid the encouraging shouts of their fellows, and even now the younger men are anxious to display their skill in this respect. Wrestling, which [177] used to be common during all non-sacred gatherings, has almost entirely disappeared since the prohibition of the potlatch.

538 The favourite sedentary pastime, enjoyed equally by young [517] and old, is the telling of stories. Those of a sacred nature, especially ancestral myths, are reserved of course for cere-
[825] monial occasions, but the older men and women remember many tales describing the exploits of birds and animals which are recounted again and again to the enjoyment of the listeners, although they may have heard the same recital fifty times. Children enjoy the companionship of some old story-teller and it is a common sight to see an old man or woman, surrounded by an eager group, explaining once more how Raven outwitted [867] his rivals or was himself led into difficulties. Many of these stories are somewhat indecent; others appear brutally frank,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features connected therewith have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, cpaiq, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, ddu'a", are brought out from the boxes where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle (lima.) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping.

[226] [221] [232] [462] [286] [386]

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, so two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present degenerate days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a skllay. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, so the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, alkdjalos, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nudjiqosta, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third man begins to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, lxwema. The fishermen relieve one another intermittently until the top of the pole has been driven down to within

226 [476] [423] [178] [412]

APPENDIX B

STRING FIGURES

THE only form of pastime which it was practical to investigate in any detail was the construction of string figures. These seem to have no ceremonial or religious significance; they are made for recreation only, and it was found easy to learn a number while paving the way for other kinds of research. In fact, interest in them was one of the ways in which the writer became friends with a number of Bella Coola. As is to be expected, some individuals are more proficient in constructing complicated string figures than others, the old women being particularly adept. During the long delays which occur in all the dances it is a common sight to see an old crone teaching a group of young girls the figures which she herself learnt when young. Some men remember a number from childhood, but the making of designs with string is regarded as more fitting for girls and women. Songs accompany many of the figures, and the singing of these is considered an essential part of the construction. It was evident that many more figures were known long ago; in fact, several of those here recorded were only obtained after repeated efforts on the part of an old woman to reconstruct those which she had been shown when a child. No attempt was made to learn all the Bella Coola figures; a larger number could doubtless have been collected, but those here described are the ones most commonly made.

The nomenclature used is that described by Miss Haddon,[1] in itself following the method used by Rivers and Haddon. It is assumed that the reader is familiar with this, including the meaning of the terms, "Opening A," "Position 1," and "Navaho." A string about four feet long will be found most convenient for making the Bella Coola figures.

1. A SALMON-TRAP

Double the loop; two strands now take the place of the usual one, but these will be referred to as a single string or loop. The figure can be made equally well with a string one-half the usual length.

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb and index finger and the right hand.

With right index finger hook down the string passing dorsally across left thumb and index finger and draw out to right, allowing right hand loop to slip over this hooked-down string.

[1] K. Haddon, Cat's Cradle from Many Lands (London, 1911).

S. Smith - E-9 (1919-1923) 1925
NBS Bellacoola NBS

are apparently more recent comers to the coast than their neighbors and have not fully adopted the coast culture.

The following examples of sympathetic magic and witchcraft, collected during 1920 to 1923 among the Bellacoola, illustrate the extent of their belief in this direction.

Most of this information was given me by the late Captain Schooner, born about 1840, and Joshua Woody, born about 1846; both apparently full-blood Bellacoola Indians. Neither of them spoke English and both gave me the data in Chinook jargon, which I have endeavored to interpret and arrange in logical order, but have tried to render in as nearly as possible the Indian mode of thought, feeling and expression. Schooner was a proper gentleman. Joshua has great knowledge of plants and animals, and is a Bellacoola scientist, but his great ambition and jealousy, combined with his disloyalty in giving up his own people's customs and adopting a very thin veneer of Christianity, color his statements relating to beliefs, although his plant and animal data have always withstood cross examination and comparison with the data supplied by other Indians. Mr. Davis and Mrs. Willie Mack told of the trail. They do not talk English and spoke to me in Chinook jargon. Only the accounts about the grizzly bear skin and the bracelet of beaver skin, which were given me by Mrs. Stanniger, were told in English.

The material was not given as accounts of magic or witchcraft, but rather as part of the data regarding the properties of plants and animals of which I was endeavoring to collect as complete information as possible.

Joshua, who is even younger than Captain Schooner, remembers the time when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in the Bella Coola valley, and when they saw only one other white man every year or two. Consequently these men remember the old Bellacoola beliefs before they were much, if at all, affected by European ideas.

It will be noticed that magic among the Bellacoola is considered of use both for beneficial and injurious purposes, and that the materials giving effect to it are of both plant and animal origin.

Nat. Museum II-5 (1928-1932)1929 NGA Ballantyne NGA
CATTLE NGA
TUMMEKEN NGA
SCANA, NGA

67

NATURAL HISTORY OF THE BELLA COOLA AND NEIGHBORING TRIBES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

By Harlan I. Smith

INTRODUCTION

The paper describes the natural media of the tribes of British Columbia, the Bella Coola of Bella Coola valley, the Kitlat of Dean River, the Carrier who live in the country inland both of these tribes, and the Shuswap of the headwaters of Dean River. Among the Bella Coola the envelopes are largely family possessions known to a few individuals only, so that one family may have different months for the same specific complaint, but this is not the case among the other tribes. Knowledge of medical practice does largely into the treatment of disease, but no attempt is made to discuss it in this report. It was impossible for the Indians to diagnose many of their maladies, so that the identifications given here are in many cases problematical.

Most of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1906-07 by Julius Moody, apparently a full-blood Bella Coola Indian, born about 1848. He is the last man living to give the days in Chinook jargon, which has been memorized and arranged in local order. Julius is an Indian possessed with great knowledge of the local plants and animals. He remembers when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in Bella Coola valley, and when the inhabitants were only one other white man every year or two. Consequently he was could the old Bella Coola material either before it was much affected by European ideas.

Some of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1906-07 by the late Captain Johnson, also apparently a full-blood, very aged man, who used the Chinook jargon. Mr. Peter Stevens Clayton, Louis Hall, and other Bella Coola Indians furnish gave information and corroboration.

Most of the information relating to the Northern Carrier Indians of Cheslatta Lake comes during September from Charlie Weh, also known as Charlie or Hanlonn Charlie, a native of that place, born about 1871. Charlie uses the peculiar form of broken or pidgin English commonly employed for communication between the whites and the Carrier and Chilcotin Indians of this region.

The information about the Sikani and the Northern Carrier of Sagadoque is from step but more fully supplied by Mr. D. Jenness.

The information relating to the Chilcotin was secured in Victoria from the late John Pierre and Alexander Pierre of Stwecqen, Lake Pierre and Job Robinson of Hanceton, with additions and corroboration from a few others, all the Chilcotin Indians, apparently full-blood. The information was secured mostly in English, although Alexander Pierre used also the Chinook jargon.

The method the writer employed was to submit questions of the chiefs to the informants and question them concerning all their uses. All the information thus obtained only the medicinal recipes has been recorded here. The plants were last checked by Mr. M. O. Malte, of the National Museum, Ottawa.

I.

[105] The Bella Coola are a small tribe inhabiting the coast of Dean Inlet and Bentinck Arm, two long and narrow fiords situated in about latitude 52° north, in British Columbia. Their habitat extends along Bella Coola River, which empties into North Bentinck Arm. The name "Bella Coola" is a corruption of the word "Bilxula," by which name the tribe is known to the Kwakiutl. There is no term in their own language embracing all the tribes speaking the Bella Coola language. It seems that at a former time the tribe was quite populous; but, owing to various epidemics and the inroads of other Indians, its numbers have dwindled down, so that at the present time it has been reduced to only a few hundred souls. The language spoken by the tribe belongs to the Salishan family, more particularly to the group of dialects spoken along the coast of Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia. The great similarity between the Bella Coola and the other Coast-Salishan dialects leads us to assume that at one time the tribes speaking these dialects inhabited contiguous areas. At the present time the Bella Coola are separated from other tribes speaking Salishan languages by a considerable stretch of country, which is inhabited by tribes of Athapascan and Kwakiutl lineage. Vocabulary and grammar have been slightly modified, particularly by an extensive choice of words. The relation of their language to the other dialects of the Coast Salish is similar to that of the Tillamook, another language belonging to the Salishan family, which is spoken on the coast of Oregon, to an area separated from the rest of the Salishan territory by the dialects inhabited by the Chinook.

[106] [107] Physically the Bella Coola bear evidence of longcontinued contact with the northern Coast tribes, and also with the Athapascan tribes of the interior. Evidently intermarriages have been quite frequent, so much so that their present physical appearance differs considerably from that of the southern Salishan tribes, of whom they form a branch. The same is true in regard to their customs and beliefs, which differ fundamentally from those of the southern Salishan tribes.

[108] In the present paper I shall describe the mythology of the Bella Coola, and discuss its development.

II.

[109] Our previous knowledge of the mythology of this tribe is based on studies made by Oliver Jacobsen, Philip Jacobsen, Graham, and the writer. In 1900 I published a few brief notes on their traditions.[1] Graham pub-

[1] Proceedings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, 1900, p. 320.

the middle of the water, the barnacles and worms bit her. She jumped up, and the canoe capsized. The birds swam ashore. After a short time the barnacles and sea-worms came ashore too. They looked very stout, because they had eaten the bear. Then the youth said to the girl, "There are two trails here,—one leading to the left, the other to the right. You follow the one, I will follow the other. If the trails meet, we will marry; if they do not, we have separate forever." They started, and after a while met each other. Then the youth married the girl. (Book of the Bear, Plate X, Fig. 11.)[1]

VI.

It is necessary to make a few remarks on the relation of the ceremonials of the Bella Coola Indians to their mythology. I have not seen any of their ceremonials, and my descriptions are based on tradition, and upon the accounts published by Philip and Adrian Jacobsen.

The Bella Coola have two ceremonials,—the tsauk and the kwakiut, which correspond to the cultus and the winalagi of the Kwakiut. I have described these ceremonials fully in another paper.[2] The tsauk ceremonials are mostly dramatic representations illustrating the clan legends, some of which have been recorded in Chap. IV., while the kwakiut ceremonials are dramatic representations of the initiation of members of various clans into certain secret societies. Among these, the Cannibal Society, the Society of the Laughers, and the Society of the Throwers, are the most important. There are called by the Bella Coola the sisutl'ulu, Ots, and Dzila. I described on pp. 50 ff. the spirits presiding over the two first-named societies. The information which I obtained on these points is perfectly clear and consistent. I cannot quite reconcile the explanations given by A. and P. Jacobsen to the accounts which I received. It seems that their accounts do not clearly distinguish between the opinions held by various tribes. In the article above referred to, I described fully the opinions held by the Kwakiut in regard to the origin of their Cannibal Society. They believe that a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsi'wae initiates the Cannibals. He is represented as having an enormous black head with dilated nostrils and huge mouth. I have made frequent inquiries among the Bella Coola, but received the uniform answer that this being does not initiate their Cannibals. It is not impossible that a few families may have adopted this tradition from the Kwakiut tribes, but I have not been able to find it among the Bella Coola. Jacobsen maintains that Baxbakualanuxsi'wae is the particular spirit of the Cannibal among the Bella Coola, and brings forward the well-known

[1] [illegible]

[2] [illegible]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca.1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

allowed to re-enter the houses; but before doing so for the first time, he must stop at the door and shout, "Wa, wa, wa!" Then he jumps over the threshold. Accompanied by many men, he is led, after four days more, to the river for final purification. He is pushed into the water, but struggles to free himself. He tries to duck his companions, and utters his cries. Finally he is led back. Then he weeps, because the spirit has left him entirely. The people beat time while he is going back to the house. Then he is offered a piece of salmon, which is placed on his throat, while the people shout, "Hoip, hoip!" The salmon is taken away again, and after some time he is allowed to take one bite. Then he must lie down. After the dancing season is ended, he is again allowed to eat in the same way as other people do. The piece of salmon that was placed on his throat is eaten by children as a protection against sickness. Finally a ceremony is performed which is called "taking the lip of the S'ā'tpata out of the Cannibal's body." While this is being done, the people cry, "Hoip!" Then they throw the lip upon another Cannibal, who at once falls into an ecstasy. Then the shaman takes it back and throws it up towards the sky, where it disappears. The dish and the spoon that the Cannibal used during his ecstasy are destroyed. For four years he must wear a small ring of red cedar-bark, in summer as well as in winter.

The Ōts is also initiated in heaven by the being described before (p. 35). There are different traditions regarding his initiation among different clans. Some Ōts, during their performances, walk ropes which are stretched through the house. When he returns from his initiation, small whistles, called cat'lana, which imitate the voices of eagles, are heard outside of the houses. Then the Ōts enters in a state of ecstasy, scratching the people who assemble to hold him, and tearing their blankets. Finally the people succeed in placing a blanket over his head, and he begins to come to his senses. When he enters the house, the people beat time, then he teaches the chorus-leader a song. The mask worn by the Ōts is quite large, and characterized by a large nose (Plate XII, Fig. 9). He carries a dancing-club (Plate XII, Fig. 10), and rings made of red cedar-bark. He is accompanied by two assistants, who also wear masks.

VII.

We will now discuss the probable origin of the mythology described in the preceding pages. In order to do so, it is necessary to make a brief statement in regard to the social organization of the neighboring tribes. In another paper[1] I have fully discussed the considerable amount of borrowing that has taken place among the Coast tribes, and the relation of their

[1] Indianische Sagen von der nordpacifischen Küste Amerikas, Berlin, 1895, pp. 41 ff. [illegible]

One of them must wash his body, one must wash his head, and the two others hold him. In return they receive one or two blankets each. During this ceremony the quqq'ō'lEñ, who are described as wild men, dance around the novice. They have ropes tied around their waists, and are held by other members of the society by these ropes. Then the xEnxant'tEl lead the novice into the woods, where he remains for a long time, until he meets the spirit that initiates him. It seems that during this time he is secretly led to the house in which the xEnxant'tEl continue to celebrate festivals at the expense of the novice's father, and there he is taught the secrets of the society. During this time, until the return of the novice from the woods, the house is tabooed. A watchman is stationed at the entrance, who keeps out uninitiated persons. During the absence of the novice, his mother prepares cedar bark ornaments and weaves mountain goat blankets for his use. One afternoon he returns, and then his father gives a feast to let the people know that his child has returned. The latter performs his first dance, in which he uses masks and cedar bark ornaments. This dance is called nuxnEä'mEñ. On this day the father must distribute a great number of blankets among the xEnxant'tEl. The initiated are permitted to take part in the feast, and sit on one side of the house. The new member spends all his nights in the woods, where he bathes. In the spring the new member, if a man, is thrown into the sea, and after that is free from all regulations attending the initiation. One of the principal regulations regarding novices of the xEnxant'tEl is that they must return from the woods in the direction in which the sun is moving, starting so that the sun is at their backs. Therefore they must sometimes go in roundabout ways. They must go backward through doors, which are stä'lEqam (supernatural) against them. Frequently the sō'na (a female shaman) is called to bespeak the door in their behalf before they pass through it. Before their dance the sō'na must also address the earth, as it is supposed that else it might open and swallow up the dancer. It is also stä'lEqam against the novice. The expression used is that the earth would "open its eyes" (k'u'nalaxa); that means, swallow the novice. In order to avert this danger, the sō'na must "give a name to the earth," and strew red paint and feathers over the place where the novice is to dance.

THE BI'LXULA.

121 171 The social organization, festivals, and secret societies of the Bi'lxula are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the sisan'k', and the kē'sist. The sisan'k' corresponds to the tsō'lxa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the kē'sist to the tsō'tsō'atqa. The Bi'lxula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Xō'mtsiss, to whose care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful house in the far east, and cries "ä, ä,"

556 773 776

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

121 128 If I were to investigate and report on the Bella Coola at the present time, I would undoubtedly be influenced by many years of contact with American anthropologists and their work. I would assume a greater knowledge of North-West coast institutions, less interest in the details of ceremonial rites, and it would be impossible not to avoid comparisons with, and observations upon, the theoretical implications of many of the facts recorded. But though every field investigator is strictly objective as to the facts he collects, yet his interests, and his method of presenting them, are coloured by his background; in my case, by the older school of English anthropology. On the whole, I think this is fortunate. It means that the Bella Coola are portrayed as I saw them when I came fresh to a new field, practically uninfluenced by problems of North-West coast culture, and fully prepared to throw myself into their life. They were "my people," not a group in which I was interested because they had, or had not, certain culture traits with which I was concerned. In the course of my teaching experience, furthermore, I have wished repeatedly to give serious students detailed field monographs in which are recorded the interwoven social, religious, and folk-lore concepts of a people, the sum-total of their mental life, collected by one man at one time. This I have tried to do for the Bella Coola.

123 Following the English tradition, I wish to record how this material was collected. Before leaving for British Columbia, [115] I was advised by the late H. I. Smith, who had worked in the area, to talk to Joshua Moody (see Plate 1), an elderly Bella Coola Indian with whom Smith had worked. On explaining to Joshua that I had come to record in permanent form the traditions and lore of his people, Joshua grinned broadly and promised his help. Unfortunately, he spoke only a few words of English. I tried interpreter after interpreter, Indian and white, with only fair success, and my difficulties increased with the [464] opening of the canning season and the consequent employment of the younger men and women. I was urged to learn the [122] Chinook jargon, which serves widely as a lingua franca on the [198] coast, and began the study with much misgiving. The results were surprisingly satisfactory.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoqla NE6

After a few weeks I found that I had sufficient knowledge of Chinook to dispense with interpreters and deal directly with the older people, a tremendous advantage. Pride of ancestry is one of the strongest characteristics of the Bella Coola, and once convinced of my sincere interest in and respect for their history, they were willing to talk. They resent the condescension with which most white men regard them, so that contact with one who was friendly and sympathetic came as a pleasant surprise. There were, of course, difficulties. The canning season had begun and every able-bodied man was working away from the village. The conviction of each person that he was the best source of information, and that conferences with another were useless or unreliable, caused distrust. The desire of each informant to discuss only what interested him; the complexity of Bella Coola life itself; the necessity of checking every statement, and the extreme difficulty of doing so on account of discrepancies in the myths of different families; the fear, almost groundless, of each individual that someone else had infringed on his rights by recounting some legend; and, not least, the need for tact, patience, and a sense of humour under all conditions, were some of the obstacles to be surmounted. Nor was Chinook entirely satisfactory. It has enough words for matters pertaining to fishing, hunting, and trading, but for the realms of sociology or theology it is inadequate. This difficulty could not have been overcome without the patient help of my informants. Animated by the desire to help, they used every expedient in the way of parallel and synonym to explain obscure terms. Sometimes a younger man was called in for some abstruse meaning; more often it gradually became clear from different applications. Once the significance of a word was definitely understood, I made a note of it and used it henceforth. A useful vocabulary was thus built up, and conversations were carried on in mixed Bella Coola and Chinook, eked out by whatever English words were known by the person with

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

121 128 If I were to investigate and report on the Bella Coola at the present time, I would undoubtedly be influenced by many years of contact with American anthropologists and their work. I would assume a greater knowledge of North-West coast institutions, less interest in the details of ceremonial rites, and it would be impossible not to avoid comparisons with, and observations upon, the theoretical implications of many of the facts recorded. But though every field investigator is strictly objective as to the facts he collects, yet his interests, and his method of presenting them, are coloured by his background; in my case, by the older school of English anthropology. On the whole, I think this is fortunate. It means that the Bella Coola are portrayed as I saw them when I came fresh to a new field, practically uninfluenced by problems of North-West coast culture, and fully prepared to throw myself into their life. They were "my people," not a group in which I was interested because they had, or had not, certain culture traits with which I was concerned. In the course of my teaching experience, furthermore, I have wished repeatedly to give serious students detailed field monographs in which are recorded the interwoven social, religious, and folk-lore concepts of a people, the sum-total of their mental life, collected by one man at one time. This I have tried to do for the Bella Coola.

123 Following the English tradition, I wish to record how this material was collected. Before leaving for British Columbia, [115] I was advised by the late H. I. Smith, who had worked in the area, to talk to Joshua Moody (see Plate 2), an elderly Bella Coola Indian with whom Smith had worked. On explaining to Joshua that I had come to record in permanent form the traditions and lore of his people, Joshua grinned broadly and promised his help. Unfortunately, he spoke only a few words of English. I tried interpreter after interpreter, Indian and white, with only fair success, and my difficulties increased with the [464] opening of the canning season and the consequent employment of the younger men and women. I was urged to learn the [122] Chinook jargon, which serves widely as a lingua franca on the [198]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

123

coast, and began the study with much misgiving. The results were surprisingly satisfactory. [122] [198]

After a few weeks I found that I had sufficient knowledge of Chinook to dispense with interpreters and deal directly with the older people, a tremendous advantage. Pride of ancestry is one of the strongest characteristics of the Bella Coola, and [181] once convinced of my sincere interest in and respect for their history, they were willing to talk. They resent the condescension with which most white men regard them, so that contact with one who was friendly and sympathetic came as a pleasant surprise. There were, of course, difficulties. The canning season had begun and every able-bodied man was working away from [464] the village. The conviction of each person that he was the best source of information, and that conferences with another were 124 useless or unreliable, caused distrust. The desire of each informant to discuss only what interested him; the complexity of Bella Coola life itself; the necessity of checking every statement, and the extreme difficulty of doing so on account of discrepancies in the myths of different families; the fear, almost groundless, of each individual that someone else had infringed on his rights by recounting some legend; and, not least, the need for tact, patience, and a sense of humour under all conditions, were some of the obstacles to be surmounted. Nor was Chinook entirely satisfactory. It has enough words for matters pertaining to fishing, hunting, and trading, but for the realms of sociology or theology it is inadequate. This difficulty could not have been overcome without the patient help of my informants. Animated by the desire to help, they used every expedient in the way of parallel and synonym to explain obscure terms. Sometimes a younger man was called in for some abstruse meaning; more often it gradually became clear from different applications. Once the significance of a word was definitely understood, I made a note of it and used it henceforth. A useful vocabulary was thus built up, and conversations were carried on in mixed Bella Coola and Chinook, eked out by whatever English words were known by the person with

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

124 whom I was working. Before I left, this medley contained so much Bella Coola that it was unintelligible to white people who knew Chinook alone.

Activities in the canneries would have interfered seriously with my work during the summer of 1922 if two men had not [115] been confined to the village, Captain Schooner owing to an injured wrist, and Jim Pollard by the illness of his wife. These two men were willing to work half a day apiece without jealousy. Each was intensely proud of the traditions of his people and, realizing that their culture was passing away, was glad to assist in making it permanent in writing. An intimacy sprang 123 up between Captain Schooner (see Plate 3) and myself culmin- [597] ating in my adoption, a circumstance which established and improved my position in the community. In this way I was enabled to collect a large amount of material before July when it was necessary for me to leave for the east.

In September, 1923, when I returned to Bella Coola, I found that Captain Schooner had died a few months before, respected alike by white men and Indians. With the aid of others with whom I had made contact it was possible to obtain much new information, as well as to clear up many obscure points. The previous summer I had been so overwhelmed with material that I had no time to collate it in the field and the gaps only became apparent after a year's study. The men were so busy hunting and laying in stocks of fire-wood, however, that I found it difficult to arrange regular hours of work, but this was a trifle compared with the initial difficulties of my first trip. In October, when the Bella Coola began to prepare for 123 the winter dances, they had to appoint a successor to Captain 796 Schooner, who had played a leading part in their production. 887 Having been adopted by him, it was suggested that I take his place, a proposition which I readily accepted. This admitted me to the ranks of the old men, and I imagine that my interest encouraged them to hold more ceremonials than they had done for several years. In former times, a number of the older men used to devote much time and thought to the composing, remembering, and rendering of songs; in 1923 it was found that Jim Pollard (see Plate 4) alone had a sufficiently accurate memory to act as announcer. As more and more men wished to perform, he found himself unable to keep the texts in order, and asked me to join the choir as prompter. I held this position for the rest of the winter, taking a full part in every ceremony. Although the old customs had broken down enormously, this actual participation enabled me to understand the winter dances in a manner impossible from mere description. Later on, phonographic records were made of many of the songs used, thus preserving specimens of the fast disappearing music.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

My intimate association with the Bella Coola enabled me to collect the material here presented which, having been verified and reverified, I have every reason to believe is correct. Nevertheless, it has one serious defect owing to the lack of acuteness of my ear. I found it almost impossible to differentiate certain sounds; in fact, I sometimes recorded the same word with different spellings. Consequently, I cannot guarantee the accuracy of the native terms used in this monograph. Moreover, I was entirely unable to analyze proper names, which would have been of great value in understanding the attributes of supernatural beings.

When writing up field notes, the realization of my own inefficiency in the recording of sounds tempted me to rely upon the spelling of Boas whenever possible. After considerable hesitation, I rejected this course for the following reason. Ethnological work falls into two categories, descriptive and comparative. This monograph is of the former type, based on actual work in the field and the inclusion of any material from another source would destroy its originality. I believe that a descriptive work should consist exclusively of the author's own research, and I have adhered to this principle in spite of the advantages which would have followed the use of Boas' linguistic terms. For the same reason no attempt has been made to compare the customs and beliefs of the Bella Coola with those of other tribes, although this would undoubtedly have shed

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 578 Island chief was felt by the Bella Coola to be quite natural; one of their own chiefs might have resented the insult in the same manner. This account may have no historical basis, but it is a clear example of Bella Coola sentiment.

*556 648 558 [765] Further examples may help to clarify this point. A few years ago a number of Kwakiutl Indians visited Bella Coola to perform a mourning ceremony in honour of a deceased Bella Coola who had a Kwakiutl name from his grandfather, a member of that tribe. All the natives were invited to a large house, where the visitors gave a dance according to their own ancestral myths; the songs which were used recounted the history of the Kwakiutl name of the dead man. After thus displaying their prerogatives, they felt themselves obliged, and proud, as hosts, to give presents as validation. The sum of $546 was distributed among the guests. Realizing that it would be impossible to return such a sum by holding ceremonials in Fort Rupert, the home of the Kwakiutl, the leading Bella Coola decided to return the compliment immediately. The amount to be given was discussed at great length. Appreciating the courtesy of the foreigners in thus coming to pay honour to the deceased, it was not wished to insult them by giving a larger present, which would have had the effect of intimating that the recipients considered the $546 a trifling amount. Accordingly it was finally agreed to give the visitors about $300, which was done as validation of a Bella Coola ceremony at which the strangers were present. Thus the hosts allowed themselves to be shamed as a mark of courtesy. Not to be outdone in politeness, the Kwakiutl chief made a speech, expressing his willingness to allow the Bella Coola to drive him (this occurred in the days of horses and carts) to the wharf to take the steamer. In other words, he allowed the Bella Coola to put him in their debt, as they had allowed him and his party to do with respect to the distribution of money. The visit terminated with friendly relations maintained on both sides.

*423 533 *556 424 The need of validating every ceremonial act by presents can be further illustrated by the following instance. When

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the writer was in Bella Coola, a non-ceremonial entertainment was given one evening at which several men sang and performed. The writer was asked to sing a Bella Coola song, which he did in the belief that it was not one that was incorporated in the ancestral myth of anyone. Unfortunately, his teacher had erred, and as soon as the song was completed an old woman arose and stated that it belonged to her ancestral family. She avoided the difficulty of its singing by immediately announcing that the singer was her "son." Thus the writer was adopted into a Bella Coola family, a circumstance which aided him considerably in collecting information. This did not alter the fact that a ceremonial song had been sung. Accordingly, the woman gave presents to the guests, thereby legalizing the adoption, and saving herself from the disgrace of having one of her songs used as if it were a matter of no consequence, free to anyone.

123 533 556* 424 [597]

SEATING

Presents are also a means of obtaining seats. Every Bella Coola has at least one name embodied in an ancient myth. A man who wishes to become a chief can do so only by giving lavish presents to make his designation "strong," "firm," or "bright," to use Bella Coola expressions. Such gifts increase the importance of the owner's name, and they obtain for him the right to a seat, more or less definitely located, in the house. Since all Bella Coola habitations are built on similar lines, a man can occupy his wonted position when summoned to a ceremony in any house. The validating of ancestral names and the acquisition of seats are among the important features which occur at potlatches.

554 556* [622] [424] [553]

In the beginning of time, when the first people were sent down to populate the earth, it is assumed that each who established a village, consisting of a single house, seated himself in the best spot within the dwelling, namely the central position behind the fire; his younger relatives ranged either beside him

[773]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 769 a man and assuage his sorrow to know that he has shown fitting respect to the dead, there is also a gain in social prestige. As the whole community respects, admires, and sometimes envies a man for having carried out a memorial potlatch, there is no doubt that he is pleased and gratified to such an extent that his grief is dulled. These two factors must constantly be kept in mind; memorial potlatches serve to commemorate the dead, but in so doing they add to the social importance of the donors. The two combine to bring considerable comfort to the chief who has lost a dear relative. In some cases the social prestige is the real motive, the grief assumed and unimportant; but in others the latter is the only factor that matters, and a chief is entirely oblivious to any increase in his own status. In most memorial potlatches, both feelings are present in the mind of the donor, and both are gratified.

DETAILED ACCOUNT OF A FUNERAL

764 114 In the preceding pages, an attempt has been made to describe the traditional death rites of the Bella Coola. The following section comprises a detailed account of funeral ceremonies witnessed in 1922. The contrast between these and the ones already recorded, will indicate some of the changes [178] in custom which are of such importance in studies of cultural [182] growth or decline. The following description will also serve [57] to demonstrate a point repeatedly mentioned, the manner in which business transactions and arrangements of all kinds take place whenever the people have been called together.

[123] On June 27, 1922, the death occurred in Bella Coola of Jessie, Mrs. Samuel King, daughter of Captain Schooner. The latter, now deceased, was one of the writer's most trusted friends, and as a result of this friendship it was possible not only to attend the actual rites, but to ascertain much of the feeling underlying them. This advantage had its drawbacks, since it was manifestly impossible to question either the father or the husband of the woman too closely. The details will be de-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 The last appearance of such a stone was in Dean Channel,
* 787 to the father of an elderly Bella Coola, who was too amazed 823 to take advantage of it. As far as could be ascertained, in 1922 there was only one stone which was regarded by the owner as having brought him good fortune. It had been obtained by one of his elderly relatives who died about 1906. This man had been walking beside the Bella Coola River one spring day when he happened to notice a woodpecker perched on one of the posts supporting an olachen net. Without taking his eyes from it, he idly stooped down and threw a pebble at the bird which flew to the bank, lit on a pile of stones, and became one of them. Realizing that here might be the means of obtaining supernatural good fortune, if properly handled, the man watched for some time, then went forward, picked up the stone, covered it with evergreen boughs and wrapped the whole in a strip torn from the white-man's shirt he was wearing. With the axe he was carrying he cut a recess in a tree, put the object in it and covered the hiding place with the original bark. He said nothing about it, but the stone brought him such good luck that he obtained large quantities of everything desirable.

777 In later years the man, after replacing the stone in the hole 823 of the tree, went away to Victoria; when he returned, years later, it was still there. By placing it in his box he again prospered in all his ventures. When an old man the owner presented the stone to a relative who still treasures it. It is red, about a foot in length, shaped somewhat like a human figure without arms or legs, but with a prominent navel opening. See Fig. 2. The owner has kept it for years, hiding it even from his wife and allowing no white man to see it. He had been perfectly willing to have photographs taken of most of his ceremonial objects, but declined to permit this to be done with his valued stone, and carefully hid it in a box after showing it. When he wished to use the transformed bird, it was wrapped in his old shirt, together with a small amount of money or what-

•[23]

Fig. 2
Lucky Stone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

men had vanished. It is possible that in this particular case there was a belief that Alqunŭm granted the wish when convinced that all had the same desire, but this element is often entirely lacking.

Belief in the power of thought is a concept which the investigator constantly meets in Bella Coola at the present day. For example, in 1921 a government official working in the valley, purchased a representation of a merganser which had been used in a ceremonial.[1] Although this should have been destroyed after use, no difficulty would have been raised if the transaction had remained a secret. Unfortunately, the buyer allowed the object to be seen by several Bella Coola and by some Carriers. This caused indignation throughout the community and news of it reached the Bella Bella, who concluded that the vendor would suffer disaster for allowing a secret object to be seen by the despised Indians of the interior. Within a year, his wife died. The Bella Bella believed that his sin had brought its own punishment, but the Bella Coola, who knew the details of the sale and did not consider the exposure of the article to have been the fault of the seller, attributed it to the power of the thoughts of the Bella Bella. They all expected that he would be punished; therefore he was punished; the expectation was sufficient to effect its own fulfilment. This incident was too fresh in the minds of several men to allow them to sell ceremonial objects to the writer.

The most common form taken by this conviction is with regard to death; if it is believed that a man will die, he is almost certain to do so. In June, 1921, a woman died in Bella Coola and her father claimed that she had been murdered by a certain man either with material poison or by magical means. He took no direct steps in revenge but stated emphatically that the man whom he suspected would die within a year. The threatened man knew of this, and more than once said that he

[1] The article, now in the National Museum of Canada, consists of a cloth and wood representation of a merganser canoe such as was used by Nanŭlk in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 not considered necessary. With few exceptions, hereafter to 796 be noted, kusiut masks are burnt at the conclusion of each 532 ceremony, a practice which probably originated in order to [171] avoid the possibility of their being seen by the uninitiated. The Bella Coola state that this is one of the most striking differences between their rites and those of the Bella Bella.

*575 Next in importance to masks are whistles (see Plate 2).[1]
796 The large, cone-shaped form used in susook ceremonial is re-
534 placed in kusiut dances by a smaller type consisting of portions of wood glued together, which can be blown with ease from
[237] beneath a concealing blanket. Another type has bellows consisting of a mountain goat bladder, which is held beneath the arm-pit so that it can be worked invisibly. During the summer the whistles are kept by one individual, usually a [422] marshal. Specific information concerning the ownership of these whistles could not be obtained; it appears that any kusiut can make one, or have one made for him by a skilled carpenter, and that their retention by one person during the summer is merely for convenience. They are freely lent to [420] anyone for use in a ceremony.

*575 In some dances special objects are used in connection with 796 dramatic performances, such as bull-roarers, wooden repre-
532 sentations of animals, birds, or miniature human beings. One old man described a pipe formerly used at Tāl-io, which had [534] a carved bowl as large as a tea-cup with three radiating stems.
[824] It was carved from a knotty excrescence on a beech bole. Little could be learnt of its history, except that it was supposed to have been carved by a chief with the design of his patron and displayed through pride.

*575 The usual guests at a performance of the type just sum-
604 marized are the dancer's fellow-villagers and any strangers
796 who happen to be present in the town. Great as is the desire of the kukusiut to impress their uninitiated tribesmen, they [648] are still more eager to impress strangers, hence the presence of Carriers adds piquancy to the rites. The writer believes [123] that his presence and interest encouraged the Bella Coola to

[1] [see category 116, p84(B) - ANALYCT]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

perform several ancient rites through a desire to "show off" before someone who was ignorant. In recent years there has been a tendency to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials, and to judge a man's worth by his lavishness in them, but this is only a modern development due to the prohibition of the potlatch. Nevertheless, even in former times some individuals preferred to invite foreign guests to kusiut dances and to give them valuable gifts rather than to save these for potlatches; such a ceremony is called a kukusiutsk. Whenever strangers are present at a kusiut dance they receive small pieces of dyed cedar-bark as proof of the friendly intentions of the host. The general consensus of Bella Coola opinion is that it is foolish for a man to concentrate on kusiut performances, particularly if he impoverish himself to the detriment of potlatches.

Although foreign guests are seldom invited to kusiut rites, a dancer frequently calls in his fellows from adjacent villages. But as the ceremonial season is simultaneous in the different settlements, with almost nightly performances, it is often impossible to avoid conflict in dates. Which invitation shall have preference is decided in the following manner:

During the days of qathm and nakazam the dancer sends a herald of powerful physique to invite guests from as many villages as he wishes. Simultaneously, a messenger may be approaching from the opposite direction with a similar invitation. Each envoy watches carefully around each bend in the path for his rival, and whichever can first call out his message is entitled to continue to give his invitation in the village of the outwitted herald. It is considered exceedingly bad taste to decline a summons, so the ceremony to which the defeated herald was bearing an invitation must be postponed. Sometimes the two messengers sight one another simultaneously, and the relative priority of their messages is then decided by a contest of strength. The rivals stand in the path, shoulder to shoulder, arms close to their sides, and shove with all their strength, the winner being the one who can force his opponent to move his feet. This last means of deciding is used exclutype of cookery can be carried out only during the ceremonial season.

After killing and eating a human being, a Cannibal must conceal himself for a considerable period, sometimes as long as four years. The uninitiated are told that the great power within him has taken him so far into the upper regions that one or more years must elapse before his return. During this time he can be seen only by Sakaciac. The writer was told of one unfortunate corpse-eating Cannibal, Echoler, who was virtually secluded for eight years, since a stone was cast at his feet every time he reappeared, thus forcing him to kill and eat. This curse had been dormant for a number of years until conferred on the writer, who failed to uphold the prerogative.

One other type of Cannibal prerogative remains to be described, namely, that of biting oneself. This is even less common than that of corpse-eating, being enjoyed only by two individuals, Sallaskaay of Ilgaa and Snong of the Kimsquit River. The following account of the origin of the latter's prerogative was obtained:

Many years ago, even after the first people came to the world, the crowd of the hamatsa dances was much more amazing than it is at present. In that time the inhabitants of the earth were still endowed with such supernatural powers that they were able to perform feats that people of the present day can appreciate only with the aid of competent witnesses. There was then living in one of the villages on the Kimsquit River a certain Snong who had the prerogative of biting himself. He once went hunting on one of the mountains, and when he failed to return the people were convinced that he had eaten so heavily of his own flesh that he had died. Although search was made for his body, it was not until the following year that a professional hunter found the skeleton. From the position of the bones it was judged that their condition was strange: he had killed himself by eating too much of his own flesh. The chiefs and other influential hahamatsa held a meeting at which it was decided that hundreds hamatsa dances would only be acted, not carried out in reality. The following winter the name and prerogative were transferred to the son of the dead man, who bit himself, but not sufficiently deeply to cause serious injury.

[The Fingus Tower]

ON THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

"I want a strong man. I want an Indian," running a Dacian of powerful physique.

The man so designated comes forward, passes once, twice, around the cord, seizes it with both hands, and strains to pull up the fingus. Sometimes he fails to make it appear at all, or he may be able to produce the upper part of the fore-head, and he soon returns to his place, baffled. The unin-ciated realize that it is a mere fingus, and the puzzle to them is how X can lift it so easily when another fails. The explan-ation lies in the long rope, of which they are unaware, passing down through the floor of the house to the space between it and the ground. There are concealed four strong Indians whose duty is to hold the cord and allow it to be hauled up to a distance indicated by whispered instructions. It would be a major disaster should they become careless or should the rope break. A second Dacian is called forward, but has no greater success than his predecessor, and a third and a fourth also fail. The heralds keep up a running fire of comments, for instance, if one man is able to raise the fingus two-thirds they remark on the fact, saying that he must be a good man to whom the supernatural beings are favourably disposed. If, on the other hand, the cord is drawn down, removing the skin from the palms of the would-be pullers, they comment unsympathetically on the feeble manifestations towards him. When four Dacian have tried and failed, X again demonstrates his strength, or the willingness of the supernatural beings to respond to his pulling, by lifting the fingus and dangling body into view. Once more a herald calls out:

"The Dacian were someone to pull."

The challenge is now open to anyone, member of the audience or uninitiated, and one after another comes forward, circles the rope, and tries his strength—but without avail. Even the use of the Dacian dance hall cannot recruit the mirth of the spectators when the rope is quickly pulled below, a painful experience as the writer knows to his cost. Often it is a little girl with clear, ringing voice. It proceeds to pull forth [illegible] and walks up one of the spectators, pulling the weapon at him and humming furiously. The actor with the part of a supernatural mosquito or one of the dancers hold in the actors of [illegible] and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the Gallurini were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers. Another being who often appears at a dance of Thunder is Dutrenoux Dripping-from-the-Roof. The medical figure walks slowly around the fire and Dal'Ombrano explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the plastering. The Clarion [illegible] are never omitted, and always cause amusement until the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the sage remarks of Dal'Ombrano. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a medical figure slowly emerges forth. It is Death, who appears at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrives on foot while present at the dance of Thunder. Death circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

[The Dance of Thunder]

Dancers whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patrons occurs. If Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"Ye lie does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too lustily up aloft. Ewe ..."

The call of ewe ... is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any Bellarini woman present at once dress, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lower house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and

When all hope has been abandoned, they are summoned and the relative completes the ceremony, doing only that part of it left undone by the original designee of the cult. The principle in the same as that described when a novice dies, that someone must finish the rite. This aspect of the Dorier ceremonial is still preserved unanimously as the writer found to be true. It was proposed that he be formally initiated into the society, but this was not allowed on the ground that he would not be present the following winter to complete the rite commenced by the coming of the cult.

The Dorier Rite

The commencement of the Dorier season is regulated by the coming of Nathyum, but its conclusion is a matter of arrangement. By February the number of Dorier wishing to dance has become negligible and the mandals decide to terminate the ceremonial season. It must be remembered that an enclosure has been built in every house where an important Dorier dance has taken place, and that so long as there are in existence the uninitiated have not been allowed to live in these houses. The social life of the community has accordingly been profoundly disturbed. Of course several dances may have taken place in a single dwelling, but even allowing for that, the fact remains that the uninitiated have been forced to dwell temporarily in perhaps only one or two houses. The most obvious mark of the end of the ceremonial season is the destruction of these enclosures.

A few nights after the last sabrum, the heralds summon the Dorier to the house in which it took place. They are dress but the usual dressing is omitted. Presently sticks are distributed and one of the singers takes his place to lead in the customary funeral hearing. But before he raises his horn, one of the mandals, or another Dorier with ability to clear magic, stops to the centre of the house and spins rapidly in all directions, his aim being to deluge the house and spectators with a spray of saliva. Then the singer leads the hearing of

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

575 796 781 figures are really beings from another world. The explanation lies in the profound belief of all Bella Coola in the near presence of the supernatural; consequently, a supernatural explanation is the one normally given for all unusual incidents. The dances themselves are filled with strange manifestations, particularly the weird whistling concerning the origin of which the uninitiated have no idea. Once convinced by this means of the presence of unknown powers, it is easy for them to believe that the masked figures are visitors from the other world. Nor was their belief in former days shaken by certain representations which were palpably false, such as that of the sun. No one could believe that the disk which moved across the back of the house was the sun itself; but on the other hand it seemed marvellous to the uninitiated, ignorant of the means used to portray it. To the white man there seems a fundamental difference between a supernatural being and the representation of a strange object made to move by unseen means, but to the Bella Coola both belong to another realm, and are accordingly akin. Moreover, there were occasions when the uninitiated must have seen the shifting or actual falling of a mask, for example, during the fight with wasps. But here again the deep belief of the non-members came to the help of the tsakwiat, who told their guests that this was caused by the coming of a call to the actor, and what might easily have become doubt and suspicion was thus changed to respect.

[178] The writer laboured under two tremendous difficulties in collecting information about tsaiat matters; the present dances are mere shadows of what they formerly were, and there are [125] no more uninitiated. His presence and quest for information served to stimulate interest and led to a partial revival of the old rites, but the bulk of his material was obtained from informants rather than from actual observation. It is a universal [114] characteristic of mankind to idealize accounts of former practices, so it is not only possible, but probable, that the foregoing descriptions are more perfect than many of the rites to which the kuikum, prompter, is equally important, though less obvious. As many as one hundred songs may be in constant use in the course of a single kwiat season, and it is impossible for any one individual to remember them sufficiently well never to become confused when calling them out. Consequently, one or more prompters sit beside the announcer, ready to whisper to him the words of the next subdivision. Prompters are expected to be thoroughly familiar with the myths of all performers and, since they neither announce nor sing, they are able to concentrate their whole attention on remembering the words which have been considered suitable. 533* 796* 575*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

This somewhat complicated mechanism ensures a minimum of error in all important cases. Mistakes do creep in, however, and it is related with glee how on one occasion the singers completely forgot a text and substituted a description of a mask used at the rite in question. Moreover, even the solemnity of a kwiat dance cannot entirely check the love of the Bella Coola for practical joking. A blind singer once laid down his stick for a moment, whereupon one of his companions kicked it away. It appears to be virtually impossible for a man to sing unless he can accompany himself by rapping, and the frantic efforts of the sightless one to recover his baton almost betrayed his companions into obvious mirth. Occasionally, too, a prompter neglects his task* and the announcer is forced to improvise, while the leader endeavours to conceal the error by lengthening the pause between subdivisions. 533* 796* 575* 522

Marriage songs, shaman songs, non-ceremonial songs, and a few others of special type are sung by an individual, unaccompanied. The technique is, therefore, quite different from that just described. Dance songs of all kinds should, if complete, have the three parts; these are indicated as A, B, and C 533*

*During the winter of 1922-4 there was only one man in Bella Coola with sufficient skill and poise to act as announcer and prompter. He found it impossible to perform both duties and requested the aid of the writer as prompter. The texts were written down, and it was the writer's duty to sit beside the announcer, waiting for a nudge signifying that he had forgotten the next subdivision. From personal experience the writer can state that the task of prompter is exacting to the extreme. [123]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

grave difficulties in explaining their customs, as the white man has in understanding them. 153 124

The writer was impressed by the brilliance shown by several of the natives. Joshua Moody, for example, is essentially the philosopher. More individualistic than most of his tribesmen, he was one of the first to adopt Christianity and has been a faithful follower of the new creed. Deeply interested in religious questions, he has stored up what has been told him of the Bible and pondered deeply on all problems of life. Not particularly practical, subject to fits of anger or moroseness, but with a meditative temperament which delights in seeking biblical parallels and synonyms for Bella Coola practices, his is the kind of mind which, in other walks of life, would have produced the professor of philosophy. Jim Pollard is quite another type. Essentially practical, he has devoted his energies to keeping abreast of changing conditions. He is the best singer and composer in Bella Coola, the best canoeman for miles; he has learnt to handle a motor-boat engine, to aid prospectors for minerals, and has succeeded in amassing and saving a considerable amount of money. Jim excelled all other informants in clearness and logical presentation of his explanations, though he showed a slight tendency, intelligible enough, to gloss over aspects which he knew would be considered unpleasant. If Jim had been a white man, he would undoubtedly have made his mark in the world of business. The late Captain Schooner differed from either of the preceding. Older than they, and uncovered, he, perhaps, came nearest to the original, uncontaminated Bella Coola type. Heavy in build, coarse in humour and expression, he had a heart of gold and was a fine example of a native gentleman. He was glad to assist most patiently in recording ancient lore, being intensely proud of the traditions of his ancestors. A friendship developed from this which is one of the writer's happiest memories. Often in the evenings life in general was discussed, the war, the rush of progress in big cities, the quest for wealth, the spread of white civilization, and the problems raised by the contact of peoples.

115 177 [153] [123]

Z:Mc Ilwraith E-5 [1922-1924] 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

APPENDIX 9

STRING FIGURES

THE only form of pastime which it was practical to investigate in any detail was the construction of string figures. These seem to have no ceremonial or religious significance; they are made for recreation only, and it was found easy to learn a number while passing the way for other kinds of research. In fact, interest in them was one of the ways in which the writer became friends with a number of Bella Coola. As is to be expected, some individuals are more proficient in constructing complicated string figures than others, the old women being particularly adept. During the long delays which occur in all the dances it is a common sight to see an old crone teaching a group of young girls the figures which she herself learnt when young. Some men remember a number from childhood, but the making of designs with string is regarded as more fitting for girls and women. Songs accompany many of the figures, and the singing of these is considered an essential part of the construction. It was noted that many more figures were known long ago; in fact, several of those here described were only obtained after repeated efforts on the part of an old woman to reconstruct those which she had been shown when a child. No attempt was made to obtain all the Bella Coola figures; a larger number could doubtless have been collected, but those here described are the ones most commonly made.

The nomenclature used is that described by Miss Shelton,[1] in itself following the method used by Rivers and Shelton. It will be assumed that the reader is familiar with this, including the meaning of the terms, "Opening A," "Position I," and "Dipodic." A string about four feet long will be found most convenient for making the Bella Coola figures.

1. A SALMON-TRAP

Double the loop; two strands now take the place of the usual one, but these will be referred to as a single string or loop. The figure can be made equally well with a string one-half the usual length.

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb and index finger and the right hand.

With right index finger hook down the string passing directly across left thumb and index finger and draw out to right, allowing right hand loop to slip over this hooked-down string.

[1] M. Shelton, Cat's Cradle from Many Lands (London, 1913).

b:Mc Dowelth E. (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

123
[122]
[191]

[181]

[464]

124

ment, and began the study with much misgiving. The results were surprisingly satisfactory.

After a few weeks I found that I had sufficient knowledge of Chinook to dispense with interpreters and deal directly with the older people, a tremendous advantage. Pride of ancestry is one of the strongest characteristics of the Bella Coola, and once convinced of my sincere interest in and respect for their history, they were willing to talk. They resent the condescension with which many white men regard them, so that contact with one who was friendly and sympathetic came as a pleasant surprise. There were, of course, difficulties. The canning season had begun and every able-bodied man was working away from the village. The conviction of each person that he was the best source of information and that conferences with another were useless or unreliable, caused distrust. The desire of each informant to discuss only what interested him; the complexity of Bella Coola life itself; the necessity of checking every statement, and the extreme difficulty of doing so on account of disagreement in the myths of different families; the fear, almost groundless, of each individual that someone else had infringed on his rights by recounting some legend; and, not least, the need for tact, patience, and a sense of humour under all conditions, were some of the obstacles to be surmounted. Nor was Chinook entirely satisfactory. It has enough words for matters pertaining to fishing, hunting, and trading, but for the realms of mythology or theory it is inadequate. This difficulty could not have been overcome without the patient help of my informants. Sometimes a parallel and synonym to explain obscure passages in the myths; younger man was called in for some obscure. Sometimes often it gradually became clear from some meaning; no Once the significance of a word was different application I made a note of it and used it henceforth. A useful vocabulary was thus built up, and conversely. A useful vocabulary mixed Bella Coola and Chinook, and these were carried such words were known by the person with me by whatever E

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

124 whom I was working. Before I left, this medley contained so much Bella Coola that it was unintelligible to white people who knew Chinook alone.

Activities in the canneries would have interfered seriously with my work during the summer of 1922 if two men had not [115] been confined to the village, Captain Schooner owing to an injured wrist, and Jim Pollard by the illness of his wife. These two men were willing to work half a day apiece without jealousy. Each was intensely proud of the traditions of his people and, realizing that their culture was passing away, was glad to assist in making it permanent in writing. An intimacy sprang [123] up between Captain Schooner (see Plate 3) and myself culmi- [577] nating in my adoption, a circumstance which established and improved my position in the community. In this way I was enabled to collect a large amount of material before July when it was necessary for me to leave for the east.

In September, 1923, when I returned to Bella Coola, I found that Captain Schooner had died a few months before, respected alike by white men and Indians. With the aid of others with whom I had made contact it was possible to obtain much new information, as well as to clear up many obscure points. The previous summer I had been so overwhelmed with material that I had no time to collate it in the field and the gaps only became apparent after a year's study. The men were so busy hunting and laying in stocks of fire-wood, however, this was a trifle compared with the initial difficulties of my first trip. In October, when the Bella Coola began to prepare for 123 the winter dances, they had to appoint a successor to Captain 796 Schooner, who had played a leading part in their production. 887 Having been adopted by him, it was suggested that I take his place, a proposition which I readily accepted. This admitted me to the ranks of the old men, and I imagine that my interest encouraged them to hold more ceremonials than they had done for several years. In former times, a number of the older men used to devote much time and thought to the composing, re-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

173 361 175

kenzie, making his memorable overland trip to the Pacific, records coming upon Indian villages at every few miles of his course. Boas describes the way in which the inhabitants of each of these claim to be descended from one group of ancestors.

161

Though it is impossible to estimate the former population of the Bella Coola valley with any degree of accuracy, it must have been in the thousands. In 1921 there were surviving rather more than three hundred individuals, who live in one village on an Indian reserve near the north bank of the Bella Coola River, about a quarter of a mile from the sea. In the last century the tribe was stricken with smallpox, and since then consumption, venereal disease, measles, and other diseases of the white man have taken their deadly toll. Changed conditions of life and decay of the rich ceremonial around which centred their interests in the old days are also contributory factors in their decline. Within the last few years, however, the population has begun to increase.

[164] [177] [182]

Bella Coola Villages

361

The following list of Bella Coola villages was obtained. In an effort to learn which had been deserted in recent years, the writer always asked whether or not a town was occupied at the time of Mackenzie's visit, an event of such great interest to the grandparents of the older people that the memory of it is still preserved. Villages said to have been occupied at that time are marked with an asterisk.

[124] [175]

[illegible] which is about one mile in width (see Plate 3). The Bella Coola, flowing from the east, enters at the southern edge, and the Nulqaitkwa-e winds in from the north to the opposite angle of the head of the fiord. This stream, "The Nuxwat River" of the Bella Coola, so-called because of its proximity to the sea, is shown on maps as the Neclatacoomy. Between the mouths of these two is the Pa-ech, a small stream rising

155

[108]

1:McDougalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

831 once was enough to kill an enemy, as if his spirit had been 785 driven from his body by a sudden start. Even in recent times [993] it is said that individuals who have observed ceremonial chas-[994] tity have been able to perform miraculous feats. A few years ago a Bella Bella man lost two sons and was trying to get enough money to buy a totem-pole for them. With this in view, he observed chastity for almost a year. Then he went seal hunting, and had killed a large number of the animals when, standing up in his boat, the sail blew against him so that he was thrown overboard. But he was so strong that he simply walked on the surface of the water and re-entered his [994] boat, none the worse for his mishap. The man who cited this instance stated that a number of Bella Bella had seen the occurrence and could vouch for it.

Ceremonial chastity is not a matter about which the Bella [124] Coola are willing to talk. It concerns both their religious and family life, in neither of which are strangers welcome. But when an investigator becomes on friendly terms, and gains some understanding of the inner lives of the people, he begins to realize its importance. Ceremonial chastity is not only [995] potent in itself, but it is also the favourite means by which a man can cleanse himself of the impurities of human existence so that he finds favour with the supernatural.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA BeDaccola NEA

614 extinct, are unusual; normally, the group is largely centred in 621 one village, but with members scattered in other localities. There is no central organization. It is generally recognized that such a unit belongs in the village where its first ancestors settled, and the leading chief of that village is, therefore, an important person in the family, though without status of [602] "head" of it. His advice may be appealed to in cases of dis- [553] putes concerning names, but he lacks judicial authority. Theoretically, the descendants of the elder of two first people are considered as "elder brothers and elder sisters" of those descended from a younger brother or sister; but this is nothing more than an accepted fact; it plays no part in the social life of the community.

552 In addition to human names, the origin myths include those 614 applied to dogs. The first ancestral group had dogs, and these 773 animals had names, or were given them by their powerful masters. Ever since that time their descendants can apply these designations to their own dogs. It is unnecessary to validate such names, but no two canines can be given the same one at the same time, according to the rule which governs the bestowal of human names. This matter was not investigated in detail, and the only dog's name collected was one for which [539] the origin myth is as follows:

When Tsi'a was first settled in the beginning of time, the houses were built in parallel rows, one above the other, up the side of a steep bank. In the very top was a white house, built over such a steep incline [526] nearly death bring their gift to the dog the name, Nutlpaskuar is about "Rolling successors," which has since been preserved in the ancestral family of his descendants.

LAND

● 124 Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining information 433 about land tenure. The Bella Coola resent keenly the way in 177 which their land has been occupied by white settlers without, according to their standpoint, proper compensation. Qua-

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bella coola NE6

124
423
[177]
423
614
773
[361]

tions on this subject always excited them, but every effort was made to verify the following statements.

As with names, the easiest way to understand the rights of the unmoral family in land is by first considering the mythological explanation, which mirrors conditions as they existed at the coming of white men. On reaching the earth the first people are believed to have prospected for suitable settlement sites, places where salmon and eulachon could be caught, and if possible, near side valleys where berries were abundant. There they released the animals and plants which they had brought with them, on which they thenceforth subsisted, in accordance with the supreme deity's instructions. The members of the group pre-empted these areas for themselves. Waste land, far from any village was, and still is, free to anyone. A few years after the first settlements had been made, according to the myths, the supreme god came down to Smaquit a certain Alpoxtin who allotted and marked the territory which was the property of each community; so that no a village consisted merely of a group of the first settlers. No similar myth was recounted for either Bella Coola or Tal'o, although their concepts with regard to land are identical with those of the Kimsquit. This really gave a sacred sanction to the possession of land, an important matter to a people so religiously inclined as the Bella Coola.

The system of land tenure follows the same somewhat 423 obscure principles that govern the possession of names in an 614 unmoral family. Hunting and collecting grounds appropriated by the first people, or by their immediate descendants, are the [illegible] Coola refer to as [illegible], which means "Food Supply." The Bella [illegible]ed, nayumsis,

It will thus be seen that a hunting-area [illegible] of any single individual, but belongs to a [illegible] t the property [illegible]ment of whom live in a single town. The [illegible]up of persons, who intends to give a potlatch usually gives [illegible]tives of a man [224] exclusive rights to the hunting-ground. As [illegible], temporarily, [461] [illegible]h names, there

CHAPTER VI

ORIGIN MYTHS

Introductory—Bella Coola Origin Myths—Origin Myths of Other Tribes—Early Traditions Having the Ceremonial Significance of Origin Myths—Jesuit Origin Myths

Introductory

EXAMPLES will be given here of the origin myths, which are believed to authorize so much of the ritual already described, and to which repeated reference has been made. In 1898 Professor Boas published such an admirable collection of traditions of this type (pp. 50 ff.) that the present writer paid little attention to the subject. The Bella Coola, however, are so intensely proud of the deeds of their first forefathers that several insisted on recounting them before they were willing to do other work; in consequence, a fair number of myths was collected through necessity. Since tales of this type were recounted almost entirely at potlatches, their significance has declined since the prohibition of this rite. Consequently, many legends are only remembered in part; the abbreviated and often pointless series of anecdotes here recorded can be no more than a small part of the rich field which must once have existed among the Bella Coola.[1]

As Professor Boas has clearly shown, origin myths relate how, in the beginning of time, the supreme god sent down to earth the first ancestors of the Bella Coola people, each usually

[1] In writing up this field material, it was my original intention to place all legends together in a separate section, or appendix, following a common anthropological practice. This, however, would have been contrary to Bella Coola thought since origin myths, for example, are regarded as entirely different from other sacred stories, or from incidents connected with shamans,—to name two other groups of what are usually described as "legends." I recognize that the insertion of this chapter of origin myths interrupts the sequence of presenting Bella Coola culture, but I believe that it is the way which the Bella Coola themselves would regard as logical, and that it brings out the essential interactions of this type of myth upon their whole life.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

CHAPTER I

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

General Observations on the Kuciut Society — Powers and Functions of the Society — Initiation — The Ritual of Specific Dances — Various Origin Myths — Kuciut Prerogatives Other than Dances — The Death of a Kuciut — The Final Rite — Concluding Observations and History.

General Observations on the Kuciut Society

IN view of the importance of the kuciut society in the lives of the Bella Coola, it would seem logical to have described it in an earlier part of this monograph. Though an integral part of the complicated structure of social organization, it is a secret, semi-religious grouping which can best be treated separately. The word kuciut is connected etymologically, according to native belief, with ciut, the term for a supernatural being. Thus the meaning of the society's designation is "The Supernatural," or "The Learned," for ciut has both these significations. A member of the society is likewise called a kuciut, plural, kukuciut.

The investigator soon learns of the existence of the society. If he asks a man his name, and then inquires further what type of designation it is, the answer is always that it is his kuciut name, that is, the one by which he is known as a member of the society. Ancestral names are used only at potlatches or other ceremonial occasions, whereas an individual's kuciut appellation is the one which he uses commonly. Moreover, for about three months of every year the Bella Coola live in an atmosphere of kuciut dances with a performance, or its preliminaries, taking place almost every night. Preparations for this ceremonial season, for so it may be termed, begin four days after the September moon is full, while the actual dances commence early in November and are continued until March. During this period the kukuciut are believed to be in intimate but a proud and energetic dancer sometimes repeats a ceremony three or four times.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

THE SUN DANCE*

One of the forms in which Alpuxiów appears is that of the Sun, and in that case he is referred to as Sowalulu. Considering the importance of this deity, it is rather surprising that the kwiat dance of which he is patron is not more impressive. Efforts were made to obtain full details of the ceremonial from several informants, but only a number of incidents and a bare outline could be obtained. In part this was due to the fact that none of the informants* were themselves protégés of Alpuxiów, but this is not in itself sufficient to explain the comparative unimportance of the dance, since full accounts were obtained of other rituals from those who did not own them.

Nothing was learnt of the origin of any of the Sun dance prerogatives, except that ancestors of the owners obtained them from Alpuxiów. It is a common right, and kekwiat having Alpuxiów as patron are found in every village, among them being Sparlin i of Tremil, and Nuxwudzulaix of Nuxalk. As far as could be ascertained, the ritual of various Sun dance performances is identical, so one account will suffice and the dancer can be termed X.

Like other kwiat dancers, X can perform at any time during the ceremonial season, subject to the approval of the marshals. The call comes to him in the normal manner, the uninitiated are expelled, and the kekwiat gather in his house to practise the songs which the singers have just composed. The chorus is of Alpuxiów, describing his manifold functions, and particularly that of guiding the Sun. The following day a second song with similar chorus is composed, and in the evening the tasks are allotted for the manufacture of masks. Four are required; a large one representing Alpuxiów himself, one of

*Needless to say, no connection or similarity is implied with the dance of the same name in other areas.

*Except one man who had forgotten all details since his conversion to Christianity many years before.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

As they grow older the plainness of feature is more pronounced, 142 145 accompanied by increasing heaviness of body (see Plate 16).
Many of the adults are corpulent and move with slow, awkward 481 gait. As a rule the men have great strength and are capable of prolonged and arduous exertion, particularly in paddling; 147 in fact, constant use of canoes may have developed this powerful, ungainly build. Few are good walkers or packers; such, if they are found, usually belong to the lighter interior type.
Among the grown people the face, though unbeautiful, often has 142 a kindly expression, even becoming attractive in laughter or 145 when a friendly grin spreads from ear to ear. With advancing age the prominent nose seems to grow larger, frequently becoming almost aquiline (see Plate 17). Many of the older people assert that this was even more common in former times.
In time the face becomes lined with wrinkles and the body appears to shrink (see Plate 18). The teeth are in many cases worn down to the gums; this seems to cause no discomfort [194] though an old person cannot utter the glottal stops and velar sounds with which the language abounds without emitting a fine spray of saliva. They are absolutely unable to pronounce several of the Bella Coola words, while the constant spitting is a disagreeable feature of their conversation, particularly to [124] an investigator striving, often vainly, to record sounds accurately. The deep wrinkles of old women give them a benign "grandmotherly" expression, which makes them more attractive in extreme age than in youth (see Plate 19). Senile decay is 886 so frequent that the return to infancy in mind as well as in 145 physical powers is regarded as normal.

Among the coastal tribes hair on the face is not uncommon, 142 but in this characteristic the Bella Coola are pre-eminent.
Nearly all the men have sparse moustaches, at least; many 144 have a heavy growth, and several are full-bearded. That this 302 was due to white mixture was assumed at first, but no evidence could be found to support this view. There are a number of half-bloods in the community but they are no more hirsute than the full-blooded Indians. Razors are now almost univer-

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

times, older relatives were revered, not only as senior members 177 of the ancestral family, but as those most familiar with myths 626 and other cherished possessions. With the spread of new ideas, 182 the young people no longer respect the lore of their elders, and 561 consequently do not heed their admonitions and advice. Theoretically, such self-reliance would seem desirable, but in practice it has led to unfortunate results. A young man, considering himself superior to the older people, glories in acting on his own initiative, but too often he lacks the requisite strength of character to guide his own life. If he wishes to drink, he does so; if he desires to marry, he chooses his mate without con- [581] sidering the transmission of ancestral rights which stabilized unions in former times; if he tires of his wife, he deserts her for another; if he cheats or steals, he is no longer restrained by relatives who fear disgrace. The elders, incapable of stemming the tide, watch sadly and ask seriously whether the coming of the white man has brought compensation for the loss it has caused. It is deplorable that the emancipation of the younger men and women has taken place before the development of the sense of individual responsibility and conscience which public opinion formerly rendered less necessary. Christianity provides a moral code for those who are fully converted, but for the many in the transition stage, the break-down of the old system of family influence has been tragic.

Profound religious beliefs and lack of individual initiative 181 are shared by all Bella Coola with the exception, perhaps, of a 177 few of the younger people who, having been educated at white man's schools, have adopted the new outlook unconditionally. In most characteristics they display as wide variability as any 577 other people. In truthfulness, for example, they range from one extreme to the other. As the writer became familiar with 124 the older men, he found it possible to recognize without difficulty the strength of some and the weakness of others. There are liars, but they can be easily detected owing to their lack of finesse. It is a pleasure to record the reliability of the author's friends and informants. Their veracity was checked repeat-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

577 edly until complete confidence was established, simplifying
[124] work in the field to an enormous extent. Equal trust could be placed on these men in other respects; articles of value were repeatedly left in their houses with the absolute certainty that they would be guarded with care. Some few individuals there were, however, who were neither honest nor trustworthy.
[771] Bella Coola religion is not concerned with ethics, but public 626 opinion demands honour in dealing with relatives or friends.
577 In former times, for example, debts incurred by an individual were considered a liability by his relations. If a man died after [424] buying goods on credit for a potlatch, his family were disgraced
[102] if they failed to pay his bills; now, unfortunately, nothing con-[177] strains the younger people, many of whom try to avoid settling even their own debts, much less those of dead relatives. Individual conscience has not replaced the tribal and, more specifically, family influence. Dishonesty in small matters is not [648] uncommon, particularly in dealing with white people who,
[177] according to the Bella Coola, were the first to transgress. The older people bitterly lament the lack of morality of the younger and state, probably with entire justification, that they would have been prevented by the open life which prevailed when several families shared a single house. On the whole, however, the average Bella Coola is probably no less honest than the average white man.

153 Individuals vary enormously in mental ability. In making 124 this investigation, it was necessary to interview all the older people of the tribe. Disregarding those unwilling to provide information, it was found that some absolutely lacked the ability to explain matters with which they were familiar; some did not have sufficient patience to be good teachers; some were so forgetful that they would omit necessary points in a story or account; some were downright stupid, whereas others displayed mental ability of no mean order. In reading ethnological literature, one is apt to think of the troubles experienced by the author, and to overlook the fact that natives have as

Sabatier Dowrath E-1 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

grave difficulties in explaining their customs, as the white man has in understanding them.

The writer was impressed by the brilliance shown by several of the natives. Joshua Moody, for example, is essentially the philosopher. More individualistic than most of his tribesmen, he was one of the first to adopt Christianity and has been a faithful follower of the new creed. Deeply interested in religious questions, he has stored up what has been told him of the Bible and pondered deeply on all problems of life. Not particularly practical, subject to fits of anger or moroseness, but with a meditative temperament which delights in seeking biblical parallels and synonyms for Bella Coola practices, his is the kind of mind which, in other walks of life, would have produced the professor of philosophy. Jim Pollard is quite another type. Essentially practical, he has devoted his energies to keeping abreast of changing conditions. He is the best singer and composer in Bella Coola, the best canoeman for miles; he has learnt to handle a motor-boat engine, to aid prospectors for minerals, and has succeeded in amassing and saving a considerable amount of money. Jim excelled all other informants in clearness and logical presentation of his explanations, though he showed a slight tendency, intelligible enough, to gloss over aspects which he knew would be considered unpleasant. If Jim had been a white man, he would undoubtedly have made his mark in the world of business. The late Captain Schooner differed from either of the preceding. Older than they, and uncorrupted, he, perhaps, came nearest to the original, uncontaminated Bella Coola type. Heavy in build, coarse in humour and expression, he had a heart of gold and was a fine example of a native gentleman. He was glad to assist most patiently in recording ancient lore, being intensely proud of the traditions of his ancestors. A friendship developed from this which is one of the writer's happiest memories. Often in the evenings life in general was discussed, the war, the rush of progress in big cities, the quest for wealth, the spread of white civilization, and the problems raised by the contact of peoples.

group. The moral code is not concerned with morals. The life of the Bahá'í Cause would be unbearable to most white people, yet they find it far from unpleasant. They sigh at present conditions, but there is much to amuse them meanwhile. If several people are talking together, one is sure to hear bursts of laughter every few minutes. It takes little to amuse them; a story they have heard a hundred times, the troubles of a neighbour with his wife, the eccentricity of a white man, the stupidity of the immigrant, any of these is enough to cause a hearty laugh. When collecting information, it was constantly necessary to joke with them; the most trifling attention was enough, but they lost interest in the work unless kept smiling. Their sense of humour is not refined; jokes about sexual matters are common and are enjoyed alike by men, women, and children. It is not that their minds are perverted, but rather that they have no reference to discussing this topic, so they find it easy to see the ludicrous aspects of a subject which is ever near the surface in their minds. They have no hesitation in poking fun at their friends; a successful practical joke, such as hiding the actor's reflector, is enough to fill them with amusement. If the victim shows temporary resentment, the glee of his friends is complete, and shrieks of laughter usually terminate the row.

Unless the white man who comes to live among the Bahá'í Cause is unusually broad-minded, he is at first repelled by the dirt and squalidness prevailing everywhere; even the people themselves seem unnatural. He finds it difficult to realize the sincerity of their religious beliefs, and the manner in which these influence their daily lives is hard to grasp. The polyandrous system appears so grotesque that it seems to reflect a psychology diametrically opposed to his own. The force of public opinion on personal conduct is almost incomprehensible. Gradually, however, he begins to understand the reasons underlying Bahá'í life. The polyandrous becomes intelligible when regarded as a means of achieving force; constant attention to supernatural beings is natural considering the free conversation

G. Smith. [illegible] (1903-1905)[illegible] [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] OF THE BELLA COOLA AND [illegible] TRIBES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

By Harlan I. Smith

INTRODUCTION.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

B.AE Bureau E-5 (1922-1924)948
BAE Bulletin 925

marching, and enlisting of songs; in 1923 it was found that Jim Pollard (see Plate 2) alone had a sufficiently accurate memory to act as announcer. As more and more men wished to perform, he found himself unable to keep the men in order, and asked me to join the chain as prompter. I held this position for the rest of the winter, taking a full part in every ceremony. Although the old customs had broken down enormously, this actual participation enabled me to understand the winter dances in a manner impossible from mere description. Later on, phonographic records were made of many of the songs used, thus preserving specimens of the fast disappearing music.

My intimate association with the Bella Coola enabled me to collect the material here presented which, having been verified and recorded, I have every reason to believe is correct. Nevertheless, it has one serious defect owing to the lack of aptitude of my ear. I found it almost impossible to differentiate certain sounds; in fact, I sometimes recorded the same word with different spellings. Consequently, I cannot guarantee the accuracy of the native terms used in this monograph. Moreover, I was entirely unable to analyze proper names, which would have been of great value in understanding the attributes of supernatural beings.

When writing up field notes, the realization of my own inefficiency in the recording of sounds tempted me to rely upon the spelling of Boas whenever possible. After considerable hesitation, I rejected this course for the following reason. Ethnological work falls into two categories, descriptive and comparative. This monograph is of the former type, based on actual work in the field and the inclusion of any material from another source would destroy its originality. I believe that a description work should consist exclusively of the author's own research, and I have adhered to this principle in spite of the advantages which would have followed the use of Boas' linguistic terms. For the same reason no attempt has been made to compare the customs and beliefs of the Bella Coola with those of other tribes, although this would undoubtedly have shed put his grandfather into the ground beside his grandmother but it may all be for the best."[illegible]

There is no doubt that conditions of this nature assist the mourning relatives to bear up under their grief. This fact was emphasized by several Bella Coola, and in addition the writer was able to observe it on several occasions. They readily respond to suggestions of any kind and undoubtedly derive comfort from the laudatory comments of influential chiefs.

Speeches of this general nature are always delivered as the grave is being filled in. Sometimes this work is finished before all who wish to do so have expressed themselves, sometimes the remarks are so short that they are ended before all the earth has been thrown back. When the hole has been filled to ground level, it is stamped down and the surplus earth scattered out of sight among the bushes, no mound being thrown up.

Great care is always taken to prevent the return of the ghost. In addition to the weighting with stones already described, other methods are used before the funeral party leaves the cemetery. [illegible] boards are usually laid flat over the grave and rocks piled on them for the way up from below. A further precaution is the setting upright of four stakes, one at each corner of the hole, and fastening ropes of cedar-bark between them along the east and west sides of the grave. The significance of this is not fully understood, except that the ghost cannot pass the ropes. Four spruce saplings are cut and placed either between the grave and the village, or one on each side of the hole, these alone seem less an effective barrier.

While these precautions are being taken, any clothing and utensils brought to the grave and not already consumed are thrown on the fire and allowed to burn brightly. The ashes was not carefully observed. Those waiting to dig took turns with the tools; there was no supervision, and no orders given. When the grave was ready, Jim Pollard asked Julius to perform the rite with the spruce bough, which he did with a branch brought by one of the youths. The young men lowered the coffin into the grave while the band continued to play. The missionary then read the Christian burial service, after which he withdrew. Some of the young men brought planks from old houses nearby, moved them to the side of the grave and laid them over the coffin as a cover. At this juncture Julius, one of the oldest and most conservative of the Bella Coola, rose to speak. First he offered consolation to the mourning relatives by pointing out that all must travel the same road. Then he spoke to Jesus, telling Him not to linger, but to travel back the path of her ancestors from generation to generation until she reached the place where they first came down from above, and dance to music in Nuxalk. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of the speech, which was punctuated by calls of "Ho!" from the male Bella Coola. The next speaker was Jim Pollard, the most influential Kimsquit and a personal friend, though not a relative, of Captain Schooner's.

[illegible] [illegible]

"Go," he said to the dead woman, "Go to the localities from which came your first forefathers in the beginning of time. There you will find your most valuable ancestral possessions. Go to them, do not linger and lose yourself on the road from generation to generation."

Turning to George Nelson, he went on, "Do not be disconsolate, all of us must travel the same road. It was made by no man, it is the work of Hyamsim."

Looking back once more to the grave, he said, "In Kimsquit we buried many illustrious relatives of yours. You will be among friends, whereas we are left to lament your departure."

It was impossible to write down the words at the time and the above record is not literally correct, although it expresses the gist of the speech.

Captain Schooner whispered to Robert Hood, another of the

The details of this incident are sufficiently circumstantial to presuppose a distorted historical event. Moreover, many of the old people had heard of the incident, another indication of the accuracy of the tradition. So far as could be judged, some of the vision must have reached Bella Coola about the year 1800.[1] It is said that the Indians sang the following song in a language unknown to any of its hearers: Ayamkwa ayamkwa ayamkwa yaiyiya.[2] None of the older men appear to have any idea of the meaning of these words, or even of the language to which they belong.

No event has had such profound effect on the lives of the Indians of British Columbia as the coming of the white man. It would be surprising if leading backwards, they did not find that it had been foretold by prophets. The preceding story is the only Bella Coola example of such a belief, although echo of a similar kind are found widely throughout the province. In addition, there are a few traditions of prophecies fulfilled by the white man. One of these is that long, long ago, a shaman named Ilan in the future the dead would return with the ability to make fire by striking the end of a small rang along a rough surface, and that, soon after, all the Indians would die. The Bella Coola consider that traditions are referred to in the first part of the statement, and most their view depends

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible]

[illegible] e passengers in Nuikpum's canoe are a number [illegible] to replace the usual crew on this occasion. Each [illegible] ne type of mask, painted with red diagonals, and [illegible] ulbers* projecting from the top.* After the un- [illegible] e guard, for some time upon the wonders, their [illegible] ewiwatik, takes his place and his followers begin [illegible] s ancient song, believed to be sung in Nuikpum's [illegible] ne Bella Coola. The theme is:

[illegible] mortals, I am Nanamuikhimar Nuikpum, the [illegible] uikpum."

[illegible] ute starts, a figure rises from among the singers, [illegible] ak with heavy eye-brows* and carrying a light [illegible] is four to length, wound spirally with alternate [illegible] d and unfixed cedar-bark and crowned with a [illegible] d bark. Holding this in his hand he begins to [illegible], running back and forth a few steps at a time [illegible] e bearing of sticks, lifting his feet freely from the [illegible] bending back and forth in airy grace, all the while [illegible] and to and fro. There are no fixed steps, the only [illegible] ect be convey the impression of being light of foot [illegible] dancer; accordingly, the person selected for this [illegible] e with these qualifications. As he moves, Ax'lik- [illegible] ne to the uninitiated that this is Nanamuikhimar, [illegible] ent rapers who accompanies Nuikpum antiguards [illegible] At this point Ax'likmalum's own song may or [illegible] ng. It never varies, and is believed to have been [illegible] n from dim antiquity. X himself must be the [illegible] dingly it can be sung only when the dancer has a [illegible] If this is the case, the mandals request him to [illegible], if necessary, teach him the exact words. X, [illegible] ed the fire, sings alone and unaccompanied, then [illegible] peat the song in unison with the beating of their [illegible] ax'likmalum himself dances, using, of course, the [illegible] s. At this juncture the uninitiated must be en- [illegible] ldren are sent out.

[illegible] e model was purchased for the National Museum of Canada [illegible] e model was obtained for the National Museum of Canada

[The Dance of Wild]

The last to enter himself is Endlisa Nuxkinqim, an eleventh individual, who always wears more presents than anyone else. When X announces that the beings above have taken their places, a carpenter brings forward the object covered with cedar-bark and painted with a design of Kwocumdidzis,* holds it above X's head, and then gives it to a herald who casts it into the fire. At the same time X throws on the flames some dyed cedar-bark, some undyed cedar-bark, a little eagle down, and some chicken grouse, saying:

"Please Kwocumdidzis,* accept this offering and be present," and throws his hands up in the air as if casting some object upwards.

Still dancing, X calls out hoji several times.

The painted representation and the cedar-bark are objects which Kwocumdidzis likes to receive; the chicken grouse supplies the flame on which they ascend to him.[1] The same procedure is repeated for the eight other brothers, with slight variations in the words addressed to each. To Gwgwedzidzis, for example, X says:

[534] Gwgwedzidzis
Wunlipachin cilkwaxil[2]
Gwgwedzidzis
Gwgwedzidzis[3]

Kwocumdidzisxwa
ts'ilx-ptsa ulkwa ts'ax,

ts'ilxwa-xwulk
the recipient,[4]

When the time comes to invite the hungry Tlitlcqilkin to an offering of food instead of bark to cast upon the flames, X continues to dance after the final gift, and presently a shaman is heard on the roof while some Sacrist, chosen beforehand for the purpose, compresses a hidden bladder-whistle which the assembled know to the voice of the owl. Whether they be-

---

[184] The Kwoqwi the offerings are made by a doctor who has this prerogative in connection with the same Tlitlcqilkin.

[174] With other name in Dzakwa, "The Receiver of Many Gifts."

[illegible] Object also to one of the larger compartments, the service made are to identify.

[illegible] This designation, properly applied only to Kwocumdidzis, is often used for the brothers as well.

[illegible] These words are virtually sung, with vocalist has reaching the end of each subdivision. A musical rendering of the music for the Federal Museum of Canada, sound 1[illegible] in the singer, Jim Pelkula.

[illegible]

[The Dance of Life]

[illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] revolving curtains at the same time.

Bellhandlum does not fail to point out to the uninitiated: "That is the way to sings up above. Look at him! That is what he does in his own home."

If foreigners, guests for the potlatch, are in attendance, Bellhandlum adds that the supernatural beings are disappointed at having been called too late for it. Then the uninitiated are expelled, the masks burnt, and the bellacoolas departed.

A few further notes are necessary on this dance. If a potlatch is to be given after the burial season, the calling of these supernatural beings is sometimes reserved to the last burial dance, and any foreigners present, or uninitiated guests, are told that the beings have come for the ceremony. There is thus a superficial appearance of confusion between these burial persons and scaul dancers. It is nothing more than a ruse. Hence, since the nine brothers do not appear at the potlatch, and nothing is said to explain their absence, it is merely a subterfuge to increase the interest of the rite. Nor is any connection necessary; in fact, X usually chooses to call the two other burial, without the spectacular throwing of presents on the fire. In this case X and the mandals consult and select the proper day for the beginning of the ceremony. On the night preceding that chosen, the bellacoolas are called to X's house and one of the mandals announces that he can hear X's call wanting to come to him. He answers simply:

"I am afraid."

The uninitiated are not expelled from X's house, so that they know what is to take place. No ritual occurs on that evening, but one of X's friends remains constantly with him, so X is easier in any emergency. Bellacoolas are often seen up the slopes of the neighbouring mountains with whistles which the uninitiated hear, and which lead them to believe that supernatural beings are in the vicinity.

[illegible] The photographic record was made of this, National Museum of Canada, negative [illegible], for Dubois.

CHAPTER III

SONGS

533*

Introductory — Scandi Songs — Ko-ko Songs — Bulu Songs — Wandolebeng Songs — Marriage Songs — Mourning Songs — Dance Songs — Easter Songs — Non-Ceremonial Songs.

Introductory

THE singing of songs is an essential part of all Bulu Ceremonies so that a study of them is important, entirely apart from their musical value. They may throw light on the beliefs of the performers, on the aims of the ceremonies, and, above all, give concrete instances of what the uninitiated are led to believe. This is particularly true of those used in Initiation, and for this reason all songs have been followed until this chapter in which they can be grouped together.

The text of songs are difficult to obtain. Snatches of many are remembered, but few individuals are acquainted with the complete version. A phonograph was used to record the music, and it was soon found that very few people were qualified to sing into the machine. Some became confused and forgot the words, some began to laugh, and some lacked the poise to attempt to sing. One elderly Kwasiri man, Jim Pulawi, was found to be the best and most reliable singer, and he was used almost exclusively for phonographic work. Above the records are arranged with his musical technique. Others approached his ability, but he alone possessed an art which had been common in former days. Over one hundred songs were obtained with the assistance of this man.

The text was always obtained before a song was sung into the machine, thus ensuring that the recorded version agreed with the written words. Even with this check, the writing down of songs is extremely difficult. Chord endings are widely employed, consisting of non-essential syllables inserted for musical effect. It was often impossible to record them in the [illegible] ness, although they are obvious on the phonograph records. In singing, moreover, sounds, especially vowel sounds, are altered to fit the tune, a factor which accounts for further discrepancies between record and tune. A frequent device is reduplication, a word or group of words is repeated in singing when not called for in the spoken version. Finally one sound occurs in singing which is practically unknown in speaking, a roller r (recorded as ɹ) which gives a whistling effect. Most choruses and some which songs consist of meaningless sounds, in such cases the tune alone is important and no attempt was made to record the syllables.

It was quite as difficult to obtain interpretations as to record texts. Songs which have been handed down for generations cannot be expected to contain expressions which are meaningless even to the older men; some recently composed are full of metaphorical devices to conceal their real significance from the uninitiated. The result is consequently a series of words which, taken one at a time, convey no meaning. In many cases it was impossible to obtain literal translations, even with the willing assistance of younger men familiar with English. Every effort was made to get the general meaning, and it is felt that this object was adequately achieved, though the transcriptions may not be sufficiently accurate for grammatical analysis.

Singers function in every community. In fact, to become famous depends to largely upon their efforts that they are always important members of the community. Some singers are created by the initiation of an ancestral prerogative, others by having composed a suitable tune. The young man who has done so, calls one of the established musicians aside and hums it to him. If the tune is favorably impressed, he may have [illegible] repeat it to his fellows, and if it wins their approval, the composer may be asked to join their ranks for the occasion on which it is to be used. Thus encouraged, the young man is likely to try again, or he may be invited to assist at some ceremony for which a large number of singers is required. If proficient, he is certain to win recognition in course of time, emphatically that the songs which they used were quite more than series of meaningless phrases, often in languages unknown to the listeners. It was possible to collect the following examples of this type.

533*
756

(Text [illegible])

(a) Recorded on wax [illegible], National Museum of Can. stages, Jan. [illegible]

It is believed that this song was composed by [illegible], but no one has any knowledge of when, or for what purpose, it was made. It [illegible] used to in Bella Coola many [illegible] ago, and the words and tune have since been remembered. [illegible] ya is said to be the word for man in a language spoken on [illegible] side of Vancouver Island, so it is assumed that the ritual must have come from that region.

The second example consists of a single word.

(Text [illegible])

(a) Recorded on wax [illegible], National Museum of Can. stages, Jan. [illegible]

Hyalton is in a language unintelligible to any the Bella Coola. This word and tune are supposed to have more meaning than the first example.

Easter Songs

533*
575*
996*
[124]
[756]

Easter Songs are the only songs now carried out the Bella Coola with some approximate completeness, and my of the songs used at them are still remembered by all. number of dances took place during the period of mourning and the music of all the songs used were collected, as well the music of the majority. This explains the full versions the examples in this section as compared to the preceding. Moreover, it is probable that Easter songs, composed It was by the singers, have always been more logical than employed by shamans to which the fetish of supernatural action has been preserved. In former times, Easter songs ve always

524

Pass right middle finger close to the mouth between left index finger loop and left little finger loop.

Release tips, the right middle finger preserving the series of strings just released from running towards the left hand.

FIG. 16. "[illegible], an Old Woman."

Grip tenth string with tips of right thumb and index finger, and release tenth.

Return to normal position.

Gently release right middle finger, at the same time extending the loop held between tips of right thumb and index finger, by inserting in this loop all the fingers of the right hand. By gently parting the hands, the figure in the middle, which represents the old woman, can be made to travel towards the left hand. The movement is sometimes improved by extending the left index finger loop by inserting in it the left thumb, and separating these two digits (Figure 16). As the figure is moving, the manipulator sings:*

[illegible]	[illegible]
Where are you going	old woman?

The "old woman" replies:

[illegible]	[illegible]
I am going to sick land	on the bottom house.*

The interrogator continues:

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Be careful	but you fall down (as you go)	towards House Sides?

Release left little finger and the "old woman" falls.

FIG. 6 TOOD

Bella Coola opening.

Pass middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down the radial index finger string.

Recorded on song 112 D (A), National Museum of Canada, origin, Jim Pakook. [126]

*The house further downstream.

*This seems to be the usual version of the song, although when it was recorded on the phonograph the singer insisted on giving a more elaborate third part concerning [illegible]:

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
	old woman

524 silver side of distal silver thumb string; hook down this string through thumb loops.

Insert left index finger into left thumb loops from distal side, passing to silver side of the two distal radial index finger strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb string; hand index finger upwards and away from manipulator, taking up this proximal radial thumb string on distal aspect of index finger.

Enlarge left thumb and extend.

There is now a diamond-shaped figure of two strands near the left hand; pass left thumb into this diamond away from manipulator and take up on its back the two strings forming the right lower side of the diamond.

Insert left index finger, with its loop, into left thumb loops from proximal side.

FIG. 19. "A Porcupine."

With tips of right thumb and index finger lift loop from left index finger, drawing this loop through left thumb loops.

Release left thumb and index finger.

Replace loop held between tips of right thumb and index finger on left thumb, without twisting.

Release right thumb and little finger.

Extend right middle finger loop by passing into it, from proximal side, all the digits of the right hand.

Extend and the porcupine appears (Figure 19). Its head is here downwards near the left hand, and its tail is the loop around the right radial thumb string.

[525] The manipulator sings:[1]

Spreadeagle-ing	Supercilious!	Whenever you	Shuttle you
Don't hurry away,	go easily!	when you go	to your home, shuttle!

O porcupine!

OTL, OR SOCIAL'S NEST

Opening 8 with middle fingers.

Insert thumbs into middle finger loops from proximal side and transfer these loops to thumbs, keeping them distal, and at the same time releasing middle fingers.

[526] [196] [1] Recorded as song VII D 16, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pelkmit. It has indecently obvious to a feminine creature.

Jenness Eskimo E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

With left index, middle, ring, and little fingers hook down from proximal side the right elbow little finger string. 524

Release right little finger.

With right little finger hook down right elbow thumb string.

Release right thumb.

With right index finger hook down left radial thumb string.

Release left thumb.

By extending gently the figure appears. The crooked figure near the left hand represents the cripple, the upright figure near the right hand with projecting curves represents a man with umbilical hernia (Figure 21).

The following dialogue is sung accompanies this figure:*

The man with hernia sings:

Ai, ai, ai,	ahkhaw	chwkhaw!
Hi! Hi! Hi!	Hurry up,	you cripple.

The cripple answers:

Ooniyaahw	chwqhaw!	ai, ai, ai
Don't say that	you man with umbilical hernia.	Hi! Hi! Hi!

SIXTH. THE Swing

Bella Coola opening.

Pass middle, ring, and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side, and hook down radial index finger string.

With thumbs take up radial index finger string from proximal side, keeping this string distal.

Bring hands together; insert left thumb into right distal thumb and index finger loop from proximal side; lift this loop from thumb, but not from the index finger, without extending.

Insert right thumb into left middle thumb and index finger loop from proximal side and lift this loop from left thumb, but not from index finger.

Extend.

There are now two loops on each thumb and one on each index finger.

Pass middle fingers into loops hooked down by ring and little fingers from proximal side.

Each loop hooked down by the middle, ring, and little fingers is crossed by the proximal elbow thumb string; with backs of middle fingers take up this string where it crosses the hooked down loop.

Pass middle fingers, still carrying on their backs the string just picked up, through index finger loops from proximal side, and into both thumb loops from distal side.

---

*Recorded as sung VII D 4a, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pelkus. [126 195]

The form indicates that a somewhat cripple is indicated.

J. McIlwraith E-5 (1912-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Release index fingers; the index finger loop is now held on the backs of the middle fingers.

Lift distal thumb loop from thumbs; this loop is now held on backs of middle fingers.

Pass index fingers into the three loops hooked down on middle fingers from proximal side.

Pass index fingers distal to radial thumb string, and middle fingers proximal to radial thumb string, clutching this string between tips of fingers; bend fingers upwards and away from manipulator, taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

Fig. 22. "The Snowy."

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

Gently extend.

This shows the snowy; with thumbs gently depress the two pendent loops in the centre and the eyes become evident (Figure 22).

The manipulator sings:[1]

Nuxpiqitk-kamy	sacrificial	supernatural paraphrase.
Known your symbols,[2]	is to me dangerous,	O, dreaded and powerful one!

Pass thumbs from distal side into the loops hooked down on ring and little fingers.

Bend index fingers downwards and away from manipulator, and upwards towards manipulator through the loop hooked down on ring and little fingers, and tip to tip with thumbs, releasing thumbs when complete.

Fig. 23. "Raven's Hammer."

Pass thumbs into distal index finger loops from proximal side and transfer each loop to its respective thumb.

Release index fingers.

This shows the snowy with eyeballs reversed, appearing as a hammer (Figure 23).[3]

As the figure appears the manipulator sings:

Sagamen	Quat	she can stand.
The hammer of	Raven	long, long ago.

[1] The song accompanying the whole figure was recorded on song VII D 18b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pakuck.

[2] This refers to the belief that the snowy projects death darting rays from its eyes.

[3] This explanation is offered for the association between a snowy and Raven's hammer.

S: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

MATERIA MEDICA OF THE BELLA COOLA AND NEIGHBOURING TRIBES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

By Harlan I. Smith

INTRODUCTION

This paper describes the materia medica of four tribes of British Columbia, the Bella Coola of Bella Coola valley, the Gitksan of Skeena river, the Carrier who live in the territory behind both of these tribes, and the Sekani of the headwaters of Peace river. Among the Bella Coola the medicines are largely family possessions known to a few individuals only, so that two families may have different remedies for the same specific complaint; but this is not the case among the other tribes. Everywhere magical practices enter largely into the treatment of disease, but are not touched upon in this report. It was impossible for the Indians to diagnose many of their maladies, so that the identifications given here are in many cases problematical.

Most of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1920-22, by Joshua Moody, apparently a full-blood Bella Coola Indian, born about 1848. As he did not speak English he gave the data in Chinook jargon, which has been interpreted and arranged in logical order. Joshua is an Indian scientist with great knowledge of the local plants and animals. He remembers when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in Bella Coola valley, and when the inhabitants saw only one other white man every year or two. Consequently he can recall the old Bella Coola material culture before it was much affected by European ideas.

Some of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1922-23 by the late Captain Schooner, also, apparently, a full-blood, born about 1848, who used the Chinook jargon. Alec Davis, Alexander Clahsam, Louis Hall, and other Bella Coola Indians likewise gave information and corroboration.

Most of the information relating to the Northern Carrier Indians of Tlatchie was secured during 1920-1922 from Charlie West, alias Pretty Charlie or Handsome Charlie, a native of that place, born about 1871. Charlie used the peculiar form of broken or pidgeon English commonly employed for communication between the whites and the Carrier and Chinookan Indians of this region.

The information about the Sekani and the Northern Carriers of Hagwilget is from stray field notes kindly supplied by Mr. D. Jenness.

The information relating to the Gitksan was secured in 1922-26 from the late John Fowler and Abraham Fowler of Kitwanga, Luke Fowler and Bob Robinson of Hazelton, with additions and corroboration from a few others, all old Gitksan Indians, apparently full-blood. The information was secured mainly in English, although Abraham Fowler used also the Chinook jargon.

The method the writer employed was to submit specimens of the plants to his informants and question them concerning all their uses. Of the information thus obtained only the medicinal portion has been presented here. The plants were later identified by Mr. M. O. Malte, of the National Museum, Ottawa.

B
BCS 121
757
101
131
B 429
B 115
191
C 115
C
198
S 127
T 115
T 191
B BCS
129
122

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NER Bellacoola NER

128 light on obscure points. That is a task for the comparative student and nothing but confusion would result from such an incorporation in this volume. For the benefit of the reader, [114] footnotes have been inserted referring to The Mythology of the Bella Coola Indians[1] by Boas, the most comprehensive description of the tribe. In the field I deliberately disregarded published accounts.

182 And what of these people, the subject of this book?

The intimate experiences of the second winter in Bella Coola only confirmed my feeling of sadness at the decay of the old arts and crafts. Music, painting, carving, weaving, story-telling, acting, all are passing away. Only a handful of the tribe survives, and of them the younger people ape the white man and have little interest in the lore and customs of their fathers. I know of few sadder experiences than talking with some Bella Coola patriarch and realizing the tragedy which he feels at the termination of his people's culture.

Though the individual may suffer, civilization must press onward and the life of the Indian will soon disappear. With it will pass forever manners, customs, beliefs, rites, and knowledge, data of value to students of man both now and in the future. Every year lessens the amount of information available. In Bella Coola, for example, the death of Captain Schooner left a gap which none could fill. Others must follow him, and within a short time there will be no ethnological work possible in that tribe. A tithe of the people may survive, but their culture, the growth of generations, will have been swept away.

100 Most of those to whom I am indebted for help in this study have passed away. Dr. A. C. Haddon and Dr. W. H. R. Rivers, both of Cambridge University, who were my mentors in anthropology, are dead; so too is Dr. E. Sapir, former Chief of the Anthropological Division in the National Museum, who gave me instruction in phonetics, and Mr. H. I. Smith, Dominion [127] Archaeologist, to whom are owing most of the photographs reproduced here. I can only place on record my deep obligation and gratitude to each of these four. Dr. D. Jenness, who succeeded Dr. Sapir, was most co-operative. In Bella Coola, I was treated with uniform kindness by the white inhabitants, particularly Mrs. Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Burt Robson, and Mr. and Mrs. Andy Christensen.

[1] Memoirs of the American Museum of Natural History, vol. II, 1898.

Finally, and most important of all, I wish to express my appreciation to the Bella Coola themselves. Without their generous, kindly and helpful co-operation, this book could never have been written. I came as an uninvited stranger; they treated me as a friend and a guest; and I left with intense regret. My chief friends were Joshua Moody, Captain Schooner, and Jim Pollard, but I was also greatly assisted by Mr. Willie Mack, Mr. and Mrs. Tallio Charlie, and Mr. and Mrs. Lame Charlie. To a host of others I am indebted in only a slightly less extent. The aid and friendship of these men and women is one of my pleasantest memories, and one which I wish to record in all gratitude and appreciation.

In the actual publication of this complicated manuscript, I have likewise been fortunate in receiving co-operation and help. The University of Toronto Press accepted it for publication during the war, facing—and overcoming—the inevitable shortage of materials and of skilled craftsmen. Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining the type for phonetic symbols; to avoid undue duplication all native words, whether proper or common names, have been printed in italics. It is a tribute to the Press that it has completed the work. I am especially indebted to several former members of the editorial staff: Mrs. Hewitt, who supervised the initial editing, and her assistants, Mrs. Hackett and Mrs. Buzek. Mr. Weir, foreman of the composing room of the Press, has surmounted endless difficulties with enthusiasm and ingenuity. I am also grateful to Miss Harman, Associate Editor, who took the responsibility for final production details. Mr. Burns, General Manager of the Press, and Professor Brown, Editor, have both been helpful and co-operative throughout.

PREFACE

THE term Bella Coola can be applied to the Indians who formerly occupied more than twenty villages on the lower Bella Coola River in central British Columbia, to their near kinsfolk on the Kimsquit River, and to those living at the head of South Bentinck Arm. Disease and changed conditions consequent upon the coming of the white man have so reduced their numbers that the last two groups of settlements have been virtually abandoned, while only one village remains in the Bella Coola valley. This is located on a reserve near the mouth of the river, and its four hundred inhabitants comprise practically all the survivors of what was once a tribe of several thousand people, with a distinctive language and culture of their own.

The material contained in this monograph was collected in this one village many years ago for the National Museum of Canada.[1] I was in the field during two periods that extended from March to August, 1911, and from September, 1913, to February, 1914. My field notes were worked up and the completed manuscript submitted to the Museum in 1916. Since that time it has suffered various vicissitudes. Recommended for publication by the Chief of the Anthropological Division, it passed through the hands of various editors; questions were raised about its size and the suitability of detailed studies of social anthropology in a government publication, and by the time these matters were adjusted, funds for extensive publications were unavailable and the manuscript was put aside. Since the aim of the investigation was to record, as far as possible, the sum-total of the complex and interwoven social life of the Bella Coola, I did not think it desirable to prepare short articles[2] summarizing different aspects, preferring to await an

[1] Then the Victoria Memorial Museum.

[2] The only exception was a short article on Bella Coola supernatural animals published in the Ontario Annual Archaeological Report for 1916-17, pp. 17-27.

[illegible] Dawson [illegible] (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

128 opportunity for the publication of the manuscript as a whole.
[124] I am deeply grateful to the Canadian Social Science Research Council for making this possible, and to their anonymous readers, many of whose suggestions I have utilized in the final draft, and to the University of Toronto Press for their subsidization.

Though the lapse of time between the field investigation and the appearance in print of the results is unfortunate, it is a matter of less importance than would be the case in other branches of science. To the student of social institutions, the significant fact is that a certain group of homo sapiens has practised certain customs, whether in 1922 or 1948 is immaterial. Furthermore, the aim of the investigation was to collect [121] information on Bella Coola life as it was before the breakdown of their own culture, and for this, data collected between 1922 and 1924 are more valuable than those acquired today. The manuscript was prepared from my extensive field notes, when the material was still fresh in my mind, and, with the exception of this preface and a few minor changes in editing,* is presented as it was written in 1924-26.

121 When studying the Bella Coola, I was definitely under the influence of the English school of anthropologists. To Haddon, Rivers, and Seligman, to name the outstanding English field anthropologists of their generation, the study of a native tribe meant an expedition to some far-off corner of the world, to a people about whom little was known. A return visit was improbable; aboriginal customs were passing away, hence it was the duty of the field investigator to learn and to record every scrap of information. I remember Dr. Haddon's insistence that it might be some trivial detail which would throw light on culture distribution, and hence, perhaps, aid in the reconstruction of tribal or racial movements, or in theoretical studies of the development or degeneration of institutions. Characteristic of this school, too, was an intense human interest in field

*Especially in changing the number of years which has elapsed since various incidents took place.

U.S. Geological Survey [illegible]
USGS Bulletin [illegible]

work. To overcome the difficulties of language, of suspicion, and of native reticence was a task in itself. And only when this was accomplished and the investigator recognized as a friend, could the information be obtained upon which the investigator was to describe "his people." As a broad generalization, the attitude of American anthropologists to field work in America is very different. Indians live near or land; well-educated interpreters and informants are usually available; there is no thought of gleaning information from suspicious natives at the ends of the earth; and, perhaps most important of all, so much of Indian life has disappeared that the American anthropologist must learn by interview and question, rather than by observation and participation. The American school has tended to return repeatedly, often for short periods, to a small group or even to a single informant, and to publish intensive studies of aspects of culture with which the investigator is concerned.

Both approaches have their advantages. Anthropologically, using that term in its broadest sense, American Indians are better known than the natives of other continents; the professional anthropologist knows where to find detailed studies in technical journals and government publications, and to combine them if he wishes to know the life of a people as a whole. But to the anthropologist who is not a specialist in America, as well as to scholars in other social sciences, this lack of synthesis is a definite deterrent, and it may well be asked whether the anthropologist has played his part in making known the results of his branch to workers in cognate fields. It was this which led R. H. Lowie to publish his Crow Indians,[1] and though the author reiterates that the volume contains little that he had not made known in earlier writings[2] in anthropological journals, it is safe to say that the Crow Indians will be read, quoted, and used when other reports on which it is based have been forgotten.

[1] New York: 1935.
[2] Id., p. ix.

121 If I were to investigate and report on the Bella Coola at the present time, I would undoubtedly be influenced by many 128 years of contact with American anthropologists and their work. I would assume a greater knowledge of North-West coast institutions, less interest in the details of ceremonial class, and it would be impossible not to avoid comparisons with, and observations upon, the theoretical implications of many of the facts recorded. But though every field investigator is entirely objective as to the facts he collects, yet his interests, and his method of presenting them, are coloured by his background; in my case, by the older school of English anthropology. On the whole, I think this is fortunate. It means that the Bella Coola are portrayed as I saw them when I came fresh to a new field, practically unaffected by problems of North-West coast culture, and fully prepared to throw myself into their life. They were "my people," not a group in which I was interested because they had, or had not, certain culture traits with which I was concerned. In the course of my teaching experience, furthermore, I have wished repeatedly to give serious students detailed field monographs in which are recorded the interwoven social, religious, and folk-lore concepts of a people, the sum-total of their mental life, collected by one man at one time. This I have tried to do for the Bella Coola.

123 Following the English tradition, I wish to record how this material was collected. Before leaving for British Columbia, [115] I was advised by the late H. I. Smith, who had worked in the area, to talk to Joshua Moody (see Plate 1), an elderly Bella Coola Indian with whom Smith had worked. On explaining to Joshua that I had come to record in permanent form the traditions and lore of his people, Joshua grinned broadly and promised his help. Unfortunately, he spoke only a few words of English. I tried interpreter after interpreter, Indian and white, with only fair success, and my difficulties increased with the [464] opening of the canning season and the consequent employment of the younger men and women. I was urged to learn the [122] Chinook jargon, which serves widely as a lingua franca on the [198]

numbering, and ordering of songs, in 1923 it was found that Jim Pollard (see Plate 4) alone had a sufficiently accurate memory to act as informant. As more and more men wished to perform, he found himself unable to keep the songs in order, and asked me to join the chorus as prompter. I held this position for the rest of the winter, taking a full part in every ceremony. Although the old customs had broken down enormously, this actual participation enabled me to understand the winter dances in a manner impossible from mere description. Later on, phonographic records were made of many of the songs and thus preserving specimens of the fast disappearing music.

My intimate association with the Bella Coola enabled me to collect the material here presented which, having been verified and reverified, I have every reason to believe is correct. Nevertheless, it has one serious defect owing to the lack of experience of my ear. I found it almost impossible to differentiate certain sounds; in fact, I sometimes recorded the same word with different spellings. Consequently, I cannot guarantee the accuracy of the native terms used in this monograph. Moreover, I was entirely unable to analyze proper names, which would have been of great value in understanding the attributes of supernatural beings.

When writing up field notes, the realization of my own inefficiency in the recording of sounds tempted me to rely upon the spelling of Boas whenever possible. After considerable hesitation, I rejected this course for the following reason. Ethnological work falls into two categories, descriptive and comparative. This monograph is of the former type, based on actual work in the field and the inclusion of any material from another source would destroy its originality. I believe that a descriptive work should consist exclusively of the author's own research, and I have adhered to this principle in spite of the advantages which would have followed the use of Boas' linguistic terms. For the same reason no attempt has been made to compare the customs and beliefs of the Bella Coola with those of other tribes, although this would undoubtedly have shed light on obscure points. There is a rush for the comparative student and nothing but confusion would result from such an incorporation in this volume. For the benefit of the reader, references have been inserted referring to The Mythology of the Bella Coola Indians[1] by Boas, the most comprehensive description of the tribe. In the field I deliberately disregarded published accounts.

And what of these people, the subject of this book?

The intimate experiences of the second winter in Bella Coola only confirmed my feeling of sadness at the decay of the old arts and crafts. Music, painting, carving, weaving, storytelling, acting, all are passing away. Only a handful of the tribe survives, and of them the younger people are the white men and have little interest in the law and customs of their fathers. I know of few sadder experiences than talking with some Bella Coola patriarch and realizing the tragedy which he feels at the termination of his people's culture.

Though the individual may suffer, civilization must press onward and the life of the Indian will soon disappear. With it will pass forever manners, customs, beliefs, rites, and knowledge, data of value to students of man both now and in the future. Every year lessens the amount of information available. In Bella Coola, for example, the death of Captain Schooner left a gap which none could fill. Others must follow him, and within a short time there will be no ethnological work possible in that tribe. A tribe of the people may survive, but their culture, the growth of generations, will have been swept away.

Most of those to whom I am indebted for help in this study have passed away. Dr. A. C. Haddon and Dr. W. H. R. Rivers, both of Cambridge University, who were my mentors in anthropology, are dead; so too is Dr. E. Sapir, former Chief of the Anthropological Division in the National Museum, who gave me instruction in phonetics, and Mr. H. I. Smith, Dominion Archaeologist, to whom are owing most of the photographs reproduced here, I can only place on record my deep obligation and gratitude to each of these four. Dr. D. Jenness, who succeeded Dr. Sapir, was most co-operative. In Bella Coola, I was received with uniform kindness by the white inhabitants, particularly Mr. Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Burt Robson, and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Christensen.

[1] Memoirs of the American Museum of Natural History, vol. II, 1898.

Finally, and most important of all, I wish to express my appreciation to the Bella Coola themselves. Without their generous, kindly and helpful co-operation, this book could never have been written. I came as an uninvited stranger; they received me as a friend and a guest; and I left with intense regret. My chief friends were Joshua Moody, Captain Schooner, and Jo Pollard, but I was also greatly assisted by Mr. Willie Black, Mr. and Mrs. Tallio Charlie, and Mr. and Mrs. Lance Chasti. To a host of others I am indebted in only a slightly less extent. The aid and friendship of these men and women is one of my pleasantest memories, and one which I wish to record with gratitude and appreciation.

In the actual publication of this complicated manuscript, I have likewise been fortunate in receiving co-operation and help. The University of Toronto Press accepted it for publication during the war, facing—and overcoming—the inevitable shortage of materials and of skilled craftsmen. Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining the type for phonetic symbols; to avoid undue duplication all native words, whether proper or common names, have been printed in italics. It is a tribute to the Press that it has completed the work. I am especially indebted to several former members of the editorial staff: Mrs. Hewitt, who supervised the initial editing, and her assistants, Mrs. Hackett and Mrs. Buzek. Mr. Weir, foreman of the composing room of the Press, has surmounted endless difficulties with enthusiasm and ingenuity. I am also grateful to Miss Harman, Associate Editor, who took the responsibility for final production details. Mr. Burns, General Manager of the Press, and Professor Brown, Editor, have both been helpful and co-operative throughout.

361

stream, on which the salmon-weir stood, was carried away.[10]

The following village may be included with the above: [173]

(21) Nacoop: on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, to the east of the creek that flows into it at Green Bay. This long-deserted village was built so close to the ocean that high tides reached almost to the houses. According to one informant, the name was derived from that of the first chief sent down from above to that spot; while another connected it, etymologically, with Naco, the name of the barren district some four and a half miles up the valley of the creek. In recent years this village site has been used only as a summer camp. [173]

The name given to the Bella Coola valley is Nuxalk; that given to the inhabitants of the valley, excluding those of village no. 27, is Nuxalkmc.[11] 101 103

Two points must be considered with regard to the above list of towns: In the first place, can it be regarded as an accurate list, or do the towns belong to the realm of mythology? In the second place, are the customs and beliefs of the inhabitants of the different towns sufficiently similar to be described without reference to local differences? 128 173 361

The first question is difficult to answer. The Bella Coola undoubtedly consider the existence of these towns to be an historical fact, but so do they regard the peopling of the earth by men created in the land above. Nevertheless, the above list appears to be substantially correct. The Bella Coola, although now collected into a single village, still remember their ancient homes. One man, for example, stated as a matter of course that he was a man of Snuhli. Further inquiry elicited the information that he had been born at Sinxl, where his father had moved at the time of the smallpox epidemic. It later appeared that my informant's father was born at Tsmoil, had married there, and that it was his father who had moved [164] [166]

[10] This explanation may be only legendary.

[11] Boas, p. 49, states that Nuxalk is only applied to the lower villages of the valley. All the writer's information was contrary to this view. [114]

128 from Swalik. My informant's grandchildren regard themselves as Swalik here, and their custom are embodied in myths 173 of that village, although their fathers have not lived there
361 for five generations. There is no reason to suppose this case
166 exceptional. Other instances were obtained of movements of people from one village to another at earlier times, and there seems no cause to doubt the general accuracy of these. Names [53.4] embodied in the origin myths of different towns are used as prerogatives and have been potent factors in keeping their memory alive. Uncertainties and inaccuracies there must be in the foregoing list, but on the whole it appears to be fairly reliable, since few contradictions were received from different informants.

128 Accounts obtained of the same ceremonies from the descen-184 dants of people of different villages were found in most cases to be identical. There were a few differences in custom between [79.6] the people of Stuie and those of the other upper valley towns on the one hand, and the inhabitants of the lower valley on [101] the other. These will be mentioned when necessary, but on the whole the inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley can be considered as a tribal entity.

114 Boas (p. 48) gives a list of Bella Coola towns which agrees 361 fairly well with the above. Among his villages are included Pe·ɔ·ɔ·ɔ (no. 4), Nalqɔ·ɔ·ɔ·ɔ·ɔ·ɔ·ɔ·ɔ (no. 7), and Nuxálcum (no. 16).[18] All the older people agreed that these are the names of streams, though settlements located on them may have been known by the same designations. Names of the five villages recorded by Boas, nos. 6, 8, 9, 19, and 24, were not known by several old men questioned on the subject.

101 The villages of the Bella Coola valley did not form a political 619 unit; each was independent. A common language was spoken throughout and the inhabitants of the different towns recog-[63.1] nized that their origins and customs were similar. This was [19.7] also recognized to be the case with regard to the people living on South Bentinck Arm, and at the head of Dean Channel.

[18] Using in each case the spelling of this monograph.

"The Coming of Ewwhlmain."[4]

Fifth moon after the summer solstice: uwnisl, "The Time for Easter Dances,"[5] or Sipalwmin di Sisi, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings."

Sixth moon after the summer solstice: Sisni, "Sits Down," that is, when the sun reaches the solstice.

First moon after the winter solstice: Iwmlmgwum, "What Sweeps Away Food," or Sulkli, "Angry Moon."

Second moon after the winter solstice: Mmnulmwi, "Facing in Both Directions," that is, half the month belongs to winter and half to summer, or Lemulc di Nuxkikmp, "The Potlatch of the Nuxkikmp" (I, p. 184).

Third moon after the winter solstice: Sinqum, "When Herrings Spawn." These fish are said to have arrived on the same day of this moon as the winter solstice in the December one.

Fourth moon after the winter solstice: Siltulp, "Time for Making Salmon Weirs."

Fifth moon after the winter solstice: Sinemwul, "Time for Making Hand-Nets for Olachen."

Sixth moon after the winter solstice: Sicdwl, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon." It is in this month that the summer solstice occurs.

The chief difficulty experienced by the Bella Coola in computing time rests on the fact that each month is judged by the moon, whereas the main periods of the year depend upon the solstices. One old man, from whom much of this information was obtained, stated that trouble always came at the winter solstice when the month was divided into two sections. The above list is obviously incomplete and incoherent, but it was the best available.

Supernatural Beings

In any primitive community the social, religious, political, and economic aspects of life are so interwoven that they

[4] See vol. II, p. 8 for a description of this mythical being.
[5] See vol. II, chap. i, for a description of these dances.

cannot be considered as distinct subjects, not only does this present difficulties to the investigator in the field, but it also makes it so easy task to describe the facts as obtained. With many tribes, it is possible to deal first with the social life, and later with religion, shamanism, and other associated topics. Such a form of presentation has many advantages and would, if possible, have been followed. Unfortunately, the social organization and rank of the Bella Coola largely depend upon their religious beliefs as expressed in their mythology, and an understanding of at least the main features of these is essential. In this chapter a summary of these has been made, leaving for later description personal relations with the supernatural world and other points which do not profoundly influence the beliefs and practices of the whole community.

Like other peoples, the Bella Coola differ considerably in the fervour of their religious beliefs. But even allowing for individual variation, religious experiences and beliefs are matters of frequent occurrence and profound importance to the great majority of the tribe. The supernatural world is close around them; a sudden thought is caused by the intervention of a supernatural being; the peculiar action of an animal is an occurrence fraught with grave meaning; an unexplained sound always receives a supernatural explanation. The old beliefs survive even among members of the community who are nominal Christians, and those who hold to their ancient religion live in an atmosphere of the supernatural. The white man, whose scientific training and logic lead him to find a natural explanation for an incident, is puzzled and somewhat amused at what he often calls the childish beliefs of the Indian. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, seeing the hand of the supernatural in every untoward event, considers the attitude of the white man in seeking a natural explanation to be almost irreverent. The mental attitude of the Bella Coola to the supernatural does not differ vitally from that of the white man under like conditions; but whereas to white men religious experiences are most unusual, they are common occurrences to

of the fire devourer, 372 the Bella Coola. We can trace the con- ugh ignorant of the 776 and it may be that he lacks form. T ola realize that the law of conservation of matter, the Bella ostulate a land far [772] would must have gone somewhere, and d lies in shadowy across the western sea where burnt ern though it lacks heaps, such bilbo retaining its original ted over by an evil material substrata. This region is pos. 468). being with a desire for human flesh (H he anthropomorphic 776
The above list by no means exhausts this world. Those beings resident either in Hawaiki or office to make clear described are the most important, and beings of this type.
the religious attitude of the Bella Coola dances only, and a Others appear in connection with dancil vol. II, chap. i, consideration of them can be deferred manism and allied whereas some belong essentially to o subjects treated in vol. I, chap. vi.

with which the Bella [781]
The attitude of mingled hope and fr pomorphic beings is Coola regard their supernatural anthoncerning zoomorphic typical of their thoughts and actions orld the dividing line creatures as well. In the supernatural clearly defined; fabu-between human and animal beings in supermen, and can be bulk monsters have the mentality of ay as are anthropo-appeased, beseeched, or cajoled precis form, supernatural morphic beings. Like those of human beings with whom animals can bestow good or evil on hum own in this chapter [128] they come in contact. The division for convenience; it must, therefore, be regarded as merel he minds of the Bella does not correspond to a distinction in Coola. wn to the Bella Coola
One of the most dreaded animals kn f a large grizzly bear, is the swaq, a monster about the size in colour. It walks with long, silky, beautiful hair, blue-gre hat its long fore-legs almost upright on short hind legs, so provided with sharp touch the ground at intervals; these a

NEB Bellacoola NEB

CHAPTER III

SOCIAL ORGANIZATION

Ancestral Family—The Village Community—The Family—Kinship Terms—Slaves

AS in other communities, the social, religious, and economic aspects of Bella Coola life are interdependent, but there is an added complexity in the influence of mythological concepts. This not only complicates investigation in the field, but it also renders a logical description of their customs difficult. Some reference to practices recorded in detail in later chapters is unavoidable. 128 182

In many communities, ethnologists have been able to begin with the social organization of the people. Among the Bella Coola, this is impossible, since their religious beliefs colour every aspect of their life, and these must be understood by anyone who wishes to comprehend their culture as a whole. In this chapter, too, it is necessary to commence with a description of that aspect of mythology which serves as the cohesive bond to one of the social units, the ancestral family.

Ancestral Family

As recorded in the last chapter, it is believed that in the beginning of time Ālquntām caused the first men and women to be created in his house above and sent them down to populate the earth. They came in groups of two, three, four, or more, brothers and sisters, or more rarely man and wife, to different parts of the Bella Coola valley. They brought with them tools, houses, clothing, even sustenance in the shape of fish and animals. More important, from the point of view of social organization, they brought with them names and ceremonial prerogatives. In fact, the Bella Coola believe that their culture was created by Ālquntām in the distant past, and has not been the result of slow growth. It is true that there 773 [829] sumed that ten is the largest number of traps possible at that weir. Those who have the right to that weir are the members of the ancestral family with the names of those first users. At this point the logic of the Bella Coola fails to uphold the mythological pattern. No salmon-weir has remained in existence since the beginning of time; when one broke, owners were sometimes infants, and those who repaired the break became regarded as the rightful possessors. The system of ownership prevailing at the time of abandoning the weirs, was that individuals, not groups, had rights to certain sections of the weir which were willable like other personal property. In most cases this right was transmitted with a name, marking the section of weir, which had to be duly validated by presents. In other cases, the intangible ownership was willed without any mark whatever.[9] Unless bequeathed in this way, disputes were frequent. Rights of this kind were never sold although an owner often leased his section for a night, or longer period, receiving goods in return, and not forfeiting his ownership thereby. This was particularly common when the renter was planning to give a potlatch. No case was heard of in which the right to a certain section of salmon-weir was given to a non-member of the ancestral family. Theoretically, this was possible, but practically it would be so inconvenient that it is most unlikely ever to have occurred, since the Bella Coola is never such a slave to legal privileges that he fails to be guided by common sense.

423 614 [773] [224] [428] [431] [428] [427] [431] [671] 226 [423] [577] [626] [128]

Although individual ownership is thus recognized with regard to sections of salmon-weirs and suitable places for olachen-nets, the owner is bound to share his haul. When he catches a large number of fish, anyone, whether related to him or not, can demand some. He cannot refuse, since to do so would brand him as selfish. The effective check on this system [9] Great difficulty was experienced in learning about the distribution of rights to sections of salmon-weirs. The evidence is conflicting, and though every effort was made to verify and check the above, there may be further regulations which were not learnt.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The recent decay of Bella Coola culture may have destroyed
[182] traces of more definite obligations with respect to the ancestral family, but all the evidence indicates that it has always been a fluid unit. Its very lack of functions makes it difficult to [128] discuss, and the above account was pieced together from scraps of information collected from many different people at various times; yet, intangible though it be, it is a very real unit to the Bella Coola and pervades their life. Each individual knows those to whom he is related. In many cases the exact kinship is lost, but it is remembered that a man from such-and-such a village married a woman from another village, and it is proved from the use by their descendants of names from the same origin myth. The concept of physical strength imparted by a closely akin ancestry is always present and gives a person the real "power" in the village founded by those first ancestors
614 of his. For the ancestral family is usually thought of in terms
621 of villages. A man belongs to the village where his first ancestor came to earth, though he is equally a member of other towns into which his ancestors may have married. A [554] man without ancestry, without sal'olam, is a miserable creature; he has no home in this world, or, theoretically, in the world to come. The ancestral family is a unit essentially held together by the ties of sentiment and pride of ancestry.

614 In addition to the above social elements of the ancestral 827 family, it is felt that all its members have certain tendencies. If one of the first ancestors had a certain physical peculiarity, or met with a particular kind of fortune, either good or bad, his descendants are more likely to experience the same than any other people. These tendencies may skip many generations, and may be inherited either through the mother or the father. In fact, Bella Coola belief on this point closely agrees with modern knowledge of heredity; the term for such an inheritable tendency is xalaxalém or xalxamudjat. Such characteristics are:

(1) Proficiency in using tools;
(2) Ability as a hunter;

1777 from the Bella Bella, a fact emphasized by all. It is not diffi-424 cult to understand, therefore, why elaborate myths are lacking, 551 even if such were possessed by the Bella Bella. The Bella
575 Coola possessed certain similar rites to which the Bella Bella [773] prerogatives were in the process of being grafted at the time of the coming of the white man. There has since been general decay of ceremonial life, with the result that the whole situation is in a state of flux presenting great difficulties to the investigator.

428 Sisaak names are willed and inherited in the manner already 551 described for other prerogatives. The type of dance, and the 575 time of use, will be described in the following section of this chapter.

The Potlatch

* 556 It is unfortunate that an adequate treatment of Rank
● 128 among the Bella Coola requires a description of the potlatch since this ceremony, or rather group of ceremonies, includes a number of features which, logically, should have been postponed until a later stage of this monograph. An effort has been made to lessen references to non-ritualistic features by the description, just given, of the basic concepts of chieftainship and the sisaak society. Other ideas will require rather lengthy digressions, a method of presentation which seems preferable to the use of many foot-notes, its only alternative.

General Observations

104 In scientific and popular writings alike, the term "pot-
* 556 latch" has been applied both to the public giving of presents, [431] and to the rites at which this occurs. But among the Bella Coola, such distribution of gifts is necessary at every ceremonial; accordingly, each is essentially a potlatch. There is one, however, which the inhabitants regard as the most important of all, the goal which every ambitious man aims to reach, the rite in which his ancestral myth can be displayed. In this

CHAPTER V

FEATURES ASSOCIATED WITH THE POTLATCH

Heralds—Totem-Poles—Coppers—Professional Prerogatives—A'alk Dances—Miscellaneous Ceremonies

128 556

THE ritual of the potlatch is so complicated that, in order to present a coherent account of it, it has been necessary to omit entirely some features that occur at many potlatches, and to refer briefly to others. This chapter is devoted to an elaboration of these points, thus avoiding the use of lengthy foot-notes in the preceding chapter.

HERALDS

203 556

The principal functions of heralds[1] have already been described. They go from house to house inviting the people to assemble for the different ceremonies connected with the potlatch, but that is only one of their many duties. They likewise bear invitations to all types of ceremonies, such as marriages, mourning rites, or burial dances; in fact, they act as town criers. A person holding any public rite requests one or more heralds to deliver the invitation which is repeated in every house of the village in order from bottom to top.[2]

There are variations, of course, according to the rites to be performed. At a potlatch, the first duty of a herald is to seat the guests in their proper places. This requires not only a good memory, but also considerable tact, since errors with foreign guests cause friction and embarrassment, and diminish the prestige of the whole ceremony. During the actual progress of the rites, a herald must constantly add dignity to the occa-

[574 628 578]

[1]Herald, *ali, plural, *malini, not to be confused with a'alk, the name of a society (I, p. 578).

[2]This order may seem have had a ceremonial significance but it has been considered for a long time merely a matter of convenience. When giving presents also, a man follows the same order in his mind and names first the occupants of the bottom house, thus minimizing the danger of overlooking a guest.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

expenditure though he must forgo the prestige enjoyed by a man who has been able to elevate his professional dames in a lavish manner. Selection is a constant factor in the social life of a Bella Coola; the man who uses all his wealth to acquire a firm seat cannot be "strong" in nusté matters; the man who desires to specialize in kusiut affairs cannot afford to display an elaborate totem-pole. Amid these conflicting desires, it often happens that a man somewhat neglects his professional prerogatives, especially those of which the dignity has been slightly lessened through superior skill shown by individuals endowed with no more than native ability. Upstarts of this kind have always infringed upon professional dignity, and the coming of the white man has added a new factor which has almost destroyed vocational prerogatives.

424
556
182
555
197

A'alé Dances

The most important, as well as the most spectacular, dances that occur at potlatches are those given by members of the nusté society. In addition to these, a feature of many potlatches is the performance of a'alé dances.[1] As already mentioned, from 1870 onwards there have been many changes in nusté ritual; new elements have been acquired by the marriages of Bella Coola to members of the coastal tribes, with the result that details of procedure vary at every ceremony according to the prerogatives of the donor. Since 1910, the influence of white civilization has increased to such an extent that nusté ceremonials have virtually been abandoned. This took place at a time when the ritual was in transition, a state of affairs which rendered difficult the collection of coherent information. A'alé dances are associated with nusté, but the addition of new features to the latter was accompanied by a decay of the former. Both societies have now almost ceased to exist, but whereas the nusté organization was abandoned during a period of change and accretion, that

197
535
575
184
196
128

[1] Called s'alpem in Kitamaat.

177 of the a'alk came to an end when it 535 importance. It was impossible to ob as already waning in 575 information about the latter as was gin as much detailed 128 possible that some of the facts recorded ired, and it is even nuxuł ceremonial really belong to a'alk in connection with

The right to perform an a'alk dance rites.

424 validated ancestral prerogative of which depends upon a duly 535 an a'alk name. Some of the first pers the obvious mark is 575 designations and dances with them from brought down such of time, a few were acquired on this ea above in the beginning [773] natural beings. Those who have righ as gifts from super-house organization which may be ter of this kind form a
This is closely associated both with the d the a'alk society.
chiefs, owing to the occurrence of the saok society and with in the same ancestral myths. One of three types of names [554] family may use his goods to validate mber of an ancestral another to make himself a nuxuł, a th his ancestral name, and an important chief, endowed with a to become an a'alk, be able to do all three. lity and wealth, may

A'alk dances are less spectacular th nuxuł or kwaiat societies, nor are an those of either the
The prerogatives of a member are lines or whistles used.
right to perform a certain dance, and ted to his name, the commonly describes some feature of his use of a song which types of dances are considered to ancestral myth. Four of acquiring and using any one of the a'alk; the methods unnecessary to describe the differen are similar, so it is account of the performance of each. s before the actual

If there is a dormant a'alk preroga 554 family of the donor of a potlatch, he usu ive in the ancestral 575 this as one of the features of his ceremony chooses to validate his wife and other relatives to ensure th y. He first consults be forthcoming, and if this matter can sufficient goods will tently, he chooses some young relative e arranged satisfacdormant right. It would be most unu the recipient of the lected to decline the honour. Or usual for the youth seman, other than the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VI

ORIGIN MYTHS

Introductory—Bella Coola Origin Myths—Origin Myths of Other Tribes—Early Traditions Having the Ceremonial Significance of Origin Myths—Sisaok Origin Myths

Introductory

773 EXAMPLES will be given here of the origin myths, which 128 are believed to authorize so much of the ritual already described, and to which repeated reference has been made.
[114] In 1898 Professor Boas published such an admirable collection of traditions of this type (pp. 50 ff.) that the present writer paid little attention to the subject. The Bella Coola, however, are so intensely proud of the deeds of their first forefathers
[124] that several insisted on recounting them before they were willing to do other work; in consequence, a fair number of myths was collected through necessity. Since tales of this type were recounted almost entirely at potlatches, their significance has declined since the prohibition of this rite. Consequently, many legends are only remembered in part; the abbreviated and often pointless series of anecdotes here recorded can be no more than a small part of the rich field which must once have existed among the Bella Coola.[1]

424 As Professor Boas has clearly shown, origin myths relate 773 how, in the beginning of time, the supreme god sent down to earth the first ancestors of the Bella Coola people, each usually

[1]In writing up this field material, it was my original intention to place all legends together in a separate section, or appendix, following a common anthropological practice. This, however, would have been contrary to Bella Coola thought since origin myths, for example, are regarded as entirely different from either mere stories, or from incidents connected with shamans,—to name two other groups of what are usually described as "legends." I recognize that the insertion of this chapter of origin myths interrupts the sequence of presenting Bella Coola culture, but I believe that it is the way which the Bella Coola themselves would regard as logical, and that it brings out the essential interactions of this type of myth upon their whole life.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

178 versions of the myth given (vol. I, pp. 313-19) is a case in point.
773 The first was told as a smaiusta by a woman who claimed to be a descendant of the people figuring in it; the second, as a story, sumsma, by a man. In view of the reliability of both informants, it seems highly probable that this is a story, partly converted to a myth. In other examples there are incidents resembling the supernatural tales given in vol. I, chap. IX, and here too it appears probable that sumsma have been assimilated into smaiusta. It is complimentary to the truthfulness [577] of the Bella Coola, and to the respect they show for intangible [424] property, that none of the myths recorded were smaiusta owned by others. Repeatedly an informant would say that he knew one, but would not tell it since it belonged to some other family.

128 After collecting a few myths, in each of which it was stated
773 that the first settlers at village X were A, B, and C, with their sisters, P and Q, it seemed as if it would have been possible, before the culture of the Bella Coola had fallen into its present decay, to make a census of those whom they believe to have been first settlers of this earth, and that such a list would have had few contradictions. This was soon found to be false. Two myths may give different people as the first occupants of a certain village, nor does such contradiction trouble the Bella Coola. Each man, convinced of the authenticity of his own family account, is quite willing to believe that the one belonging [811] to someone else is equally correct. This characteristic lack of logical consistency has already been mentioned in other connections. Boas (p. 61) likewise gives an instance of uncertainty as to the first occupants of a village, though, on the whole, he found Bella Coola mythology to be more codified than the present writer has done. In view of their lack of systematization in other matters, it would have been surprising if they had evolved a census of their first ancestors, accepted by all as accurate.

Another matter to be considered at this point is the simi- [178] larity of detail in many myths. In part this can be explained by the assumption that sumsma have been elevated into smaiusta; in this case it would not be impossible for the same story to have been used by two or more families. A more common explanation is the splitting of myths. Although, theoretically, one can never be altered, and portions in the possession of other individuals are remembered as such, there must have been many cases in which the owner of a section told the whole as his own property. This would not be difficult in cases where he moved away from the other members of his family. In course of time, with the assimilation of elements in themselves not strictly mythological, two myths would evolve having a few incidents in common. If asked concerning this, the Bella Coola explain that the first people were quite as capable of doing the same things as two modern men. The occurrence of the same name, or names, in different myths does not, according to them, prove a connection, since many of the first people had the same names.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

128 178 773

Finally, there have been included a number of myths dealing with the coming to earth of people in other localities. Probably these are, in origin, those of other tribes, more or less assimilated to the Bella Coola pattern. Each was said to have been obtained by the marriage of one of the descendants of the people described therein with a Bella Coola.

No further explanation is needed for the following myths which are arranged, as far as possible, according to the list already given of Bella Coola towns.

Bella Coola Origin Myths

539 *

ORIGIN MYTH OF Alqālāxl[1]

In the beginning of time, Alqunxtm, in his form of Sunx, the Sun, sent down a man, Y'xyalk'mai, to Mount Nuxmāllaix (also called Alqunxmālāxlx, Sqatsdx, and Alkikumālāxlx), a mountain on the north side of the Bella Coola River about two miles from the sea, near the upper end of the Indian reserve. With him came Xwexwexum, the Hummingbird, [1]Related by Mrs. Webber.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

with the others, including the one who had just been leader, as followers. It is said that there was rarely friction among the joint husbands, since each realized that his turn would come as head of the household, and meanwhile the wife endeavoured to share her favours indiscriminately. The children were considered equally the offspring of each husband, thus automatically acquiring membership in several ancestral families. Such were regarded as indeed fortunate, provided with every potential means of assistance in the struggle of life. 595 556 [851]

Recognizing its importance, every effort was made to verify this information. Further questioning elicited the statement that the informant had never seen a case of this, though he asserted that when a young man he had often heard of it and that the custom had then only recently died out. Another old man and an elderly woman confirmed the above statement almost word for word, and each added that it was well known when they were young, though they had never actually seen it in practice. One man believed that the custom had formerly prevailed in several parts of the coast, and said that he had heard of its occurrence among the "Kwatrino" people near Newitte. Considering the reliability of his informants, the writer gives as his personal belief that the institution of polyandry among the daughters of chiefs occurred in Bella Coola not many years ago. Knowledge of the term of address for co-husband, already given, is strong evidence in support of this view. 128 595 556

DISCREDITABLE MARRIAGES

Since it has been assumed that Y is the daughter of a chief, properly married with due formality, it is necessary to digress still further from the account of her relations with X to describe connections of a less creditable nature. The most common of these was with slaves. Though frowned upon by all Bella Coola ethics, such alliances, of a permanent nature, do not appear to have been rare. In some cases it was a man who thus demeaned himself, in some a woman. Since no slave could provide the goods necessary for an elaborate wedding, the 567 588

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

blankets" for the child. The advantages to the donors were that they had an opportunity of showing their dignity, and it would always be a mark of pride for the child to be able to boast of the way in which she had been "held." 556 601 858

Ceremonial marriage clearly demonstrates two strong Bella Coola characteristics; namely, the desire publicly to enter into financial undertakings to demonstrate the wealth of the contracting party, and the desire to increase the prestige of children by means of this wealth expended indirectly on their behalf.

EXTRA-MARITAL RELATIONS

Although the Bella Coola do not regard marriage primarily as a means of regulating relations between the sexes, yet the connection between the two is sufficiently close to warrant description in this chapter. A man considers intercourse as one of the normal phenomena of life: by marrying he has exclusive rights to his wife, but few moral restraints deter him from anyone else to whom he can gain access without infringing the prerogatives of some other husband. Moreover, sexual intercourse is not regarded solely as a gratification of desires; it has a significance which can be described, not inaptly, as holy. As already explained, two favourite methods of obtaining success in any undertaking are by preserving lengthy continence or by observing ceremonial chastity. If a young unmarried man or widower should wish to make use of this latter means, he is compelled to have relations with a woman to whom he has no just claims. This is universally recognized, nor is there the slightest odium attached to the man. The only essential is that he neither violate another's wife, nor force a young girl against her will. 551 831 837

At the present time there is great laxity in Bella Coola, a condition which makes it difficult to judge the state of affairs in former times. Every effort was made to obtain satisfactory evidence, and the following was verified and re-verified with the older men. [128]

A wife, properly married with full ceremony, was usually 837 839

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

535 contact with supernatural beings, so that it is a time for grave
*575 thoughts and decorous behaviour. Even by day the members
796 pass from house to house with dignified mien, not loitering
[787] around the sidewalks nor indulging in frivolity. Every effort is made to prevent quarrels between members who are expected to show by their appearance and actions the gravity of the rites in which they are engaged. Night after night they assemble at the house wherein the dance is taking place; those who have performed, and are therefore most closely in touch with the supernatural, even sleep there, not returning to their own houses until March. A dance usually lasts four nights, and during that time the performer's house, in which it takes place, is termed a nuqpik, "An Empty House." The significance of this designation is unknown.

178 Membership in the society depends on a duly validated
*575 ancestral prerogative to perform one of the many kusiut dances.
[424] At the present time every Bella Coola is a kusiut, even babes in arms being initiated, but formerly no one was admitted until he or she had reached an age of discretion. Some informants went so far as to say that the hair of an initiate must have begun to turn grey, and all agreed that no one was ever admitted until at least twenty, or more often, twenty-five years of age. Initiates were frequently still older; one woman, for example, stated that her mother was past the age of child-bearing before admission. Since only a member of the society [551] could be called by a kusiut name, the uninitiated continued to be known by the ancestral names conferred on them at infancy until they received kusiut designations. The importance of the 178 society depends on the belief of the uninitiated in the super-
*575 natural powers of its members, and as there are now none to 796 impress, the rites carried out today are little more than pic-
128 tures of what took place years ago. It is the aim of the Bella Coola to carry out the dances as if uninitiated persons were in attendance, and since most of the following information was obtained from men who well remembered their sensations when not members of the society, it is justifiable to use the present

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* tense throughout this chapter, and to assume the presence of a [178 number of young men and women ignorant of the significance [796 of the rites. Formerly, the kukusiut often had difficulty in im- [128 pressing the uninitiated with their prowess, and feuds with the [578 a'alk were common.

Although membership in the kusiut society depends on an 554 ancestral prerogative, it is essentially a democratic institution. 556 A certain amount of wealth is necessary to validate a kusiut 575* prerogative, but nothing comparable to that required for a potlatch; in fact, poor men are often persons of great importance within the ranks of the society. Nor are the prerogatives considered to be as valuable as ancestral rights, so that [567 slaves are often admitted as kukusiut by their masters. An important kusiut is not esteemed by the community in the same way as the donor of many potlatches; in short, membership in the society brings limited ceremonial and semi-religious advantage, not social prestige of a public nature.

Powers and Functions of the Society

Any secret society can be viewed from the standpoints of a 575* member, and of a non-member. The scope of the kusiut organization can be most clearly outlined by describing first what an 869 uninitiated person knows about it. From his infancy, parents impress upon a child the supernatural powers of the kukusiut and the dangers attached to their rites. Such instruction is perhaps strongest where one, or both, is not a member. They then voice their own fears, and do not merely deceive for the good of the society. Steeped as every child is in a firm belief of the near presence of the supernatural, he readily believes what he is told. He learns, for example, that if, without spe- [784 cial invitation, he dares enter the house where a kusiut dance [774 is taking place—at any time during the four days or more that [626 it lasts—his spirit will be drawn from him. This is sufficient to deter him from prying too closely into the rites. Strangely enough, there seem always to have been differences in teaching with respect to this deception. It is believed that if a non- 000

2: McIlwraith E25 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B 721 these accounts seemed to be exaggerations, and the casualties were probably few. The Bella Coola did not have the same [554] admiration for the successful warrior as for the man who gave many potlatches, while everything indicates that their raids B [703] were on a small scale, rendered singularly ineffective by lack of discipline.

Specific Accounts

B 72 Active warfare has been so long discontinued on the coast that none of the living Bella Coola can describe conditions as 128 they existed during hostilities. It was possible to collect the 539 following accounts of raids and adventures which, though individually of small value, illustrate tactics and strategy, and recount incidents which throw light on the frame of mind of the participants.

B T

KITKATLA WAR

648 For many years there was animosity between the Bella 721 Coola and the Kitkatla who, with the advantage of strong government, used to sweep down from the north for salmon and slaves. Bella Coola itself was comparatively immune from attack, but the Kimsquit people suffered severely. The attackers were not always successful; one old man related how, when his mother's mother was an infant, they were driven off with the loss of four canoes and many men. The fact that this B incident had been remembered for so many years indicates that T it was unusual.

567 Slaves captured in this way were traded from tribe to tribe 439 and rarely escaped. When an elderly Bella Coola was a lad, there was considerable excitement in the community owing to [727] the return of Slukwala, a woman who had been carried off when a girl. She had been traded to a northern tribe among whom, she said, it was customary to crush captives beneath totem-poles and house-posts. Her diligence saved her from this fate, and she was passed on until she reached the far north, on the

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX B

STRING FIGURES

THE only form of pastime which it was practical to investigate in any detail was the construction of string figures. These seem to have no ceremonial or religious significance; they are made for recreation only, and it was found easy to learn a number while paving the way for other kinds of research. In fact, interest in them was one of the ways in which the writer became friends with a number of Bella Coola. As is to be expected, some individuals are more proficient in constructing complicated string figures than others, the old women being particularly adept. During the long delays which occur in all the dances it is a common sight to see an old crone teaching a group of young girls the figures which she herself learnt when young. Some men remember a number from childhood, but the making of designs with string is regarded as more fitting for girls and women. Songs accompany many of the figures, and the singing of these is considered an essential part of the construction. It was stated that many more figures were known long ago; in fact, several of those here recorded were only obtained after repeated efforts on the part of an old woman to reconstruct those which she had been shown when a child. No attempt was made to learn all the Bella Coola figures; a larger number could doubtless have been collected, but those here described are the ones most commonly made.

The nomenclature used is that described by Miss Haddon,[1] in itself following the method used by Rivers and Haddon. It will be assumed that the reader is familiar with this, including the meaning of the terms, "Opening A," "Position 1," and "Navaho." A string about four feet long will be found most convenient for making the Bella Coola figures.

1. A SALMON-TRAP

Double the loop; two strands now take the place of the usual one, but these will be referred to as a single string or loop. The figure can be made equally well with a string one-half the usual length.

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb and index finger and the right hand.

With right index finger hook down the string passing dorsally across left thumb and index finger and draw out to right, allowing right hand loop to slip over this hooked-down string.

[1] K. Haddon, Cat's Cradle from Many Lands (London, 1912).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX C

GLOSSARY OF FLORA AND FAUNA

824 825 128

THIS glossary does not give the scientific names of all the flora and fauna known to the Bella Coola, or even of all mentioned in this monograph, but only those of which the usual designations are ambiguous. In cases of the common mammals, no scientific terminology has been attempted, since the multiplicity of sub-species renders identification almost impossible, and the popular name is sufficient for general purposes. In regard to plants, a difficulty lies in the fact that Bella Coola nomenclature is not always strictly accurate botanically. Two or more distinct ferns, for example, may be grouped together on account of their similar use as food, and one name applied to them indiscriminately. Conversely, different terms are sometimes given to various parts of the same tree, the roots, the bark, the leaves, and so on. These factors combine to complicate the study of either ethno-botany or ethno-zoology, and necessitate the collection of a large number of specimens. The late Mr. H. I. Smith has done so, and this glossary could not have been compiled without his assistance, though the writer is responsible for any errors in it.

824 825

Alder	Alnus rubra Bong.
Aspen, American	Populus tremuloides Michx.
Bearberry, Red	Arctostaphylos Uva-ursi (L.) Spreng.
Bilberry, Dwarf	Vaccinium caespitosum Michx.
Bilberry, Tall	Vaccinium ovalifolium Smith.
Bilberry, Thin leaved	Vaccinium membranaceum Dougl.
Birch	Betula sp.
Blackberry	Rubus spectabilis Pursh.
Blackfish—See Killer Whale.
Blueberry	Vaccinium parvifolium Smith
Bracken	Pteris aquilina (L.) var. lanuginosa Bong.
Buffaloberry, Canadian	Shepherdia canadensis Nutt.
Bunch-berry	Cornus canadensis, L.
Cedar, Red	Thuja gigantea Nutt.
Cedar, Yellow	Chamaecyparis nootkatensis (Lamb.) Spach.
Clover, Perennial	Trifolium fimbriatum Lindl.
Cod, Black	Anoplopoma fimbria Pallas.
Cod, Red Rock	Sebastodes ruberrimus Cramer.
Cormorant	Phalacrocorax sp.
Cottonwood, Black	Populus trichocarpa T. and G.
Cow Parsnip	Heracleum lanatum Michx.
Crabapple	Pyrus diversifolia Bong.
Cranberry	Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX D

BELLA COOLA-ENGLISH VOCABULARY

